1.1 Company Formation and Conversion

The Companies Act, 1956 – Historical Background

- The Companies Act 1956 was enacted on the recommendations of the Bhaba Committee set up in 1950 with the object to consolidate the existing corporate laws and to provide a new basis for corporate operation in independent India. With enactment of this legislation in 1956, the Companies Act 1913 was repealed.
- The Companies Act, 1956, has since provided the legal framework for corporate entities in India. The need for streamlining this Act was felt from time to time as the corporate sector grew in pace with the Indian economy, with as many as 24 amendments taking place since 1956. Major amendments to the Act were made through Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988 after considering the recommendations of the Sachar Committee, and then again in 1998, 2000 and finally in 2002 through the Companies (Second Amendment) Act 2002, consequent to the report of the Eradi Committee.
- Many countries faced with the task of economic restructuring in response to the realities of a changing economic environment, have undertaken comprehensive revisions of their respective corporate laws. UK Companies Act was revised during the 1980s. Subsequently, many countries whose legal systems were derived from UK, such as Australia, New Zealand, Canada etc also undertook reviews of their corporate laws and brought about several comprehensive reforms. It is widely accepted that reform and updation of the basic legal framework for corporate entities is essential to enable sustainable economic reform.
- After a hesitant beginning in the 1980s, India took up its economic reforms programme in the 1990s. Equally, a need was felt for a comprehensive review of the Companies Act, 1956. Unsuccessful attempts were made in 1993 and 1997 to replace the present Act with a new law. Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2003; containing important provisions relating to corporate governance was also introduced, the consideration of which has been held back in anticipation of the comprehensive review of the Company Law. While piecemeal reform continued through amendments, it has not yet been possible to bring about comprehensive, new legislation to replace the existing Act.

- In the current national and international context, there is a requirement for simplifying corporate laws so that they are amenable to clear interpretation and provide a framework that would facilitate faster economic growth. It is also increasingly being recognized that the framework for regulation of corporate entities has to be in tune with the emerging economic scenario, encourage good corporate governance and enable protection of the interests of the investors and other stakeholders. In the competitive and technology driven business environment, while corporates require greater autonomy of operation and opportunity for self-regulation with optimum compliance costs, there is a need to bring about transparency through better disclosures and greater responsibility on the part of corporate owners and managements for improved compliance.
- It is appreciated that the Government has taken up this fresh exercise for a comprehensive revision of the Companies Act 1956 on the basis of a broad based consultative exercise. As a the first step in this consultative process, a Concept Paper on Company Law drawn up in the legislative format was exposed for viewing on the electronic media so that all interested may not only express their opinions on the concepts involved but may also suggest formulations on various aspects of Company Law. This was a laudable step and has evoked considerable response. Comments and suggestions from a large number of organizations, professional bodies and individuals have been received. This consultative process will not only allow ideas, comments and suggestions to flow in from all quarters, but will also enable the Government to work out appropriate legislative proposals to meet the requirements of India's growing economy in the years to come.
- The Government, therefore, felt it appropriate that the proposals contained in the Concept Paper and suggestions received thereon be put to merit evaluation by an independent Expert Committee. The present Committee was constituted on 2nd December, 2004 under the chairmanship of Dr. J J Irani, Director, Tata Sons, with the task of advising the Government on the proposed revisions to the Companies Act, 1956. The objective of this exercise is perceived as the desire on the part of the Government to have a simplified compact law that will be able to address the changes taking place in the national and international scenario, enable adoption of internationally accepted best practices as well as provide adequate flexibility for timely evolution of new arrangements in response to the requirements of ever-changing business models. It is a welcome attempt to provide India with a modern Company Law to meet the requirements of a competitive economy.
- The Expert Committee consists of 13 members and 6 special invitees drawn from various disciplines and fields including trade and industry, chambers of commerce, professional institutes, representatives of Banks and Financial Institutions, Sr. Advocates etc. Government Ministries as well as regulatory bodies concerned with the subject were represented through special invitees. The Committee thus brings to bear a wide range of expertise and experience on the issues before it. In the exercise taken up by it, the Committee took the Companies Act, 1956, as amended, as the base and adopted the following approach:
 - Taking note of the Concept Paper and suggestions/objections and comments on the same received from various quarters, to enable synthesis of opinion on the desirable features of the new law;
 - Identifying the essential ingredients to be addressed by the new law, retaining desirable features of the existing framework, segregating substantive law from the procedures to enable a clear framework for good corporate governance that addresses the concerns of all stakeholders equitably.

- Making recommendations to enable easy and unambiguous interpretation by recasting the provisions of the law so as to enable easy understanding and interpretation;
- Enabling greater flexibility in procedural aspects through rule making, so that with the change of time the legal framework may adapt without amendment of the substantive enactment, which would be a time consuming process;
- Addressing the concerns arising out of the experience of the stock market scams of the 1990s, the phenomenon of vanishing companies and recommendations made by Joint Parliamentary Committee on Stock Market Scam;
- Enabling measures to protect the interests of stakeholders and investors, including small investors, through legal basis for sound corporate governance practices.
- Providing a framework for responsible self-regulation through determination of corporate matters through decisions by shareholders, in the background of clear accountability for such decisions, obviating the need for a regime based on Government approvals;
- Recognizing the relevance of a climate that encourages people to set up businesses and make them grow, addresses the practical concerns of small businesses so that people may deal with and invest in companies with confidence, promotes international competitiveness of Indian businesses and provides it the flexibility to meet the challenges of the global economy.

Definition of a Company

As per Section 3(1)(i) of the Companies Act, 1956, “

a “company” means a company formed and registered under this Act or an existing company as defined in clause 3(1)(ii)”.

Section 3(1)(ii) states as follows:

(ii) “existing company” means a company formed and registered under any of the previous companies laws.

Company - Classification

The Companies Act, 1956 provides for a variety of companies that may be promoted and registered under the Act. The two common types of companies which may be registered under the Act are:—

- (a) Private companies
- (b) Public companies

These companies may be incorporated either as limited liability companies or as unlimited liability companies.

Private company

By virtue of section 3(1)(iii) [as amended by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000], a private company means a company which has a minimum paid-up capital of one lakh rupees or such higher paid-up capital, as may be prescribed, and by its articles:

- (a) restricts the right to transfer its shares, if any;
- (b) limits the number of its members to 50, not including :—
 - (i) persons who are in the employment of the company, and
 - (ii) persons who, having been formerly in the employment of the company, were members of the company while in that employment and have continued to be members after the employment ceased; and where two or more persons hold one or more shares in a company jointly, they shall, for the purposes of membership, be treated as a single member.

- (c) prohibits invitation to the public to subscribe for any shares in or debentures of, the company;
- (d) prohibits any invitation or acceptance of deposits from persons other than its members, directors or their relatives.

In view of the aforesaid definition, a private company must, in its articles, incorporate the said restrictions, limitations and prohibitions. Sub-section (3) of section 27 further endorses this point by stating that a private company limited by shares must have articles containing restrictions, limitations and prohibitions required by section 3(1)(iii) and other private companies (i.e., not having share capital) must have in its articles the limitations and prohibitions contained in clauses (b), (c) and (d) of section 3(1)(iii).

Other requirements relating to a Private Company:

1. There should be at least two persons to form a private company. As per section 12, for forming a private company, two or more persons are required to subscribe their names to a Memorandum of Association. The subscribers to the Memorandum may, however, be nominees of a single person and subscribing their names may be merely a formality.

Any person who is competent to contract can be a subscriber. A company being a legal person can subscribe but a partnership firm cannot do so.

A minor cannot be a signatory to the Memorandum since he is not competent to contract. The guardian of a minor who subscribes to a memorandum on behalf of the minor will be deemed to have subscribed in his personal capacity.

Again, a Joint Hindu Family, being not a person, cannot be a subscriber. A 'Karta' or manager of the Joint Hindu Family may however sign on its behalf.

In the case of an illiterate subscriber, the thumb impression or mark duly attested by the person writing for him may be given.

2. The words 'private limited' or any acceptable abbreviation thereof, such as 'Pvt. Ltd.' must be added at the end of the name of a private limited company.

Public company [Section 3(i)(iv)]

A public company, as per the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 means a company which:

- (a) is not a private company;
- (b) has a minimum paid-up capital of ₹ 5 lakhs or such higher paid-up capital, as may be prescribed;
- (c) is a private company which is a subsidiary of a company which is not a private company.

Procedure for Incorporation/Registration of a Company

Pre- Registration Requirements

The directors must have a valid Director Identification Number (DIN), allotted by the Ministry of Corporate Affairs. DIN is a unique identification number for an existing director or a person intending to become a director of a company. As per a recent amendment to the Companies Act 1956, DIN has become mandatory for all the directors. DIN is unique and specific to an individual therefore only one DIN is allotted per individual even if the individual serves as director at multiple companies. Application for the allotment of Director Identification Number (DIN) can be obtained online on MCA's website. Duly completed DIN Application Form must be mailed to MCA DIN Cell, along with a proof of identity and a proof of residence with coloured photo. The photo affixed on the form and the proofs attached must be certified by a Public Notary or Gazetted Officer or any certified professionals.

At least one of the directors should have a valid Digital Signature Certificate issued by the Certifying Authorities (CA) and approved by the Ministry of Corporate Affairs. The Information Technology Act, 2000 provides for use of Digital Signatures on the documents submitted in electronic forms, in order to ensure the security and authenticity of the documents filed electronically. Every document prescribed under the Companies Act, 1956, is required to be filed with the digital signature of the managing director or director or manager or secretary of the company. Therefore at least one of directors must have a digital signature. Any person may make an application to the Certifying Authority for the issue of a Digital Signature in such form as may be prescribed by the Central Government. Digital Signatures are typically issued with one year validity and two year validity. The issuance cost varies depending on the CA. Digital Signatures can be obtained within an hour.

Name Approval

The first step in the process of formation is the application for MCA's approval of the desired name for the proposed company. Once, Company name is allotted, company registration documents are filed with respective ROC for registration. Application for name approval can be made online via MCA's portal MCA 21.

The following particulars are required to complete the form:-

Name of the Proposed Company
Location of the Registered office of the proposed Company
Main objectives of the business of the Company
Names of Subscribers of to the Memorandum of Association
Proposed Authorized Share Capital of the Company
DIN (Directors Identification Number) & DSC (Digital Signature Certificate)

Select, at least four names (a maximum of Six names can be listed), and indicate the order of preference. Ensure that the company name is in accordance to the guidelines of the MCA, and also ensure the name is unique and does not resemble the name of any existing company in India. The company name must end with the words 'Private Limited' or 'PVT Ltd'. In order to have specific key words in the name such as corporation, International, Hindustan, Industries, India etc., the proposed company should satisfy a minimum authorized capital criteria. Duly completed Form 1A for name approval must be submitted to the concerned ROC along with a fee of ₹500.

As per the amended rule 4A, upon due receipt of the application in Form 1A, the ROC shall examine whether the proposed name is undesirable within the meaning of section 20 of the Act. If it is not found to be undesirable, the ROC will intimate the applicants for the company about approval and availability of the proposed name and shall allow sixty days time from the date of approval of the name for registration of the company. In case the applicants fail to act within aforesaid time period, they may seek extension of the period by another thirty days, with half the fee originally paid, before the expiry of the first sixty days. If within the extended period the applicants fail to act on the approved name, the same shall lapse. In the event, the ROC finds the name proposed in the initial application as undesirable, hence cannot be approved, shall intimate his finding to the applicants ordinarily within three days of receipt of the application and ask for either any further information that he may need in the matter or for resubmission of the application with new name.

Corporate Identity number-ROC is to allot a CIN to each company registered on or after November 1, 2000. Vide Circular No. 12/2000, dated 25-10-2000.

Preparation of Documents

After obtaining name approval from the ROC the following documents must be prepared to incorporate the company:

Memorandum of Association

Articles of Association

Form 1 - providing statutory declaration regarding compliance of all the incorporation requirements

Form 18 - providing details of registered office of the company

Form 29 - providing consent in writing to act as a director (in case of a public company having a share capital)

Form 32 - providing details of Directors of the Company

The Memorandum of Association is a document that sets out the constitution of the company. It contains, amongst others, the objectives and the scope of activity of the company and also describes the relationship of the company with the outside world.

The Articles of Association contain the rules and regulations of the company for the management of its internal affairs. While the Memorandum specifies the objectives and purposes for which the Company has been formed, the Articles lay down the rules and regulations for achieving those objectives and purposes. It also states the authorized share capital of the proposed company and the names of its first / permanent directors.

Professional help is to be sought in the drafting of the MOA and AOA, as it contains the governing policies, rules and by-laws of the proposed venture. The draft must be carefully vetted by the promoters before printing and stamping.

The MOA and AOA must be signed by at least two subscribers in his own hand, along with father's name, occupation, address and the number of shares subscribed for and witnessed by at least one person, who shall attest the signature and shall likewise add his address, description and occupation, if any.

Then the MOA and AOA are required to be stamped & filed with the ROC. A stamp duty is required to be paid on the MOA and on the AOA. The stamp duty depends on the authorized share capital and varies between states as per the Stamp Act applicable to the State where the company is incorporated.

Submission of Documents

The following documents are to be submitted to the office of Registrar of Companies(ROC) with the filing fee and the registration fee:

- 1 •The Stamped and Signed MOA and AOA (3 copies)
- 2 •Form 1, 18 , 29 & 32 (in duplicate)
- 3 •Any agreement referred to in the Memorandum of Association & Articles of Association
- 4 •Any agreement proposed to be entered into with any individual for appointment as Managing Director or Whole-time Director
- 5 •Declaration of Compliance by an Advocate or Company Secretary or Chartered Accountant or Director, Manager or Secretary of the Company
- 6 •Name Availability Letter issued by ROC
- 7 •Power of Attorney authorizing a person, on behalf of Subscribers, any documents and papers filed for registration. The Power of Attorney should be given on Non-Judicial Stamp paper of appropriate value and submitted to the Registrar

Payment of Registration Fees

The fees payable to the Registrar at the time of registration of a new company varies according to the authorized capital of a company proposed to be registered. The amount of registration fee and filing fee payable are given in Schedule X to the Companies Act.

Obtaining Certificate of Incorporation

The ROC will issue a Certificate of Incorporation after careful review of documents submitted. Section 34(1) cast an obligation on the Registrar to issue a Certificate of Incorporation, normally within 7 days of the receipt of documents. A Private Limited Company or a Company having no share capital may commence its business and exercise its powers immediately after it is incorporated.

The Public Company having share capital, on the other hand, in addition to the steps followed by a Private Limited Company has to obtain a certificate of Commencement of Business before they can commence the business or exercise its borrowing powers.

In order to obtain this certificate, the company must comply with the provisions of section 149 of the Companies Act and has to:

- File a declaration of compliance with the provisions of Section 149(2)(b) of the Act in Form No.20 and attach the statement in lieu of the prospectus(schedule III)

OR

- File a declaration of compliance with the provisions of Section 149 (1)(a),(b),(c) of the Act in Form No.19 and attach the prospectus (Schedule II) to it.

Section 149 of the Act, states the Restrictions on the commencement of Business:-

Where the company has issued a prospectus-Section 149(1) provides that if a company having a share capital has issued a prospectus, it shall not commence any business or exercise any borrowing powers, unless -

- (a) shares up to the amount of the minimum subscription have been allotted by the company;
- (b) every director of the company has paid to the company, on each of the shares taken or contracted to be taken by him and for which he is liable to pay in cash, the same proportion as is payable on application and allotment on the shares, offered for public subscription;
- (c) no money is, or may become, liable to be repaid to applicants for any shares or debentures offered for public subscription, for failure to obtain permission for the shares to be dealt in on any recognized stock exchange.

Where the company has not issued a prospectus-Section 149(2) requires that if a public company having share capital has not issued a prospectus, it shall not commence business or exercise any borrowing powers unless every director of the company has paid to the company, on each of the shares taken or contracted to be taken by him and for which he is liable to pay in cash, a proportion equal to the proportion payable on application and allotment on the shares payable in cash.

Registration of Companies without share capital

The Act provides for registration of companies which need not have share capital. However, with the requirement of minimum paid-up share capital for a public company and a private company, the concept of companies without share capital has become redundant. No doubt, in terms of sub-section (6) of section 3 the minimum paid-up capital requirement is not applicable to a company registered under section 25 of the Act which belongs to the category of the companies not having share capital.

Limited liability companies

The discussion on limited liability companies may be divided under the following three heads:—

- (i) Companies limited by shares;
- (ii) Companies limited by guarantee;
- (iii) Companies limited by guarantee having share capital.

- (i) Companies limited by shares - A company having the liability of its members limited by the memorandum, to the amount, if any, unpaid on the shares respectively held by them is termed "a company limited by shares" [Sec. 12(2)(a)]. Such a company is commonly called limited liability company although the liability of the company is never limited, it is the liability of its members which is limited. The liability of members can be enforced at any time during the existence and also during the winding-up of the company. Such a company must have share capital as the extent of liability is determined by the face value of shares. However, except where the articles otherwise provide, there is no liability to pay any balance amount due on the shares, except in pursuance of calls duly made in accordance with law and the articles while the company is a going concern or of calls made in the event of winding up of the company.
- (ii) Companies limited by guarantee - A company limited by guarantee may be defined as a company having liability of its members limited by the memorandum to such amount as the members may respectively undertake by the memorandum to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up [Section 12(2)(b)]. The liability of a member in the case of a company limited by guarantee, where the company has no share capital, is limited to the amount which he has undertaken by the memorandum of association to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up.
- (iii) Companies limited by guarantee having share capital- The liability of member of a guarantee company having share capital is not merely limited to the amount guaranteed; he may be called upon to also contribute to the extent of any sums remaining unpaid on the shares held by him [Sec. 426(2)]. Such companies have been exempted from minimum paid-up share capital requirement introduced vide Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000.

Unlimited Liability Company

A company having no limit on the liability of its members is an unlimited company [Sec. 12(2)(c)]. Thus, in the case of an unlimited liability company, the liability of each member extends to the whole amount of the company's debts and liabilities. It may be seen that the liability of members of an unlimited company is similar to that of the partners but unlike the liability of partners, the members of the company cannot be directly proceeded against. Company being a separate legal entity, the claims can be enforced only against the company. Thus, creditors shall have to institute proceedings for winding-up of the company for their claims. But the official liquidator may call upon the members to discharge the debts and liabilities without limit.

An unlimited company may or may not have share capital. The articles of association of an unlimited company must state the number of members with which the company is to be registered and, if the company has share capital, the amount of share capital with which the company is to be registered [Sec. 27(1)].

As the capital, if any, is stated in the articles and not in the memorandum, it may be varied, increased or reduced, by passing a special resolution.

An unlimited company is not subjected to any restrictions regarding purchase of its own shares [Sec. 77]. Accordingly, such a company may purchase its own shares or advance monies to any person to purchase its shares. Under section 32, a company registered as an unlimited company may subsequently convert itself into a limited liability company, subject to the provision that any debt, liabilities, applications or contracts in regard to or entered into, by or on behalf of the unlimited liability company before such conversion are not affected by such conversion.

Conversion of a Private company into a Public company

The discussion on conversion of a private company into a public company may be grouped under the following heads :—

1. Conversion by default [Sec. 43]- Where a private company makes a default in compliance with the statutory requirement as laid down in sec. 3(1)(iii) of the Act (i.e., if its membership exceeds 50 or it permits free transferability of shares or extends invitation to public to subscribe to shares or debentures or to make deposit), it becomes a public company automatically. As a consequence, the company shall cease to enjoy the privileges and exemptions conferred on a private company and the provisions of the Companies Act shall apply to it as if it were a public company. However, the Company Law Board (now Central Government¹) on being satisfied that the failure to comply with the conditions was accidental or due to inadvertence or to some other sufficient cause, may grant relief from such consequence as aforesaid. The relief may be granted on grounds which the Company Law Board (now Central Government¹) feels are just and equitable.

It may be noted that the provisions of section 43 are very general. A departure from the conditions of section 3(1)(iii) invites such penalty as may be applicable to a public company for contravention of the provisions of the Companies Act. The section does not fix any time limit or impose any special penalty.

Petition praying for relief is required to be made in Form No. 1 of Annexure II to the CLB Regulations, 1991 along with prescribed application fee accompanied by the following documents:

1. Copy of memorandum and articles of association;
 2. Copy of document showing that the default has been committed in complying with the conditions laid down in sec. 3(1)(iii);
 3. Affidavit verifying the petition;
 4. Bank draft evidencing the payment of prescribed fee;
 5. Memorandum of appearance.
2. Conversion by operation of law (Deemed Public Company) [Sec. 43A]- Section 43A was introduced in 1960 (and was further amended in 1965, 1974 and 1988) to check misuse of private company status. Since private companies were conferred certain privileges and exemptions under the Companies Act, 1956, certain managements incorporated their companies as private companies but employed substantial public funds. Section 43A introduced certain criteria² according to which such private companies were treated as 'deemed public companies'. The Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 has, by introducing sub-section (11) to section 43A, made the section inoperative except sub-section (2A) [again added by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000]. The effect of introduction of sub-section (11) is that, on and after commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000, a private company will not automatically become a public company on account of shareholding or turnover. Acceptance of deposit criterion has been shifted to section 3(1)(iii) whereby a private company accepting deposits from public shall become a public company.

Sub-section (2A) allows an existing deemed public company to opt to become a private company by complying with the (new) requirements of section 3(1)(iii). In such a case, the sub-section requires the company to inform the Registrar that it has become a private company and thereupon the Registrar shall substitute the words "private company" for the words "public company" in the name of the company upon the register and shall also make the necessary alterations in the certificate of incorporation issued to the company and in its memorandum of association within four weeks from the date of application made by the company.*

Note:

1. Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002.
2. According to section 43A, before amendment, a private company was deemed to be a public company in the following cases:
 - (i) If 25% or more of its paid-up share capital is held by a public company or a deemed public company except where the said percentage is held by a banking company as a trustee or executor/administrator for any individual(s).
 - (ii) If its average annual turnover for last three financial years is ₹ 25 crores or more,
 - (iii) If it holds 25% or more of the paid-up share capital of a public company,
 - (iv) If it invites, accept or renews deposits from public.

'No time limit has, however, been set for the company to inform the Registrar. Accordingly, the company shall continue to be treated as a public company till the said information to the Registrar.

The Department of Company Affairs, vide its Circular No. 3/2002, dated 24-7-2002, has stated that fixing of time limit for getting conversion by deemed public company to private limited company under section 43A(2A) may not be feasible. If a private company which became a deemed public company under section 43A when it was in force does not approach for reconversion, it is deemed to have chosen to remain as a public company.

3. Conversion by choice [Sec. 44] - A private company may, of its own choice, become a public company.

The following steps are necessary for this purpose:

- (i) Special Resolution - A private company desiring to become public company must pass a special resolution deleting from its articles the requirements of section 3(1)(iii). A copy of the special resolution so passed must be filed with the Registrar of Companies within 30 days thereof;
- (ii) Increase in membership- If the number of members is less than seven, it must be raised to not less than seven (Sec. 12).
- (iii) Increase in number of directors - If the number of directors is less than three, it must be raised to not less than three (Sec. 252).
- (iv) Raising of paid-up capital to the minimum prescribed for public companies (presently, ₹ 5 lakhs).
- (v) Within 30 days from the passing of the special resolution, a prospectus or a statement in lieu of prospectus in the prescribed form must be filed with the Registrar [Sec. 44(1)(b)].

Every prospectus filed under sub-section (1) shall state the matters specified in Part I of Schedule II and set out the reports specified in Part II of that Schedule [Sec. 44(2)(a)].

Every statement in lieu of prospectus filed shall be in the form and contain particulars set out in Schedule IV [Sec. 44(2)(b)].

If default is made in complying with sub-section (1) or (2), the company, and every officer of the company who is in default, shall be punishable with fine, which may extend to five thousand rupees for every day during which the default continues.

Where any prospectus or statement in lieu of prospectus filed under this section includes any untrue statement, any person who authorised the filing of such prospectus or statement shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine which may extend to fifty thousand rupees, or with both, unless he proves either that the statement was immaterial or that he had reasonable ground to believe, and did up to the time of filing of the prospectus or statement believe, that the statement was true.

Fact of a company becoming a public limited company is of no consequence insofar as rights and obligations of company are concerned, nor does it render defective any legal proceedings by or against it - Wasava Tyres v. Printers (Mysore) Ltd. [2008] 86 SCL171(Kar.).

Where by passing resolutions a final decision had been taken by the company to convert itself into a public company with immediate effect; Form No. 23 had been filed along with said resolutions and statement in lieu of prospectus, which is required to be filed by a private company when it has converted itself into a public company, had been filed on behalf of the company, it was sufficient for the purpose of arriving at a prima facie conclusion that the company had altered its status and had become a public company even though the necessary alterations had not been effected in the records of the Registrar of Companies - Ram Purshotam Mittal v. Hillcrest Realty Sdn. Bhd., [2009] 94 SCL 120 (SC).

Conversion of a public company into a private company

No express provision exists in the Companies Act except the reference in the proviso to sec. 31 (1) and (2 A) for converting a public company into a private company.

Conversion of a public company into a private company will require:

- (i) Passing of a special resolution authorising the conversion and altering the articles so as to contain the matters specified in sec. 3(1)(iii).
- (ii) Changing the name of the company by omitting the word 'Private'. As per section 21, it does not require special resolution to be passed,
- (ii) Obtaining the approval of the Central Government as required by section 31: Proviso to section 31(1) provides that no alteration made in the articles which has the effect of converting a public company into a private company shall have effect unless such alteration has been approved by the Central Government.
- (iv) Filing of printed copy of the articles as altered within one month of the receipt of the approval of the Central Government [Sec. 31(2A)].

RE-REGISTRATION

Is it possible to re-register a private limited company to a public limited company and then back to a private limited company? Are there any restrictions?

Unlike the restriction imposed when a limited company intends to re-register as an unlimited company, [see Sections 102-104 of the Companies Act 2006 (the Act)], there are no restrictions in law as to the number of times a private limited company can re-register as a public company and then re-register back to a private company.

However, the commercial justification for undertaking multiple re-registrations is something the board should consider very carefully. Depending on the number of shareholders in the company one may find it difficult to re-register on multiple occasions.

The intention to re-register as a public company may be to offer shares to the public and obtain a Listing or admission to trading on AIM or PLUS. Or it might be to gain a perceived degree of commercial respectability by having the status of a public company.

Re-registration back to a private company may be required if the company is acquired by another company or the directors feel there is no benefit in remaining a public company. There may also be legal reasons, for example if, following a court order confirming a reduction of capital, the nominal value of the allotted share capital falls below the authorised minimum (Sec.650). Re-registration can also be used to circumvent some of the more onerous obligations imposed on public companies. The cost implications involved in multiple re-registrations should be considered. For example, in preparing balance sheets and obtaining unqualified audit reports as required by Sec.92 of the Act when re-registering from private to public.

1.1.2. Nidhi Companies, Mutual Benefit Funds and Producer Companies

Nidhi Companies

For over a century Nidhis, with the objective of cultivating the habit of thrift, were promoted by public spirited men drawn from affluent local persons, lawyers and professionals like auditors, educationists, etc., including retired persons. The area of operation was local – within municipalities and panchayats. Some Nidhis on account of their financial and administrative strength opened branches within the respective revenue district and even outside. The principle of mutual benefit was fundamental – to get savings from members and lend only to members and never have dealing with Non-members.

The primary object of Nidhis has been to carry on the business of accepting deposits and lending money to member-borrowers only against jewels, etc., and mortgage of property. Nidhis were not expected to engage themselves in the business of Chit Fund, hire purchase, insurance or in any other business including investments in shares or debentures. As stated these Nidhis do their business only with Members. Such Members are only individuals. Bodies Corporate or Trusts are never to be admitted as Members.

In the history of Nidhis, there have been some failures but what hit the headlines recently is the failure of leading Nidhis involving crores of rupees and lakhs of depositors, caused by imprudent lending and mismanagement by those in control. On account of these startling failures there is a tendency to condemn Nidhis as a whole. The facts, are that a large number of Nidhis, many of them 100 years old, have been functioning without giving room for any complaint and their financial resources mobilisation and service oriented practices have been commendable. Nidhis play a very useful role in helping middle and lower middle classes by providing quick financial services with minimum formalities and should, therefore, be allowed to grow with supervision.

Nidhi is a company governed by the provisions of the Companies Act, the MCA has all along taken into consideration the objective of the Nidhi and has, therefore, sanctioned concessions by way of exempting the Nidhis from certain provisions of the Companies Act.

Nidhi according to Section 620A of Companies Act 1956 means:

1. In this section, "Nidhi " or " Mutual Benefit Society " means a company which the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare to be a Nidhi or Mutual Benefit Society, as the case may be.
2. The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, direct that any of the provisions of this Act specified in the notification 356

- a) Shall not apply to any Nidhi or Mutual Benefit Society, or
 - b) Shall apply to any Nidhi or Mutual Benefit Society with such exceptions, modifications and adaptations as may be specified in the notification.
3. A copy of every notification issued under sub-section (1) shall be laid as soon as may be after it is issued, before each House of Parliament.

Procedure for Incorporation of Nidhis

1. At the outset it would be pertinent to mention that there is no Government Notification defining the word 'Nidhi'. The companies doing Nidhi business, viz. borrowing from members and lending to members only against security, go under different names such as Nidhi, Permanent Fund, Benefit Funds, Mutual Benefit Funds and Mutual Benefit Company. In view of the above situation the Committee feels that it is imperative that a precise definition and meaning should be given to the word Nidhi. Taking into consideration the manner of functioning of Nidhis at present and the recommendations of the Committee in this report and also to prevent unscrupulous persons using the word 'Nidhi' in their name without being incorporated by Department of Company Affairs and yet doing Nidhi business, the Committee suggests the following definition:

"Nidhi is a company formed with the exclusive object of cultivating the habit of thrift, savings and functioning for the mutual benefit of members by receiving deposits only from individuals enrolled as members and by lending only to individuals, also enrolled as members, and which functions as per Notification and Guidelines prescribed by the DCA. The word Nidhi shall not form part of the name of any company, firm or individual engaged in borrowing and lending money without incorporation by DCA and such contravention will attract penal action."
2. The Committee also recommends that any company desirous of doing Nidhi business as defined above should have the word 'Nidhi' added to the company's name. In so far as the existing companies functioning as Nidhis, they should be required to add the word 'Nidhi' after their name within a period of three months.

The present procedure to incorporate a Nidhi company is as follows:

- Name of the Company:- To get approval of the name by which the company will be known. The promoters propose three names to ROC. After verification the ROC is able to either identify one name or else calls for a panel of fresh names. Following this exercise a name is finally allotted by ROC to the promoters which will be used as the name of the company. But the word 'Nidhi' cannot be used as a part of the name at this stage.
- Submission of MOA & AOA:- The promoters submit the Memorandum and Articles of Association to ROC who after examination registers the company and issues a Certificate of Incorporation.
- Submission of other documents:- The company submits to the ROC documents such as a Statement in lieu of Prospectus, declaration by the promoters etc., specified under Section 149 of the Companies Act. ROC registers these documents after corrections if any and issues a Certificate of Commencement of Business.

At this stage there is no stipulation as to the membership strength of the company nor any restriction regarding capital for doing business. The company can receive deposits and lend without any restriction on rates of interest and for any period of time. Consequently, the functioning of such companies is not restricted or supervised by the authorities. During this period authorities are expected to know the functioning of this type of companies and place restrictions on receipt of deposits.

Nidhi Companies are Companies notified by the Central Government as such under Section 620A of the Companies Act, 1956. These Companies mainly engage in the business of collecting deposits in the form of Savings Deposit, Recurring Deposit etc. And also lend the same to the members of the Company. One of the important feature of a Nidhi Company is that it deals only with members (share holders). Thus if you want to deposit any amount in a Nidhi Company or want to avail a loan from a Nidhi Company, first you have to become a member by subscribing to shares of the Company.

Moreover, Nidhi Companies can open SB Accounts for its members. Moreover, there are certain restrictions like a Director can hold office for a continuous period of 10 years only and an Auditor for a period of 5 years.

Nidhi is a company formed with the exclusive object of cultivating the habit of thrift, savings and functioning for the mutual benefit of members by receiving deposits only from individuals enrolled as members and by lending only to individuals, also enrolled as members, and which functions as per Notification and Guidelines prescribed by the DCA. The word Nidhi shall not form part of the name of any company, firm or individual engaged in borrowing and lending money without incorporation by DCA and such contravention will attract penal action. First you have to register your company under the Companies Act, 1956. Then you have to get approval from Registrar of Chits for Chits company incorporation. For NBFC you have to get prior approval from RBI to commence business.

MUTUAL BENEFIT FUNDS

Introduction

Out of the different investment avenues are available to investors. Mutual funds also offer good investment opportunities to the investors. Like all investments, they also carry certain risks. The investors should compare the risks and expected yields after adjustment of tax on various instruments while taking investment decisions. The investors may seek advice from experts and consultants including agents and distributors of mutual funds schemes while making investment decisions.

Mutual Fund

Mutual fund is a mechanism for pooling the resources by issuing units to the investors and investing funds in securities in accordance with objectives as disclosed in offer document.

Investments in securities are spread across a wide cross-section of industries and sectors and thus the risk is reduced. Diversification reduces the risk because all stocks may not move in the same direction in the same proportion at the same time. Mutual fund issues units to the investors in accordance with quantum of money invested by them. Investors of mutual funds are known as unit holders.

The profits or losses are shared by the investors in proportion to their investments. The mutual funds normally come out with a number of schemes with different investment objectives which are launched from time to time. A mutual fund is required to be registered with Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) which regulates securities markets before it can collect funds from the public.

History of Mutual Funds in India and role of SEBI in mutual funds industry

Unit Trust of India was the first mutual fund set up in India in the year 1963. In early 1990s, Government allowed public sector banks and institutions to set up mutual funds.

In the year 1992, Securities and exchange Board of India (SEBI) Act was passed. The objectives of SEBI are – to protect the interest of investors in securities and to promote the development of and to regulate the securities market.

As far as mutual funds are concerned, SEBI formulates policies and regulates the mutual funds to protect the interest of the investors. SEBI notified regulations for the mutual funds in 1993. Thereafter, mutual funds sponsored by private sector entities were allowed to enter the capital market. The regulations were fully revised in 1996 and have been amended thereafter from time to time. SEBI has also issued guidelines to the mutual funds from time to time to protect the interests of investors.

All mutual funds whether promoted by public sector or private sector entities including those promoted by foreign entities are governed by the same set of Regulations. There is no distinction in regulatory requirements for these mutual funds and all are subject to monitoring and inspections by SEBI. The risks associated with the schemes launched by the mutual funds sponsored by these entities are of similar type.

Set up of Mutual Funds

A mutual fund is set up in the form of a trust, which has sponsor, trustees, asset management company (AMC) and custodian. The trust is established by a sponsor or more than one sponsor who is like promoter of a company. The trustees of the mutual fund hold its property for the benefit of the unit holders. Asset Management Company (AMC) approved by SEBI manages the funds by making investments in various types of securities. Custodian, who is registered with SEBI, holds the securities of various schemes of the fund in its custody. The trustees are vested with the general power of superintendence and direction over AMC. They monitor the performance and compliance of SEBI Regulations by the mutual fund.

SEBI Regulations require that at least two thirds of the directors of trustee company or board of trustees must be independent i.e. they should not be associated with the sponsors. Also, 50% of the directors of AMC must be independent. All mutual funds are required to be registered with SEBI before they launch any scheme.

NAV of Scheme

The performance of a particular scheme of a mutual fund is denoted by Net Asset Value (NAV). Mutual funds invest the money collected from the investors in securities markets. In simple words, Net Asset Value is the market value of the securities held by the scheme. Since market value of securities changes every day, NAV of a scheme also varies on day to day basis. The NAV per unit is the market value of securities of a scheme divided by the total number of units of the scheme on any particular date. For example, if the market value of securities of a mutual fund scheme is ₹ 200 lakhs and the mutual fund has issued 10 lakhs units of ₹ 10 each to the investors, then the NAV per unit of the fund is ₹ 20. NAV is required to be disclosed by the mutual funds on a regular basis - daily or weekly - depending on the type of scheme.

Different types of Mutual Fund Schemes

The different schemes are detailed hereunder:

Schemes according to Maturity Period:

A mutual fund scheme can be classified into open-ended scheme or close-ended scheme depending on its maturity period.

Open-ended Fund/ Scheme

An open-ended fund or scheme is one that is available for subscription and repurchase on a continuous basis. These schemes do not have a fixed maturity period. Investors can conveniently buy and sell units at Net Asset Value (NAV) related prices which are declared on a daily basis. The key feature of open-end schemes is liquidity.

Close-ended Fund/ Scheme

A close-ended fund or scheme has a stipulated maturity period e.g. 5-7 years. The fund is open for subscription only during a specified period at the time of launch of the scheme. Investors can invest in the scheme at the time of the initial public issue and thereafter they can buy or sell the units of the scheme on the stock exchanges where the units are listed. In order to provide an exit route to the investors, some close-ended funds give an option of selling back the units to the mutual fund through periodic repurchase at NAV related prices. SEBI Regulations stipulate that at least one of the two exit routes is provided to the investor i.e. either repurchase facility or through listing on stock exchanges. These mutual funds schemes disclose NAV generally on weekly basis.

Schemes according to Investment Objective:

A scheme can also be classified as growth scheme, income scheme, or balanced scheme considering its investment objective. Such schemes may be open-ended or close-ended schemes as described earlier. Such schemes may be classified mainly as follows:

Growth / Equity Oriented Scheme

The aim of growth funds is to provide capital appreciation over the medium to long-term. Such schemes normally invest a major part of their corpus in equities. Such funds have comparatively high risks. These schemes provide different options to the investors like dividend option, capital appreciation, etc. and the investors may choose an option depending on their preferences. The investors must indicate the option in the application form. The mutual funds also allow the investors to change the options at a later date. Growth schemes are good for investors having a long-term outlook seeking appreciation over a period of time.

Income / Debt Oriented Scheme

The aim of income funds is to provide regular and steady income to investors. Such schemes generally invest in fixed income securities such as bonds, corporate debentures, Government securities and money market instruments. Such funds are less risky compared to equity schemes. These funds are not affected because of fluctuations in equity markets. However, opportunities of capital appreciation are also limited in such funds. The NAVs of such funds are affected because of change in interest rates in the country. If the interest rates fall, NAVs of such funds are likely to increase in the short run and vice versa. However, long term investors may not bother about these fluctuations.

Balanced Fund

The aim of balanced funds is to provide both growth and regular income as such schemes invest both in equities and fixed income securities in the proportion indicated in their offer documents. These are appropriate for investors looking for moderate growth. They generally invest 40-60% in equity and debt instruments. These funds are also affected because of fluctuations in share prices in the stock markets. However, NAVs of such funds are likely to be less volatile compared to pure equity funds.

Money Market or Liquid Fund

These funds are also income funds and their aim is to provide easy liquidity, preservation of capital and moderate income. These schemes invest exclusively in safer short-term instruments such as treasury bills, certificates of deposit, commercial paper and inter-bank call money, government securities, etc. Returns on these schemes fluctuate much less compared to other funds. These funds are appropriate for corporate and individual investors as a means to park their surplus funds for short periods.

Gilt Fund

These funds invest exclusively in government securities. Government securities have no default risk. NAVs of these schemes also fluctuate due to change in interest rates and other economic factors as is the case with income or debt oriented schemes.

Index Funds

Index Funds replicate the portfolio of a particular index such as the BSE Sensitive index, S&P NSE 50 index (Nifty), etc. These schemes invest in the securities in the same weightage comprising of an index. NAVs of such schemes would rise or fall in accordance with the rise or fall in the index, though not exactly by the same percentage due to some factors known as "tracking error" in technical terms. Necessary disclosures in this regard are made in the offer document of the mutual fund scheme.

There are also exchange traded index funds launched by the mutual funds which are traded on the stock exchanges.

Sector specific funds/schemes

These are the funds/schemes which invest in the securities of only those sectors or industries as specified in the offer documents. e.g. Pharmaceuticals, Software, Fast Moving Consumer Goods (FMCG), Petroleum stocks, etc. The returns in these funds are dependent on the performance of the respective sectors/industries. While these funds may give higher returns, they are more risky compared to diversified funds. Investors need to keep a watch on the performance of those sectors/industries and must exit at an appropriate time. They may also seek advice of an expert.

Tax Saving Schemes

These schemes offer tax rebates to the investors under specific provisions of the Income Tax Act, 1961 as the Government offers tax incentives for investment in specified avenues. e.g. Equity Linked Savings Schemes (ELSS). Pension schemes launched by the mutual funds also offer tax benefits. These schemes are growth oriented and invest pre-dominantly in equities. Their growth opportunities and risks associated are like any equity-oriented scheme.

Fund of Funds (FoF) scheme

A scheme that invests primarily in other schemes of the same mutual fund or other mutual funds is known as a FoF scheme. An FoF scheme enables the investors to achieve greater diversification through one scheme. It spreads risks across a greater universe.

Load or no-load Fund

A Load Fund is one that charges a percentage of NAV for entry or exit. That is, each time one buys or sells units in the fund, a charge will be payable. This charge is used by the mutual fund for marketing and distribution expenses. Suppose the NAV per unit is ₹ 10. If the entry as well as exit load charged is 1%, then the investors who buy would be required to pay ₹ 10.10 and those who offer their units for repurchase to the mutual fund will get only ₹ 9.90 per unit. The investors should take the loads into consideration while making investment as these affect their yields/returns. However, the investors should also consider the performance track record and service standards of the mutual fund which are more important. Efficient funds may give higher returns in spite of loads.

A no-load fund is one that does not charge for entry or exit. It means the investors can enter the fund/scheme at NAV and no additional charges are payable on purchase or sale of units.

Sales or repurchase/redemption price

The price or NAV a unit holder is charged while investing in an open-ended scheme is called sales price. It may include sales load, if applicable.

Repurchase or redemption price is the price or NAV at which an open-ended scheme purchases or redeems its units from the unit holders. It may include exit load, if applicable.

Assured return scheme

Assured return schemes are those schemes that assure a specific return to the unit holders irrespective of performance of the scheme.

A scheme cannot promise returns unless such returns are fully guaranteed by the sponsor or AMC and this is required to be disclosed in the offer document.

Investors should carefully read the offer document whether return is assured for the entire period of the scheme or only for a certain period. Some schemes assure returns one year at a time and they review and change it at the beginning of the next year.

Change in asset allocation while deploying funds of investors

Considering the market trends, any prudent fund managers can change the asset allocation i.e. he can invest higher or lower percentage of the fund in equity or debt instruments compared to what is disclosed in the offer document. It can be done on a short term basis on defensive considerations i.e. to protect the NAV. Hence the fund managers are allowed certain flexibility in altering the asset allocation considering the interest of the investors. In case the mutual fund wants to change the asset allocation on a permanent basis, they are required to inform the unit holders and giving them option to exit the scheme at prevailing NAV without any load.

Procedure to invest in a scheme of a mutual fund

Mutual funds normally come out with an advertisement in newspapers publishing the date of launch of the new schemes. Investors can also contact the agents and distributors of mutual funds who are spread all over the country for necessary information and application forms. Forms can be deposited with mutual funds through the agents and distributors who provide such services. Presently, even, the post offices and banks also distribute the units of mutual funds. However, the investors may please note that the mutual funds schemes being marketed by banks and post offices should not be taken as their own schemes and no assurance of returns is given by them. The only role of banks and post offices is to help in distribution of mutual funds schemes to the investors.

Investors should not be carried away by commission/gifts given by agents/distributors for investing in a particular scheme. On the other hand they must consider the track record of the mutual fund and should take objective decisions.

Investment by Non-resident Indians (NRIs) in mutual funds

Non-resident Indians can also invest in mutual funds. Necessary details in this respect are given in the offer documents of the schemes.

Quantum one should invest in debt or equity oriented schemes

An investor should take into account his risk taking capacity, age factor, financial position, etc. As already mentioned, the schemes invest in different type of securities as disclosed in the offer documents and offer different returns and risks. Investors may also consult financial experts before taking decisions. Agents and distributors may also help in this regard.

Filling up of application form of Mutual Funds

An investor must mention clearly his name, address, number of units applied for and such other information as required in the application form. He must give his bank account number so as to avoid any fraudulent encashment of any cheque/draft issued by the mutual fund at a later date for the purpose of dividend or repurchase. Any changes in the address, bank account number, etc at a later date should be informed to the mutual fund immediately.

Contents of Offer Document

An abridged offer document, which contains very useful information, is required to be given to the prospective investor by the mutual fund. The application form for subscription to a scheme is an integral part of the offer document. SEBI has prescribed minimum disclosures in the offer document. An investor, before investing in a scheme, should carefully read the offer document. Due care must be given to portions relating to main features of the scheme, risk factors, initial issue expenses and recurring expenses to be charged to the scheme, entry or exit loads, sponsor's track record, educational qualification and work experience of key personnel including fund managers, performance of other schemes launched by the mutual fund in the past, pending litigations and penalties imposed, etc.

Time within which the investor gets certificate or statement of account after investing in a mutual fund

Mutual funds are required to dispatch certificates or statements of accounts within six weeks from the date of closure of the initial subscription of the scheme. In case of close-ended schemes, the investors would get either a Demat Account Statement or unit certificates as these are traded in the stock exchanges. In case of open-ended schemes, a statement of account is issued by the mutual fund within 30 days from the date of closure of initial public offer of the scheme. The procedure of repurchase is mentioned in the offer document.

Duration for transfer of units after purchase from stock markets in case of close-ended schemes

According to SEBI Regulations, transfer of units is required to be done within thirty days from the date of lodgment of certificates with the mutual fund.

As a unitholder, time taken to receive dividends/repurchase proceeds

A mutual fund is required to dispatch to the unit holders the dividend warrants within 30 days of the declaration of the dividend and the redemption or repurchase proceeds within 10 working days from the date of redemption or repurchase request made by the unit holder.

In case of failures to dispatch the redemption/repurchase proceeds within the stipulated time period, Asset Management Company is liable to pay interest as specified by SEBI from time to time (15% at present).

Change in the nature of the scheme from the one specified in the offer document

A mutual fund can change the nature of the scheme from the one specified in the offer document. However, no change in the nature or terms of the scheme, known as fundamental attributes of the scheme e.g., structure, investment pattern, etc. can be carried out unless a written communication is sent to each unitholder and an advertisement is given in one English daily having nationwide circulation and in a newspaper published in the language of the region where the head office of the mutual fund is situated. Apart from it, many mutual funds send quarterly newsletters to their investors. The unitholders have the right to exit the scheme at the prevailing NAV without any exit load if they do not want to continue with the scheme. The mutual funds are also required to follow similar procedure while converting the scheme from close-ended to open-ended scheme and in case of change in sponsor.

At present, offer documents are required to be revised and updated at least once in two years. In the meantime, new investors are informed about the material changes by way of addendum to the offer document till the time offer document is revised and reprinted.

Performance of a Mutual Fund Scheme

The performance of a scheme is reflected in its net asset value (NAV) which is disclosed on daily basis in case of open-ended schemes and on weekly basis in case of close-ended schemes. The NAVs of mutual funds are required to be published in newspapers. The NAVs are also available on the web sites of mutual funds. All mutual funds are also required to put their NAVs on the web site of Association of Mutual Funds in India (AMFI) and thus the investors can access NAVs of all mutual funds at one place

The mutual funds are also required to publish their performance in the form of half-yearly results which also include their returns/yields over a period of time i.e. last six months, 1 year, 3 years, 5 years and since inception of schemes. Investors can also look into other details like percentage of expenses of total assets as these have an affect on the yield and other useful information in the same half-yearly format.

The mutual funds are also required to send annual report or abridged annual report to the unitholders at the end of the year.

Various studies on mutual fund schemes including yields of different schemes are being published by the financial newspapers on a weekly basis. Apart from these, many research agencies also publish research reports on performance of mutual funds including the ranking of various schemes in terms of their performance. Investors should study these reports and keep themselves informed about the performance of various schemes of different mutual funds.

Investors can compare the performance of their schemes with those of other mutual funds under the same category. They can also compare the performance of equity oriented schemes with the benchmarks like BSE Sensitive Index, S&P CNX Nifty, etc.

On the basis of performance of the mutual funds, the investors should decide when to enter or exit from a mutual fund scheme.

Disclosure as to how mutual fund scheme has invested money mobilised from the investors

The mutual funds are required to disclose full portfolios of all of their schemes on half-yearly basis which are published in the newspapers. Some mutual funds send the portfolios to their unitholders.

The scheme portfolio shows investment made in each security i.e. equity, debentures, money market instruments, government securities, etc. and their quantity, market value and % to NAV. These portfolio statements also required to disclose illiquid securities in the portfolio, investment made in rated and unrated debt securities, non-performing assets (NPAs), etc.

Some of the mutual funds send newsletters to the unitholders on quarterly basis which also contain portfolios of the schemes.

Difference between investing in a mutual fund and in an initial public offering (IPO) of a company

IPOs of companies may open at lower or higher price than the issue price depending on market sentiment and perception of investors. However, in the case of mutual funds, the par value of the units may not rise or fall immediately after allotment. A mutual fund scheme takes some time to make investment in securities. NAV of the scheme depends on the value of securities in which the funds have been deployed.

Choosing a scheme if schemes in the same category of different mutual funds are available

Some of the investors have the tendency to prefer a scheme that is available at lower NAV compared to the one available at higher NAV. Sometimes, they prefer a new scheme which is issuing units at ₹ 10 whereas the existing schemes in the same category are available at much higher NAVs. Investors may please note that in case of mutual funds schemes, lower or higher NAVs of similar type schemes of different mutual funds have no relevance. On the other hand, investors should choose a scheme based on its merit considering performance track record of the mutual fund, service standards, professional management, etc. This is explained in an example given below.

Suppose scheme A is available at a NAV of ₹ 15 and another scheme B at ₹ 90. Both schemes are diversified equity oriented schemes. Investor has put ₹ 9,000 in each of the two schemes. He would get 600 units ($9000/15$) in scheme A and 100 units ($9000/90$) in scheme B. Assuming that the markets go up by 10 per cent and both the schemes perform equally good and it is reflected in their NAVs. NAV of scheme A would go up to ₹ 16.50 and that of scheme B to ₹ 99. Thus, the market value of investments would be ₹ 9,900 (600×16.50) in scheme A and it would be the same amount of ₹ 9900 in scheme B (100×99).

The investor would get the same return of 10% on his investment in each of the schemes. Thus, lower or higher NAV of the schemes and allotment of higher or lower number of units within the amount an investor is willing to invest, should not be the factors for making investment decision. Likewise, if a new equity oriented scheme is being offered at ₹ 10 and an existing scheme is available for ₹ 90, should not be a factor for decision making by the investor. Similar is the case with income or debt-oriented schemes.

On the other hand, it is likely that the better managed scheme with higher NAV may give higher returns compared to a scheme which is available at lower NAV but is not managed efficiently. Similar is the case of fall in NAVs. Efficiently managed scheme at higher NAV may not fall as much as inefficiently managed scheme with lower NAV. Therefore, the investor should give more weightage to the professional management of a scheme instead of lower NAV of any scheme. He may get much higher number of units at lower NAV, but the scheme may not give higher returns if it is not managed efficiently.

Choosing a scheme for investment from a number of schemes available

As already mentioned, the investors must read the offer document of the mutual fund scheme very carefully. They may also look into the past track record of performance of the scheme or other schemes of the same mutual fund. They may also compare the performance with other schemes having similar investment objectives. Though past performance of a scheme is not an indicator of its future performance and good performance in the past may or may not be sustained in the future, this is one of the important factors for making investment decision. In case of debt oriented schemes, apart from looking into past returns, the investors should also see the quality of debt instruments which is reflected in their rating. A scheme with lower rate of return but having investments in better rated instruments may be safer. Similarly, in equities schemes also, investors may look for quality of portfolio. They may also seek advice of experts.

Companies having names like mutual benefit vis-a-vis mutual funds schemes

Investors should not assume some companies having the name “mutual benefit” as mutual funds. These companies do not come under the purview of SEBI. On the other hand, mutual funds can mobilise funds from the investors by launching schemes only after getting registered with SEBI as mutual funds.

Higher net worth of the sponsor a guarantee for better returns

In the offer document of any mutual fund scheme, financial performance including the net worth of the sponsor for a period of three years is required to be given. The only purpose is that the investors should know the track record of the company which has sponsored the mutual fund. However, higher net worth of the sponsor does not mean that the scheme would give better returns or the sponsor would compensate in case the NAV falls.

Information on mutual funds

Almost all the mutual funds have their own web sites. Investors can also access the NAVs, half-yearly results and portfolios of all mutual funds at the web site of Association of mutual funds in India (AMFI). AMFI has also published useful literature for the investors.

Investors can log on to the web site of SEBI and go to “Mutual Funds” section for information on SEBI regulations and guidelines, data on mutual funds, draft offer documents filed by mutual funds, addresses of mutual funds, etc. Also, in the annual reports of SEBI available on the web site, a lot of information on mutual funds is given.

There are a number of other web sites which give a lot of information of various schemes of mutual funds including yields over a period of time. Many newspapers also publish useful information on mutual funds on daily and weekly basis. Investors may approach their agents and distributors to guide them in this regard.

Appointment of a nominee for investment in units of a mutual fund

The nomination can be made by individuals applying for / holding units on their own behalf singly or jointly. Non-individuals including society, trust, body corporate, partnership firm, Karta of Hindu Undivided Family, holder of Power of Attorney cannot nominate.

Winding up of scheme

In case of winding up of a scheme, the mutual funds pay a sum based on prevailing NAV after adjustment of expenses. Unitholders are entitled to receive a report on winding up from the mutual funds which gives all necessary details.

Redressal of complaints

Investors would find the name of contact person in the offer document of the mutual fund scheme whom they may approach in case of any query, complaints or grievances. Trustees of a mutual fund monitor the activities of the mutual fund. The names of the directors of asset management company and trustees are also given in the offer documents. Investors should approach the concerned Mutual Fund / Investor Service Centre of the Mutual Fund with their complaints,

If the complaints remain unresolved, the investors may approach SEBI for facilitating redressal of their complaints. On receipt of complaints, SEBI takes up the matter with the concerned mutual fund and follows up with it regularly. Investors may send their complaints to:

Procedure for registering a Mutual Fund with SEBI

An applicant proposing to sponsor a mutual fund in India must submit an application in Form A along with a fee of ₹ 25,000. The application is examined and once the sponsor satisfies certain conditions such as being in the financial services business and possessing positive net worth for the last five years, having net profit in three out of the last five years and possessing the general reputation of fairness and integrity in all business transactions, it is required to complete the remaining formalities for setting up a mutual fund. These include inter alia, executing the trust deed and investment management agreement, setting up a trustee company/board of trustees comprising two- thirds independent trustees, incorporating the asset management company (AMC), contributing to at least 40% of the net worth of the AMC and appointing a custodian. Upon satisfying these conditions, the registration certificate is issued subject to the payment of registration fees of ₹ 25.00 lacs.

Producer Companies

Part IX A dealing with Producer Companies has been added to the Companies, Act, 1956 by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2002 and the provisions of this part have become operative w.e.f. 6th February, 2003 (vide Notification No. S.O. 135(E) dated 5th February, 2003 issued by the D.C.A.). Through this Amendment Act a new class of companies has been created in the Act with special provisions in this regard. This part of the Companies Act, 1956 is unique in character - it provides a self-contained set of legal provisions in the matter of Producer Companies and is exclusively devoted to Producer Companies. The necessity to bring in this class of companies under the discipline of the Companies Act, though has not been spelt out in the Part, seems to provide a regulated platform for development of entities engaged in activities that a producer company may engage in sections 581A to 581ZT of the Act spread on twelve chapters comprise this Part.

The pattern and contents of the chapters appear to suggest that this Amendment Act is an Act within an Act and most of the distinctive features of the Companies Act, 1956 are there. It can further be noted that this Amendment Act has principal focus on multi-State co-operative societies.

Recognising inherent limitations of the co-operative form of economic organization and primarily to bring the multi-State co-operative societies in the main-stream economic activity but not giving-up the co-operative principle of mutual assistance, Part IX A has been enacted and included in the Companies Act, 1956. This Part IXA has been so framed as to bring inducement for earning profit by emphasizing on active membership, distribution of patronage bonus and other direct benefits to members. Further, the scheme of activity has been devised for bringing discernible corporate culture by creating position for C.E.O and emphasizing on marketing, research, technical services, training, etc.

Overview of the provisions- Part IXA as introduced enable incorporation of co-operatives as companies and conversion of existing co-operatives into companies, on optional basis. Unique elements of co-operative business are accommodated within a regulatory framework similar to that of companies. The salient features are - (i) to offer a statutory and regulatory framework that creates the potential for producer-owned enterprises to compete with other enterprises on a competitive footing, (ii) to provide for the formation and registration of producer companies which include the mutual assistance and co-operative principles within the more liberal regulatory framework afforded by the Company Law with suitable adaptations, (iii) to provide an opportunity to co-operative institutions to voluntarily transform themselves into the new form of producer companies, (iv) conversion of a co-operatives to producer companies is purely voluntary, (v) member's equity may not be publicly traded, but may only be transferred, with the approval of the producer company's Board of Directors. Producer companies would not be vulnerable to the takeover by multinationals or other companies, (vi) the conversion option by cooperative society to producer company can be exercised only if two-thirds of the members of the concerned society vote in favour of a resolution to that effect, (vii) the new form of company is designated as 'producer company' to indicate that only certain categories of persons can participate in the ownership of such companies. The members of the Producer Company have necessarily to be 'primary producers' that is persons engaged in an activity connected with, or relatable to, primary produce, (viii) the objects of a producer company have been defined to include, among other things production, processing, manufacture and sale of primary produce as well as allied matters.

Incorporation of Producer Companies - Section 581B to section 581N deal with matters connected with incorporation of producer companies. Section 581B(i) specifies the objects with which a producer company can be incorporated under the Act. The nucleus of all the objects stated in the aforesaid section seems to be 'primary produce' and this expression has been defined in section 581A(J) meaning—

- (i) produce of farmers arising from agriculture [including animal husbandry, horticulture, floriculture, pisciculture (raising fish), viticulture (growing grapes), forestry, forest products, re-vegetation, bee raising and farming plantation products], or from any other primary activity or service which promoted the interest of farmers or consumers;
- (ii) produce of persons engaged in handloom, handicraft and other cottage industries;
- (iii) any product resulting from any of the above activities, including by-products of such products;
- (iv) any product resulting from an ancillary activity that would assist or promote any of the aforesaid activities or anything ancillary thereto;
- (v) any activity which is intended to increase the production of anything referred to in (i) to (iv) above or improve the quality thereof. Broadly, the definition covers activities of and related to agriculture (of various forms) and handloom, handicraft and other cottage industries. Till now these activities had been the concern of co-operative societies. Part IXA has not defined the word 'Produce'. Therefore, this word has to be construed as to its natural meaning.

However, services also come within the definition by virtue of clause (v) above.

Objects of a Producer Company - The objects with which a producer company can be incorporated are as under:

- (a) production, harvesting, procurement, grading, pooling, handling, marketing, selling and export of primary produce of the members or import of goods or services for their benefit; any of these activities can be carried on by the company being incorporated or through other institution on behalf of the company;
- (b) processing including preserving, drying, distilling, brewing, vinting, canning and packaging of produce of its members;
- (c) manufacture, sale or supply of machinery, equipment or consumables mainly to its members; [in other words, a producer company can as well be a normal manufacturing or trading company provided it produces requirements of the farming sector and handicrafts, handloom and cottage industries, provided further that the company's members are the main buyers and users of these products];
- (d) providing education on the mutual assistance principles to its members and others; [Le., it can be an institution imparting education to the members of the company as also others, owning the institution on principles of 'mutual assistance'. The expression 'mutual assistance principle' has been defined in section 581A(f) read with section 581B(2) of the Act];
- (e) rendering technical services, consultancy services, training, research and development and all other activities for the promotion of interests of its members [i.e., it can be a service rendering company acting as a catalyst for improved quality of production or for development of products by research or allied activities of its members;]
- (f) generation, transmission and distribution of power, revitalization of land and water resources, their use, conservation and communications relatable to primary produce; i.e., it can be a power generating, transmitting and distributing company or a company developing/improving land and water resources including their conservation, all of which should be relatable to primary produce. Here, a company promoted with this object does not need to have as buyers/users of its output restricted to its members;
- (g) insurance of producers or their primary produce (i.e., it can be an insurance company insuring producers or their primary produce);
- (h) promoting techniques of mutuality and mutual assistance;
- (i) welfare measures or facilities for the benefit of members as may be decided by the Board;
- (j) any other activity, ancillary or incidental to any of the activities referred in (a) to (i) above or other activities which may promote the principles of mutuality and mutual assistance amongst the members in any manner;
- (k) financing of procurement, processing, marketing or other activities specified in clauses (a) to (j) above.

A producer company can be incorporated with all or any of the above objects.

Formation of Producer Company and its registration [Section 581C]- The following categories of people or entities will be entitled to form a producer company:

- (i) any ten or more individuals each of whom will be a producer;.
- (ii) any two or more producer institutions;
- (iii) a combination of ten or more individuals and producer institutions.

A 'producer' has been defined in section 581A(k) as "any person engaged in any activity connected with or relatable to any primary produce" and a 'producer company' has been defined by clause (l) of section 581A as “a body corporate having objects or activities specified in section 581B and registered as ‘producer company’ under the Act.” A ‘producer institution’ has been defined in the next clause of section 581A as a producer company or any other institution having only producer or producers or producer company or producer companies as its member whether incorporated or not having any of the objects referred to in section 581B and which agrees to make use of the services of the producer company or producer companies as provided in its articles. The definitions of ‘producer’ and ‘producer company’ do not need much elaboration except that ‘a producer’ is not necessarily an individual and it can be any entity which in law can be considered as ‘person’ e.g. a company or a co-operative society. In other words, a producer can be an individual, a producer company or a co-operative or other society with only condition that such body must be engaged in any activity connected with or relatable to any primary produce. A ‘producer company’ can have as its members, co-operative societies or other legal entities apart from individuals. The definition of ‘producer institution’, however, is a bit complex. The term ‘institution’ in this context does not bear any special meaning and as such it can be an organisation or establishment devoted to the promotion of a particular object and in this case the object has to be any or all the objects with which a producer company can be registered, (the objects mentioned in section 581B). A producer institution cannot be an individual; it is to be a collective entity composed of members who may be individual or producer company. It is important to note that a producer institution, not itself being a producer company, has to have as its members only producer(s) and/or producer company(ies). A producer company itself also can be a producer institution. A producer institution, other than a producer company, can be either an incorporated body or a non-incorporated body. The only further condition to be fulfilled is that it has to have object or objects mentioned in section 581B. It seems, therefore, that even a partnership firm, a joint Hindu family, or an Association of persons or a Trust can as well be a producer institution, provided its object(s) is confined to the objects mentioned in section 581B. Also a section 25 company under the Act can be a producer company or a producer institution. If any existing section 25 company has as its objects any or all the objects in section 581B, it will automatically become a producer company or a producer institution and would be governed by the requirements of Part IXA of the Act as well with the exception that it cannot have distribution of profit earned amongst its members.

Ordinarily, the term “institution” is associated with a ‘no-profit’ motive, but in case of producer institution, that is not the case. No provision of this part bars a producer institution from earning profit and distributing the same to its members. A further issue needs consideration; a producer company can be a producer institution apart from any other body that qualify to be a producer institution. What would then be distinguishing feature of a producer company becoming a producer institution? It seems that any producer company which has other producer companies as members will only qualify to be called producer institution. However, if such a company has any other body or individual as member(s), it will remain as producer company only.

The promoting individuals /bodies of a producer company must express the desire to form such a company with object(s) specified in section 581B. They will also have to comply with the requirements of Part IXA of the Act and provisions of the Act in respect of registration of companies. Under provisions of sections 581F and 581G, the promoters of a producer company will have to prepare the memorandum of association and articles of association, special to producer companies. The requirements are as under:

Memorandum of Association of a Producer Company shall state : -

- (i) the name of the company with “Producer Company Limited” as last words of the name of such company;
- (if) the state in which the registered office of the Producer Company is to situate (in case the objects of the producer company are to extend beyond the state of registration, the State(s) to which the objects will extend will have to be stated);

- (iii) the main objects of the producer company shall be one or more of the objects specified in section 581B;
- (iv) the names and addresses of the persons who have subscribed to the memorandum ('Persons' mean individuals and Producers institutions);
- (v) the amount of share capital with which the producer company is to be registered and division thereof into shares of fixed amounts;
- (vi) the name, address and occupation of the subscribers being producers, who shall act as the first directors of the producer company [a reference to section 581J(2) has been made in this context which seems to be inappropriate. It should be section 581R(2);]
- (vii) that the liability of its members is limited;
- (viii) the number of shares each subscriber takes is mentioned opposite to the name of respective subscriber. No subscriber shall take less than one share.

Directors - It seems that the first directors of the producer company will be only from producers who are individuals and producer institution as such cannot be a director. Where, however, a producer company is being promoted only by producer institutions, the possible recourse would be to have required individuals acting for and on behalf of promoting producer institutions as nominee holders of shares to act as first directors. In case of an incorporated body this is already an accepted procedure but if the promoting producer institution is a non-incorporated body, the process of nomination as subscriber cum first director shall have to be determined by reference to its constituting document.

Subscription to the memorandum by non-incorporated body of producer institution - Since a non-incorporated body also can be producer institution, a mechanism needs to be evolved by reference to the constituting document of that body to sign as subscriber to the memorandum.

Status of a Producer Company - As per section 581C(5), a producer company on registration as such, will be treated as a private limited company under this Act, to which Part IXA will apply even though it is not required to add the word "private" in its name or to restrict its membership to the number (i.e., fifty) specified for other Private Limited Companies or to be subjected to the general requirement of a minimum of two members. So far minimum strength of members criterion is concerned, it needs to have at least two producer institutions or ten producers or a total of ten producers and producer institutions as minimum number of members to form a producer company and to carry on its activities. A producer company shall have liability of its members limited by the Memorandum to the amount, if any, unpaid on the shares respectively held by them. It will be a company limited by Shares [Section 581C(3)]. A producer company shall not be a public company under this Act. (Nor shall it be a guarantee company or unlimited company)

A member means a person or producer institution admitted as a member of a Producer company and who retains the qualifications necessary for continuance as such.

Articles of Association [Section 581G]- The distinctive feature of the Articles of Association of a producer company is that the Articles have to contain certain "mutual assistance principles", apart from other relevant regulatory provisions. "Mutual assistance Principles" have been defined in clause (f) of section 581A as the principles set out in sub-section (2) of section 581G and they are as under:

- (i) the membership shall be voluntary and available to all eligible persons who, can participate or avail of the facilities or services of the Producer Company, and are willing to accept the duties of membership;
- (ii) each member shall, save as otherwise provided in Part IXA of the Act, have a single vote irrespective of the shareholding;
- (iii) the Producer Company shall be administered by a Board consisting of persons elected or appointed as directors in the manner consistent with the provisions of Part IXA of the Act and the Board shall be accountable to the members;

- (iv) there shall be limited return (the maximum dividend as may be stated in the Articles) on share capital except for circumstances provided in Part IXA of the Act;
- (v) the surplus arising out of the operations of the producer company shall be distributed in an equitable manner by—
 - (a) providing for the development of the business of the producer company;
 - (b) providing for common facilities; and
 - (c) distributing amongst the members, as may be admissible, in proportion to their respective participation in the business;
- (vi) provision for education of members, employees and others, on the principles of mutuality and techniques of mutual assistance shall be made;
- (vii) the producer company shall actively co-operate with other producer companies (and other organisation following similar principles) at local, national or international level so as to best serve the interests of its members and the communities it purports to serve.

The Articles shall also contain the following provisions in terms of sub-section (3) of section 581G of the Act:

- (1) the qualifications for membership, the condition for continuance or cancellation of membership and the terms, conditions and procedure for transfer of shares;
- (2) the manner of ascertaining the patronage and voting right based on patronage;
- (3) the manner of constitution of the Board, its powers and duties, the minimum and maximum number of directors, manner of election and appointment of directors and retirement by rotation, qualifications for being elected or continuance as such and the terms of office of the said directors, their powers and duties, conditions for election or co-option of directors, method of removal of directors and the filling up of vacancies on the Board, and the manner and the terms of appointment of the Chief Executive (as stipulated in section 581W). [When an inter-State co-operative society transforms itself as a producer company, all its directors at the time of transformation shall become and continue as directors of the producer company concerned for a period of one year from the date of the transformation. However, their rights, duties, etc. as directors will then be according to the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956];
- (4) the election of the chairman, term of office of directors and the chairman, manner of voting at the general or special meetings of members, procedure for voting by directors at meetings of the Board, powers of the chairman and the circumstances under which the chairman may exercise a casting vote;
- (5) the circumstances under which and the manner in which, the 'withheld price' is to be determined and distributed ['withheld price' means part of the price due and payable for goods supplied by any member to the producer company and as withheld by the producer company for payment on a subsequent date -Section 581A(n)].

Note: Since a producer company can engage in providing service also, [vide section 581A(J) (v)], it seems that no part of service charge can be withheld by a producer company. Right to withhold is confined to 'price of goods supplied';

- (6) the manner of disbursement of patronage bonus in cash or by issue of equity shares or both; (A producer company can have only equity share capital - vide section 581ZB of the Act);

'Patronage bonus' means payments made by a producer company out of its surplus income to the members in proportion to their respective patronage. The word "patronage", in turn, means the use of services offered by the producer company to its members by participation in its business activities [vide clauses (h) and (i) of section 581 A];

- (7) the contribution to the shared and related matters [in the event of a producer company not being in a position to transfer requisite sum(s) to the reserves (including the general reserve) as may be specified in the Articles, the shortfall will have to be shared by the members in proportion to their patronage in the business of the producer company of that year. This sharing is the “contribution”];
- (8) the matters relating to the issue of bonus shares out of general reserve of the producer company;
- (9) the basis and manner of allotment of shares of the producer company in lieu of the whole or part of sale proceeds of produce or products supplied by the members;
- (10) the amount of reserves, sources from which funds may be raised, limitation on raising of funds, restriction on the use of such funds and the extent of debt that may be contracted and the conditions thereof;
- (11) the credit, loans or advances which may be granted to a member and the conditions for the grant of the same;
- (12) the right of any member to obtain information relating to general business of the company;
- (13) the basis and manner of distribution and disposal of funds available after meeting- liabilities in the event of dissolution or liquidation of the producer company;
- (14) the authorization for division, amalgamation, merger, creation of subsidiaries and the entering into joint ventures and other matters connected therewith;
- (15) laying of the Memorandum of Association and Articles of Association of the Producer Company before a special general meeting to be held within ninety days of its registration; and
- (16) any other provision, which the members may, by special resolution recommend to be included in articles, e.g., members’ or others’ right of inspection of books, registers and records, etc.

Registration of Producer Company - The registration of a producer company requires compliance not only with those specified in this Part IXA of the Act but also other applicable provisions of the Act not dealt with by this Part of the Act. It is evident from the language used in section 581C of the Act. For example, provisions of sections 15 and 30 of the Act dealing with printing and signature of memorandum and articles of association will require compliance. Similarly, section 33 of the Act requiring registration of memorandum and articles will also apply to a producer company. Section 20 concerns approval of name of a company and producer company is no exception to that section. Upon receipt of the memorandum and the articles along with any other relevant document of the producer company for registration and after examining their contents if the Registrar is satisfied that all the requirements of the Companies Act have been complied with in respect of registration of the producer company, including matters precedent and incidental thereto, he shall, within thirty days of the receipt of the documents lodged for registration, register the memorandum, the articles and other documents, if any, and issue a certificate of incorporation to the producer company. Sections 34(2) and 35 of the Act regarding conferring of the ‘body corporate’ status and conclusiveness of the Certificate of incorporation will then apply to the producer company. On incorporation, the producer company may reimburse to its promoters all the direct costs associated with promotion and registration of the company. These costs include registration fees, legal fees and the cost of printing of the memorandum and the articles. This reimbursement can be made only with the approval of the first general meeting of the producer company.

Amendment of Memorandum and Articles of Association of a producer company- Sections 581H and 581-I contain requirements to be fulfilled for amending memorandum and articles of the producer company. A producer company may, by special resolution, not inconsistent with section 581B (objects of a producer company), alter its objects specified in the memorandum. A copy of the memorandum as amended, together with a copy of the special resolution duly certified by two directors, shall be filed with the Registrar within thirty days from the date of adoption of the resolution. With a view to alter the Memorandum so as to change the address of the producer company, from the jurisdiction of one Registrar to the jurisdiction of another Registrar, a special resolution will have to be passed and copies of the special resolution certified by two directors of the producer company shall be filed with both the Registrars, presumably with copies of the altered memorandum within thirty days. Each Registrar will record the same and thereafter it will be the responsibility of the Registrar from whose jurisdiction the address (the place) has been shifted to forthwith forward to the other Registrar all the documents with him relating to the producer company concerned. In case the change involves shifting of the producer company from one state to another, the confirmation of the Company Law Board is necessary.

Unlike the process of amendment of the memorandum, section 581-I requires a proposal by either at least two-third of the elected directors or at least one-third of the members of the producer company to amend any clause of the Articles of the company. The proposal as above has to be approved by a special resolution of the members. A copy of the amended Articles together with the copy of the special resolution, duly certified by two directors, is required to be filed with the Registrar within thirty days from the date of its adoption.

Benefits to Members [Section 581E]

- (i) Every member shall initially receive only such value for the produce or products supplied and pooled as the Board of the producer company may determine. This determination shall have to be made in accordance with the provision made in the Articles in this behalf. The price not paid then (withheld price) may later be disbursed in cash or in kind or by allotment of equity shares, in proportion to the produce supplied to the producer company during the financial year. The extent of the payment or settlement of the withheld price shall be decided by the Board along with the manner and condition thereof. This provision implies that the Board of the Producer Company may not pay the full withheld price.
- (ii) On the share capital, the members are entitled to only a limited return as provided in the Articles.
- (iii) Members may receive bonus shares of the producer company in accordance with the provisions of section 581ZJ. Necessary clause in this regard need to be in the Articles. Section 581ZJ authorises a producer company to issue bonus shares by capitalisation of amounts from general reserve, in proportion to the shares held by the members on the date of the issue. However, the issue of the bonus shares as above should be approved by members in a general meeting, provided the Board has made a recommendation to that effect. The Articles may provide for the type of resolution needed for this purpose. However, if the Articles do not contain any clause on issue of bonus shares, the Articles have to be first amended before passing the appropriate resolution.
- (iv) Patronage bonus may be paid to the members by the producer company out of any surplus left after making provision for payment of limited return and creation of any reserves mandated by section 581ZI. If the company decides to pay patronage bonus to members, it should be in proportion to their participation in the business of the producer company and may be paid either in cash or by way of allotment of shares, or both as may be decided by the members in the general meeting. Here again, the Articles must have clause enabling the producer company to pay patronage bonus.

Voting rights of members of a producer company - Section 581D specifies that:

- (i) Where membership consists of individual producers only every member shall have a single vote, irrespective of his shareholding or patronage.
- (ii) Where membership comprises of only producer institutions, such members shall enjoy voting rights on the basis of their participation in the business of the producer company in the previous year, as may be specified in the Articles. However, when the producer company did not exist in the previous year i.e., in the first year of its operation, the voting rights of these members shall be determined on the basis of their respective shareholding.

- (iii) Where membership comprises of both individual producers and producer institutions, the voting rights shall be computed on the basis of a single vote for every member irrespective of whether he/it is an individual or institution.
- (iv) The Articles of the producer company may provide for the conditions, subject to which, a member may continue to retain his/its membership as also the manner in which voting rights shall be exercised by the members.
- (v) Subject to authorization by the Articles, a producer company may restrict the voting rights to 'active members' only in the general or special meeting of members. An 'active member' has been defined in clause (a) of section 581A as "a member who fulfils the quantum and period of patronage of the producer company as may be required by the Articles". This means that if the articles so provide any member whether an individual or an institution can be denied voting rights altogether, if he/it fails to fulfill the criteria of "active member".

Therefore, though perhaps not intended to be the shares with differential rights as to dividend, voting or otherwise as included in section 86 of the Act, it is clear that a Producer Company may render certain shares as non-voting shares through its articles.

Membership and conflicting business interest - No person, who has any business interest which is in conflict with business of the producer company, can become a member of that company. Further, if he acquires any conflicting business interest after becoming member of a producer company, he will cease to continue as such member and be removed from membership in accordance with the Articles of the company.

Inter-State Cooperative Societies can become Producer Company [Sections 581J-581N]- Section 581C provides the basic mechanism for formation of producer company in which ten individual producers or two producer institutions or a combination of them numbering not less than ten can form a producer company. However, provisions of section 581J enable an inter-State cooperative society (hereinafter "society") also to become a producer company. Clause (e) of section 581A defines "inter-State cooperative societies" as "a multi-State cooperative society" as defined in clause (k) of section 3 of the Multi-State Cooperative Societies Act, 1984 and includes any cooperative society registered under any other law for the time being in force, which has, subsequent to its formation, extended any of its objects to more than one State by enlisting the participation of persons of by extending any of its activities outside the State, whether directly or indirectly or through an institution of which it is a constituent. Clause (k) of section 3 of the Multi-State Cooperative Societies Act, 1984 defines a multi-State cooperative society as under:

"It means a society registered or deemed to be registered under this Act and includes a national cooperative society."

Any inter-State cooperative society with objects not confined to a single state make an application to the Registrar of Companies (RoC) for registration as a producer company. The application has to accompany the following:

- (a) a copy of special resolution (at least 2/3rd of the total number of members of the cooperative society voting for it) approving for its incorporation as a producer company under the Companies Act, 1956;
- (b) statements showing/containing/indicating- (i) names and addresses or (should be 'and') the occupation of the directors and Chief Executive Officer, if any, by whatever name called, (ii) list of members of the cooperative society concerned, and (iii) that the inter-State cooperative society is engaged in any one or more of the objects specified for a producer company in section 581B of the Act; and
- (c) a declaration by two or more directors of the society concerned certifying that particulars given in (a) and (b) above are correct.

Upon registration as a producer company, the society shall have to have its name with "Producer Company Limited" as last words. It may retain its old name without the words implying cooperative society. It may also evolve any word or expression to precede the words "producer company limited" that would identify itself to its earlier co-operative status. The Registrar, within thirty days of the receipt of application for registration, complete in all respects, and having found it in compliance with the laid down requirements, shall certify under his hand that the applicant inter-State cooperative society has been incorporated as a producer company under Part IXA of the Companies Act, 1956. Apart from an inter-State cooperative society, a cooperative society formed by (i) Producers, (ii) by Federation or Union of cooperative societies of producers, (iii) co-operatives of producers, registered under any law for the time being in force which has extended its objects outside the State, either directly or through a union or Federation of cooperatives of which it is a constituent, or (iv) any Federation of Unions of such cooperatives, which has extended its object or activity outside the State, shall be eligible to make application for registration as a producer company [clause (5) of section 581J]. Therefore, this facility of registration as a producer company, though basically is available to producers or producer institutions, has been extended to (a) inter-State cooperative societies and (b) cooperative societies formed by producers or cooperative societies formed by union or Federation of cooperative societies of producers or existing cooperative societies of producers or any Federation of Unions of such cooperative society provided they are registered cooperative societies in the cases of cooperative society and have extended their objects and activities beyond the geographical boundary of their state of registration. The key-points to be noted in this regard is that the applicant has to be a registered cooperative society or a Federation of Unions of cooperative societies, its primary constituent or members must be 'producer' as defined in this Part and it must have extended its objects and activities outside the state of its registration/location as such society or Federation. Section 581J as such does not require filing of any memorandum or articles of association by the transforming inter-state cooperative society. However, following section 581ZQ, it would not be incorrect to hold that the basic requirements of section 33 of the Act have not been expressly excluded and, therefore, the general requirements of filing memorandum and articles for registration and 'declaration' by a professional [vide section 33(2)] also apply in case of transformation of an inter-state cooperative society into a Producer Company.

Transformation of inter-State cooperative society into Producer Company - An inter-State cooperative society, upon registration as a producer company shall automatically, by operation of law, become a producer company. As such producer company, it shall be governed by the provisions of this part of the Companies Act, 1956 (Part IXA) in exclusion of the law to which it was earlier subjected. However, anything done or omitted to be done before its registration as a producer company will have to be followed up or done under the earlier law. For example, if a dividend declaration was made as a cooperative society (where it was possible to make the declaration), the same has to be paid in accordance of the provisions of the concerned cooperative law including the bye-laws thereunder. No person shall have any claim against the cooperative so transformed or against the producer company that came into being because of the transformation, based on the fact of the transformation [clause (6) of section 581J]. The Registrar of Companies who registered the inter-State cooperative society as a producer company shall forthwith intimate the concerned Registrar of cooperative societies with whom the erstwhile cooperative society was registered, the fact of the registration of the producer company to enable the latter Registrar make appropriate deletion of the name of the cooperative society from his register [clause (7) of section 581J]. The clauses (6) and (7) as above, specify the inter-State cooperative society as the subject of transformation. The categories of cooperative societies mentioned in clause (5), appear to be covered by this clause as they also become inter-State cooperative societies by virtue of the fact that they also have extended their objects/activities beyond their State of registration. However, when a Federation of Unions of cooperative societies apply for registration of a producer company, whether that Federation ceases to exist after the registration of the related producer company, is not clear.

Under section 581K, every shareholder of the inter-State cooperative society immediately before the date of registration of the producer company (i.e., the transformation date) shall be deemed to be registered shareholder of the producer company to the extent of the face value of the shares held by such shareholder in the cooperative society. It seems that the applicant cooperative society will not be able to admit any new member or effect any transfer of its shares after making the application to become a producer company as such act may bring complications of deeming the initial members of the producer company.

Section 581L deals with further consequences that follow on transformation of an inter-State cooperative society into a producer company. On the transformation date—

- (i) all properties and assets, movable and immovable, of, or belonging to the transforming cooperative society shall vest in the producer company;
- (ii) all the rights, debts, liabilities, interests, privileges and obligations of the society shall stand transferred to, and be the corresponding rights, liabilities etc. (as above) of the producer company;
- (iii) all debts, liabilities and obligations incurred, all contracts entered into and all matters and things engaged to be done by, with or for the society as on the transformation date for or in connection with their purposes, shall be deemed to have been incurred or entered into, or engaged to be done by with or for the producer company;
- (iv) all sums of money due to the society immediately before the transformation date shall be deemed to be due to the producer company;
- (v) every organisation which was being managed by the society immediately before the transformation date shall be managed by the producer company, for such period, to such extent and in such manner, as the circumstances may require;
- (vi) every organisation which was getting financial, managerial or technical assistance from the society immediately before the transformation date, may continue to be given the same assistance by the producer company, for such period, to such extent and in such manner, as the company may deem fit;
- (vii) the amount representing the capital of the erstwhile society shall form part of the capital of the producer company;
- (viii) any reference to the inter-State cooperative society (the society) in any law other than the Companies Act, 1956 or in any contract or other instrument, shall be deemed to be reference to the producer company; and
- (ix) any pending legal suit, arbitration, appeal or other legal proceedings of whatever nature by or against the society, shall not get abated, or discontinued, or anyway prejudicially affected by reason of incorporation of and consequent transformation into producer company, and the same may be continued/prosecuted and enforced by or against the producer company in the same manner and to the same extent as it would have or may have been continued, prosecuted and enforced by or against the society, as if the provisions contained in this Part (Part IXA) of the Companies Act, 1956 had not come into force.

It may be noted that the consequences (i) to (ix) above, except (v) and (vi) are absolute in their very nature. Though the responsibilities of the society contained in (v) and (vi) devolve upon the producer company immediately on transformation, the producer company has been given the flexibility to determine the duration of the responsibility, extent of the responsibility and the manner of discharging the responsibility on such devolution. In other words, the producer company has to take stock of these responsibilities taken by the society keeping in view its own position and limitations. It cannot bind itself indefinitely to the responsibilities. However, determination shall be done on a fair and reasonable basis.

Officers and other employees of the society [Section 581N] - On and from the transformation date all the serving employees and officers of the society shall become employees and officers of the corresponding producer company.

These officers (excluding directors) and other employees shall retain all the rights, privileges, obligations, benefits, tenure etc. as were with them in the society immediately before the transformation date. These include remuneration, other terms and conditions of employment, right to leave and leave travel concession, welfare measures, medical benefit schemes, insurance, provident fund, other funds, retirement, voluntary retirement, gratuity and duties. Any unrevoked contract or agreement with the officers and employees of the society on the date of transformation shall also survive including a situation where certain benefits are to be extended on a future date. Any officer (excluding directors) or employee may opt out from becoming officer or employee of the corresponding producer company and such persons shall be deemed to have resigned. This transformation, notwithstanding anything contained in the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 or any other law then in force, will not give such officers or employee any right to compensation on their services being transferred to the corresponding producer company. No court of law or tribunal or other Authority shall entertain any such claim. However, employees or officers of the society who had retired from the services of the society before the transformation date will retain their rights, benefits, etc. e.g. pension or gratuity, and the corresponding producer company will take the position of the society in discharging these obligations. Similarly, any trust created by the society for provident fund or gratuity or other similar benefit and any other bodies created for welfare of the employees and officers of the society, shall continue to exist and discharge functions assigned to them under the umbrella of the producer company. Any tax exemption enjoyed by the Provident Fund or the Gratuity Fund will also survive under the producer company. Any officer of the society (including any director) entrusted to manage the whole or substantial part of business and affairs of the society under any law or the regulations governing the society will be entitled to any compensation from the society or the corresponding producer company for loss of office or the premature termination of contract of management, if any takes place, as a result of the transformation.

Directors of the society - Under section 581N, discussed above, all the employees and officers including directors of the erstwhile society, on the date of transformation get transferred in the corresponding position in the resulting producer company. So far directors are concerned, this will prevail inspite of the substantive provisions of section 581-0. Section 581-0 provides for floor and ceiling in respect of number of directors in a corresponding producer company. The minimum and maximum numbers are five and fifteen respectively. However, if a society which gets transformed into a producer company, had more than fifteen directors on the transformation date, the corresponding producer company, inspite of the aforesaid requirement, shall have all the directors on its Board (i.e., exceeding the number of 15) for a period of one year from the date of incorporation of the producer company. This is also a beneficial provision and allows the newly incorporated Producer Company time to adjust its position suitably so that on expiry of aforesaid one year, the number of directors can be brought within the limits set by section 581-0. Neither this section nor any other section provides for a situation where the society had less than five directors immediately before transformation. In such a situation, obviously, those who were then directors of the society will become directors of the producer company and to meet the shortfall in number the Board may co-opt one or more expert directors or additional director(s) as may be necessary and for such period as the Board would then determine, subject to the Articles. This right of co-option is available in all situations and is not necessarily restricted to a situation to meet the shortfall. Ordinarily, however, the number of directors co-opted as above cannot exceed one fifth of the pre-co-option strength of the Board. The co-opted directors shall not have any vote in the matter of the election of the Chairman of the Board. Nevertheless, they are eligible to be elected to the office of the chairman if so allowed by the Articles.

Transfer of existing benefits, etc. on transformation - A further favourable consequence of transformation is contained in section 581M which provides for transfer of all the existing benefits, fiscal and other concessions, licences, privileges and exemptions with the society to the corresponding producer company with effect from the transformation date. These benefits, concessions, etc. should relate to the affairs and business of the society and should have been granted under any law, which was then in force.

Appointment of Directors and their tenure (Section 581P) - Except the case of transformation of an inter-State cooperative society into a producer company, the members of the society who sign the Memorandum and Articles of the producer company may designate therein the Board of directors comprised of not less than five members, (obviously not exceeding fifteen members) to govern the affairs of the producer company until the directors are elected. The election of directors shall be conducted within a period of ninety days of the registration of the producer company. (In case of transformation of a society into registered company this period is one year i.e., 365 days). Every director so elected shall hold office for a period of not less than one year and not more than five years, as may be specified in the Articles. Every director who retires in accordance with the provisions in the Articles shall be eligible for re-appointment as a director. Except the case of election of directors for the interim period i.e., within ninety days as stated above, the directors of the Board shall be regularly elected or appointed by the members in the annual general meeting.

Vacation of office by directors of a producer company [Section 581Q]- This section is corresponding to section 283 of the Act, which applies to other companies. However, the grounds for vacation of office in the two situations are not similar. In case of a producer company a director vacates his office if any of the following happens—

- (a) He is convicted by a Court of any offence involving moral turpitude and sentenced in respect thereof to imprisonment for not less than six months. This ground is same as given in section 283(1)(e).
- (b) The producer company in which he is a director has made a default in repayment of any advances or loans taken from any company or institution or any other person and such default continues for ninety days. This ground appears to be a serious one for the producer company concerned. By virtue of the provision all the directors will vacate the office at a time (and vacation of office is always automatic) and there will not be any Board, on happening of this default; no safeguard seems to have been provided in this respect in Part IXA of the Act (section 283 does not contain a same or similar clause).
- (c) He has made a default in respect of any advances or loans taken from the producer company in which he is a director [no such provision appears in section 283, although a default in payment of call is a ground for vacation of office under section 283(1)(f)].
- (d) The producer company, in which he is a director has—
 - (i) not filed the annual accounts and annual return for any continuous three financial years commencing on or after the first day of April, 2002, or
 - (ii) failed to, repay its deposit or withheld price or patronage bonus or interest thereon, on due date, or pay dividend and such failure continues for one year or more; (this clause is similar but not same to the disqualification clause for a director in section 274(1)(g); also a director who incurs the disqualification arising out of failure of the company concerned does not vacate his office under section 283); like (b) above this one also results into all the directors of the producer company vacating their respective offices and thereby making the Board non-existent.
- (e) Default is made in holding election for the office of director in the producer company concerned, in accordance with the provisions of this Act and the Articles (section 283 does not contain any such ground); same observation as has been made in respect of (b) and (d) above, will apply in this case also. [It is important to note that the word 'default' as has been used, is not confined to non-holding of election alone but covers even holding the election but not following the requirements of the Companies Act and the Articles.]
- (f) The annual general meeting or extraordinary general meeting of the producer company concerned, is not called in accordance with the provisions of the Act except due to natural calamity or such other reason (same observation as regards vacation resulting into non-existence of the Board will apply). Here the incidence is with reference to 'non-calling' and not 'non-holding'. Apart from the clear case of non-calling of these meetings, even a defect in calling these meetings may attract this clause).

These grounds are also applicable to the directors of a producer institution which is a member of the producer company concerned. More specifically, defaults of the company mentioned in (b), (d), (e) and (f) above will result in vertical incidence on the directors of the member producer institution, rendering the institution director less. However, sub-section (2) of this section under which directors of the member producer institution get hit contains the words "as far as may be" implying that there will not be unqualified incidence of vacation. But what that will be can be known only from clarification/judicial interpretation.

Powers and functions of the Board [Section 581R]- The general powers of the Board of a producer company are similar to the general powers of the Board of other companies as provisions of section 581R and section 291 of the Act are broadly similar. Section 581R(2) has specified certain powers for exercise by the Board. The Board of a producer company shall exercise all the powers (general and specific) it has for and on behalf of the company only in meetings of the Board.

The specific powers are as under:

- (i) determination of the dividend payable and quantum of withheld price;
- (ii) recommendation of patronage bonus for consideration and approval in general meeting;
- (iii) admission of new members;
- (iv) formulation and pursuing of the organizational policy and objectives including specific long term and annual objectives;
- (v) approval of corporate strategies and financial plans;
- (vi) appointment of a Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and such other officers as may be specified in the Articles;
- (vii) exercising of superintendence, direction and control over CEO and other officers appointed by it (for the producer company);
- (viii) causing proper books of account to be maintained, preparation of annual accounts to be placed before the annual general meeting with the auditor's report thereon and the replies to the auditor's qualifications, if any, in the report;
- (ix) acquisition or disposal of property of the producer company and investment of the funds of the producer company, in the ordinary course of business;
- (x) sanctioning any loan or advance, in connection with business activities of the producer company, to any member of the producer company, who is not a director of the producer company or his relative (since the word 'relative' has not been defined for the purpose of Part IXA of the Act, the definition of 'relative' as appears in Sch. 1A of the Act will apply); [it seems, making loans and advances for business of the producer company to anybody other than a member of the producer company is not permissible in the normal context. Section 292 of the Companies Act specifically empowers the Board of other companies to make loans. Here such specific empowerment is absent.]; and
- (xi) taking such other measures or to do such other acts as may be required in the discharge of its functions or exercise of its powers.

Persons who are not validly holding the position of directors of a producer company, acting individually or as a group (read Board) cannot exercise any of the powers of the Board.

Committee of Directors [Section 581U] - The Board of a producer company may constitute such number of committees as it may deem fit for the purpose of assisting the Board in the efficient discharge of its functions. However, it cannot delegate any of its powers to any committee it constitutes. Similarly, the Board cannot assign any of powers of the CEO to any of its Committee.

A committee constituted as above, may with the approval of the Board, co-opt such number of persons as it deems fit as members of the committee. It appears that the CEO may be a member of the committee apart from other directors. It is not clear from the provisions of section 581U, whether a co-optee to a committee can be anybody other than the directors or the CEO.

A committee once formed shall function under the general superintendence, direction and control of the Board, for such duration and in such manner as the Board may direct. It seems, therefore, the committees will have tenures as may be decided by the Board and there will be no standing committee. The fee and allowances of the members of the committee shall also be prescribed by the Board. The minutes of the meetings of the committee(s) will have to be placed before the meeting of the Board held next.

Meetings of the Board and Quorum [Section 581V] - At least one Board meeting shall be held in a period of three months and at least four such meetings shall * be held in one year.

Notice for the Board meeting shall be given in writing to every director of the producer company including those for the time being in India, at his usual address in India. In other words, if any director is not ordinarily residing in India, he would be given the notice only when he is in India to the knowledge of the producer company.

The responsibility of issuing the notice rests with the CEO. He is to issue the notice at least seven days prior to the date of the meeting. In case of failure to issue the notice, he is punishable with fine which may extend to rupees one thousand. Convening a Board meeting at a notice shorter than seven days may be possible provided the reasons for the same are recorded in writing by the Board. It is possible that in a meeting of the Board, a decision is taken and recorded in the minutes of that meeting for calling the next Board meeting at a shorter notice. Alternatively, even the Board may ratify a Board meeting called at a shorter notice in the meeting itself and record the same in the minutes.

Quorum for a Board meeting, shall be one-third of the total strength of the Board, subject to a minimum of three directors. The directors including the co-opted director, if any, may be paid such fees and allowances for attendance at the Board meetings, as may be decided by the members in the general meeting.

These provisions are similar to the provisions contained in sections 285, 286 and 287 of the Companies Act applicable to other companies with such modifications as are called for a producer company e.g. the notice for Board meeting is to be issued by the CEO (a designated officer in Part IXA of the Act), and the minimum number to form the quorum is three for producer company as against two in cases of other private companies.

Liability of directors [Section 581T]- Any resolution passed or anything done by the directors in contravention of the provisions of this Act, or any other law for the time being in force or of the Articles, invites liability to such directors who passed the resolutions or who acted in aforesaid manner. These directors will be jointly and severally liable to make good to the producer company any loss or damage suffered by it in consequence of such resolution or action. More specifically the producer company has the right of recovery against its director(s) where he or they have made personal profit as a result of the resolution or action as aforesaid, the amount of the profit. In a situation where the producer company has suffered any loss or damage (irrespective of whether there was personal profit for directors) as a result of the contravention, the amount of the loss or damage is recoverable by the company from its contravening directors. This liability of the directors of a producer company is in addition to and not in derogation of the liability imposed on a director under the Companies Act or any other law for the time being in force.

Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and functions [Section 581W] – Every producer company is required to have one full time executive officer to manage and carry on the activities of the company. While the designation Executive officer has been stipulated by the Act, he may have any designation provided his responsibilities and functions are those which are provided in the Act. He, who will have to be a non-member, would be appointed by the Board of the producer company concerned. The CEO shall be ex-officio director of the producer company and will not retire by rotation.* The articles of the producer company may specify the qualifications, experience and the terms and conditions of the service of the CEO. In the absence of any such provision in the Articles, the Board of the producer company shall fix these specifications. The CEO shall be entrusted by the Board with substantial power of management, as may be determined by it. Within the ambit of this, the CEO may exercise the powers and discharge the functions as are provided by section 581 W(5). They are as under:

- (a) administrative acts of a routine nature including management of day-to-day affairs of the company;
- (b) operation of bank accounts or entrusting this job to any other person (obviously in employment of the company), subject to the general or special approval of the Board;
- (c) arrangement for safe custody of cash and other assets of the producer company;
- (d) signing such documents as may be authorized by the Board, for and on behalf of the company;
- (e) maintaining proper books of account and preparation of annual accounts of the company and getting these audited;
- (f) placing the audited annual accounts before the Board and the members in general meeting;
(It is not expected that the CEO will do the auditing as there is an inherent conflict of interest situation. Unfortunately the language used in the law does not bring out the possible intention);
- (g) furnishing the members with periodic information to apprise them of the operation and functions of the company;
- (h) making appointments of officers and employees for the company in accordance with powers delegated by the Board;
- (i) assisting the Board in the formulation of goals, objectives, strategies, plans and policies;
- (j) advising the Board with respect to legal and regulatory matters relating to proposed and on-going activities of the company and taking necessary action thereon;
- (k) exercising the powers as may be necessary in the normal course of business;
- (l) discharging such other functions and exercising such other powers, as may be delegated by the Board.

The CEO shall manage the affairs of the producer company under the general superintendence, direction and control of the Board and shall be accountable for the performance of the producer company.

Secretary of Producer Company [Section 581X]- Every producer company having an average annual turnover exceeding rupees five crore in each of the three consecutive financial years shall appoint a whole-time secretary.

The incumbent to the position of the whole-time secretary of a producer company shall have to be a member of the Institute of Company Secretaries of India.

General Meetings [Sections 581ZA, 581S, 581Y and 581Z]- The provisions relating to general meetings of a producer company broadly conform to the corresponding provisions in the Act as regards other companies. However, departures are there where they are needed in the context of a producer company.

Annual General Meeting (AGM) - Conforming to the language used in section 166 of the Act, this new provision (Section 581ZA) has been drafted. Every producer company shall, in each year hold, in addition to any other meetings, a general meeting, as its AGM and shall specify the meeting as such in the notice calling it. Not more than fifteen months shall elapse between the date of one AGM and the next. Registrar (ROC), may, for any special reason, permit extension of this time by a period not exceeding three months except for the first AGM. A producer, company shall hold its first AGM within a period of ninety days from the date of its incorporation. It may be noted that other companies are allowed time upto eighteen months instead of three months (90 days). Section 581P(2) in the context of directors, allows a period of ninety days, for the first Board of the producer company and before expiry of ninety days (i.e., first ninety days after incorporation), the regular Board has to be elected (by the members). Section 581P(2) has a three hundred sixty five days time frame for the first Board of a company which was formed by transforming an inter-state cooperative society into a producer company. It seems that the requirement to hold the first AGM of a producer company within ninety days of its incorporation follows the requirement of section 581P(2). However, no separate mention of the first AGM of a transformed producer company has been mentioned in section 581ZA. As such, though such a company will hold its first AGM within ninety days of its transformation, it will not be required to elect a regular Board in that meeting. It will have to constitute a regular Board within one year of its transformation by a process of election in the next AGM, which has to be held within one year of its transformation. In other words, for a transformed producer company the time gap between the first and the second AGMs will be not more than two hundred and seventy five days.

Sub-section (3) of section 581ZA requires the members to adopt the Articles of the company and appoint the members of the Board in the AGM (presumably refers to first AGM although appointment of directors will thereafter be recurring feature of subsequent AGMs). This requirement about appointment of directors will not apply to a transformed producer company as it has a period of 365 days for the purpose.

Section 581S specifies certain matters to be transacted at a general meeting to give necessary powers to the Board. They are—

- (a) approval of budget and adoption of annual accounts of the producer company;
- (b) approval of patronage bonus;
- (c) issuing of bonus shares;
- (d) declaration of limited return and distribution of patronage;
- (e) specifying the condition and limits of loans that may be sanctioned by the Board to any director; and
- (f) approval of any transaction of the nature as is to be reserved in the Articles for approval of members.

None of these except (e) and (f) and approval of budget can figure in the agenda of the first AGM.

Notice of the AGM- The notice calling the AGM shall be accompanied by the following documents—

- (i) agenda of the AGM;
- (ii) minutes of the previous AGM or the EGM, if any held;
- (iii) the names of the candidates for election, if any, to the office of the director including a statement of qualifications in respect of each candidate (Part IXA does not specify any qualification except share qualification for the office of the director of a producer company. Therefore, this statement is expected to contain the normal matters like academic qualification, experience, etc.);
- (iv) the audited balance sheet and profit and loss account of the producer company and its subsidiary, if there be any, together with a report of the Board, with respect to :
 - (a) state of affairs of the producer company; (b) amount proposed to be carried to reserve(s);

- (c) amount to be paid as limited return on share capital;
- (d) amount proposed as patronage bonus;
- (e) material changes and commitments, if any, affecting the financial position of the producer company and its subsidiary, if any, which have occurred between the dates of annual accounts of the producer company and the date of the report of the Board (i.e. subsequent event of material nature);
- (f) any other matter of importance relating to energy conservation, environmental protection, expenditure or earnings in foreign exchanges; and
- (g) any other matter which is required to be, or may be, specified by the Board,

It may be observed that salient features of the sections 210, 212 and 217 of the Act applicable to other companies are present here;

- (v) the text of the draft resolution for appointment of auditors; and
- (vi) the text of the draft resolution proposing amendment to the Memorandum or Articles to be considered at the general meeting, along with recommendation of the Board.

Every AGM shall be called, for a time during business hours, on a day that is not a public holiday and shall be held at the registered office of the producer company or at some other place within the city, town or village in which the registered office of the company is situated. [This is same as section 166(2) minus the proviso].

Period of Notice - Not less than fourteen days notice in writing is required to convene a general meeting including the AGM (contrast this with section 171 of the Act requiring 21 days' notice).

Contents of the Notice and Circulation of the notice - The notice of the general meeting indicating the date, time and place of the meeting shall be sent to every member and auditor of the producer company.

Quorum and Voting Rights - Unless the Articles provide for a larger number, one-fourth of the total number of members, shall be the quorum for the AGM of a producer company as well as of any other general meeting (vide section 581Y). Section 581Z states that subject to the provisions of sub-sections (1) and (3) of section 581D, every member shall have one vote and in the case of equality of votes, the chairman or the person presiding shall have a casting vote except in the case of election of the chairman. As regards the voting rights we may note : (1) where individual is a member of the producer company, he has one vote irrespective of the size of his holding, (2) where both individuals and producer institutions are members - single vote for every member, (3) where membership is confined to producer institutions only, in the first year of registration of the company the voting rights shall be based on the size of the shareholdings of the member institutions and in the following years it will be based on participation by the respective institutions in the business of the producer company in the previous year (as may be specified in the Articles), (4) a producer company, may, if authorized by Articles, restrict the voting rights to active members of the producer company, and (5) casting vote can be cast by the presiding member (chairman) in case of equality of votes on any resolution (except for election of the Chairman).

Filing of documents following AGM with ROC [sub-section (10) of section 581ZA]- The proceedings of every AGM shall be filed by the producer company with the ROC within sixty days of the date of holding the AGM along with—

- (1) Director's report,
- (2) Audited balance sheet and the profit and loss account, and
- (3) The annual return.

Applicable fee for the filing should accompany the documents.

Producer institution as member - A producer institution which is a member of the producer company shall be represented by its chairman or the CEO in the general meeting. However, such a person must be competent to act as such. This means that the concerned institution must have authorized that person in writing so to attend and represent. The producer institution will forfeit this right if the producer company concerned in which the institution is a member has made defaults mentioned in clauses (d) to (f) of section 581Q(1) discussed earlier. This forfeiture of right appears to be acting in opposite direction. While efforts should be there to strengthen the company so that defaults are cured, it will act to make things more difficult.

Extraordinary General Meeting on Requisition [Section 581ZA(5)] - A producer company has the right to convene general meetings between two AGMs as and when the Board of the company feels necessity for the same. However, the company's Board shall, on the requisition made in writing and duly signed by one-third of members entitled to vote in the general meetings, proceed to call an extraordinary general meeting in accordance with provisions of sections 169-186 of the Act (applicable to other companies*). The requisitioning members have to set out the matters for consideration at that meeting. In other words, all requirements for holding a general meeting as contained in sections 171 to 186 shall apply for holding the requisitioned general meeting. It seems to be a case of drafting confusion as section 581ZA(7) requires fourteen days notice for holding every general meeting of the producer company, while section 171 provides for twenty one days' notice for every other company. Section 173 requires providing explanatory statement. There is no similar provision specially for producer company. As the law has been drafted, it may be inferred that the intention was to make all the provisions from section 171 to section 186 applicable to any general meeting of the producer company by excluding the provision for notice period or quorum etc. for which specific provisions have been made in Part IXA of the Act. Then again arises the question as regards rules to govern the general meetings of the producer company for which no provision has been made in Part IXA. A simple interpretation, howsoever unworkable it may be, would be that provisions of sections 169-186 will apply only to requisitioned EGM's, except for those provisions which explicitly appear in Part IXA. Important aspects of a general meeting like proxy, poll, etc., and power of CLB to order meeting to be called remain in limbo. This also needs clarifications.

Share capital, special rights, bonus shares, transfer and transmission (Sections 581ZB to 581ZD and 581ZJ) - As has been mentioned earlier, a producer company can issue equity shares only to raise its share capital. Shares shall be issued, as far as practicable, to the members in proportion to their patronage of the producer company concerned. Beside equity shares, a producer company, if allowed by its Articles, may issue instruments embodying 'special rights', to its active members. The special rights instrument issued to an active member is transferable to another active member, subject to prior approval of the Board. The expression 'special rights' means any right relating to supply of additional produce by the active member, or any other right relating to his produce, conferred upon him by the Board. This may take the form of higher consideration for the produce supplied or a right of priority to make the supply to the producer company.

The shares of a producer company has limited transferability - A member may transfer whole or part of his share holding, along with special rights, if any, to only an active member at par value, with prior approval of the Board. No other means of transfer is available to a member of the producer company. However, the nominee of a deceased member, shall become entitled to all the rights in the shares of the deceased and the Board of the producer company shall transfer such shares to the nominee appointed by the member concerned. Every member of a producer company is required to nominate a person to whom his share shall vest in the event of his death. This nomination has to be made within three months of a person becoming member of the producer company, in the manner specified in the Articles. In case the nominee is not a producer, then the Board of the producer company shall direct the nominee to surrender the shares along with special rights, if any, to the company, at par value or such other value as may be determined by the Board. The Board of a producer company can require the surrender of shares along with special rights, if any, from any member of the company, by serving on him a written notice and giving him an opportunity of being heard. The Board can exercise the right where it is satisfied that the concerned member has ceased to be a primary producer or has failed to retain his qualifications for becoming a member, in terms of the Articles of ' the company.

Issue of Bonus Shares - On the basis of recommendation of the Board and by passing a resolution in the general meeting, a producer company may issue bonus shares by capitalization of amounts lying in general reserves, in proportion to the respective shareholding of the members on the date of the issue.

Finance, Accounts and Audit (Sections 581ZE to 581ZI) - Every producer company shall keep at its registered office proper books of account with respect to—

- (a) all sums of money received and expended by the producer company and the matters in respect of which the receipts and expenditure take place;
- (b) all sales and purchases of goods by the producer company;
- (c) the instruments of liability executed by or on behalf of the producer company;
- (d) the assets and liabilities of the producer company; and
- (e) in case the producer company is engaged in production, processing and manufacturing, the particulars relating to utilization of materials or labour or other items of costs.

The above broadly conforms to the provisions of section 209 in the matter of 'Proper books of account' that any other company is required to keep. So far cost records are concerned, mining activity has not been envisaged for a producer company.

The balance sheet and the profit and loss account shall be prepared by the producer company (based on the books of account maintained), in accordance with the provisions of section 211 of the Companies Act, 1956, as far as practicable. As such, the balance sheet and the profit and loss account should show a true and fair view and the balance sheet should be prepared in the form and with the particulars given in Schedule VI, Part I and the profit and loss account should make the disclosures required by Part II of that Schedule of the Companies Act, 1956. A producer company like any other company is requiring to company with applicable accounting standards.

Internal Audit - Every producer company shall get the internal audit of its accounts done, at such interval and in such manner, as may be specified in its Articles. The internal audit shall be carried out by a chartered accountant as defined in section 2(1)(6) of the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949. Under the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949, he should also possess the certificate of practice without which he is debarred from public practice.

Duties of Auditor (Section 581ZG specifies duties of the auditor of a producer company and the same should not be mixed up with duties of internal auditors) - The auditor here, undoubtedly refers to the statutory auditor appointed under section 224 or 224A or 619 or 619B of the Act. Section 227 of the Act lays down the reporting duties of the statutory auditor as are generally applicable. The section presently under discussion specifies certain additional duties of reporting by the statutory auditor of a producer company, whose appointments and other related matters shall be as per sections 224 to 233 of the Act.

Additional duties of reporting- Without prejudice to the provisions of section 227 of the Act, the auditor shall also report on the following—

- (i) The amounts of debts due along with particulars of bad debts, if any;
- (ii) The verification of cash balance and securities;
- (iii) The details of assets and liabilities;
- (iv) All transactions which appear to be contrary to the provisions of Part IXA of the Act relating to producer company;

- (v) Loans given by the producer company to the directors;
- (vi) Donations or subscriptions given by the producer company; and
- (vii) Any other matter considered necessary by the auditor.

Donation or subscription by Producer Company - A producer company may make donation or subscription to any individual or institution, subject to approval by a special resolution of the company. The purposes for which donation/ subscription can be made are - (z) promoting the social and economic welfare of producer members or producers amongst general public or (ii) promoting the mutual assistance principles. The aggregate amount of all the donation and subscription in any financial year shall not exceed three per cent of the net profits of the producer company in the financial year immediately preceding the financial year in which the donation and subscription is made. By an explicit proviso to section 581ZH, producer companies have been debarred from making any political contribution directly or indirectly. Donation/subscription to political parties or for political purposes to any person is not permissible whether in cash or in kind or by making available services of its officers/ employees.

The powers to make donation or subscription or political contribution by a producer company are different from those contained in sections 293(1)(e) and 293A of the Act which apply to other companies.

General and Other Reserves - Every producer company is required to maintain a general reserve in every financial year, in addition to any reserve maintained by it in terms of the Articles of the company. The wording used in section 581ZI appears to be somewhat confusing inasmuch as a general reserve created in the past and carried to following financial year/years, unless fully used up, will remain maintained. The appropriate expression should have been 'credited' with further mention of the amount or the manner of determining the amount.

A producer company may also have other reserves, as per the requirement of its articles. Where a producer company does not have sufficient funds in a financial year for credit (transfer) to reserves to be maintained in terms of the articles, the members of the company will have to contribute sums for transfer to the reserves in proportion to their patronage in the business of the company in that year.

The Department of Company Affairs has by Notification No. GSR 641(E), dated August 7, 2003 has prescribed, pursuant to section 581ZL(1), the securities or assets in which a Producer Company registered under section 581C of the Act can make investment of its general reserve. They are (i) approved securities, fixed deposits, units and bonds issued by the Central or State Governments or cooperative societies, scheduled banks, (ii) in cooperative bank, state cooperative bank, cooperative land development bank or central cooperative bank, (iii) with any other scheduled bank, (iv) securities specified in section 20 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, (v) shares/ securities of multi-state cooperative societies or any other cooperative society, and (vi) the shares/securities or assets of a public financial institution (vide section 4A of the Act). Section 581ZL(1) apply to any producer company but the rules under reference apply to a producer company registered under section 581C. It seems section 581J Producer Company has been left out.

Loans to Members and investments (Sections 581ZK and 581ZZ)-Loans and Advances - The Board of a producer company may, subject to the provisions in its Articles, provide financial assistance to its members by way of : (a) credit facility in connection with the business of the producer company, for a period not exceeding six months and/or (b) loans and advances against security specified in the Articles, repayable within a period exceeding three months but not exceeding seven years from the date of disbursement of such loan or advances. No loan or advance can be granted to any director of the company concerned or to his relative unless approved by members in general meeting. This restriction on loan or advance to director or his relative will prevail even when he is a member of the company. An inference can be drawn by a reading of the above in conjunction with section 581B that a producer company does not possess an inherent power to extend loan or advance or any other facility of the kind except to its members or directors. However, whether a producer company can grant any loan or advance to its employees will depend upon any specific enabling provision in the Articles. If directors can avail of loan/advance from the company, there is no reason to exclude employees from the facility.

Investments (Section 581ZL)- A producer company can make investments in certain instruments or in other producer company or in any other body corporate. The specific legal requirements follow:

Financial Instruments - Approved securities; fixed deposits; units, and bonds issued by the Government or cooperative bank or scheduled bank or in such other mode as may be prescribed. The investments shall be made in a manner to derive highest returns.

The sourcing for these investments shall be from the general reserves of the producer company. In other words, the aggregate investments made in various instruments as above should correspond but not exceed the aggregate of the general reserves held by the company. It is possible to have investments of a lesser amount than the aggregate of the general reserves depending upon circumstances. It seems that the detailed scope of investment in instruments will be prescribed by the DCA in due course.

Investment in shares [Section 581ZL(2) and (3)] - A producer company may for promoting its objects—

- (i) invest in shares of another producer company (to achieve scale of operation, market share, synergy, etc. - modes of promoting objectives);
- (ii) subscribe to the share capital of any other body corporate.

Under (ii) above, the investment is open to be made in any other company (not necessarily a producer company) and in any other body corporate. The immediate purpose of this investment may be formation of its subsidiary company or a joint, venture or some other arrangement or agreement that entails subscription to the shares of another company or companies or of a body corporate. However, this investment in shares of a non-producer company or a body corporate needs approval by way of a special resolution of the investing producer company.

Apart from the two situations mentioned above of investing in shares of companies and body corporates, a producer company, either by itself or together with its subsidiary(ies) may invest by way of subscription, purchase or otherwise in shares in any other company for an amount not exceeding thirty per cent of the aggregate of its paid up capital and free reserves. If an investment of the category is to go beyond the thirty per cent limit, it requires prior approval of the Central Government besides the special resolution [vide section 581K(4)]. In this context, it is necessary to understand the implication of the reference to 'free reserves' for calculating the investment ceiling for the category. 'Free reserves' certainly include general reserves. Under section 581ZL(1) the entire amount of the general reserves is available for making investment in financial instruments discussed above. When the entire amount of the general reserves has been invested in the financial instruments, can the amount in the general reserves form the basis of making investments in other mode? It seems, this provision has been drafted in tune with section 372A(1) of the Act, without regard to the earmarked use of the general reserves in financial instruments. Therefore, reference to free reserves here appear to be redundant as it is really not free for making other investments. If it is not free, then it cannot and should not constitute the basis for making other investments. However, since Part IXA has been legislated to form part of the Companies Act, 1956 only recently, clarifications and interpretation that would inevitably follow will help to correctly operate the provisions currently under discussion Le., investment by a producer company in other companies and body corporates excluding those covered by sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 581ZK.

All the investments of a producer company as discussed above must conform to the objects of the producer company, e.g., if a producer company makes an investment in an 'entertainment company', it would amount to an impermissible investment as the objects of a producer company do not have anything as such to do with an entertainment company.

Investments made in shares of a non-producer company or in a body corporate covered by sub-sections (3) and (4) of section 581K can be disposed of by the Board of the company with prior approval of the members expressed, in a special resolution.

Register of investments [Section 581ZL(7) & (8)]- A producer company which has made investments, shall keep at its registered office, a Register containing specified particulars of investments in shares of companies. This register is open to inspection by the members of the producer company concerned and they are entitled to take extracts from the Register of Investments. This provision again is an instance of loose drafting of a law. Sub-section (7) primarily requires the Register to be maintained for all the investments. 'All the investments' obviously should include investments in financial instruments also. Unfortunately the particulars required to be entered therein refer only to shares in companies. Even shares in other body corporates also have been left out. The particulars of investments in shares of companies including producer companies are as under :

- (1) Name of the company(ies) in which share have been acquired;
- (2) Number and value of shares; (value should mean acquisition price/consideration on the basis of normal accounting);
- (3) The date of acquisition; and
- (4) The manner and price at which any of the shares have been subsequently disposed of.

It seems the word 'acquired' should include 'subscribed', and accordingly points (2) and (3) above should be read.

Amalgamation, Merger or Division of Producer Company (Section 581ZN)- Various forms of coming together of producer companies have been provided in this section. These are adaptation of the provisions of section 395 read with section 391 of the Act. Under section 581ZN the coming together may take the form of transfer of the assets and liabilities of a producer company to another producer company, either in whole or in part, after approval by way of a resolution in the general meeting of the transferring producer company provided the transferee producer company had agreed to such transfer and had passed a resolution to that effect in its general meeting. The transferee producer company can only agree to the transfer if the same is in conformity with any of the objects for a producer company enumerated in section 581B of the Act. Apart from this mode, any two or more producer companies may, by resolution passed in their respective general meeting or special meeting, decide to (i) amalgamate and form a new producer company, or (ii) merge one producer company (merging company) with another such company (merged company). Therefore, coming together of producer companies can be by:

- (1) transfer of assets and liabilities either in whole or in part,
- (2) amalgamation of two or more producer companies, and
- (3) merger of two producer companies (merger may even be partial e.g., an undertaking out of several).

The mechanism of transfer does not entail life of any of the producer companies in agreement, unless all the assets and liabilities of the transferring company are transferred. In case of amalgamation, lives of both/all the amalgamating companies come to an end and in their places a new producer company is formed. In complete merger, the life of the merging company comes to an end and the merged company continues. Whatever may be mode or mechanism, all the producer companies involved in these arrangements have to get prior approval of their members in their respective meetings (general meeting in case of transfer and general or special meeting for the other two modes). The resolutions are to be approved by at least two-third majority of total number of members having the voting right, present and voting. It seems that sub-section (3) of this section has inadvertently omitted to mention special meeting of members mentioned in sub-section (2) for amalgamation or merger (special meeting has been mentioned as an alternative to general meeting). The resolution concerned shall contain all particulars of the transfer of assets and liabilities or of amalgamation or merger as the case may be.

Prior notice in writing has to be given to the members and creditors of respective companies by the company concerned. The notice has to accompany a copy of the proposed resolution. The objective for giving the notice is to seek consent of the members and creditors to the proposal [sub-section (4)]. It may be observed that no period of notice has been specified for the purpose and as such provision of section 581ZA(8) requiring fourteen days' notice will apply for general meeting and the same period will apply for special meeting, if any, unless the Articles have provided for a notice of a longer duration. The members, in any case, has the right to attend the meeting and vote thereat reflecting their consent or otherwise. It seems that the creditors have the only recourse to give their consent or disapproval in writing to the company. So far members are concerned, it seems that they are not debarred from giving consent or disapproval in writing. If such a thing has happened and all or some of such members also attend the meeting and exercise their voting rights, then the written communication sent by the members will get nullified, if identity of members voting for or against the resolution is established. Clarification by appropriate Authority is need to strengthen this situation regarding members. It may be that written communication of members not present in the meeting may be accepted while the same from members present will get nullified.

A member or creditor not consenting to the resolution has the right to the following options, to be exercised within one month of the date of service of the notice on him:

- (i) non-consenting members can transfer their shares in the producer company to any active member of the company, with the approval of the Board. These may even be purchased by the producer company itself [vide sub-section 8(6)]
- (ii) non-consenting creditors would be entitled to withdraw their deposit/loan/ advance, as the case may be, from the company. This right of exercising option by members and creditors is unfettered by anything to the contrary contained in the Articles or in any contract with the company [sub-section (5)]. Any member or creditor who does not exercise this right within the period of one month mentioned above, shall be deemed to have consented to the resolution [sub-section (6)]. A resolution being discussed in the context of coming together of producer companies, shall not take effect until the expiry of one month (from the date of its passing) or the assent thereto of all the members and creditors has been obtained, whichever is earlier. As a practical understanding, it seems expiry of one month will be earlier in most cases as obtaining consent from all the creditors and members, if possible, would be a time-consuming process.

Division of a producer company [Section 581XN(1)(b)] - A producer company by passing resolution in its general meeting may divide itself into two or more new producer companies. All the procedures discussed above regarding giving of written notice, seeking consent to the proposal (resolution), option to members and creditors, consequence of non-exercising of the option and the period of non-implementation of the resolution shall apply to division of the producer company. Upon division of a producer company resulting into two or more producer companies, the erstwhile producer company shall cease to exist as its registration will be cancelled forthwith [vide sub-section (13)] and the resulting producer companies shall be registered.

Contents of the resolution [sub-section (8)]- The resolution referred to above for transfer, division, amalgamation or merger shall provide for:

- (a) the regulation of conduct of the producer company's affairs in future;
- (b) the purchase of shares or interest of any members of the producer company by other members or by the producer company itself;
- (c) in the case of purchase of shares of one producer company by another producer company, the consequent reduction of its share capital;
- (d) terminating, setting aside or modification of any agreement, howsoever, arrived between the company on the one hand and the directors, secretary and manager on the other hand, apart from such terms and conditions as may, in the opinion of majority of shareholders, be just and equitable in the circumstances of the case;

- (e) terminating, setting aside or modification of any agreement between the company and any other person, not being the director, secretary or manager referred above, by giving due notice to the person concerned (modification can be made only after getting consent of the party concerned);
- (f) setting aside of any transfer, delivery of goods, payment, execution or other act relating to property, made or done by or against the producer company within three months before the date of passing of the resolution, which would if made or done against any individual, be deemed in his insolvency, to be a fraudulent preference (these involve third parties and can these be done without recourse to court ?);
- (g) transfer to the merged company of the whole or any part of the undertaking, property and liability of the producer company;
- (h) allotment or appropriation by the merged company of any shares, debentures, policies and other similar interests in the merged company;
- (i) continuation by or against the merged company of any legal proceedings pending by or against any producer company;
- (j) the dissolution without winding up of a producer company;
- (k) provision for any member/creditor who dissents;
- (l) taxes, if any, to be paid by the producer company; and
- (m) such incidental, consequential and supplemental matters as are necessary to secure that the division, amalgamation or merger shall be fully and effectively carried out.

On passing of the resolution and its taking effect, the resolution shall be sufficient conveyance to vest the assets and liabilities in the transferee [sub-section (9)].

The producer company shall [see (k) above] make arrangements for meeting in full or otherwise satisfying non-consenting member/creditor [sub-section (10)].

As indicated earlier, where whole of the assets and liabilities of a producer company are transferred to another producer company, pursuant to the resolution passed (vide sub-section (9) also), or where there is merger, the registration of the first mentioned company or the merging company, as the case may be, shall stand cancelled and the company shall be deemed to have been dissolved forthwith and shall cease to exist as a body corporate [sub-section (11)]. This provision applies only when there is a case of transfer of assets and liabilities, in entirety. A partial transfer on a partial merger will not result into dissolution of the transferring or merging producer company. As stated earlier, in case of an amalgamation, each of the amalgamating companies cease to exist after getting dissolved forthwith with cancellation of their registration. The amalgamated company that is formed shall be registered by the ROC as a producer company [sub-section (12)].

Pre-existing rights, obligations and legal proceedings [sub-section (14)] - the amalgamation, merger or division of companies (transfer of entire assets and liabilities should be presumed to be included) shall not in any manner affect any rights/ obligations/legal proceedings that related to the erstwhile producer company and the same may be continued or commenced by, or against, the resulting company(ies).

It is the responsibility of the ROC to strike off the names of every producer company deemed to have been dissolved under sub-sections (11) to (13). [The sub-section wrongly mentions (14) in place of (13).]

Appeal to the High Court - Under sub-section (16), any member or creditor or employee aggrieved

by the transfer of assets, division, amalgamation or merger may, within thirty days of passing of the resolution, prefer an appeal to the High Court. The High Court, after giving a reasonable opportunity to the person concerned, pass such orders as it may deem fit. While the appeal has been filed, the transfer of assets, division, amalgamation or merger of the producer company shall be subject to the decision of the High Court.

Penalties (Section 581ZM) - If any person, other than a producer company registered under Part IXA of the Act, carries on business under any name which contains the word, "Producer Company Limited", he or it shall be punishable with fine which may extend to rupees ten thousand for every day during which such name has been used.

A director of a producer company who willfully fails to furnish any information relating to the affairs of the producer company sought/required by a member or a person duly authorized for this purpose, shall be liable to imprisonment for a term that may extend to six months and with fine equivalent to five per cent of the turnover of that company during preceding financial year. Director or officer of a producer company making a default in handing over the custody of the books and other documents or property in his custody to the producer company concerned or failing to convene AGM or any other general meeting, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to rupees one lakh. In case of continuing default for the offence, an additional fine not exceeding rupees ten thousand per day of the default is leviable.

The offence for directors for not furnishing information to members etc. as above, is not compoundable under section 621A of the Act. However, other offences discussed above are compoundable.

Dispute Resolution (Section 581ZO) - Presumably taking into account the fact that in a producer company general members have more intimate interest in the affairs of the company than perhaps in other companies, possibility of internal disputes amongst and among the members and directors etc. is far greater. Here members are by and large producers and they supply their products to the company of which they are the members. Accordingly this section provides that where any dispute on formation, management or business of a producer company arises—

- (a) amongst members, former members or persons claiming to be members or nominees of deceased members; or
- (b) between a member, former member or a person claiming to be a member or nominee of a deceased member and the producer company, its Board, office bearers (the provision of this part has not indicated what would constitute "office bearers"), or liquidator, past or present; or
- (c) between the producer company or its Board, and any director, office bearer or any former director, or the nominee, heir or legal representative of any [deceased director of the producer company, such dispute shall be settled by conciliation or by arbitration as provided under the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996. The aforesaid parties to dispute shall be deemed to have consented in writing for determination of such disputes by conciliation or arbitration under the aforesaid Act. A dispute referred to above shall include:

- (i) a claim or any debt or other amount due;
- (ii) a claim by surety against the principal debtor, where the producer company has recovered from the surety amount in respect of any debtor or other amount due to it from the principal debtor as a result of the default of the principal debtor whether such debt or amount due be admitted or not;
- (iii) a claim by a producer company against its member for failure to supply or produce as required of him;
- (iv) a claim by a member against the producer company for not taking goods supplied by him.

On the primary issue (contention), if any of determining whether a dispute pertains to formation, management or business of the producer company, such matter shall be referred to the Arbitrator, whose decision shall be final.

It may be noted that any dispute involving the producer company with others i.e., third parties will, however, has to be referred to appropriate judicial forum.

Allied Provision - Section 581ZP deals with certain matters that may impact the producer company as a class of companies. They are (i) striking off name of producer company (ii) impact of the provisions of Part IXA of the Act on other laws, and (iii) application of the provisions of the Act regarding private companies on producer companies.

Striking off the name of producer company-'When the ROC is satisfied after serving show-cause notice on the producer company and its directors and after giving them reasonable opportunity to represent their cases that the producer company (i) has failed to commence business within one year of its registration, or (ii) has ceased to transact business with its members (the very foundation of the producer company concept) or (iii) is no longer carrying on any of its objects with which it was incorporated or operating pursuant to section 581B of the Act, the name of the producer company can be struck off the Register maintained by the ROC. In regard to (iii) above the ROC at the primary stage must have made due enquiry about non-functioning status of the producer company before issuing the show-cause notice and giving opportunity to the company and its directors to make representation against the allegation in the show-cause notice.

Where, however, the ROC has reasonable cause to believe that a producer company is not adhering to any of the mutual assistance principles specified in this part (another basic foundation of a producer company), he shall strike its name off the register in accordance with provisions of section 560 of the Act, relating to defunct companies. As such in regard to (i), (ii) and (iii) above the procedure laid down is simple before the ROC can exercise the power to strike off the name of the producer company from the register maintained by him as they all relate to matters of fact. But in case of the issue of striking off names for non-adherence with mutual assistance principles, the procedure is somewhat elaborate as laid down in section 560 of the Act. In such a case, it seems sub-section (6) of section 560 will remain open for restoring the name of the company in the register.

Any member of a producer company where the producer company's name has been struck off by the ROC on (i) or (ii) or (iii) above, who is aggrieved by the order of the ROC to strike off the name of the company, may appeal to the CLB within sixty days of the order. In that event the ROC's order will remain in abeyance until the appeal is disposed of. It implies that the ROC will not give effect to his order of striking off till the period for making appeal to his order is over and if appeal has been filed in due time, he will not act on his order until the appeal is disposed of. If as a result of the appeal, the order of the ROC is nullified then, there will not arise the case of striking off the name of the company from the register of the ROC.

Reconversion of a Producer Company to inter-State Co-operative Society (Sections 581ZS and 581ZT)

- An inter-State cooperative society which transformed itself to a producer company under section 581J in Part IXA of the Act can make an application to the High Court for returning to its earlier status on the basis of (i) a resolution passed by its members in a general meeting, where at least two-third of its members present voted for re-conversion or (ii) on request of its creditors representing at least three fourth in value of its total creditors. Upon receipt of the application, or shall be issued only in such modified form as have been agreed by both the Houses. It is, however, not clear how to deal with the situation of varying views of the Houses.

1.1.3. Associations not for profit

It is clear from the nomenclature itself that an "Association not for profit" is an association which is formed not for making profits but for promoting commerce, art, science, religion, charity or any other useful social purpose. Such an association may or may not be registered as a company under the Companies Act. When such an association is registered as a company with limited liability, it may be given a licence by the Central Government.

According to sec. 13(1)(a), it is necessary that the name of a limited company must end with the word 'limited' in the case of a public company and with the words 'private limited' in the case of private company. However, sec. 25 permits the registration under a licence granted by the Central Government of, all 'associations not for profit with limited liability' without being required to use the word 'limited' or the words 'private limited' at the end of their names.

The Central Government may grant such a licence if the following two conditions are fulfilled:

- (i) It is intended to form a company for promoting commerce, art, science, religion, charity, or any other useful object;

Whether or not the persons dealing with each other, is a 'mutual club' or carrying on a trade, is largely a question of fact – CIT v. Bankipur Club Ltd [1997] 5Comp. LJ 113(SC).

- (ii) The company prohibits payment of any dividend to its members but intends to apply its profits or other income in the promotion of its objects.

When the above conditions are fulfilled, the Central Government may, by licence, direct that the association may be registered as a company with limited liability without the addition to its name of the word "limited" or the words "private limited" [Sec. 25(1)].

Trust companies do come within the purview of section 25 as it deals with companies formed to promote charity and provision has no application to case of trust companies what is to act as a trustee - B. Ramachandra Adityan v. Educational Trustee Co. (P.) Ltd [2003] 41 SCL 385 (Mad.).

Such a company is registered without paying any stamp duty on its memorandum and articles. On registration, the association enjoys all the privileges of a limited company, and is subject to all its obligations except those in respect of which exemption by a special or general order is granted by the Central Government [Sec. 25(2)].

The licence may be granted by the Central Government on such conditions and subject to such regulations, as it thinks fit, and such conditions and regulations shall be binding on the association to which licence is granted. The Central Government may also require that such conditions shall be inserted in the memorandum or in the articles or partly in the one and partly in the other [Sec. 25(5)].

The Central Government may, by general or special order, exempt the association from such provisions of the Act as may be specified in that order.

It is permissible for the Central Government to grant exemption either generally or specifically to a particular company from one or more of the provisions of the Act under sub-section (6) of section 25. Such exemption should normally be express and the Courts would be inclined to cull out the implied exemption - C.P. Singhania v. Garware Club House [2003] 46 SCL 650 (Bom.).

Alteration of memorandum of an 'Association not for profits'- The company which has been granted licence by the Central Government cannot alter the provisions of its memorandum with respect to its objects except with the previous approval of the Central Government signified in writing [Sec. 25(8)(a)]. If any alteration is made without the written approval of the Central Government, the Government may revoke the licence of such a body. [Sec. 25(8)(b)].

The licence granted by the Government under section 25 may also be revoked by the Central Government at any time. However, before revoking the licence, the Central Government shall give a written notice to the association indicating its intention to do so and shall give an opportunity of being heard in the matter [Sec. 25(7)]. On revocation of the licence, the association loses the exemption granted by such licence and the Registrar shall enter the word 'limited' or words 'private limited', as the case may be, at the end of the name in the register maintained by it. Examples of companies which are not for profits include Mohan Bagan Club, Gymkhana Club, Delhi District Cricket Association (D.D.C.A.) etc.

Partnership firm may become member - It may be noted that a partnership firm may become a member of such a company. However, on dissolution of the firm, its membership will come to an end [Sec. 25(4)].

Exemptions granted to section 25 companies - In exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (6) of section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956 the Central Government has directed that a body to which a licence is granted under section 25 shall be exempted, inter alia, from the following:

- (1) The Secretary of such a company need not be possessing the qualifications prescribed under section 2(45).
- (2) Section 25 companies are exempted from the provisions of section 147 which relates to publication of name by the company.
- (3) Such companies are not required to comply with the provisions of section 160(1)(aa). Accordingly, the annual returns of such companies to be filed with the Registrar of Companies need not include particulars regarding the names of members and the respective dates on which they became members and the names of persons who ceased to be members since the date of the annual general meeting of the immediately preceding year, and the dates on which they so ceased.
- (4) Section 25 company is exempted from the provisions of section 166(2). It means that such a company may hold its annual general meeting on a day which is a public holiday. However, the time, date and place of each annual general meeting must be decided upon beforehand by the Board of Directors having regard to the directions, if any, given in this regard by the company in general meeting.
- (5) A general meeting of such a company may be called by giving a notice in writing of not less than 14 days as against a notice of 21 days as per section 171(1).
- (6) Minutes may be recorded within 30 days of the conclusion of every meeting where the articles of association provide for confirmation of minutes by circulation [Sec. 193].
- (7) Books of account relating to a period of not less than four years (as against eight years) as per section 209(4A) shall be preserved.
- (8) A document mentioned in sub-section (1) of section 219 may be sent not less than 14 days (as against 21 days) before the date of the general meeting.
- (9) The provisions of section 257 shall not apply to the companies whose articles provide for election of directors by ballot.
- (10) Any increase in the number of directors under section 259 shall not require the approval of the Central Government.
- (11) The provisions of section 264(1) relating to the filing of consent to act as a director with the company and with the Registrar of Companies is not applicable to such companies.
- (12) The provisions of section 285 shall apply only to the extent that the Board of Directors/Executive Committee/Governing Committee of such companies shall hold at least one meeting within every six calendar months (as against every three calendar months).
- (13) The provisions of section 287 shall apply only to the extent that the quorum for the Board meeting shall be either eight members or 1/4th of its total strength; whichever is less provided the quorum shall not be less than two members in any case.
- (14) The provisions of section 292 matters referred to in clauses (c), (d) and (e) of sub-section (1) may be decided by the Board by circulation instead of at a meeting.
- (15) The provisions of section 299 shall apply only to cases to which sub-sections (1) and (3) of section 297 apply.

- (16) The provisions of section 301 - a register shall be maintained only of contracts to which sub-sections (1) and (3) of section 297 apply.

Where Central Government had granted licence to company under section 25 after reading memorandum of association and articles of association including Article 41 which provided that election for office of directors would be held only once in five years, it was held that it amounted to grant of exemption from application of section 255, and, therefore, it was not necessary for company to follow provisions for retirement of one-third of its directors at each annual general meeting - C.P. Singhania v. Garware Club House [2003] 46 SCL 659 (Bom.).

Procedure for formation of a section 25 company- For establishing a company for charitable purpose and without the addition of the word "Limited" as part of its name, the promoters have to take the following steps to obtain permission of the Central Government.

- (1) An application has to be made to the Regional Director of the concerned region along with the following documents :
 - (a) Three copies of draft memorandum and articles of association of the proposed company.
 - (b) A declaration that all requirements pertaining to the formation of the company have been duly complied with.
 - (c) Three copies of list of names of the promoters as well as the proposed directors together with the names of companies in which they are interested along with the relevant particulars.
 - (d) A statement showing the assets and liabilities of the association as on the date of the application or within seven days of that date.
 - (e) An estimate of the future annual income and expenditure of the proposed company.
 - (f) A statement giving a brief description of the work proposed to be done after formation which must be non-commercial.
 - (g) A declaration that profits, if any, shall not be distributed by way of dividends but shall instead be used for furtherance of the cause for which the company has been established.
 - (h) A statement specifying briefly the grounds on which the application is made.
 - (i) A declaration by the applicants regarding their competence to make the application.
 - (j) Evidence of the payment of the prescribed fees.
 - (k) Letter of authority to make any corrections in the documents filed.
- (2) A copy of the application should also be filed with the concerned Registrar of companies along with the prescribed enclosures.
- (3) Within one week of submission of papers, publish a notice of the application made to the Regional Director in a newspaper and send a certified copy of that notice to the Regional Directors.
- (4) The Regional Director, after satisfying that all the formalities have been duly complied with shall issue the necessary licence.

1.1.4 Foreign company [Sec. 591]

A foreign company means a company incorporated outside India but having a place of business in India. Accordingly, a company which is incorporated outside India and employs agents in India but has no office or does not establish a place of business in India will not be a foreign company. A company shall be said to have a place of business in India will not be a foreign company. A company shall be said to have a place of business in India if it has a specified or identifiable place at which it carries on business such as an office, store house, godown or other premises having some concrete connection between locality and its business [Deverall v. Grand Advertisement Inc. [1954] 3 All ER 389].

As per section 602(c), having a share transfer office or share registration office will constitute a place of business [Employer's Liability Assurance Corporation v. Sedgwick, Collins & Co. [1927] AC 95]. In Tovarishestvo Manufacture Ludvig Rabenek, Re [1944] Ch. 404 it was held that where representatives of a company incorporated outside the country frequently visited and stayed in a hotel for looking after purchase of machinery and other articles, it was held that the company had a place of business in the hotel. However, in Re, Oriel Ltd. [1985] 3 All, ER 216, the Court of Appeal found that the mere fact that the directors of a company had a residence in England from which they acted on behalf of the company did not constitute the residence or an established place of business.

In South India Shipping Corpn. Ltd v. Export-Import Bank of Korea [1985] 2 All ER 219, the test applied for ascertaining whether a foreign company had established a place of business in England or not was that whether there was some specific location readily identifiable with the company by members of the public from which it could be deduced that some substantial business activity was being carried on. In this case, the company was held to be carrying on business in England by having leased premises from which it conducted promotional and research activities.

However, mere holding property cannot amount to having a place of business.

But, where the company delivered to the Registrar of Companies at Bombay documents under section 592 and such documents under that section are to be delivered within 30 days of the establishment of the place of business, it was held that by delivering the documents, the defendants had admitted that the company had established a place of business within India [Framroze Rustomji Paymaster v. British Burmah Petroleum Co. Ltd [1976] 46 Comp. Cas. 587 (Bom.)].

It may be noted that section 591 defines a foreign company in terms of its place of incorporation. If the company is established outside India and has a place of business in India, then only it will be a foreign company under the section. Accordingly, a company incorporated outside India having shareholders who are all Indian citizens and having its business outside India is not covered. Contrarily, a company incorporated in India but having all foreign shareholders shall be an Indian company and not a foreign company as contemplated under section 591.

A mere presence of a representative of a foreign company is not sufficient if his only authority is to solicit orders from customers but not to make contracts on behalf of the company [P.J. Johnson v. Astrofiel Armadorn [1989] 3 Comp. LJ 1].

The following activities are not held to constitute "carrying on of business" as per the law in the U.S.A. This provides a ready basis for determining the presence of a foreign company in India. However facts of each case have to be viewed in its own context:

- (1) maintaining and defending suit or action or other proceeding or effecting the settlement of any claim in dispute
- (2) holding meeting of shareholders or directors
- (3) maintaining bank accounts
- (4) maintaining offices or agents for the transfer, exchange and registration of shares or other securities
- (5) effecting sales through independent contractors
- (6) soliciting or procuring orders where such orders require acceptance of the company for becoming binding contracts
- (7) creating or financing of debts, charges, etc. on real or personal property
- (8) securing or collecting debts or enforcing claims to property of any kind
- (9) conducting any isolated transactions

The Court in A/S Dampskib 'Hercules' v. Grand Trunk Pacific Rly. Co. [1912] 1 K.B. 222, 223, considered the extent of business which has to be carried on to make 'a place of business' for the purpose, in that case, to establish a sufficient presence within the jurisdiction for service of process.

A Canadian railway company's four directors were in London who formed a London Committee for the purpose of raising loans for the construction of the railway in Canada. They were using the office of another company without rent and transacted no other business than that of raising loans. The Court of Appeal held that the defendants were carrying on their business in the office used by the London Committee and could therefore be properly served with a writ.

"We have only to see whether the Corporation is 'here'; if it is, it can be served. The best test is to ascertain whether the business is carried on here or at a definite place. In the present case, the Company has a paramount, and also a subsidiary object; its paramount object is to make and run a railway in Canada, to do which a great many things must first happen; it has a subsidiary object, namely, the raising of money to carry out its paramount object. The raising of this loan capital is part of the company's business and it is done here by a London Committee constituted of the directors resident in England."

Provisions relating to Foreign Companies

A foreign company has to furnish to the Registrar the following documents within 30 days of the establishment of the business in India: [Sec. 592]

- (a) A certified copy of the charter, statute or memorandum and articles of the company or other instrument constituting or defining the constitution of the company; and if the instrument is not in English language, a certified translation thereof.
- (b) The full particulars of the registered or principal office of the company.
- (c) A list of directors and secretary of the company, giving name in full, usual residential address, nationality of origin, his business, occupation and particulars of other directorships held by him.
- (d) The name(s) and address(es) of one or more persons resident in India, authorised to accept, on behalf of the company, service of process and any notices or other documents required to be served on the company. Any document, etc., served on such a person shall be deemed to have been served on the company. Where no such person is designated, the service may be left at the company's principal place of business [Sec. 596].
- (e) The full address of the office of the company in India which is to be deemed to be principal place of business in India.

When any change occurs in the above particulars, the Registrar must be intimated accordingly [Sec. 593].

The aforesaid documents shall be required to be filed at two places, first, with the Registrar of the State where the principal place of business is situated and, second, with the Registrar at New Delhi [Sec. 597].

If the company establishes any branch or branches of its business in India, no further information need be given except that with the annual accounts, the company should deliver three copies of a list of its places of business in India as at the date with reference to which the accounts are made out [Sec. 594(3)].

Other Obligations [Sec. 595]

A foreign company is further bound by the following obligations :

- (1) The company shall in every prospectus inviting subscription, in India, for its shares or debentures, state the country in which the company is incorporated;
- (2) It shall conspicuously exhibit on the outside of every office or place of business, its name and the country of incorporation in English and the original vernacular (local) language;

- (3) It shall cause the name of the company and of the country in which the company is incorporated, to be stated in legible English characters in all business letters, letter heads and letter papers and in all notices and other official publications of the company;
- (4) If the liability of the members of the company is limited, it shall cause notice of that fact:
 - (a) in every prospectus as aforesaid and in all business letters, letter heads, letter papers, notices, advertisements and other official publications of the company, in legible English characters;
 - (b) conspicuously exhibit on the outside of every office or place where it carries on business in India, in legible English characters and also in legible characters of the languages or one of the languages in general use in the locality in which the office or place is situated.

(5) Obligation regarding accounts [Sec. 594]

Every foreign company shall, in every calendar year,—

- (a) make out a balance sheet and profit and loss account in such form, containing such particulars and including or having annexed or attached thereto such documents (including in particular documents relating to every subsidiary of the foreign company) as under the provisions of this Act it would, if it had been a company within the meaning of this Act, have been required to make out and lay before the company in general meeting; and
- (b) deliver a copy* of those documents to the Registrar. [Sec. 594(1)]

However, the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, direct that, in the case of any foreign company or class of foreign companies, the requirements of clause (a) shall not apply or shall apply subject to such exceptions and modifications as may be specified in the notification. [Proviso to sub-section (1) of sec. 594]

If any document as is mentioned in sub-section (1) is not in the English language, there shall be annexed to it a certified translation thereof. [Sec. 594(2)]

Further, sub-section (3) of section 594 requires every foreign company to send to the Registrar a copy of a list in the prescribed form of all places of business established by the company in India as at the date with reference to which the balance sheet referred to in sub-section (1) is made out.

Position regarding World Accounts

Three copies of balance sheet and profit and loss account, including documents relating to every subsidiary of the foreign company, as submitted by it to the prescribed authority in the country of its incorporation under the provisions of the law in that country, shall be filed with the Registrar.

The world accounts shall be delivered to the Registrar within a period of nine months from the close of the financial year of the foreign company. The Registrar at New Delhi may, however, extend this period by three months [Rule ISA of Companies (Central Government's) General Rules and Forms, 1956].

Position regarding Indian business accounts

Three copies of balance sheet and profit and loss account of Indian business accounts of a foreign company duly audited by a practising Chartered Accountant in India, in the form prescribed in Schedule VI shall be filed with the Registrar within 9 months of the close of the financial year.

The aforesaid accounts have to be filed with the Principal Registrar (i.e., Registrar of Companies, New Delhi) and the concerned Registrar having jurisdiction over the principal place of business of the foreign company [Sec. 597].

The Registrar at New Delhi may extend this period by 3 months. It may be noted that the Indian accounts have to be drawn up in Indian rupees.

Inspection of Accounts of a Foreign Company

The profit and loss account of Indian business of a foreign company which, if incorporated under this Act would be deemed to be that of a private company shall not be open to inspection by any person other than a member of the company.

(6) Registration of charges, etc. [Sec. 600]

The provisions of sections 124 to 145 relating to registration of charges, appointment of receivers and keeping of registers, documents and books of account shall apply mutatis mutandis (with necessary changes) to foreign companies.

Further, section 209 shall also be applicable to foreign companies to the extent of requiring them to keep at the principal place of business in India, the books of account with respect to monies received and expended, sales and purchases made, and assets and liabilities in relation to their business in India. Section 600 [as amended by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1974] has further made certain other sections of the Companies Act applicable to foreign companies. Accordingly, the provisions of section 159 relating to the filing of annual return with the Registrar subject to such modifications and adaptations, as may be made by rules made under the Act, apply to a foreign company. Similarly, provisions of sections 209, 209A, 233B and sections 234 to 246 have been made applicable to the Indian business of a foreign company as they apply to a company incorporated in India.

(7) Requirements as to prospectus [Sees. 603 to 608]

A foreign company may, even if it has no place of business in India, issue a prospectus offering shares or debentures for subscription. But, the prospectus shall have to comply with the provisions of sections 603 to 608 of the Act relating to prospectus. For example, it shall have to be in the form and contain matters and returns specified in Schedule II. It must also be registered with the Registrar before it is issued [Sec. 605].

In addition to the general requirements of the Act, the prospectus of a foreign company has to contain particulars with respect to the following matters:—

- (a) The instrument containing or defining the constitution of the company;
- (b) The provisions of law under which the company was incorporated;
- (c) An address in India where the above instrument and the enactments or provisions of law may be inspected. If they are not in the English language, the certified English copy should be made available;
- (d) The date and country of incorporation;
- (e) Whether the company has an established place of business in India and if so, the address of its principal office in India.

(8) Foreign companies in which not less than 50% of the paid-up share capital is in Indian hands

Section 591(2) provides that where not less than 50% of the paid-up share capital (whether equity or preference or partly equity, partly preference) of a company incorporated outside India and having an established place of business in India, is held by one or more citizens of India or by one or more bodies corporate incorporated in India whether singly or in the aggregate, such company shall be required to comply with all the provisions of the Companies Act with regard to the business carried on by it in India as if it were a company incorporated in India.

(9) Foreign Companies - Obligations under section 209

Under the provisions of the Companies Act, every foreign company has to maintain its books of account relating to Indian business in the manner provided in section 209 and in each calendar year it has to file its world account. It has also to file a list of places of business, establishments in India. The foreign company is also under obligation under section 594 of the Companies Act to deliver 3 copies of its world accounts. Three copies of balance sheets of Indian business accounts of a foreign company duly audited have also to be filed with the ROC within 9 months of the close of the financial year. The Indian account has to be drawn up in Indian rupees according to the requirements of Schedule VI [Advance Ruling Petition No. 14 of 1997, In re, [1998] 31 CLA 105 (AAR - New Delhi)].

(10) Penalty

If any foreign company fails to comply with the provisions applicable to it, the company and every officer or agent of the company who is in default shall be punishable with fine upto ₹ 10,000 and in the case of a continuing offence, with an additional fine upto ₹ 1,000 for every day during which the default continues [Sec. 598]. Presumably, the further fine for continuing default is leviable from the day next to the day of default.

Further, a foreign company which has failed to comply with the requirements applicable to it under the Companies Act, 1956 will be liable to be sued in respect of any contract, dealing or transaction it may have entered into; but shall not be entitled to enforce any contract by way of suit, set off or counter-claim. It cannot also institute any legal proceeding in respect of any such contract until it has complied with all the provisions of the Act relating to foreign companies.

(11) Winding-up

Where a foreign company which has been carrying on business in India, ceases to carry on such business in India, it may be wound up as an unregistered company under Part X (Sections 582 to 590 of the Companies Act).

A foreign company may be a Government company and it may be wound up or a scheme under section 391 may be sanctioned by the Court in India -(Rivers Steam Navigation Co. Ltd., In re [1967] 2 Comp. LJ 106).

A foreign company's business in India can be wound up even in cases where the company has been dissolved or otherwise ceased to exist under the laws of the country under which it was incorporated [Sec. 584].

Jurisdiction of Courts - The Court has no jurisdiction over a company incorporated in foreign country except in respect of cause of action arising at place where its office in India is located - Partap Singh v. Bank of America [1976] 46 Comp. Cas. 532 (Bom.).

In respect of foreign companies, it is the place where its principal place of business is situated which is deemed in law to be its registered office which decides the jurisdiction of the Court. In other words, the Court where the foreign company's principal place of business is situated would have jurisdiction in respect of any matter relating to such foreign company -Ban k Muscat SAOG, In re[2004]51 SCL191 (Kar.).

1.2 PROCEDURE FOR ALTERATION OF MEMORANDUM AND ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION

Memorandum of Association - Meaning and importance

One of the first steps, in the formation of a company is to prepare a document called the memorandum of association. The memorandum of association of a company contains the fundamental conditions upon which alone the company has been incorporated. According to section 2(28) of the Companies Act, 1956 "Memorandum" means "Memorandum of association of a company as originally framed or altered from time to time in pursuance of any previous companies law or of this Act". This definition, however, does not state the nature of this document nor is indicative of its importance. According to Palmer, the memorandum of association is a document of great importance in relation to the proposed company. It contains the objects for which the company is formed and therefore identifies the possible scope of its operations beyond which its actions cannot go. It defines as well as confines the powers of the company. If anything is done beyond these powers, that will be ultra vires (beyond powers of) the company and so void.

In the celebrated case of Ashbury Railway Carriage & Iron Co. Ltd, v. Riche [1875] L.R. 7 H.L. 653, Lord Cairns observed: "the memorandum of association of a company defines the limitation on the powers of the company... it contains in it both that which is affirmative and that which is negative. It states affirmatively the ambit and extent of vitality and power which by law are given to the corporation and it states, if it is necessary to state, negatively, that nothing shall be done beyond that ambit__" Thus, it serves two purposes. It enables shareholders, creditors and all those who deal with the company to know what its powers are and what is the range of its activities. An intending shareholder can find out the purposes for which his money is going to be; used by the company and what risk he is taking in making the investment. Likewise, anyone dealing with the company, say, the supplier of goods or money, will know whether the transaction he intends to make with the company is within the objects of the company and not ultra vires its objects.

Form and contents

Section 14 requires that the memorandum of a company shall be drawn up in such a form as is given in Tables B, C, D & E in Schedule I to the Companies Act, 1956 as may be applicable in the case of the company, or as near thereto as circumstances admit. Section 15, read with sections 12 & 13, requires the memorandum to be printed, 1 - divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively, and signed by at least seven persons (two in the case of private company) in the presence of at least one witness, who will attest the signature. Each of the subscribers must take at least one share and write opposite his name the number of shares he takes. The signatories to the Memorandum shall add their address, description and occupation. Similar particulars of the witness(es) should also be entered.

Section 13 requires the memorandum of a limited company (either by shares or by guarantee) to contain the following:

- (a) the name of the company, with 'limited' or 'private limited' as the last word(s) of the name in the case of a public company or a private company as the case may be;
- (b) the name of the State, in which the registered office of the company is to be situated;
- (c) the objects of the company, stating separately :
 - (i) the main objects to be pursued on incorporation;
 - (ii) objects incidental or ancillary to the attainment of the main objects;
 - (iii) "other objects" of the company not included in (i) and (ii) above;
- (d) the declaration that the liability of the members is limited;
- (e) the amount of authorised share capital (in the case of a company having share capital), divided into shares of fixed amounts;
- (f) in the case of companies (other than trading corporations) with objects not confined to one State, the States to whose territories the objects extend.

The above clauses of the memorandum are called compulsory clauses. In addition to these, the memorandum may contain other information, for example, rights attached to various classes of shares.

It may be noted that the memorandum of association of a company cannot contain anything contrary to the provisions of the Companies Act. If it does, the same shall be devoid of any legal effect (section 9). However, in K. Leela Kumar vs. Government of India [2002] 37 SCL 322, the Madras High Court held that the need or necessity for the retention of a clause in the articles of association, in order to maintain internal discipline among members of a private club and protect the fair image and status of the club, is a matter pertaining to private law or personal matters and no public law aspect or any violation of statutory rights or fundamental rights is involved therein. The wisdom or otherwise of the policy behind the bye-laws of a private club is not a matter for consideration in a writ petition under Article 226.

Now, let us discuss in detail, the various clauses of Memorandum of Association.

The name clause [Sec. 13(1)(a)] - A company being a distinct legal entity must have a name of its own to establish its separate identity. The promoters are free to choose any suitable name for the company provided:

- (a) The last word(s) in the name of the company, if limited by shares or guarantee is limited' or 'private limited', as the case may be. However, an "association not for profit", and incorporated as a company and licensed by the Central Government, may not use the word limited' or 'private limited' as part of its name, even though the liability of its members is limited [Section 25].
- (b) In the opinion of the Central Government, the name chosen is not undesirable [Section 20(1)]. According to sub-section (2) of section 20, a name which is identical with, or which resembles too nearly, the name by which a company in existence has been previously registered, may be deemed to be undesirable by the central government.

The registered office clause [Sec.13(1)(b)]- This clause states the name of the State in which the registered office of the company will be situated. Every company must have a registered office which establishes its domicile and is also the address at which the company's statutory books must normally be kept and to which notices and other communications can be sent. The notice of the exact situation (address) of the registered office shall be given to the Registrar of Companies in Form No.18, within 30 days from the date of incorporation [Section 146].

The objects clause [Sec.13(1)(c)& (d)]- The objects clause defines the objects of the company and indicates the sphere of its activities. A company cannot do anything beyond or outside its objects and any act done beyond that will be Ultra Vires and void and cannot be ratified even by the assent of the whole body of shareholders. Section 13(1)(d) read along with Tables 'B', 'C', 'D' and 'E' requires a company to divide its objects clause into two parts:

- (a) Main objects of the company to be pursued by the company on its incorporation and objects incidental or ancillary to the attainment of the main objects; and
- (b) Other objects of the company not included in the above clause.

Liability clause [Sec. 13(2)]- This clause states the nature of liability of the members. In the case of a company limited by shares, a member can be called upon at any time to pay to the company the amount unpaid on the shares. Thus, if his shares are fully paid-up, his liability is nil. Where a shareholder holding a 10-rupee share has paid ₹5 on it, he can be called upon to pay the balance of ₹5. But if he has paid the full value of ₹10, he cannot be required to pay anything more even if the company owes huge debts to its creditors.

In the case of companies limited by guarantee, this clause will state the amount which every member undertakes to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up.

In the case of unlimited liability company this clause need not be given in the memorandum of association. In fact, the absence of this clause in the memorandum means that the liability of its members is unlimited.

The capital clause [Sec. 13(4)(a)]- This clause states the amount of share capital with which the company is registered and the mode of its division into shares of fixed value, i.e., the number of shares into which the capital is divided and the amount of each share. The usual way to state the capital in the memorandum is: "the capital of the company is ₹10 lakhs divided into one lakh equity shares of ₹10 each".

This clause lays down the limit beyond which the company cannot issue shares without altering the memorandum as provided by section 94 of the Companies Act, 1956.

The association or subscription clause [Sec. 13(4)(c)] - At the end of the Memorandum of every company there is an association or subscription clause or a declaration of association which reads something like this :—

“We, the several persons whose names and addresses and occupations are subscribed, are desirous of being formed into a company in pursuance of this memorandum of association, and we respectively agree to take the number of shares in the capital of the company set opposite our respective names.”

Then follow the names, addresses, descriptions and occupations of the subscribers, and the number of shares each subscriber has agreed to take and his signature attested by a witness.

The statutory requirements and outcome regarding subscription of memorandum are :—

- (a) the memorandum must be signed by each subscriber in the presence of at least one witness who must attest the signature;
- (b) each subscriber must take at least one share ;
- (c) each subscriber must write opposite his name the number of shares he takes [Sec. 13(4)(c)] ‘

It may be noted that each subscriber to the memorandum must pay for the shares he agrees to subscribe for. He cannot, after the registration of the company, repudiate his liability to subscribe, even on the ground that he was induced to sign by misrepresentation. Every subscriber to the Memorandum, on the incorporation of the company, becomes its member and as such contributory, irrespective of whether he has made payment for the shares subscribed. To the extent the subscribed shares remain unpaid, the same is a debt owed to the company [Sec. 36(2)].

Alteration of memorandum

Section 16 provides that the company cannot alter the conditions contained in memorandum except in the cases and in the mode and to the extent express provisions have been made in the Act. These provisions are explained herein below.

Change of name : Section 21 provides that the name of a company may be changed at any time by passing a special resolution at a general meeting of the company and with the written approval of the Central Government. However, no approval of the Central Government is necessary if the change of name involves only the addition or deletion of the word “private” (i.e., when public company is converted into a private company or vice versa). Again, it is not open to Registrar of Companies to insist for additional compliance of section 21, when Company Court, in exercise of its jurisdiction under section 394, has sanctioned scheme for amalgamation, which included change of name - Shreno Investment of Finance Ltd v. Registrar of Companies [2007]75SCL275(Guj.) See also Mysore Cements Ltd., In re [2010]97SCL 290 (Kar.).

Procedure : The application for change of name is required to be made to the Registrar in Form No. 1A with the prescribed fee to ascertain availability of the name. The period of validity of the name so allowed is normally sixty days unless extended by another thirty days.

The change must be communicated to the Registrar by filing Form No. 23 prescribed under the Companies (Central Government's) General Rules and Forms, 1956 along with a printed or type written copy of the special resolution within 30 days of the passing thereof.

The change in name shall be sanctioned by the Registrar in the light of guidelines prescribed by the Central Government in this behalf.

Change by ordinary resolution: If through inadvertence or otherwise, a company has been registered with a name which is identical with or too closely resembles the name of an existing company, the company may change its name by passing an ordinary resolution and by obtaining the approval of the Central Government in writing [Sec. 22].

As to whether Regional Director has the authority to pass an order under section 22, the Calcutta High Court held ‘yes’-Kalpana Polytec India Ltd, v. Union of India [1998] 16SCL207(Cal).

The rectification of the name must also be carried out if the Central Government so directs within a period of 12 months from the date of registration of the company. The direction of the Central Government is required to be complied with within a period of three months from the date thereof. Any default in complying with the direction of the Central Government renders the company and its officer in default liable for punishment with fine which may extend to ₹1,000 for every day during which the default continues [Sec. 22(2)].

In Sidhvi Constructions (India) (P.) Ltd. v. Registrar of Companies [1997] 24 CLA 207, the Andhra Pradesh High Court held that where a company is registered by a name identical with the name of a company registered earlier, the petition for change of name should be made within 12 months. A petition made later shall be barred by limitation under section 22 of the Companies Act, 1956.

The Registrar will enter the new name on the Register in place of the old name and shall issue a fresh certificate of incorporation with necessary alterations [Sec. 23(1)].

The change of name becomes effective on the issue of fresh certificate of incorporation. The Registrar will also make the necessary alteration in the memorandum of association of the company [Sec. 23(2)].

Effect of change of name:

1. The change of name shall not affect any rights/obligations of the company or render the same defective in legal proceedings by or against it. Moreover, any legal proceedings which might have been continued or commenced by or against the company by its former name may be continued by or against the company by its new name [Sec. 23(3)]

Where a company changes its name and the new name has been registered by the Registrar, the commencement of legal proceedings in the former name is not competent – Malhati Tea Syndicate Ltd. v. Revenue Officer [1973] 43 Comp. Cas. 337.

2. However, if any legal proceedings is commenced, after change of name, against the company, in its old name, it is a case of mere misdescription and not a case of proceeding against a person not in existence. It is not an incurable defect and plaint can be amended to substitute the new name – Pioneer Protective Glass Fiber (P.) Ltd. v. Fiber Glass Pilkington Ltd. [1986] 60 Comp. Cas. 707 (Cal.).
3. By change of name constitution of company does not change: In Economic Investment Corporation Ltd. v. CIT [1970] 40 Comp. Cas. 1 (Cal.) it was held that by change of name, the constitution of the company is not changed. The only thing that changes is its name; all the rights and obligations under the law of the old company pass to the new company. It is not similar to the reconstitution of a partnership, which in law means creation of a new legal entity altogether.

Where a company 'M' changed its name to 'E' on 23-9-1947 and it was assessed to income-tax in the name of 'M' for the year 1946-47, and in the course of certificate proceedings for the recovery of tax, a notice was sent to Bank 'A' who was holding money in the account of the company in the name of 'E', for payment of tax, it was held that the bank was holding money for 'M' which was the assessee.

Change of registered office – This may include –

- (a) Change of registered office from one premise to another premise in the same city, town or village [Sec. 146]

A company can change its registered office from one place to another within the local limits of the city, town or village where it is situated, by passing a resolution of the Board of directors. However, notice of the change should within 30 days of the change, be filed with the Registrar who shall record the same. The notice shall be given in Form No. 18.

It should be noted that change within the same city, town or village does not involve alternation of memorandum because in the registered office clause of the memorandum, it is only the name of the State which is mentioned and not the address of the registered office.

- (b) Change of registered office from one town or city or village to another town or city or village in the same State [Sec. 17A and Sec. 146].

In this case, the following procedure is to be followed:

- (i) Special Resolution: A special resolution is required to be passed at a general meeting of the shareholders.
- (ii) Confirmation of Regional Director: Confirmation of the Regional Director is to be obtained where the change is from jurisdiction of one Registrar of Companies to the jurisdiction of another Registrar of Companies.

The Regional Director shall convey his confirmation within four weeks from the date of receipt of application for such change.

- (iii) Copy of Special Resolution and Confirmation by Regional Directors to be filed with ROC: A copy of the special resolution, as aforesaid, is to be filed with the Registrar within 30 days in Form 23. Copy of the confirmation by Regional Director shall be filed with the Registrar of Companies within two months of the date of confirmation together with a printed copy of the altered memorandum of association. The Registrar is required to register the same and certify the registration within one month from the date of filing of the said document. The Certificate shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of the Act with respect to the alteration and confirmation have been complied with and henceforth the memorandum, as altered, shall be the memorandum of the company.
- (iv) Notice of New Location: Within 30 days of the removal of the registered office, the notice of the new location has to be given to the Registrar who shall record the same.

Punishment in case of default- A company must have a registered office and must give a notice of the situation of the registered office and of every change therein to the Registrar of Companies within 30 days after the date of the incorporation of the company or after the date of the change in the situation of its office and in the event of default in complying the aforesaid requirements, every officer of the company who is in default shall be liable for punishment under section 146(4) and, thus, the liability for prosecution and punishment is that of the officer of the company who is in default - Vijay Kumar Gupta v. Registrar of Companies [2003] CL 777 (H.P.).

(c) Change of registered office from one State to another State: Section 17 provides for the shift of the registered office from one State to another and such shift involves alteration of memorandum. Registered office of a company can be shifted from one State to another by passing special resolution and confirmation thereof by the Company Law Board (now Central Government¹). The Company Law Board (now Central Government¹) before confirming a resolution will satisfy itself that sufficient notice has been given to every creditor and all other persons whose interests are likely to be affected by the alteration including the Registrar of Companies and the Government of the State in which the registered office is situated. Also, the Company Law Board (now Central Government¹) will give an opportunity to members and creditors of the company, the Registrar and other persons interested in the company to be heard.

In Upper Ganges Sugar & Industries Ltd., In re [2000] 27 SCL 369 (CLB - Cal.), it was held that the CLB (now Central Government¹) has to ensure that all the formalities of the statute have been complied with, safeguarding the interests of the concerned parties. Section 17 confers discretionary jurisdiction including a power to impose conditions while granting the confirmation to the proposed alteration of memorandum. In exercising such jurisdiction, the CLB (now Central Government¹) is not expected to supplement or superimpose its wisdom over that of the shareholders who have already passed the resolution. In the circumstances, the CLB (now Central Government¹) will not go against the collective wisdom of the shareholders of the company expressed in the special resolution. This issue has to be left to the domestic decision of the shareholders as has been held in quite a number of cases. In this case, an objection having been raised by one of the creditors, CLB (now Central Government¹) confirmed the alteration subject to the following conditions:

- (a) the interest of none of the employees of the company at its registered office shall be prejudiced by way of retrenchment or otherwise; and
- (b) the claim of any of the creditors including the objector shall neither be prejudiced nor adversely affected.

A certified copy of the CLB's (now Central Government's) order should be filed within three months thereof with the Registrar of Companies of each State—State where it was registered and the new State i.e., the State where the registered office has been shifted based. If it is not filed within the prescribed time, then the alteration shall, at the expiry of such period, become void and inoperative.

A notice of the new location of the registered office must be given to the Registrar of the State to which the office has been shifted, within thirty days after the change of the office [Section 146].

A company is in a position to shift its registered office from one State to another for certain purposes only. These are discussed in the following paragraphs (under 'Alteration of objects'— the grounds being common).

Note : Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002

Alteration of objects clause - Section 17 empowers a company to change the place of its registered office from one State to another or to alter its objects by passing a special resolution. If alteration is sought on any of the following grounds for change of objects or change in its registered office, the position may be as under:

1. To carry on its business more economically and more efficiently [Section 17(1)(a)]

In Dalmia Cement (Bharat) Ltd., In re [1964] 34 Comp. Cas. 729 (Mad.) the Court observed that whether a company can carry on its business more economically or more efficiently is a matter for the judgment of the directors. If the directors consider that under the existing circumstances, it will be convenient and advantageous to combine the new objects with the existing objects, and if it appears that such a conclusion may be fairly arrived at, the Court will not go behind it and hold an enquiry as to whether the opinion of the directors is well founded or is justified.

The true legal position, observed the Delhi High Court, is that the business must remain substantially the same and the additions, alterations and changes should only be steps-in-aid to improve the efficiency of the company— Delhi Bharat Grain Merchants Assn. Ltd., In re [1974] 44 Comp. Cas. 214 (Delhi).

In Re, Scientific Poultry Breeders Association [1933] 3 Comp. Cas. 89 (CA), a company's memorandum prohibited payment of remuneration to the members of its governing body. It wanted, for efficient management, amendment in the memorandum to enable it to pay remuneration to its governing body members, which was allowed.

2. To attain its main purpose by new or improved means [Sec. 17(1)(b)]: For the companies registered after 10th October, 1965, there is no difficulty in ascertaining the main purpose because the memorandum would state it. But for the companies registered earlier, one has to look not only to the memorandum but also to what was actually being done.
3. To enlarge or change the local area of its operation [Sec. 17(1)(c)]: In Indian Mechanical Gold Extracting Company, In re [1891] 3 Ch. 538, the company's business was confined to the 'Empire of India'. It wanted to enlarge its operations by dropping these words. It was allowed to do so on the condition that the word 'Indian' was also dropped from its name.
4. To carry on some business which under existing circumstances may conveniently or advantageously be combined with the business of the company [Sec. 17(1)(d)]: In fact, most of the amendments sought in objects clause are based on this ground. This clause enables a company to diversify.

The working of the clause makes its scope very wide inasmuch as any activity which may either conveniently or advantageously be combined with the existing business may be allowed.

Thus, a company formed for generating power was allowed to carry on 'cold storage and other allied business'— In re, Ambala Electric Supply Co. Ltd. [1963] 33 Comp. Cas. 585 (Punj.).

In Parent Tyre Co. Ltd., In re [1922] 2 Ch. 222, a tyre company was allowed to take power to undertake financial operations. Similarly, a company formed for business in jute was allowed to add business in rubber (Juggilal Kamlatpat Jute Mills v. Registrar of Companies [1966] 1 Comp. L.J. 292).

However, Punjab Distilling Industries Ltd., which was engaged in carrying on distillery business and other allied objects was not allowed alteration of its objects so as to include a cinema business. The Punjab High Court held that it was not a business which could conveniently or advantageously be combined with the existing business—Punjab Distilling Industries Ltd. v. Registrar of Companies [1963] 33 Comp. Cas. 811 (Punj.).

Likewise, Cyclists Touring Club Ltd was not allowed to change its objects so as to admit motorists since one of the objects was to protect cyclists from motorists— In re, Cyclists Touring Club Ltd. [1907] 1 Ch. 269.

Is it permissible to alter main object(s)?

The answer is yes. Section 17(1)(b) allows alteration of the object clause on the ground of attaining the main purpose. Nothing in section 17 puts bar on alteration of the main object(s). 'Main purpose' used in section 17(1)(b) is a wider term than main object. Main object may be generation of powers by thermal process. But the underlying main purpose is generation of power. Now, if a company feels, with easier access to nuclear power that it would generate power also by setting up nuclear power plant, it should be permissible as it aids in furthering the main purpose and not depart from it. Therefore, here alteration of main object to include nuclear power generation would be possible. So long the harmony between the name of the company and its main object is not upset, alteration/modification of main object should be allowable.

Confirmation of alteration of objects is not to be refused only because new business is wholly different from existing business— New Asiatic Insurance Co. Ltd., In re [1967] 37 Comp. Cas. 331 (Punj.); New Asarwa Mfg. Co. Ltd., In re [1975] 45 Comp. Cas. 151 (Guj.), Motilal Padampat Sugar Mills Co. (P.) Ltd., In re [1964] 34 Comp. Cas. 86 (All).

The detailed guidelines in this regard were laid down in Straw Products Ltd. v. Registrar of Companies [1969] 39 Comp. Cas. 974 (Ori.). These are:

- (i) The additional business need not be even akin to the existing business but it must not be destructive of or inconsistent with and detrimental to the existing business. It must leave the existing business substantially what it was before.
 - (ii) The question whether any additional business is one which may be conveniently or advantageously combined with the business of the company carried on at the time when the special resolution is passed, is essentially a business proposition and must be determined by the persons engaged in the business of the company.
 - (iii) The Court/CLB can confirm the alteration either wholly or in part subject to such terms and conditions as it may deem fit on being satisfied that the alterations sought to be confirmed are not beyond the scope of section 17(1) and do not adversely affect the rights and interests of the members of the company and/or of its creditors. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to the quantum of evidence necessary for the satisfaction of the Court/CLB. The fact that the company is in sound financial position and that the shareholders unanimously or by majority decision seek alteration of the memorandum is a factum in favour of confirmation.
5. To restrict or abandon any of the objects specified in the memorandum [Section 17(1)(e)]: Even for deleting any portion of the object clause, the procedure laid down in section 17 has to be followed. CLB has jurisdiction to confirm alteration which involves the abandonment of objects which are in their character fundamental. In Hampstead Garden Suburb Trust Ltd, In re [1963] 33 Comp. Cas. 166, it was held that where the nature of beneficiaries itself is sought to be changed, alteration does not fall within restriction or abandonment of an object and cannot be confirmed.

Can shift of objects from 'Other objects' to 'Main objects' be permitted under section 17.

The Company Law Board which was faced with the aforesaid issue in the case of Mafatlal Consultancy Services (India) Ltd., In re [1995] 17 C.L.A. 385 answered it in the negative. The facts of the case were as follows :

The petitioner-company was carrying on business of Registrars and Share Transfer Agents in accordance with the provisions of clause 70A of its memorandum of association. The company had sought to transfer clause 70A from the "other objects" to the main objects clause of the company. It accordingly passed the requisite resolutions under sections 149(2A) and 189 of the Act and prayed for confirmation by the Company Law Board. The reason given for seeking alteration was that the business of Registrars and Share Transfer Agents which it had been carrying on hitherto had now come within the purview of the Securities & Exchange Board of India and that for the purposes of registration with that Board, it had desired that the company should amend the objects clause by shifting the existing clause 70A from Part C to the main objects in Part A.

Rejecting the petition the CLB held that—

Section 17 of the Companies Act provides that a company may alter its memorandum of association with respect to its 'objects clause' only for purposes specified in sub-section (1) and for no other.

In the instant case the proposal of the company did not fall under any of these clauses. The request of the company could not be acceded to.

All the clauses of the 'object clause', whether stated under Part A or Part C are the objects of the company and a company is empowered to take up activities covered under any one of them and in fact it was already carrying on the business as per clause 70A. The company now sought to shift clause 70A in Part C to Part A. Such a transposition could not be deemed to be alteration as permissible under section 17.

6. To sell or dispose of the whole or any part of the undertaking or any of the undertakings [Sec. 17(1)(f)]: Where a company wishes to adopt a cut-back or retrenchment strategy, i.e., where it feels that it has either grown so big or diversified in various directions that management of the company has become difficult or uneconomical, it may alter its objects to sell or dispose of any of its undertakings. The decision of Hindustan Lever to divest itself of oil unit and its consequent sale to Lipton India (now BBL) is an illustration on this point.

7. To amalgamate with any other company or body of persons [Sec. 17(1)(g)]: In Harikrishna Lohia v. Hoolungree T. Ltd (Cal.) 1996, 4 CLJ 352 the Court held that the power to amalgamate may flow from the memorandum of association or it being acquired by resorting to the provisions in the statute. The provisions contained in sections 391 to 396 and section 494 illustrate some instances of statutory powers of amalgamating without any specific power in the memorandum. In the instant case, the company is seeking a mere bare power to alter the memorandum so as to provide for necessary amalgamation afterwards. The Court felt no necessity to pass an injunction order, restraining the company from altering its memorandum.

Procedure

Sections 17 and 18 of the Companies Act, 1956 provide that, the objects clause can be altered at the company level itself, viz., by passing a special resolution at a meeting of the shareholders. However, alteration can be made only on the grounds stated under sub-section (1) of section 17. To keep a check to this effect, section 18 provides that a special resolution passed by the company in relation to clauses (a) to (g), of subsection (1) of section 17 must be filed by the company with the Registrar within one month of the date of such resolution.

The Registrar will register the documents and issue, within one month, a certificate which will be conclusive evidence that everything required has been done (section 18). If the required documents are not filed within the prescribed time, the alteration shall, at the expiry of such period, become void and inoperative [Section 19].

In case of the alteration of objects clause of the memorandum of association, a copy of the special resolution is required to be filed within a period of 30 days from the date of its passing. CLB (now Central Government) may, however, extend this period. But, in Ganga Textiles Ltd, v. ROC [1998] 16 SCL 677 it was held that the question of extension of time does not arise once the proceedings have already become void. On expiry of 30 days from the date of passing of the special resolution, the proceedings become void. Therefore, in the said case, filing of application for extension after a delay of 60 days could not be entertained. The company was, therefore, held liable for penal consequences.

Alteration of liability clause [Sec. 38] - The liability of a member of a company cannot be increased unless the member agrees in writing. The consent of the member may, however, be given either before or after the alteration. Increase in liability may be by way of subscribing for more shares than the number held by him at the date on which the alteration is made or in any other manner.

In case the company is a club or any other similar association and the alteration in the memorandum requires the member to pay recurring or periodical subscription or charges at a higher rate, although he does not agree in writing to be bound by the alteration, it shall be binding on him.

In case of unlimited liability company, the liability may be made limited or reduced by re-registration of the company. The alteration will, however, not affect any debts, liabilities, obligations or contracts entered into by or with the company before the registration of the unlimited company as a limited company [Sec. 32(3)].

Alteration of Capital Clause - Section 94 provides that, if the articles authorise, a company limited by share capital may, by an ordinary resolution passed in general meeting, alter the conditions of its memorandum in regard to capital so as—

1. to increase its authorised share capital by such amount as it thinks expedient by issuing fresh shares;
2. to consolidate and divide all or any of its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares;
3. to convert all or any of its fully paid-up shares into stock, and reconvert that stock into fully paid-up shares of any denomination;
4. to sub-divide its shares, or any of them, into shares of smaller amount than fixed by the memorandum, but the proportion of paid and unpaid on each share must remain the same;
5. to cancel shares which, at the date of the passing of the resolution in that behalf, have not been taken or agreed to be taken by any person and thus diminish the amount of its share capital by the amount of the shares so cancelled.

These five clauses are now explained.

1. Increase of authorised share capital: A company, limited by shares, if the articles authorise, can increase its authorised share capital by passing an ordinary resolution. Similarly, a company not being limited by shares can increase the number of its members.

Within 30 days of the passing of the resolution, a notice of increase in the share capital must be filed with the Registrar of Companies in Form No. 5. On receipt of the notice, the Registrar shall record the increase and also make any alterations which may be necessary in the company's memorandum or articles or both.

If default is made in filing the notice, the company and every officer of the company who is in default shall be punishable with fine upto ₹500 per day during which the default continues (Sec. 97).

2. Consolidation and sub-division of shares : Consolidation is the process of combining shares of smaller denomination. For instance, 10 shares of ₹10 each may be consolidated into one share of ₹100.

Sub-division of shares is just the opposite of consolidation e.g., one share of ₹100 may be divided into 10 shares of ₹10 each.

Once a resolution has been passed, a copy of the resolution is required to be sent within thirty days to the Registrar of Companies.

3. Conversion of shares into stock and vice versa: Stock is simply a set of fully-paid up shares put together and is transferable in any denomination or fraction. On the other hand, a share is transferable as a whole; it cannot be split into parts. For example, a share of ₹10 can be transferred as a whole; it cannot be transferred in parts. But if 10 shares of ₹10 each fully paid are converted into stock, of ₹100, then the stockholder can transfer stock, say, worth ₹17 also.

Section 94 empowers a company to convert its fully paid-up shares into stock by passing a resolution in general meeting, if its articles authorise such conversion. A notice is to be filed with the Registrar within thirty days of the passing of the resolution specifying the shares so converted.

It is to be noted that stock cannot be issued in the first instance. It is necessary to first issue shares and have them fully paid-up and then convert them into stock. Also, stock can be reconverted into fully paid-up shares by passing a resolution in general meeting.

When shares are converted into stock, the shareholders are issued stock certificates. In the Register of Members, the amount of stock is written against the name of a particular member in place of number of shares. The stockholder is as much a member of the company as a shareholder.

4. Diminution of share capital: Sometimes, it so happens that shares are issued, but are not taken up by the members of the public and, therefore, not allotted. Section 94 provides that a company may, if its articles authorise, by resolution in general meeting, cancel shares which at the date of the passing of the resolution in that behalf have not been taken or agreed to be taken by any person and diminish the amount of the share capital by the amount of the shares so cancelled. This constitutes diminution of capital and should be distinguished from reduction of capital.

Articles of Association

Introduction

The articles of association of a company are its bye-laws or rules and regulations that govern the management of its internal affairs and the conduct of its business.

According to section 2(2) of the Companies Act, 1956 'articles' means the articles of association of a company as originally framed or as altered from time to time in pursuance of any previous companies laws or of the present Act, i.e., the Act of 1956.

The articles regulate the internal management of the company. They define the powers of its officers. They also establish a contract between the company and the members and between the members inter se. This contract governs the ordinary rights and obligations incidental to membership in the company. [Maresh Chandra Sanyalv. Calcutta Stock Exchange Association Ltd. AIR 1971 SC 422].

Articles are like the partnership deed in a partnership. They set out provisions for the manner in which the company is to be administered. In particular, they provide for matters like the making of calls; forfeiture of shares; directors' qualifications, appointment, powers and duties of auditors*; procedure for transfer and transmission of shares and debentures.

Contents

Articles usually contain provisions relating to the following matters:—

1. Share capital including sub-division thereof, rights of various shareholders, the relationship of these rights, payment of commission, share certificates;
2. Lien on shares;
3. Calls on shares;
4. Transfer of shares;
5. Transmission of shares;
6. Forfeiture of shares;
7. Surrender of shares;
8. Conversion of shares into stock;
9. Share warrants;
10. Alteration of capital;
11. General meetings and proceedings thereat;
12. Voting rights of members, voting by poll, proxies;
13. Directors, including first directors or directors for life, their appointment, remuneration, qualifications, powers and proceedings of Board of directors' meetings;
14. Dividends and reserves;
15. Accounts and audit;
16. Borrowing powers
17. Winding-up.

Alteration of articles

Section 31 provides that subject to the provisions of the Act and to the conditions contained in its memorandum¹; a company may, by special resolution alter or add to its articles. A printed or type-written copy of every special resolution altering the articles must be filed with the Registrar within 30 days of the passing of the special resolution as required by section 192. The right to alter just by passing special resolution is so important that a company cannot, in any manner, deprive itself of this power [Walker v. London Tramway Company [1879] 12 Ch. D. 705]. Also, the power to reduce or increase the number of members in the case of a company limited by guarantee without share capital, from time to time, as given in the articles cannot be exercised by the general committee (Board of Directors); it can be done only by a special resolution of the general body of members [Dharampal Bhasin v. B.N. Khanna (supra)]. However, in spite of the power to alter its articles, a company can exercise this power subject only, to certain limitations.

Effect of altered articles - Alteration binds members in the same way as original articles. The provision (of section 36) providing that the articles shall bind the company and the members to the same extent as if they had been signed by the company and by each member, means, the articles as originally framed, or as they may from time to time stand after they have been altered are valid under the provisions of the Act. There is clear power to alter the articles, and as altered, they bind members just in the same way as did the original articles.

Right of a shareholder to transfer his shares is always subject to provisions in articles of association as well as section 31. A transferee, therefore, cannot have a better right than the transferor. The rights of a transferee until the transfer becomes effective, as against the company will again be subject to the provisions of the articles of association and the relevant provisions of the Act. The alteration affecting the articles of association in exercise of the said power cannot, therefore, be challenged by the transferee on the ground of mala fide - Mathrubhumi Printing & Co. Ltd. v. Vardhaman Publishers Ltd. (supra).

Procedure for alteration of articles of association- For effecting alteration to the articles of association, the following procedure is required to be followed :—

1. The proposal has to be approved by the Board of directors. The Board will fix the date and time of the general meeting. It will also approve the draft notice of the meeting, the special resolution and explanatory statement. The secretary, if any, will be authorised to convene the general body meeting.
2. Where the alteration requires taking or subscribing for more shares than the number held by the members on the date of alteration or the alteration proposes to increase the liability of members, the consent of the members should be obtained in writing either before or after any such alteration is made [section 381.

However, where the company is a club or any other association and the alteration requires the member to pay recurring or periodical subscriptions or charges at a higher rate, a member shall be liable even though he does not agree in writing to be bound by the alteration [sec. 38, proviso (b)].

3. The secretary shall convene the meeting on the appointed day. In the meeting the necessary special resolution amending the articles of association shall be passed.
4. Within 30 days of the passing of the resolution, a certified copy thereof shall be filed with the Registrar of Companies along with Form No. 23 [vide section 192(1) of the Companies Act].
5. Where the alteration of the articles has the effect of converting a public company into a private company, the company shall, within three months from the date of the passing of the special resolution, make an application in Form No. 1B to the Regional Director concerned for his approval of the alteration (vide section 31 of the Companies Act).
6. After getting the approval of the Central Government (Registrar of Companies), printed copy of the articles, as altered, should be filed by the company with the Registrar of Companies within one month of the date of receipt of order of approval.
7. Six copies of the amendments (one of which shall be certified) should be sent to the stock exchange(s) on which the shares of the company are listed, as soon as they have been adopted by the company in the general meeting (as per the Standard Listing Agreement).
8. Alteration should be noted in every copy of the articles of association, and the articles issued after the date of alteration should be in accordance with the altered articles (section 40). A default in this regard shall invite penalty against the company as well as every officer in default. The penalty provided under the section is fine upto ₹100 for each copy so issued.

1.3 PROCEDURE FOR ISSUE OF SHARES AND SECURITIES

1.3.1 Procedure – The various procedures related to shares are detailed hereunder:-

Share [Sec. 2(46)]

- (a) A 'Share' is smallest unit into which the capital of the company is divided.
- (b) Section 2(46) of the Companies Act, 1956 defines a share as "a share in the share capital of a company, and includes stock except where a distinction between stock and share is expressed or implied".

For example, where a company has a share capital of Rs 1,00,000 divided into 10,000 units of ₹ 10 each, then each unit of Rs 10 is called a share of Rs 10 each and a person who has taken 10 shares of that company is said to have share in the share capital of the company to the extent of Rs 100.

- (c) A share represents such proportion of the interest of the shareholders as the amount paid up thereon bears to the total capital payable to the company.
- (d) A share may be partly paid up or fully paid up.
- (e) A share is a measure of the interest in the company's assets to which a person holding a share is entitled.

Public Issue of Shares

Every Company needs funds for its business. Funds requirement can be for short term or for long term. To meet short term requirements, the may approach banks, lenders & may even accept fixed deposits from public/shareholders. To meet its long term requirements, funds can be raised either through loans from lenders, Banks, Institutions etc. (which carry financial burden) or through issue of capital. Capital can be raised through private placement of shares, public issue, right issue etc. Public issue means raising funds from public. Promoters of the Company may have plans for the Company, which may require infusion of money. The main purpose of the public issue, amongst others, is to raise money through public and get its shares listed at any of the recognized stock exchanges in India.

SEBI(Issue of Capital and Disclosure Requirements) Regulations,2009 with respect to public issue of equity shares or any other security convertible into equity shares

General conditions: These conditions are common for Public Issues (IPOs as well as FPOs) and Rights Issues:

- (1) Any issuer offering specified securities through a public issue or rights issue shall satisfy the conditions as laid down in these regulations at the time of filing draft offer document with the Board (unless stated otherwise) and at the time of registering or filing the final offer document with the Registrar of Companies or Designated Stock Exchange, as the case may be.
- (2) No issuer shall make a public issue or rights issue of specified securities:
 - (a) if the issuer, any of its promoters, promoter group or directors or persons in control of the issuer are debarred from accessing the capital market by the Board;
 - (b) if any of the promoters, directors or persons in control of the Issuer was or also is a promoter, director or person in control of any other company which is debarred from accessing the capital market under any order or directions made by the Board;
 - (c) if the issuer of convertible debt instruments is in the list of wilful defaulters published by the Reserve Bank of India or it is in default of payment of interest or repayment of principal amount in respect of debt instruments issued by it to the public, if any, for a period of more than six months;
 - (d) unless it has made an application to one or more recognised stock exchanges for listing of specified securities on such stock exchanges and has chosen one of them as the designated stock exchange:
Provided that in case of an initial public offer, the issuer shall make an application for listing of the specified securities in at least one recognised stock exchange having nationwide trading terminals;
 - (e) unless it has entered into an agreement with a depository for dematerialisation of specified securities already issued or proposed to be issued;

- (f) unless all existing partly paid-up equity shares of the issuer have either been fully paid up or forfeited;
 - (g) unless firm arrangements of finance through verifiable means towards seventy five per cent of the stated means of finance, excluding the amount to be raised through the proposed public issue or rights issue or through existing identifiable internal accruals, have been made.
- (3) Warrants may be issued alongwith public issue or rights issue of specified securities subject to the following:
- (a) the tenure of such warrants shall not exceed twelve months from their date of allotment in the public/rights issue;
 - (b) not more than one warrant shall be attached to one specified security.
- (4) The amount for general corporate purposes, as mentioned in objects of the issue in the draft offer document filed with the Board, shall not exceed twenty five per cent of the amount raised by the issuer by issuance of specified securities.

Appointment of Merchant Banker and other intermediaries

- (1) The issuer shall appoint one or more merchant bankers, at least one of whom shall be a lead merchant banker and shall also appoint other intermediaries, in consultation with the lead merchant banker, to carry out the obligations relating to the issue.
- (2) The issuer shall, in consultation with the lead merchant banker, appoint only those intermediaries which are registered with the Board.
- (3) Where the issue is managed by more than one merchant banker, the rights, obligations and responsibilities, relating inter alia to disclosures, allotment, refund and underwriting obligations, if any, of each merchant banker shall be predetermined and disclosed in the offer document as specified in Schedule I:

Provided that where any of the merchant bankers is an associate of the issuer, it shall declare itself as a marketing lead manager and its role shall be limited to marketing of the issue.

- (4) The lead merchant banker shall, only after independently assessing the capability of other intermediaries to carry out their obligations, advise the issuer on their appointment.
- (5) The issuer shall enter into an agreement with the lead merchant banker in the format specified in Schedule II and with other intermediaries as required under the respective regulations applicable to the intermediary concerned:

Provided that such agreements may include such other clauses as the issuer and the intermediary may deem fit without diminishing or limiting in any way the liabilities and obligations of the merchant bankers, other intermediaries and the issuer under the Act, the Companies Act, 1956, the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956, the Depositories Act, 1996 and the rules and regulations made thereunder or any statutory modification or statutory enactment thereof:

Provided further that in case of ASBA process, the issuer shall take cognizance of the deemed agreement of the issuer with Self Certified Syndicate Banks.

- (6) An issuer shall, in case of an issue made through the book building process, appoint syndicate members and in the case of any other issue, appoint bankers to issue, at all mandatory collection centres as specified in Schedule III and such other collection centres as it may deem fit.
- (7) The issuer shall appoint a registrar which has connectivity with all the depositories:

Provided that if issuer itself is a registrar to an issue registered with the Board, then another registrar to an issue shall be appointed as registrar to the issue:

Provided further that the lead merchant banker shall not act as a registrar to the issue in which it is also handling the post issue responsibilities.

Explanation: For the purpose of this regulation, in case of a book built issue, the lead merchant banker appointed by the issuer shall act as the lead book runner.

Filing of offer document

- (1) No issuer shall make,
 - (a) a public issue; or
 - (b) a rights issue, where the aggregate value of the specified securities offered is fifty lakh rupees or more, unless a draft offer document, along with fees as specified in Schedule IV, has been filed with the Board through the lead merchant banker, at least thirty days prior to registering the prospectus, red herring prospectus or shelf prospectus with the Registrar of Companies or filing the letter of offer with the designated stock exchange, as the case may be.
- (2) The Board may specify changes or issue observations, if any, on the draft offer document within thirty days from the later of the following dates:
 - (a) the date of receipt of the draft offer document ; or
 - (b) the date of receipt of satisfactory reply from the lead merchant bankers, where the Board has sought any clarification or additional information from them; or
 - (c) the date of receipt of clarification or information from any regulator or agency, where the Board has sought any clarification or information from such regulator or agency; or
 - (d) the date of receipt of a copy of in-principle approval letter issued by the recognised stock exchanges.
- (3) If the Board specifies changes or issues observations on the draft offer document, the issuer and lead merchant banker shall carry out such changes in the draft offer document and comply with the observations issued by the Board before registering the prospectus, red-herring prospectus or shelf prospectus, as the case may be, with the Registrar of Companies or filing the letter of offer with the designated stock exchange.
- (4) The issuer shall, simultaneously while registering the prospectus, red herring prospectus or shelf prospectus with the Registrar of Companies or filing the letter of offer with the designated stock exchange or before the opening of the issue, file a copy thereof with the Board through the lead merchant banker.
- (5) The lead merchant banker shall, while filing the offer document with the Board in terms of subregulation (1) and sub-regulation (4), file a copy of such document with the recognised stock Exchange(s) where the specified securities are proposed to be listed.
- (6) The offer document filed with the Board under this regulation shall also be furnished to the Board in a soft copy in the manner specified in Schedule V.

In-principle approval from Recognised Stock Exchanges

The issuer shall obtain in-principle approval from recognised stock exchanges as follows:

- (a) in case of an initial public offer, from all the recognised stock exchanges in which the issuer proposes to get its specified securities listed; and
- (b) in case of a further public offer and rights issue:
 - (i) where the specified securities are listed only on recognised stock exchanges having nationwide trading terminals, from all such stock exchanges;
 - (ii) where the specified securities are not listed on any recognised stock exchange having nationwide trading terminals, from all the stock exchanges in which the specified securities of the issuer are proposed to be listed;

- (iii) where the specified securities are listed on recognised stock exchanges having nationwide trading terminals as well as on the recognised stock exchanges not having nationwide trading terminals, from all recognised stock exchanges having nationwide trading terminals.

Documents to be submitted before opening of the issue

- (1) The lead merchant bankers shall submit the following to the Board along with the draft offer document:
 - (a) a copy of the agreement entered into between the issuer and the lead merchant bankers as per format specified in Schedule II;
 - (b) a due diligence certificate as per Form A of Schedule VI;
 - (c) in case of an issue of convertible debt instruments, a due diligence certificate from the debenture trustee as per Form B of Schedule VI;
 - (d) a certificate in the format specified in Part C of Schedule VIII, confirming compliance of the conditions mentioned therein.
- (2) The lead merchant bankers shall submit the following documents to the Board after issuance of observations by the Board or after expiry of the period stipulated in sub-regulation (2) of regulation 6 if the Board has not issued observations:
 - (a) a statement certifying that all changes, suggestions and observations made by the Board have been incorporated in the offer document;
 - (b) a due diligence certificate as per Form C of Schedule VI, at the time of registering the prospectus with the Registrar of Companies;
 - (c) a copy of the resolution passed by the board of directors of the issuer for allotting specified securities to promoters towards amount received against promoters' contribution, before opening of the issue;
 - (d) a certificate from a Chartered Accountant, before opening of the issue, certifying that promoters' contribution has been received in accordance with these regulations, accompanying therewith the names and addresses of the promoters who have contributed to the promoters' contribution and the amount paid by each of them towards such contribution;
 - (e) a due diligence certificate as per Form D of Schedule VI, immediately before the opening of the issue, certifying that necessary corrective action, if any, has been taken;
 - (f) a due diligence certificate as per Form E of Schedule VI, after the issue has opened but before it closes for subscription.
- (3) The issuer shall, at the time of filing draft offer document with the recognised stock exchange where the specified securities are proposed to be listed, submit the Permanent Account Number, bank account number and passport number of its promoters to such stock exchange.

Draft offer document to be made public

- (1) The draft offer document filed with the Board shall be made public, for comments, if any, for a period of at least twenty one days from the date of such filing, by hosting it on the websites of the Board, recognised stock exchanges where specified securities are proposed to be listed and merchant bankers associated with the issue.
- (2) The lead merchant bankers shall, after expiry of the period stipulated in sub-regulation (1), file with the Board a statement giving information of the comments received by them or the issuer on the draft offer document during that period and the consequential changes, if any, to be made in the draft offer document.

- (3) The issuer either on the date of filing the draft offer document with the Board or on the next day shall make a public announcement in one English National daily newspaper with wide circulation, one Hindi National daily newspaper with wide circulation and one regional language newspaper with wide circulation at the place where the registered office of the issuer is situated, disclosing to the public the fact of filing of draft offer document with the Board and inviting the public to give their comments to the Board in respect of disclosures made in the draft offer document.

Fast Track Issue

- (1) Nothing contained in sub-regulations (1), (2) and (3) of regulation 6 and regulations 7 and 8 shall apply to a public issue or rights issue if the issuer satisfies the following conditions:
 - (a) the equity shares of the issuer have been listed on any recognised stock exchange having nationwide trading terminals for a period of at least three years immediately preceding the reference date;
 - (b) the average market capitalisation of public shareholding of the issuer is at least three thousand crore rupees;
 - (c) the annualised trading turnover of the equity shares of the issuer during six calendar months immediately preceding the month of the reference date has been at least two per cent of the weighted average number of equity shares listed during such six months' period:

Provided that for issuers, whose public shareholding is less than fifteen per cent of its issued equity capital, the annualised trading turnover of its equity shares has been at least two per cent of the weighted average number of equity shares available as free float during such six months' period;

- (d) the issuer has redressed at least ninety five per cent of the complaints received from the investors till the end of the quarter immediately preceding the month of the reference date;
 - (e) the issuer has been in compliance with the equity listing agreement for a period of at least three years immediately preceding the reference date:

Provided that if the issuer has not complied with the provision of the equity listing agreement relating to composition of board of directors, for any quarter during the last three years immediately preceding the reference date, but is compliant with such provisions at the time of filing of offer document with the Registrar of Companies or designated stock exchange, as the case may be, and adequate disclosures are made in the offer document about such non-compliances during the three years immediately preceding the reference date, it shall be deemed as compliance with the condition;

- (f) the impact of auditors' qualifications, if any, on the audited accounts of the issuer in respect of those financial years for which such accounts are disclosed in the offer document does not exceed five per cent of the net profit or loss after tax of the issuer for the respective years;
 - (g) no show-cause notices have been issued or prosecution proceedings initiated or pending against the issuer or its promoters or whole time directors as on the reference date;
 - (h) the entire shareholding of the promoter group of the issuer is held in dematerialized form on the reference date.
- (2) The issuer shall file the offer document with the Board and the recognised stock exchanges in accordance with sub-regulations (4), (5) and (6) of regulation 6 and shall pay fees to the Board as specified in Schedule IV.
- (3) The lead merchant bankers shall submit to the Board, the following documents along with the offer document:

- (a) a due diligence certificate as per Form A of Schedule VI including additional confirmations as specified in Form F of Schedule VI;
- (b) in case of a fast track issue of convertible debt instruments, a due diligence certificate from the debenture trustee as per Form B of Schedule VI.

Explanation: For the purposes of this regulation:

- (I) "Reference Date" means:
 - (a) in case of a public issue by a listed issuer, the date of registering the red herring prospectus (in case of a book built issue) or prospectus (in case of a fixed price issue) with the Registrar of Companies; and
 - (b) in case of a rights issue by a listed issuer, the date of filing the letter of offer with the designated stock exchange.
- (II) "Average Market Capitalisation of public Shareholding" means the sum of daily market capitalisation of public shareholding for a period of one year up to the end of the quarter preceding the month in which the proposed issue was approved by the shareholders or the board of the issuer, as the case may be, divided by the number of trading days.

Opening of an issue

- (1) Subject to the compliance with sub-section (4) of section 60 of the Companies Act, 1956, a public issue or rights issue may be opened:
 - (a) within twelve months from the date of issuance of the observations by the Board; or
 - (b) within three months of expiry of the stipulated period of 30 days, if the Board has not issued observations:
- (2) In case of shelf prospectus, the first issue may be opened within three months of issuance of observations by the Board.
- (3) The issuer shall, before registering the red herring prospectus (in case of a book built issue) or prospectus (in case of a fixed price issue) with the Registrar of Companies or filing the letter of offer with the designated stock exchange, as the case may be, file with the Board through the lead merchant bankers, an updated offer document highlighting all changes made in the offer document.
- (4) Notwithstanding anything contained in this regulation, if there are changes in the offer document in relation to the matters specified in Schedule VII, the updated offer document or new draft offer document, as the case may be, shall be filed with the Board along with fees specified in Schedule IV.
- (5) An issue shall be opened after atleast three working days from the date of registering the red herring prospectus with the Registrar of Companies.

Dispatch of issue material

The lead merchant bankers shall dispatch the offer document and other issue material including forms for ASBA to the designated stock exchange, syndicate members, underwriters, bankers to the issue, investors' associations and Self Certified Syndicate Banks in advance.

Underwriting

- (1) Where the issuer making a public issue (other than through the book building process) or rights issue, desires to have the issue underwritten, it shall appoint the underwriters in accordance with Securities and Exchange Board of India (Underwriters) Regulations, 1993.

- (2) Where the issuer makes a public issue through the book building process, such issue shall be underwritten by book runners or syndicate members:
Provided that seventy five per cent [sixty per cent, if public issue is made with at least ten per cent public offer under clause (b) of sub-rule (2) of rule 19 of the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Rules, 1957] of the net offer to public proposed to be compulsorily allotted to qualified institutional buyers for the purpose of compliance of the eligibility conditions specified in sub-regulation (2) of regulation 26 and [regulation 27] cannot be underwritten.
- (3) The issuer shall enter into underwriting agreement with the book runner, who in turn shall enter into underwriting agreement with syndicate members, indicating therein the number of specified securities which they shall subscribe to at the predetermined price in the event of under-subscription in the issue.
- (4) If syndicate members fail to fulfil their underwriting obligations, the lead book runner shall fulfil the underwriting obligations.
- (5) The book runners and syndicate members shall not subscribe to the issue in any manner except for fulfilling their underwriting obligations.
- (6) In case of every underwritten issue, the lead merchant banker or the lead book runner shall undertake minimum underwriting obligations as specified in the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Merchant Bankers) Regulations, 1992.
- (7) Where hundred per cent. of the offer through offer document is underwritten, the underwriting obligations shall be for the entire hundred per cent of the offer through offer document and shall not be restricted upto the minimum subscription level.

Minimum subscription

The minimum subscription to be received in an issue shall not be less than ninety per cent of the offer through offer document.

- (2) In the event of non-receipt of minimum subscription referred to in sub-regulation (1), all application moneys received shall be refunded to the applicants forthwith, but not later than:
 - (a) fifteen days of the closure of the issue, in case of a non-underwritten issue; and
 - (b) seventy days of the closure of the issue, in the case of an underwritten issue where minimum subscription including devolvement obligations paid by the underwriters is not received within sixty days of the closure of the issue.
- (3) The offer document shall contain adequate disclosures regarding minimum subscription as specified in Part A of Schedule VIII.
- (4) Nothing contained in this regulation shall apply to:
 - (a) offer for sale of specified securities;
 - (b) public issue by infrastructure companies if the disclosures regarding the alternate source of funding of the objects of the issue have been made in the offer document.

Explanation: For the purpose of clause (b) of sub-regulation (4), the term "infrastructure company" means, an enterprise wholly engaged in the business of (i) developing or (ii) operating and maintaining or (iii) developing, operating and maintaining any infrastructure facility.

Oversubscription

No allotment shall be made by the issuer in excess of the specified securities offered through the offer document:

Provided that in case of oversubscription, an allotment of not more than ten per cent of the net offer to public may be made for the purpose of making allotment in minimum lots.

Monitoring agency

- (1) If the issue size exceeds five hundred crore rupees, the issuer shall make arrangements for the use of proceeds of the issue to be monitored by a public financial institution or by one of the scheduled commercial banks named in the offer document as bankers of the issuer:

Provided that nothing contained in this clause shall apply to an offer for sale or an issue of specified securities made by a bank or public financial institution or an insurance company.

- (2) The monitoring agency shall submit its report to the issuer in the format specified in Schedule IX on a half yearly basis, till the proceeds of the issue have been fully utilised.

Manner of calls

If the issuer proposes to receive subscription monies in calls, it shall ensure that the outstanding subscription money is called within twelve months from the date of allotment in the issue and if any applicant fails to pay the call money within the said twelve months, the equity shares on which there are calls in arrear along with the subscription money already paid on such shares shall be forfeited:

Provided that it shall not be necessary to call the outstanding subscription money within twelve months, if the issuer has appointed a monitoring agency as specified in these regulations.

Allotment, refund and payment of interest

- (1) The issuer and merchant bankers shall ensure that specified securities are allotted and/or application moneys are refunded within fifteen days from the date of closure of the issue.
- (2) Where specified securities are not allotted and/or application moneys are not refunded within the period stipulated in sub-regulation (1), the issuer shall undertake to pay interest at such rate and within such time as disclosed in the offer document.

Restriction on further capital issues

No issuer shall make any further issue of specified securities in any manner whether by way of public issue, rights issue, preferential issue, qualified institutions placement, issue of bonus shares or otherwise:

- (a) in case of a fast track issue, during the period between the date of registering the red herring prospectus (in case of a book built issue) or prospectus (in case of a fixed price issue) with the Registrar of Companies or filing the letter of offer with the designated stock exchange and the listing of the specified securities offered through the offer document or refund of application moneys; or
- (b) in case of other issues, during the period between the date of filing the draft offer document with the Board and the listing of the specified securities offered through the offer document or refund of application moneys; unless full disclosures regarding the total number of specified securities and amount proposed to be raised from such further issue are made in such draft offer document or offer document, as the case may be.

PROVISIONS AS TO PUBLIC ISSUE
PART I-ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS

Reference date

An issuer making a public issue shall satisfy the following conditions of this regulations as on the date of filing draft offer document with the Board and also as on the date of registering the offer document with the Registrar of Companies.

Conditions for initial public offer(IPO)

(1) An issuer may make an initial public offer, if:

- (a) it has net tangible assets of at least three crore rupees in each of the preceding three full years (of twelve months each), of which not more than fifty per cent. are held in monetary assets:

Provided that if more than fifty per cent. of the net tangible assets are held in monetary assets, the issuer has made firm commitments to utilise such excess monetary assets in its business or project;

- (b) it has a minimum average pre-tax operating profit of rupees fifteen crore,calculated on a restated and consolidated basis,during the three most profitable years out of the immediately preceding five years.

Provided that extraordinary items shall not be considered for calculating distributable profits;

- (c) it has a net worth of at least one crore rupees in each of the preceding three full years (of twelve months each);
 - (d) the aggregate of the proposed issue and all previous issues made in the same financial year in terms of issue size does not exceed five times its pre-issue net worth as per the audited balance sheet of the preceding financial year;
 - (e) if it has changed its name within the last one year, at least fifty per cent of the revenue for the preceding one full year has been earned by it from the activity indicated by the new name.
- (2) An issuer not satisfying the condition stipulated in sub-regulation(1) may make an initial public offer if the issue is made through the book-building process and the issuer undertakes to allot,at least seventy five per cent of the net offer to public, to qualified institutional buyers and to refund full subscription money if it fails to make the said minimum allotment to qualified institutional buyers.
- (3) An issuer may make an initial public offer of convertible debt instruments without making a prior public issue of its equity shares and listing thereof.
- (4) An issuer shall not make an allotment pursuant to a public issue if the number of prospective allottees is less than one thousand.
- (5) No issuer shall make an initial public offer if there are any outstanding convertible securities or any other right which would entitle any person with any option to receive equity shares after the initial public offer:

Provided that the provisions of this sub-regulation shall not apply to:

- (a) a public issue made during the currency of convertible debt instruments which were issued through an earlier initial public offer, if the conversion price of such convertible debt instruments was determined and disclosed in the prospectus of the earlier issue of convertible debt instruments;
- (b) outstanding options granted to employees pursuant to an employee stock option scheme framed in accordance with the relevant Guidance Note or Accounting Standards, if any, issued by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India in this regard.

- (6) Subject to provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 and these regulations, equity shares may be offered for sale to public if such equity shares have been held by the sellers for a period of at least one year prior to the filing of draft offer document with the Board in accordance with sub-regulation (1) of regulation 6:

Provided that in case equity shares received on conversion or exchange of fully paid-up compulsorily convertible securities including depository receipts are being offered for sale, the holding period of such convertible securities as well as that of resultant equity shares together shall be considered for the purpose of calculation of one year period referred in this sub-regulation:

Provided further that the requirement of holding equity shares for a period of one year shall not apply:

- (a) in case of an offer for sale of specified securities of a government company or statutory authority or corporation or any special purpose vehicle set up and controlled by any one or more of them, which is engaged in infrastructure sector;
 - (b) if the specified securities offered for sale were acquired pursuant to any scheme approved by a High Court under sections 391-394 of the Companies Act, 1956, in lieu of business and invested capital which had been in existence for a period of more than one year prior to such approval.
- (7) No issuer shall make an initial public offer, unless as on the date of registering prospectus or red herring prospectus with the Registrar of Companies, the issuer has obtained grading for the initial public offer from at least one credit rating agency registered with the Board.

Explanation: For the purposes of this regulation:

- (I) "Net Tangible Assets" mean the sum of all net assets of the issuer, excluding intangible assets as defined in Accounting Standard 26 (AS 26) issued by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India;
- (II) "Project" means the object for which monies are proposed to be raised to cover the objects of the issue;
- (III) In case of an issuer which had been a partnership firm, the track record of distributable profits of the partnership firm shall be considered only if the financial statements of the partnership business for the period during which the issuer was a partnership firm, conform to and are revised in the format prescribed for companies under the Companies Act, 1956 and also comply with the following:
 - (a) adequate disclosures are made in the financial statements as required to be made by the issuer as per Schedule VI of the Companies Act, 1956;
 - (b) the financial statements are duly certified by a Chartered Accountant stating that:
 - (i) the accounts and the disclosures made are in accordance with the provisions of Schedule VI of the Companies Act, 1956;
 - (ii) the accounting standards of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India have been followed;
 - (iii) the financial statements present a true and fair view of the firm's accounts;
- (IV) In case of an issuer formed out of a division of an existing company, the track record of distributable profits of the division spun-off shall be considered only if the requirements regarding financial statements as provided for partnership firms in Explanation III are complied with;
- (V) "Bid-ask spread" means the difference between quotations for sale and purchase;
- (VI) The term "infrastructure sector" includes the facilities or services as specified in Schedule X.

Conditions for further public offer [FPO]

An issuer may make a further public offer if it satisfies the conditions laid down in SEBI Regulations with respect to IPOs.

PART II - PRICING IN PUBLIC ISSUE

Pricing

An issuer may determine the price of specified securities in consultation with the lead merchant banker or through the book building process.

- (2) An issuer may determine the coupon rate and conversion price of convertible debt instruments in consultation with the lead merchant banker or through the book building process.
- (3) The issuer shall undertake the book building process in a manner specified in Schedule XI.

Differential pricing

An issuer may offer specified securities at different prices, subject to the following:

- (a) retail individual investors or retail individual shareholders [or employees of the issuer entitled for reservation made under regulation 42 making an application for specified securities of value not more than one lakh rupees,] may be offered specified securities at a price lower than the price at which net offer is made to other categories of applicants:

Provided that such difference shall not be more than ten per cent of the price at which specified securities are offered to other categories of applicants;

- (b) in case of a book built issue, the price of the specified securities offered to an anchor investor shall not be lower than the price offered to other applicants;
- (c) in case of a composite issue, the price of the specified securities offered in the public issue may be different from the price offered in rights issue and justification for such price difference shall be given in the offer document.
- (d) in case the issuer opts for the alternate method of book building in terms of Part D of Schedule XI, the issuer may offer specified securities to its employees at a price lower than the floor price:

Provided that the difference between the floor price and the price at which specified securities are offered shall not be more than ten percent of the floor price.

Price and price band

- (1) The issuer may mention a price or price band in the draft prospectus (in case of a fixed price issue) and floor price or price band in the red herring prospectus (in case of a book built issue) and determine the price at a later date before registering the prospectus with the Registrar of Companies:

Provided that the prospectus registered with the Registrar of Companies shall contain only one price or the specific coupon rate, as the case may be.

- (2) If the issuer shall announce the floor price or price band at least five working days before the opening of the bid (in case of an initial public offer) and at least one working day before the opening of the bid (in case of a further public offer), in all the newspapers in which the pre issue advertisement was released.
- (3) The announcement referred to in sub-regulation (2) shall contain relevant financial ratios computed for both upper and lower end of the price band and also a statement drawing attention of the investors to the section titled "basis of issue price" in the prospectus.
- (3A) The announcement referred to in sub-regulation(2) and the relevant financial ratios referred to in sub-regulation(3) shall be disclosed on the websites of those stock exchanges where the securities are proposed to be listed and shall also be pre-filled in the application forms available on the websites of the stock exchanges.

- (4) The cap on the price band shall be less than or equal to one hundred and twenty per cent of the floor price.
- (5) The floor price or the final price shall not be less than the face value of the specified securities.

Explanation: For the purposes of sub-regulation (4), the "cap on the price band" includes cap on the coupon rate in case of convertible debt instruments.

Face value of equity shares.

- (1) Subject to the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956, the Act and these regulations, an issuer making an initial public offer may determine the face value of the equity shares in the following manner:

- (a) if the issue price per equity share is five hundred rupees or more, the issuer shall have the option to determine the face value at less than ten rupees per equity share:

Provided that the face value shall not be less than one rupee per equity share;

- (b) if the issue price per equity share is less than five hundred rupees, the face value of the equity shares shall be ten rupees per equity share:

Provided that nothing contained in this sub-regulation shall apply to initial public offer made by any government company, statutory authority or corporation or any special purpose vehicle set up by any of them, which is engaged in infrastructure sector.

- (2) The disclosure about the face value of equity shares (including the statement about the issue price being "X" times of the face value) shall be made in the advertisements, offer documents and application forms in identical font size as that of issue price or price band.

Explanation: For the purposes of this regulation, the term "infrastructure sector" includes the facilities or services as specified in Schedule X.

PART III - PROMOTERS' CONTRIBUTION

Minimum promoters' contribution

- (1) The promoters of the issuer shall contribute in the public issue as follows:
 - (a) in case of an initial public offer, not less than twenty per cent of the post issue capital:

Provided that in case the post issue shareholding of the promoters is less than twenty per cent., alternative investment funds may contribute for the purpose of meeting the shortfall in minimum contribution as specified for promoters, subject to a maximum of ten per cent of the post issue capital.
 - (b) in case of a further public offer, either to the extent of twenty per cent of the proposed issue size or to the extent of twenty per cent of the post-issue capital;
 - (c) in case of a composite issue, either to the extent of twenty per cent of the proposed issue size or to the extent of twenty per cent of the post-issue capital excluding the rights issue component.
- (2) In case of a public issue or composite issue of convertible securities, minimum promoters' contribution shall be as follows:
 - (a) the promoters shall contribute twenty per cent as stipulated in clauses (a), (b) or (c) of sub-regulation (1), as the case may be, either by way of equity shares or by way of subscription to the convertible securities:

Provided that if the price of the equity shares allotted pursuant to conversion is not predetermined and not disclosed in the offer document, the promoters shall contribute only by way of subscription to the convertible securities being issued in the public issue and shall undertake in writing to subscribe to the equity shares pursuant to conversion of such securities.

- (b) in case of any issue of convertible securities which are convertible or exchangeable on different dates and if the promoters' contribution is by way of equity shares (conversion price being pre-determined), such contribution shall not be at a price lower than the weighted average price of the equity share capital arising out of conversion of such securities.
- (c) subject to the provisions of clause (a) and (b) above, in case of an initial public offer of convertible debt instruments without a prior public issue of equity shares, the promoters shall bring in a contribution of at least twenty per cent. of the project cost in the form of equity shares, subject to contributing at least twenty per cent. of the issue size from their own funds in the form of equity shares:

Provided that if the project is to be implemented in stages, the promoters' contribution shall be with respect to total equity participation till the respective stage vis-à-vis the debt raised or proposed to be raised through the public issue.

- (3) In case of a further public offer or composite issue where the promoters contribute more than the stipulated minimum promoters' contribution, the allotment with respect to excess contribution shall be made at a price determined in terms of the provisions of regulation 76 or the issue price, whichever is higher.
- (4) The promoters shall satisfy the requirements of this regulation at least one day prior to the date of opening of the issue and the amount of promoters' contribution shall be kept in an escrow account with a scheduled commercial bank and shall be released to the issuer along with the release of the issue proceeds:

Provided that where the promoters' contribution has already been brought in and utilised, the issuer shall give the cash flow statement disclosing the use of such funds in the offer document;

Provided further that where the minimum promoters' contribution is more than one hundred crore rupees, the promoters shall bring in at least one hundred crore rupees before the date of opening of the issue and the remaining amount may be brought on pro-rata basis before the calls are made to public.

Explanation: For the purpose of this regulation:

- (I) Promoters' contribution shall be computed on the basis of the post-issue expanded capital:
 - (a) assuming full proposed conversion of convertible securities into equity shares;
 - (b) assuming exercise of all vested options, where any employee stock options are outstanding at the time of initial public offer in terms of proviso (b) to sub-regulation (5) of regulation 26.
- (II) For computation of "weighted average price":
 - (a) "weights" means the number of equity shares arising out of conversion of such specified securities into equity shares at various stages;
 - (b) "price" means the price of equity shares on conversion arrived at after taking into account predetermined conversion price at various stages.

Securities ineligible for minimum promoters' contribution

- (1) For the computation of minimum promoters' contribution, the following specified securities shall not be eligible:

- (a) specified securities acquired during the preceding three years, if they are:
 - (i) acquired for consideration other than cash and revaluation of assets or capitalisation of intangible assets is involved in such transaction; or
 - (ii) resulting from a bonus issue by utilisation of revaluation reserves or unrealized profits of the issuer or from bonus issue against equity shares which are ineligible for minimum promoters' contribution;
- (b) specified securities acquired by promoters and alternative investment funds during the preceding one year at a price lower than the price at which specified securities are being offered to public in the initial public offer:

Provided that nothing contained in this clause shall apply:

- (i) if promoters /alternative investment funds,as applicable, pay to the issuer, the difference between the price at which specified securities are offered in the initial public offer and the price at which the specified securities had been acquired;
- (ii) if such specified securities are acquired in terms of the scheme under sections 391-394 of the Companies Act, 1956, as approved by a High Court, by promoters in lieu of business and invested capital that had been in existence for a period of more than one year prior to such approval;
- (iii) to an initial public offer by a government company, statutory authority or corporation or any special purpose vehicle set up by any of them, which is engaged in infrastructure sector;
- (c) specified securities allotted to promoters and alternative investment funds during the preceding one year at a price less than the issue price, against funds brought in by them during that period, in case of an issuer formed by conversion of one or more partnership firms, where the partners of the erstwhile partnership firms are the promoters of the issuer and there is no change in the management:

Provided that specified securities, allotted to promoters against capital existing in such firms for a period of more than one year on a continuous basis, shall be eligible;

- (d) specified securities pledged with any creditor.
 - (2) Specified securities referred to in clauses (a) and (c) of sub-regulation (1) shall be eligible for the computation of promoters' contribution, if such securities are acquired pursuant to a scheme which has been approved under sections 391-394 of the Companies Act, 1956.

Explanation: For the purposes of clause (b) of sub-regulation (1), the term "infrastructure sector" includes the facilities or services as specified in Schedule X.

Requirement of minimum promoters' contribution not applicable in certain cases

The requirements of minimum promoters' contribution shall not apply in case of:

- (a) an issuer which does not have any identifiable promoter;
- (b) a further public offer, where the equity shares of the issuer are not infrequently traded in a recognised stock exchange for a period of at least three years and the issuer has a track record of dividend payment for at least immediately preceding three years:

Provided that where promoters propose to subscribe to the specified securities offered to the extent greater than higher of the two options available in clause (b) of sub-regulation (1) of regulation 32, the subscription in excess of such percentage shall be made at a price determined in terms of the provisions of regulation 76 or the issue price, whichever is higher.

(c) rights issues.

Explanation: For the purpose of clause (b), the words “infrequently traded” have the same meaning as assigned to them in Explanation to sub-regulation (5) of regulation 20 of the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1997 and the reference date for the purpose of computing the annualised trading turnover referred to in the said Explanation shall be the date of filing the draft offer document with the Board and in case of a fast track issue, the date of filing the offer document with the Registrar of Companies before opening of the issue.

PART IV - RESTRICTION ON TRANSFERABILITY (LOCK-IN) OF PROMOTERS' CONTRIBUTION, ETC.

Date of commencement of lock in and inscription of non-transferability

- (1) Save as otherwise provided in this Chapter, specified securities held by promoters and persons other than promoters shall not be transferable (hereinafter referred to as “lock-in”) from the date of allotment of the specified securities in the proposed public issue for the period stipulated in these regulations.
- (2) The certificate of specified securities which are subject to lock-in shall contain the inscription “non transferable” and the lock-in period and in case such specified securities are dematerialised, the issuer shall ensure that lock-in is recorded by the depository.
- (3) Where the specified securities which are subject to lock-in are partly paid-up and the amount called-up on such specified securities is less than the amount called-up on the specified securities issued to the public, the “lock-in” shall end only on the expiry of three years after such specified securities have become pari-passu with the specified securities issued to the public.

Lock-in of specified securities held by promoters.

In a public issue, the specified securities held by promoters shall be locked-in for the period stipulated hereunder:

- (a) minimum promoters' contribution including contribution made by alternative investment funds, referred to in proviso to clause (a) of sub-regulation (1) of regulation 32, shall be locked-in for a period of three years from the date of commencement of commercial production or date of allotment in the public issue, whichever is later;
- (b) promoters' holding in excess of minimum promoters' contribution shall be locked-in for a period of one year:

Provided that excess promoters' contribution as provided in proviso to clause (b) of regulation 34 shall not be subject to lock-in.

Explanation: For the purposes of this clause, the expression “date of commencement of commercial production” means the last date of the month in which commercial production in a manufacturing company is expected to commence as stated in the offer document.

Lock-in of specified securities held by persons other than promoters.

In case of an initial public offer, the entire pre-issue capital held by persons other than promoters shall be locked-in for a period of one year:

Provided that nothing contained in this regulation shall apply to:

- (a) equity shares allotted to employees under an employee stock option or employee stock purchase scheme of the issuer prior to the initial public offer, if the issuer has made full disclosures with respect to such options or scheme in accordance with Part A of Schedule VIII;
- (b) equity shares held by a venture capital fund or a foreign venture capital investor for a period of at least one year prior to the date of filing the draft prospectus with the Board:

Explanation: For the purpose of clause (b), in case such equity shares have resulted pursuant to conversion of fully paid-up compulsorily convertible securities, the holding period of such convertible securities as well as that of resultant equity shares together shall be considered for the purpose of calculation of one year period and convertible securities shall be deemed to be fully paid-up, if the entire consideration payable thereon has been paid and no further consideration is payable at the time of their conversion.

Lock-in of specified securities lent to stabilising agent under green shoe option.

The lock-in provisions of these regulations shall not apply with respect to the specified securities lent to stabilising agent for the purpose of green shoe option, during the period starting from the date of lending of such specified securities and ending on the date on which they are returned to the lender in terms of sub-regulation (5) or (6) of regulation 45:

Provided that the specified securities shall be locked-in for the remaining period from the date on which they are returned to the lender.

Pledge of locked-in specified securities.

Specified securities held by promoters and locked-in may be pledged with any scheduled commercial bank or public financial institution as collateral security for loan granted by such bank or institution, subject to the following:

- (a) if the specified securities are locked-in in terms of clause (a) of regulation 36, the loan has been granted by such bank or institution for the purpose of financing one or more of the objects of the issue and pledge of specified securities is one of the terms of sanction of the loan;
- (b) if the specified securities are locked-in in terms of clause (b) of regulation 36 and the pledge of specified securities is one of the terms of sanction of the loan.

Transferability of locked-in specified securities.

Subject to the provisions of Securities and Exchange Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1997, the specified securities held by promoters and locked in as per regulation 36 may be transferred to another promoter or any person of the promoter group or a new promoter or a person in control of the issuer and the specified securities held by persons other than promoters and locked-in as per regulation 37 may be transferred to any other person holding the specified securities which are locked-in along with the securities proposed to be transferred:

Provided that lock-in on such specified securities shall continue for the remaining period with the transferee and such transferee shall not be eligible to transfer them till the lock-in period stipulated in these regulations has expired.

PART V - MINIMUM OFFER TO PUBLIC, RESERVATIONS, ETC.

Minimum offer to public.

- (1) Subject to the provisions of sub-clause (b) of clause (2) of rule 19 of Securities Contracts (Regulations) Rules, 1957, the net offer to public:
 - (a) in case of an initial public offer, shall be at least ten per cent or twenty five per cent of the post-issue capital, as the case may be; and
 - (b) in case of a further public offer, shall be at least ten per cent or twenty five per cent of the issue size, as the case may be.
- (2) Nothing contained in sub-regulation (1) shall apply if the issuer is:
 - (a) a government company or statutory authority or corporation or any special purpose vehicle set up and controlled by any one or more of them, which is engaged in infrastructure sector;

- (b) an infrastructure company fulfilling the following conditions:
 - (i) its project has been appraised by one or more public financial institutions;
 - (ii) not less than fifty per cent. of the project cost is financed by one or more such institutions, jointly or severally, by way of loan or subscription to equity shares or a combination of both, irrespective of whether they appraise the project or not.

Explanation: For the purpose of this regulation:

- (I) The term “infrastructure company” means, an enterprise wholly engaged in the business of (i) developing or (ii) operating and maintaining or (iii) developing, operating and maintaining any infrastructure facility;
- (II) The term “infrastructure sector” includes the facilities or services as specified in Schedule X.

Reservation on competitive basis.

- (1) In case of an issue made through the book building process, the issuer may make reservation on competitive basis out of the issue size excluding promoters' contribution and net offer to public in favour of the following categories of persons:
 - (a) employees of the issuer including employees of the promoting companies in case of a new issuer;
 - (b) shareholders (other than promoters) of:
 - (i) listed promoting companies, in case of a new issuer; and
 - (ii) listed group companies, in case of an existing issuer:

Provided that if the promoting companies are designated financial institutions or state and central financial institutions, the shareholders of such promoting companies shall not be eligible for the reservation on competitive basis;

- (c) persons who, as on the date of filing the draft offer document with the Board, are associated with the issuer as depositors, bondholders or subscribers to services of the issuer making an initial public offer:

Provided that the issuer shall not make the reservation to the issue management team, syndicate members, their promoters, directors and employees and for the group or associate companies of the issue management team and syndicate members and their promoters, directors and employees;

- (2) In case of an issue made other than through the book building process, the issuer may make reservation on competitive basis out of the issue size excluding promoters' contribution and net offer to public in favour of the following categories of persons:
 - (a) employees; and in case of a new issuer, persons who are in the permanent and full time employment of the promoting companies excluding the promoters and an immediate relative of the promoter of such companies;
 - (b) shareholders (other than promoters) of:
 - (i) listed promoting companies, in the case of a new issuer; and
 - (ii) listed group companies, in the case of an existing issuer:

Provided that if the promoting companies are designated financial institutions or state and central financial institutions, the shareholders of such promoting companies shall not be eligible for the reservation on competitive basis.

- (3) In case of a further public offer (not being a composite issue), the issuer may make reservation on competitive basis out of the issue size excluding promoters' contribution and net offer to public in favour of retail individual shareholders of the issuer.
- (4) The reservation on competitive basis shall be subject to following conditions:
 - (a) the aggregate of reservations for employees shall not exceed five per cent of the post issue capital of the issuer;
 - (b) reservation for shareholders shall not exceed ten per cent of the issue size;
 - (c) reservation for persons who as on the date of filing the draft offer document with the Board, have business association as depositors, bondholders and subscribers to services with the issuer making an initial public offer shall not exceed five per cent of the issue size;
 - (d) no further application for subscription in the net offer to public category shall be entertained from any person (except an employee and retail individual shareholder) in favour of whom reservation on competitive basis is made;
 - (e) any unsubscribed portion in any reserved category may be added to any other reserved category and the unsubscribed portion, if any, after such inter-se adjustments among the reserved categories shall be added to the net offer to the public category;
 - (f) in case of under-subscription in the net offer to the public category, spill-over to the extent of under-subscription shall be permitted from the reserved category to the net public offer category;
 - (g) value of allotment to any employee in pursuance of reservation made under sub-regulations (1) or (2), as the case may be, shall not exceed two lakh rupees.
- (5) In the case of reserved categories, a single applicant in the reserved category may make an application for a number of specified securities which exceeds the reservation.

Explanation: For the purposes of this regulation:

- (I) The term "reservation on competitive basis" means reservation wherein specified securities are allotted in proportion of the number of specified securities applied for in respect of a particular reserved category to the number of specified securities reserved for that category;
- (II) The term "new issuer" means an issuer which has not completed twelve months of commercial operation and its audited operative results are not available.

Allocation in net offer to public.

- (1) No person shall make an application in the net offer to public category for that number of specified securities which exceeds the number of specified securities offered to public.
- (2) In an issue made through the book building process under sub-regulation (1) of regulation 26, the allocation in the net offer to public category shall be made as follows:
 - (a) not less than thirty five per cent to retail individual investors;
 - (b) not less than fifteen per cent to non-institutional investors;
 - (c) not more than fifty per cent to qualified institutional buyers, five per cent of which shall be allocated to mutual funds;

Provided that in addition to five per cent allocation available in terms of clause(c), mutual funds shall be eligible for allocation under the balance available for qualified institutional buyers;

(2A) In an issue made through the book building process under sub-regulation(2) of regulation 26, the allocation in the net offer to public category shall be as follows:

- (a) not more than ten per cent to retail individual investors;
- (b) not more than fifteen per cent to non-institutional investors;
- (c) not less than seventy five per cent to qualified institutional buyers, five per cent of which shall be allocated to mutual funds:

Provided that in addition to five per cent allocation available in terms of clause (c), mutual funds shall be eligible for allocation under the balance available for qualified institutional buyers.

- (3) In an issue made through the book building process, the issuer may allocate upto thirty per cent of the portion available for allocation to qualified institutional buyers to an anchor investor in accordance with the conditions specified in this regard in Schedule XI.
- (4) In an issue made other than through the book building process, allocation in the net offer to public category shall be made as follows:
 - (a) minimum fifty per cent to retail individual investors; and
 - (b) remaining to:
 - (i) individual applicants other than retail individual investors; and
 - (ii) other investors including corporate bodies or institutions, irrespective of the number of specified securities applied for;
 - (c) the unsubscribed portion in either of the categories specified in clauses (a) or (b) may be allocated to applicants in the other category.

Explanation: For the purpose of sub-regulation (4), if the retail individual investor category is entitled to more than fifty per cent. on proportionate basis, the retail individual investors shall be allocated that higher percentage.

Safety-net arrangement

An issuer may provide for a safety-net arrangement for the specified securities offered in any public issue in consultation with the merchant banker after ascertaining the financial capacity of the person offering the safety-net arrangement, subject to disclosures specified in this regard in Part A of Schedule VIII:

Provided that any such arrangement shall provide for an offer to purchase up to a maximum of one thousand specified securities per original resident retail individual allottee at the issue price within a period of six months from the last date of despatch of security certificates or credit of demat account.

Explanation: For the purpose of this regulation, the term "safety net arrangement" means an arrangement provided by the issuer under which a person offers to purchase specified securities from the original resident retail individual allottees at the issue price.

Period of Subscription

- (1) Except as otherwise provided in these regulations, a public issue shall be kept open for at least three working days but not more than ten working days including the days for which the issue is kept open in case of revision in price band.
- (2) In case the price band in a public issue made through the book building process is revised, the bidding (issue) period disclosed in the red herring prospectus shall be extended for a minimum period of three working days:

Provided that the total bidding period shall not exceed ten working days.

Price stabilisation through green shoe option.

- (1) An issuer making a public issue of specified securities may provide green shoe option for stabilising the post listing price of its specified securities, subject to the following:
 - (a) the issuer has been authorized, by a resolution passed in the general meeting of shareholders approving the public issue, to allot specified securities to the stabilizing agent, if required, on the expiry of the stabilisation period;
 - (b) the issuer has appointed a merchant banker or book runner, as the case may be, from amongst the merchant bankers appointed by the issuer as a stabilising agent, who shall be responsible for the price stabilisation process;
 - (c) prior to filing the draft offer document with the Board, the issuer and the stabilising agent have entered into an agreement, stating all the terms and conditions relating to the green shoe option including fees charged and expenses to be incurred by the stabilising agent for discharging his responsibilities;
 - (d) prior to filing the offer document with the Board, the stabilising agent has entered into an agreement with the promoters or pre-issue shareholders or both for borrowing specified securities from them in accordance with clause (g) of this sub-regulation, specifying therein the maximum number of specified securities that may be borrowed for the purpose of allotment or allocation of specified securities in excess of the issue size (hereinafter referred to as the "over- allotment"), which shall not be in excess of fifteen per cent of the issue size;
 - (e) subject to clause (d), the lead merchant banker or lead book runner, in consultation with the stabilising agent, shall determine the amount of specified securities to be over-allotted in the public issue;
 - (f) the draft and final offer documents shall contain all material disclosures about the green shoe option specified in this regard in Part A of Schedule VIII;
 - (g) in case of an initial public offer pre-issue shareholders and promoters and in case of a further public offer pre-issue shareholders holding more than five per cent specified securities and promoters, may lend specified securities to the extent of the proposed over-allotment;
 - (h) the specified securities borrowed shall be in dematerialised form and allocation of these securities shall be made pro-rata to all successful applicants.
- (2) For the purpose of stabilisation of post-listing price of the specified securities, the stabilising agent shall determine the relevant aspects including the timing of buying such securities, quantity to be bought and the price at which such securities are to be bought from the market.
- (3) The stabilisation process shall be available for a period not exceeding thirty days from the date on which trading permission is given by the recognised stock exchanges in respect of the specified securities allotted in the public issue.
- (4) The stabilising agent shall open a special account, distinct from the issue account, with a bank for crediting the monies received from the applicants against the over-allotment and a special account with a depository participant for crediting specified securities to be bought from the market during the stabilisation period out of the monies credited in the special bank account.
- (5) The specified securities bought from the market and credited in the special account with the depository participant shall be returned to the promoters or pre-issue shareholders immediately, in any case not later than two working days after the end of the stabilization period.
- (6) On expiry of the stabilisation period, if the stabilising agent has not been able to buy specified securities from the market to the extent of such securities over-allotted, the issuer shall allot specified securities at issue price in dematerialised form to the extent of the shortfall to the special account with the depository participant, within five days of the closure of the stabilisation period and such specified securities shall be returned to the promoters or pre-issue shareholders by the stabilising agent in lieu of the specified securities borrowed from them and the account with the depository participant shall be closed thereafter.

- (7) The issuer shall make a listing application in respect of the further specified securities allotted under sub-regulation (6), to all the recognised stock exchanges where the specified securities allotted in the public issue are listed and the provisions of Chapter VII shall not be applicable to such allotment.
- (8) The stabilising agent shall remit the monies with respect to the specified securities allotted under sub-regulation (6) to the issuer from the special bank account.
- (9) Any monies left in the special bank account after remittance of monies to the issuer under subregulation (8) and deduction of expenses incurred by the stabilising agent for the stabilisation process shall be transferred to the Investor Protection and Education Fund established by the Board and the special bank account shall be closed soon thereafter.
- (10) The stabilising agent shall submit a report to the stock exchange on a daily basis during the stabilisation period and a final report to the Board in the format specified in Schedule XII.
- (11) The stabilising agent shall maintain a register for a period of at least three years from the date of the end of the stabilisation period and such register shall contain the following particulars:
 - (a) The names of the promoters or pre-issue shareholders from whom the specified securities were borrowed and the number of specified securities borrowed from each of them;
 - (b) The price, date and time in respect of each transaction effected in the course of the stabilisation process; and
 - (c) The details of allotment made by the issuer on expiry of the stabilisation process.

Pre-issue advertisement for public issue

- (1) Subject to the provisions of section 66 of the Companies Act, 1956, the issuer shall, after registering the red herring prospectus (in case of a book built issue) or prospectus (in case of fixed price issue) with the Registrar of Companies, make a pre-issue advertisement in one English national daily newspaper with wide circulation, Hindi national daily newspaper with wide circulation and one regional language newspaper with wide circulation at the place where the registered office of the issuer is situated.
- (2) The pre-issue advertisement shall be in the format and shall contain the disclosures specified in Part A of Schedule XIII.

Minimum application value

- (1) The issuer shall stipulate in the offer document, the minimum application size in terms of number of specified securities which shall fall within the range of minimum application value of ten thousand rupees to fifteen thousand rupees.
- (2) The issuer shall invite applications in multiples of the minimum application value, an illustration whereof is given in Schedule XIV.
- (3) The minimum sum payable on application shall not be less than twenty five per cent of the issue price:

Provided that in case of an offer for sale, the issue price payable for each specified security shall be brought in at the time of application.

Explanation: For the purpose of this regulation, “minimum application value” shall be with reference to the issue price of the specified securities and not with reference to the amount payable on application.

Allotment procedure and basis of allotment

- (1) The allotment of specified securities to applicants other than retail individual investors and anchor investors shall be on proportionate basis within the specified investor categories and the number of securities allotted shall be rounded off to the nearest integer, subject to minimum allotment being equal to the minimum application size as determined and disclosed by the issuer:

Provided that value of specified securities allotted to any person in pursuance of reservation made under clause (a) of sub-regulation (1) or clause (a) of sub-regulation (2) of regulation 42, shall not exceed two lakh rupees.

- (1A) the allotment of specified securities to each retail individual investor shall not be less than the minimum bid lot, subject to availability of shares in retail individual investor category, and the remaining available shares, if any, shall be allotted on a proportionate basis.
- (2) The executive director or managing director of the designated stock exchange along with the post issue lead merchant bankers and registrars to the issue shall ensure that the basis of allotment is finalised in a fair and proper manner in accordance with the allotment procedure as specified in Schedule XV.

Utilisation of subscription money

The post-issue lead merchant banker shall ensure that moneys received in respect of the issue are released to the issuer in compliance with the provisions of section 73 of the Companies Act, 1956.

Annual Updation Of Offer Document

The disclosures made in the red herring prospectus while making an initial public offer, shall be updated on an annual basis by the issuer and shall be made publicly accessible in the manner specified by the Board.

RIGHTS ISSUE

SEBI regulations regarding rights issues

Applicability

These guidelines apply to the rights issues made by existing listed companies (i.e., companies whose equity capital is listed). Therefore, a company whose debentures/bonds are listed but not the equity (i.e., shares) will not be governed by these guidelines.

These guidelines are not applicable where the size of the issue is upto Rs.50 lakhs (including premium, if any).

Record Date.

- (1) A listed issuer making a rights issue shall announce a record date for the purpose of determining the shareholders eligible to apply for specified securities in the proposed rights issue.
- (2) The issuer shall not withdraw rights issue after announcement of the record date.
- (3) If the issuer withdraws the rights issue after announcing the record date, it shall not make an application for listing of any of its specified securities on any recognised stock exchange for a period of twelve months from the record date announced under sub-regulation (1):

Provided that the issuer may seek listing of its equity shares allotted pursuant to conversion or exchange of convertible securities issued prior to the announcement of the record date, on the recognised stock exchange where its securities are listed.

Restriction on rights issue.

- (1) No issuer shall make a rights issue of equity shares if it has outstanding fully or partly convertible debt instruments at the time of making rights issue, unless it has made reservation of equity shares of the same class in favour of the holders of such outstanding convertible debt instruments in proportion to the convertible part thereof.

- (2) The equity shares reserved for the holders of fully or partially convertible debt instruments shall be issued at the time of conversion of such convertible debt instruments on the same terms on which the equity shares offered in the rights issue were issued.

Letter of offer, abridged letter of offer, pricing and period of subscription.

- (1) The abridged letter of offer, along with application form, shall be dispatched through registered post or speed post to all the existing shareholders at least three days before the date of opening of the issue:

Provided that the letter of offer shall be given by the issuer or lead merchant banker to any existing shareholder who has made a request in this regard.

- (2) The shareholders who have not received the application form may apply in writing on a plain paper, along with the requisite application money.
- (3) The shareholders making application otherwise than on the application form shall not renounce their rights and shall not utilise the application form for any purpose including renunciation even if it is received subsequently.
- (4) Where any shareholder makes an application on application form as well as on plain paper, the application is liable to be rejected.
- (5) The issue price shall be decided before determining the record date which shall be determined in consultation with the designated stock exchange.
- (6) A rights issue shall be open for subscription for a minimum period of fifteen days and for a maximum period of thirty days.
- (7) The issuer shall give only one payment option out of the following to all the investors-
 - (a) part payment on application with balance money to be paid in calls; or
 - (b) full payment on application:

Provided that where the issuer has given the part payment option to investors, such issuer shall obtain the necessary approvals to facilitate the same.

Pre-Issue Advertisement for rights issue.

- (1) The issuer shall issue an advertisement for rights issue disclosing the following:
 - (a) the date of completion of despatch of abridged letter of offer and the application form;
 - (b) the centres other than registered office of the issuer where the shareholders or the persons entitled to receive the rights entitlements may obtain duplicate copies of the application forms in case they do not receive the application form within a reasonable time after opening of the rights issue;
 - (c) a statement that if the shareholders entitled to receive the rights entitlements have neither received the original application forms nor they are in a position to obtain the duplicate forms, they may make application in writing on a plain paper to subscribe to the rights issue;
 - (d) a format to enable the shareholders entitled to apply against their rights entitlements, to make the application on a plain paper specifying therein necessary particulars such as name, address, ratio of rights issue, issue price, number of equity shares held, ledger folio numbers, depository participant ID, client ID, number of equity shares entitled and applied for, additional shares if any, amount to be paid along with application, and particulars of cheque, etc. to be drawn in favour of the issuer's account;

- (e) a statement that the applications can be directly sent by the shareholders entitled to apply against rights entitlements through registered post together with the application moneys to the issuer's designated official at the address given in the advertisement;
 - (f) a statement to the effect that if the shareholder makes an application on plain paper and also on application form both his applications shall be liable to be rejected at the option of the issuer.
- (2) The advertisement shall be made in at least one English national daily newspaper with wide circulation, one Hindi national daily newspaper with wide circulation and one regional language daily newspaper with wide circulation at the place where registered office of the issuer is situated, at least three days before the date of opening of the issue.

Reservation for employees alongwith rights issue.

Subject to other applicable provision of these regulations the issuer may make reservation for employees alongwith rights issue subject to the condition that value of allotment to any employee shall not exceed two lakh rupees.

Utilisation of funds raised in rights issue.

The issuer shall utilise funds collected in rights issues after the finalisation of the basis of allotment.

Procedure for issue of right shares

For issue of right shares, a company is required to follow the procedure as laid down in section 81 of the Companies Act and also the regulations issued by SEBI in this regard.

The various steps involved for issue of rights shares may be noted as follows:

1. See that the rights issue is within the authorized share capital of the company. If not, steps should be taken to increase the same.
2. If the right shares are to be issued out of 'unclassified shares', take steps to amend the capital clause to classify 'unclassified shares' as equity/preference shares proposed to be issued.
3. Notify the stock exchange concerned the date of the Board meeting at which the rights issue is proposed to be considered.
4. Where the issue size exceeds ₹50 lakhs, take steps for the appointment of eligible merchant banker since, as per SEBI regulations, the appointment of a eligible merchant banker in case of rights issue of listed companies exceeding ₹50 lakhs is mandatory.
5. In case the issue is proposed to be made at a premium, fix the premium in consultation with the lead manager to the issue.
6. Appoint registrars and the underwriters. Appointment of underwriters, as per SEBI regulations, is, however, optional.
7. Note that there can be no preferential allotment in respect of the rights issue except in favour of employees provided the value of allotment does not exceed ₹2 lakh.
8. In consultation with the stock exchange(s), fix the record date for the proposed issue.
9. If it is proposed to offer shares to persons other than the existing members, a general meeting be convened and a special resolution or an ordinary resolution in lieu of special resolution or an ordinary resolution in lieu of special resolution passed for the purpose in terms of section 81(1A). It may be noted that the Central Government's approval is necessary in case of ordinary resolution.
10. If issue is to be offered to NRIs, file the requisite form and declarations with RBI. No prior approval of the RBI is required for offer of shares to NRIs on non-repatriation basis.
11. Forward six sets of letter of offer to the concerned stock exchange.

12. Note that in case the rights issue is withdrawn after the announcement of the record date, the regional stock exchange will not permit the making of application for listing of shares for a minimum period of 12 months from the record date.
13. Make arrangements with bankers for acceptance of share application forms.
14. Make arrangements for dispatch of letters of offer to shareholders containing details as per section 81 of the Companies Act, 1956 as well as SEBI regulations.
15. Ensure that the issue is kept open for a minimum period of 15 days but not beyond 30 days.
16. Open a specific bank account for keeping subscription received against rights issue. Note that the money deposited in this account cannot be utilized until and unless the company has received from the concerned regional stock exchange(s) approval for utilization of this money.
17. In case the company does not receive 90% of the issue amount including accepted devolvement from underwriters within 60 days from the date of the closure of the issue, the amount of subscription received shall be required to be refunded.
18. Prepare a scheme of allotment in consultation with stock exchange(s).
19. Convene Board meeting and make allotment of shares.
20. File return of allotment in Form No.2 with Registrar of Companies within 30 days of allotment.
21. Complete other formalities such as refund of excess application money, issue of allotment letters, making of entries in various registers, etc.
22. Forward a report in the prescribed form to the SEBI within 15 days of the date of finalization of allotment or within 15 days of refund or money in case of failure of issue.
23. Note that if the instrument of transfer of shares has been delivered to the company but the same has not been registered till the date of closure of register of members, keep in abeyance the offer of rights shares relating to the shares involved in the transfer [sec.206A] of the Companies Act, 1956.

8. Fully paid up	These are always fully paid up.	These may be fully/partly paid up.
9. Issue to Existing Shareholders	These are always issued to existing shareholders.	These may or may not be issued to existing shareholders

Restriction on bonus issue

Section 93. (1) No issuer shall make a bonus issue of equity shares if it has outstanding fully or partly convertible debt instruments at the time of making the bonus issue, unless it has made reservation of equity shares of the same class in favour of the holders of such outstanding convertible debt instruments in proportion to the convertible part thereof.

(2) The equity shares reserved for the holders of fully or partly convertible debt instruments shall be issued at the time of conversion of such convertible debt instruments on the same terms or same proportion on which the bonus shares were issued.

Completion of bonus issue

Section 95. (1) An issuer, announcing a bonus issue after the approval of its board of directors and not requiring shareholders' approval for capitalisation of profits or reserves for making the bonus issue, shall implement the bonus issue within fifteen days from the date of approval of the issue by its board of directors:

Provided that where the issuer is required to seek shareholders' approval for capitalisation of profits or reserves for making the bonus issue, the bonus issue shall be implemented within two months from the date of the meeting of its board of directors wherein the decision to announce the bonus issue was taken subject to shareholders' approval.

(2) Once the decision to make a bonus issue is announced, the issue cannot be withdrawn.

ISSUE OF SHARES AT A PREMIUM [SECTION 78]

Meaning of Issue of Shares at a Premium

Shares are said to be issued at a premium when they are issued at a price higher than the face value. The excess of issue price over the face value is called as the amount of 'Securities Premium' e.g. if a share of ₹ 10 is issued at ₹ 15, it is said that the share has been issued at a premium of ₹ 5.

Implied Power to Issue Shares at a Premium

A company may issue shares at a premium even though there is no express authority in its Articles since the company has an implied power to issue shares at a premium.

Transfer of Premium to Securities Premium Account

Where a company issues shares at a premium, whether for cash or otherwise, a sum equal to the aggregate amount or value of the premiums on those shares must be transferred to an account, to be called the Securities Premium Account. The word 'amount' refers to cash premium and the word 'Value' refers to a premium other than cash. Securities issued for consideration other than cash will be treated as having been issued at a premium if the value of the assets in consideration of which they are issued is more than the nominal value of the securities.

Purposes for which Securities Premium can be utilized

- (a) Though there are no restrictions in the Companies Act, 1956 on the issue of shares at a premium but there are restrictions on the application of Securities Premium. According to Section 78 of the Companies Act, 1956, the Securities Premium may be applied only for the following purposes:
 - (i) To issue fully paid bonus shares to the members;
 - (ii) To write off preliminary expenses of the company;
 - (iii) To write off the expenses of or the commission paid or discount allowed on any issue of shares or debentures of the company;
 - (iv) To provide for the premium payable on the redemption of any redeemable preference shares or of any debentures of the company;
- (b) According to Sec 77A, a company may buy back its own shares or other specified securities out of Securities Premium Account.
- (c) The use of Securities Premium Account for purposes other than those mentioned above requires the compliance of the provisions of the Act relating to reduction of share capital.

Notes:

- (i) The amount of securities premium may be demanded alongwith the application money/allotment money/call money.
- (ii) The amount of securities premium may be demanded either in lumpsum or in installments e.g. partly with application money and balance with allotment money,
- (iii) Even when the shares are issued at a premium for consideration other than cash, a sum equal to the amount of premium must be transferred to the 'Securities Premium Account'. [Head Henry & Co. Ltd. v. Ropher, (1951) 2 All. E.R. 994]
- (iv) There is no prohibition in the Act against issue of securities at different premiums. [C/T. v. Standard Vacuum OH Company, AIR (1966) SC 1963]

Issue of Shares at a Discount [Section 79]

Meaning of issue of Shares at a Discount

Shares are said to be issued at a discount when they are issued at a price lower than the face value.

The excess of the face value over the issue price is called as the amount of discount e.g. if a share of ₹ 10 is issued at ₹ 9, it is said that the share has been issued at a discount of Re 1.

Six Conditions for Issue of Shares at Discount [Section 79(2)]

According to Section 79 of the Companies Act 1956, a company may issue the shares at a discount only if the following conditions are fulfilled:

- (i) Class : The shares must belong to a class of shares already issued;
- (ii) Ordinary Resolution : The issue must be authorised by an ordinary resolution of the company;
- (iii) Sanction : The sanction of the “Central Government must be obtained;
- (iv) Maximum Rate of Discount : The resolution must specify the maximum rate of discount at which the shares are to be issued. No resolution shall be sanctioned by the ‘Central Government if the maximum rate of discount specified in the resolution exceeds 10% unless it is of opinion that a higher percentage of discount may be allowed in the special circumstances of the case;
- (v) Completion of 1 year : At least 1 year must have elapsed since the date on which the company was entitled to commence business;
- (vi) Time Limit of Issue: The issue must be made within 2 months from the date of receiving the sanction of the ‘Central Government or within such extended time as the ‘Central Government may allow.

Disclosure Requirements [Section 79(4)]

Every prospectus relating to the issue of the shares shall contain particulars of the discount allowed on the issue of the shares or of so much of that discount as has not been written off at the date of the issue of the prospectus.

Consequences of improper Issues of Shares at a Discount

1. Penalty for Default [Section 79(4)]: In case of default, the company, and its every officer in default, shall be punishable with fine upto ₹ 500.
2. Directors Liabilities: The directors render themselves liable to compensate the company to the extent of the amount of discount. [Hirsche v. Sims, [1894] A.C. 654].
3. Members Liability: Even the acceptor of shares, in such a case has to pay back to the company the amount of discount if he holds the shares [Re. Pitkin (James) & Co., [1916] 95 L.J. Ch. 318], This he would have to do if the conditions of Section 79 are not satisfied, despite the fact that he did not know the legal effect of his contract to take shares at a discount or that the memorandum or articles give the directors the power to issue shares at a discount [Welden v. Saffery, [1897] A.C. 229; Re Pitkin Supra]. But the allottee may avoid liability to take the shares if he applies on discovery of illegality of the discount allowed without delay, before commencement of the winding up of the company, to have his name removed as a shareholder provided he has not otherwise agreed to keep the shares [Re Midland Electric Co., [1889] 60 L.T. [1892] Bom. 7].

SEBI REGULATIONS FOR PREFERENTIAL ISSUE

Regulations for Preferential Issue not to apply in certain cases

- (1) The provisions of this regulations shall not apply where the preferential issue of equity shares is made:
 - (a) pursuant to conversion of loan or option attached to convertible debt instruments in terms of sub-sections (3) and (4) of sections 81 of the Companies Act, 1956;
 - (b) pursuant to a scheme approved by a High Court under section 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956;

- (c) in terms of the rehabilitation scheme approved by the Board of Industrial and Financial Reconstruction under the Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985:

Provided that the lock-in provisions of this Chapter shall apply to such preferential issue of equity Shares.

- (2) The provisions of this regulations relating to pricing and lock-in shall not apply to equity shares allotted to any financial institution within the meaning of sub-clauses (ia) and (ii) of clause (h) of section 2 of the Recovery of Debts due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993 (51 of 1993).
- (3) The provisions of regulation 73 and regulation 76 shall not apply to a preferential issue of equity shares and compulsorily convertible debt instruments, whether fully or partly, where the Board has granted relaxation to the issuer in terms of regulation 29A of the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1997, if adequate disclosures about the plan and process proposed to be followed for identifying the allottees are given in the explanatory statement to notice for the general meeting of shareholders.
- (4) The provisions of sub-regulation (2) of regulation 72 and sub-regulation (6) of regulation 78 shall not apply to a preferential issue of specified securities where the proposed allottee is a Mutual Fund registered registered with the Board or Insurance Company registered with Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority.

Relevant date.

For the purpose of this regulations, "relevant date" means:

- (a) in case of preferential issue of equity shares, the date thirty days prior to the date on which the meeting of shareholders is held to consider the proposed preferential issue:

Provided that in case of preferential issue of equity shares pursuant to a scheme approved under the Corporate Debt Restructuring framework of Reserve Bank of India, the date of approval of the Corporate Debt Restructuring Package shall be the relevant date.

- (b) in case of preferential issue of convertible securities, either the relevant date referred to in clause (a) of this regulation or a date thirty days prior to the date on which the holders of the convertible securities become entitled to apply for the equity shares.

Explanation: Where the relevant date falls on a weekend/holiday, the day preceding the weekend/holiday will be reckoned to be the relevant date.

Conditions for preferential issue.

- (1) A listed issuer may make a preferential issue of specified securities, if:
 - (a) a special resolution has been passed by its shareholders;
 - (b) all the equity shares, if any, held by the proposed allottees in the issuer are in dematerialised form;
 - (c) the issuer is in compliance with the conditions for continuous listing of equity shares as specified in the listing agreement with the recognised stock exchange where the equity shares of the issuer are listed;
 - (d) the issuer has obtained the Permanent Account Number of the proposed allottees.
- (2) The issuer shall not make preferential issue of specified securities to any person who has sold any equity shares of the issuer during the six months preceding the relevant date:

Provided that in respect of the preferential issue of equity shares and compulsorily convertible debt instruments, whether fully or partly, the Board may grant relaxation from the requirements of this sub-regulation, if the Board has granted relaxation in terms of regulation 29A of the Securities and Exchange

Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1997 to such preferential allotment.

Disclosures.

- (1) The issuer shall, in addition to the disclosures required under section 173 of the Companies Act, 1956 or any other applicable law, disclose the following in the explanatory statement to the notice for the general meeting proposed for passing special resolution:
 - (a) the objects of the preferential issue;
 - (b) the proposal of the promoters, directors or key management personnel of the issuer to subscribe to the offer;
 - (c) the shareholding pattern of the issuer before and after the preferential issue;
 - (d) the time within which the preferential issue shall be completed;
 - (e) the identity of the proposed allottees, the percentage of post preferential issue capital that may be held by them and change in control, if any, in the issuer consequent to the preferential issue;
 - (f) an undertaking that the issuer shall re-compute the price of the specified securities in terms of the provision of these regulations where it is required to do so;
 - (g) an undertaking that if the amount payable on account of the re-computation of price is not paid within the time stipulated in these regulations, the specified securities shall continue to be locked-in till the time such amount is paid by the allottees.
- (2) The issuer shall place a copy of the certificate of its statutory auditor before the general meeting of the shareholders, considering the proposed preferential issue, certifying that the issue is being made in accordance with the requirements of these regulations.
- (3) Where specified securities are issued on a preferential basis to promoters, their relatives, associates and related entities for consideration other than cash, the valuation of the assets in consideration for which the equity shares are issued shall be done by an independent qualified valuer, which shall be submitted to the recognised stock exchanges where the equity shares of the issuer are listed:

Provided that if the recognised stock exchange is not satisfied with the appropriateness of the valuation, it may get the valuation done by any other valuer and for this purpose it may obtain any information, as deemed necessary, from the issuer.
- (4) The special resolution shall specify the relevant date on the basis of which price of the equity shares to be allotted on conversion or exchange of convertible securities shall be calculated.

Explanation: For the purpose of sub-regulation (3), the term 'valuer' has the same meaning as is assigned to it under clause (r) of sub-regulation (1) of regulation 2 of the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Issue of Sweat Equity) Regulations, 2002.

Allotment pursuant to special resolution.

- (1) Allotment pursuant to the special resolution shall be completed within a period of fifteen days from the date of passing of such resolution:

Provided that where any application for exemption from the applicability of the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1997 or any approval or permission by any regulatory authority or the Central Government for allotment is pending, the period of fifteen days shall be counted from the date of order on such application or the date of approval or permission, as the case may be:

Provided further that where the Board has granted relaxation to the issuer in terms of regulation 29A of

SEBI (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1997, the preferential issue of equity shares and compulsorily convertible debt instruments, whether fully or partly, shall be made by it within such time as may be specified by the Board in its order granting the relaxation:

Provided further that requirement of allotment within fifteen days shall not apply to allotment of specified securities on preferential basis pursuant to a scheme of corporate debt restructuring as per the corporate debt restructuring framework specified by the Reserve Bank of India.

- (2) If the allotment of specified securities is not completed within fifteen days from the date of special resolution, a fresh special resolution shall be passed and the relevant date for determining the price of specified securities under this Chapter will be taken with reference to the date of latter special resolution.

Tenure of convertible securities.

The tenure of the convertible securities of the issuer shall not exceed eighteen months from the date of their allotment.

Pricing of equity shares.

- (1) If the equity shares of the issuer have been listed on a recognised stock exchange for a period of six months or more as on the relevant date, the equity shares shall be allotted at a price not less than higher of the following:
 - (a) The average of the weekly high and low of the closing prices of the related equity shares quoted on the recognised stock exchange during the twenty six weeks preceding the relevant date; or
 - (b) The average of the weekly high and low of the closing prices of the related equity shares quoted on a recognised stock exchange during the two weeks preceding the relevant date.
- (2) If the equity shares of the issuer have been listed on a recognised stock exchange for a period of less than twenty six weeks as on the relevant date, the equity shares shall be allotted at a price not less than the higher of the following:
 - (a) the price at which equity shares were issued by the issuer in its initial public offer or the value per share arrived at in a scheme of arrangement under sections 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956, pursuant to which the equity shares of the issuer were listed, as the case may be; or
 - (b) the average of the weekly high and low of the closing prices of the related equity shares quoted on the recognised stock exchange during the period shares have been listed preceding the relevant date; or
 - (c) the average of the weekly high and low of the closing prices of the related equity shares quoted on a recognised stock exchange during the two weeks preceding the relevant date.
- (3) Where the price of the equity shares is determined in terms of sub-regulation (2), such price shall be recomputed by the issuer on completion of twenty six weeks from the date of listing on a recognised stock exchange with reference to the average of the weekly high and low of the closing prices of the related equity shares quoted on the recognised stock exchange during these twenty six weeks and if such recomputed price is higher than the price paid on allotment, the difference shall be paid by the allottees to the issuer.
- (4) Any preferential issue of specified securities, to qualified institutional buyers not exceeding five in number, shall be made at a price not less than the average of the weekly high and low of the closing prices of the related equity shares quoted on a recognised stock exchange during the two weeks preceding the relevant date.

Explanation: For the purpose of this regulation, 'stock exchange' means any of the recognised stock exchanges in which the equity shares are listed and in which the highest trading volume in respect of the equity shares of the issuer has been recorded during the preceding six months prior to the relevant date.

Payment of consideration.

- (1) Full consideration of specified securities other than warrants issued under this Chapter shall be paid by the allottees at the time of allotment of such specified securities:

Provided that in case of a preferential issue of specified securities pursuant to a scheme of corporate debt restructuring as per the corporate debt restructuring framework specified by the Reserve Bank of India, the allottee may pay the consideration in terms of such scheme.

- (2) An amount equivalent to at least twenty five per cent of the consideration determined in terms of regulation 76 shall be paid against each warrant on the date of allotment of warrants.
- (3) The balance seventy five per cent. of the consideration shall be paid at the time of allotment of equity shares pursuant to exercise of option against each such warrant by the warrant holder.
- (4) In case the warrant holder does not exercise the option to take equity shares against any of the warrants held by him, the consideration paid in respect of such warrant in terms of sub-regulation (2) shall be forfeited by the issuer.

Lock-in of specified securities.

- (1) The specified securities allotted on preferential basis to promoter or promoter group and the equity shares allotted pursuant to exercise of options attached to warrants issued on preferential basis to promoter or promoter group, shall be locked-in for a period of three years from the date of allotment of the specified securities or equity shares allotted pursuant to exercise of the option attached to warrant, as the case may be:

Provided that not more than twenty per cent of the total capital of the issuer shall be locked-in for three years from the date of allotment:

Provided further that equity shares allotted in excess of the twenty per cent shall be locked-in for one year from the date of their allotment pursuant to exercise of options or otherwise, as the case may be.

- (2) The specified securities allotted on preferential basis to persons other than promoter and promoter group and the equity shares allotted pursuant to exercise of options attached to warrants issued on preferential basis to such persons shall be locked in for a period of one year from the date of their allotment.
- (3) The lock-in of equity shares allotted pursuant to conversion of convertible securities other than warrants, issued on preferential basis shall be reduced to the extent the convertible securities have already been locked-in.
- (4) The equity shares issued on preferential basis pursuant to a scheme of corporate debt restructuring as per the Corporate Debt Restructuring framework specified by the Reserve Bank of India shall be locked-in for a period of one year from the date of allotment:
Provided that partly paid up equity shares, if any, shall be locked-in from the date of allotment and the lock-in shall end on the expiry of one year from the date when such equity shares become fully paid up.
- (5) If the amount payable by the allottee, in case of re-calculation of price under sub-regulation (3) of regulation 76 is not paid till the expiry of lock-in period, the equity shares shall continue to be locked in till such amount is paid by the allottee.
- (6) The entire pre-preferential allotment shareholding of the allottees, if any, shall be locked-in from the relevant date upto a period of six months from the date of preferential allotment.

Explanation: For the purpose of this regulation:

- (I) The expression “total capital of the issuer” means:
 - (a) equity share capital issued by way of public issue or rights issue including equity shares issued pursuant to conversion of specified securities which are convertible; and
 - (b) specified securities issued on a preferential basis to promoter or promoter group.
- (II) (a) For the computation of twenty per cent. of the total capital of the issuer, the amount of minimum promoters’ contribution held and locked-in, in the past in terms of Securities and Exchange Board of India (Disclosure and Investor Protection) Guidelines, 2000 or these regulations shall be taken into account.
- (b) The minimum promoters’ contribution shall not again be put under fresh lock-in, even though it is considered for computing the requirement of twenty per cent of the total capital of the issuer, in case the said minimum promoters’ contribution is free of lock-in at the time of the preferential issue.

Transferability of locked-in specified securities and warrants issued on preferential basis.

Subject to the provisions of Securities and Exchange Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1997, specified securities held by promoters and locked-in in terms of sub-regulation (1) of regulation 78 may be transferred among promoters or promoter group or to a new promoter or persons in control of the issuer.

Provided that lock-in on such specified securities shall continue for the remaining period with the transferee.

PRIVATE PLACEMENTS

In recent years, the predictable phases of company development - and the accompanying stages of financing - have changed dramatically. During the “bull market years” of the late 1990s, many small private companies began to grow at accelerated rates and, with a strong IPO market as a driving force, entered the public arena rapidly to continue to further their growth. However, as the IPO market began to lose steam, companies looked for alternative sources of financing.

While an initial public offering is a suitable option for many private companies ready to make that significant jump, going public is not always the logical next step for others. Depending on the nature of a company’s business, along with its unique financial needs and goals, a private placement may make more sense.

A private placement is the sale of securities to a limited number of qualified private investors. While an IPO is the initial sale of shares to the general public, a typical private placement is offered only to institutional investors and accredited individuals and entities that meet certain eligibility requirements.

For companies, private placements can provide an infusion of cash more quickly and less expensively than a public offering. Private placements are also generally not subject to public disclosure obligations. They typically allow companies to have a great deal of control over the process - the company can decide how much to sell, at what price, and to whom. However, those decisions do require a tremendous amount of due diligence and careful deliberation.

For investors, securities purchased through a private placement typically fall into the realm of alternative assets - investments that often have a low correlation to public markets and offer essential diversification to portfolios dominated by traditional stocks and bonds. Private placements also may give investors more control of their private equity allocations. Unlike venture capital - which usually takes the form of funds raised by venture capital firms and invested in portfolios of private companies - investments through private placements are made on an individual basis.

Private Placement

The sale of securities to a relatively small number of select investors as a way of raising capital. Investors involved in private placements are usually large banks, mutual funds, insurance companies and pension funds. Private placement is the opposite of a public issue, in which securities are made available for sale on the open market.

Private placements are exempt from the registration requirements of the federal Securities Act of 1933 and public disclosure requirements as long as certain requirements are met. The sale of securities through private placements cannot involve any public offering, public solicitation, or advertising. In addition, private placements must comply with state laws and anti-fraud provisions of securities laws. Companies must disclose to potential investors all of the pertinent information needed to make a fully informed decision.

Securities sold through private placement securities can take different forms. Typically, they involve the sale of either debt or equity.

Private Placement - Benefits

One of the benefits of private placement securities is the relatively low cost of issuing the securities. Unlike a public offering, there is no need to involve brokers or underwriters in the sale of the options. Small businesses may also find this approach helpful in terms of maintaining confidentiality. Since the offering does not have to be registered with the same level of detail as a public offering, the business can offer investors the opportunity to remain anonymous to all but a few directly involved with the sale.

Private placements are good options for companies that need to generate capital but, for whatever reasons, aren't suitable for venture capital or a public offering. As noted previously, private placements can enable companies to raise capital more quickly and in a less costly manner than a public offering. A company may also wish to avoid the consuming task of meeting public disclosure obligations required when making a public offering.

While public offerings also impose minimum issue sizes, private placements generally involve smaller transactions than IPOs. The typical candidate for a private placement has established a proven track record of success and shown readiness to advance to the next stage of growth. The company should be a compelling investment opportunity.

Private companies considering private placements need to assess whether they possess certain crucial elements. The company should have several key positions filled with top-notch managers, particularly in sales. It should anticipate a strong future growth rate and potential exit strategy for investors.

Private Placements - Investors

Investments in private placements carry a high degree of risk for various reasons. Securities sold through private placements are not publicly traded and, therefore, are less liquid. Additionally, investors may receive restricted stock that may be subject to holding period requirements. Companies seeking private placement investments tend to be in earlier stages of development and have not yet been fully tested in the public marketplace.

Investing in private placements requires high risk tolerance, low liquidity concerns, and long-term commitments. Investors must be able to afford to lose their entire investment. For those reasons, these offerings may be made available only to certain institutional investors and high net worth individuals and entities. As with all alternative investments, investors must meet certain eligibility tests to qualify as purchasers. Currently, entities must have assets of at least $5 million (or all individual owners meet accredited investor tests). Individuals must have a net worth of more than $1 million or gross income for each of the last two years of at least $200,000 ($300,000 with spouse) with the expectation of the same income in the current year.

Investors should also be mindful that the company may require more capital in the future to continue growing, with no guarantee that it will be successful in securing it. But investors may reap huge rewards for the risks - most importantly, the potential for high returns. Also, because of the long timeframe, investments made now won't be affected by current market volatility.

Private Placements - Working Mechanism

A company seeking a private placement issues a Private Placement Memorandum, or PPM. The PPM details the company's financial situation and business plan, as well as any other pertinent information about the company and the offering. However, a great deal of preparation is required before the PPM is issued. The first step is to consult attorneys who specialize in private placements. They should oversee all of the paperwork included in the PPM to help to ensure that the company is meeting SEC and state requirements during the process.

Although potential investors will typically conduct independent research, companies should be careful about how they promote themselves in the PPM. Investors may try to bring suit against the issuer if they feel that the company failed to live up to representations made in the PPM.

An investment bank typically acts as an intermediary between the company issuing the PPM and potential investors. Once investors decide to invest, they complete a subscription agreement.

In today's increasingly varied business landscape, different company circumstances require different financing solutions. Private placements are opportunities for companies to generate capital and grow their businesses without going public, while offering investors early access to promising companies.

Both company owners and potential investors must devote a great deal of time and effort to successfully complete a private placement, but both also stand to gain considerably from this type of investment vehicle.

1.1.2. Sweat Equity, ESOP, ESPS and Shares with Differential Voting Rights

Issue of Sweat Equity [Section 79A]

Meaning of Issue of Sweat Equity

Sweat equity shares means equity shares issued by the company to employees or directors at a discount or for consideration other than cash for providing know-how or making available right in the nature of intellectual property rights or value additions, by whatever name called. (Explanation II to Section 79A)

Conditions for Issue of Sweat Equity

According to Section 79A(1), a company may issue sweat equity shares if the following conditions are fulfilled, namely:

- (a) Class the shares must belong to a class of shares already issued;
- (b) Special Resolution the issue must be authorised by a special resolution passed by the company in the general meeting;
- (c) Contents of Resolution the resolution must specify the number of shares, current market price, consideration, if any, and the class or classes of directors or employees to whom such equity shares are to be issued;
- (d) Completion of 1 year At least 1 year must have elapsed since the date on which the company was entitled to commence business;
- (e) As per SEBI Guidelines the sweat equity shares of a company whose equity shares are listed on a recognised stock exchange must be issued in accordance with the regulations made by the Securities and Exchange Board of India in this behalf:

Provided that in the case of a company whose equity shares are not listed on any recognised stock exchange, the sweat equity shares are issued in accordance with the guidelines as may be prescribed.

Meaning of Company for the Purpose of Section 79A

The expression “a company means the company incorporated, formed and registered under this Act and includes its subsidiary company incorporated in a country outside India”.

Applicability of Other Provisions

All the limitations, reiterations and provisions relating to equity shares shall be applicable to such sweat equity shares.

Effect of Sec. 79A

Sec. 79A applies irrespective of anything contained in Sec. 79.

Employees Stock Option Scheme (ESOS)

‘Employee stock option’ means the option given to the whole time directors, officers or employees of a company which gives such directors, officers or employees the benefit or right to purchase or subscribe at a future date, the securities offered by the company at a pre-determined price [Section 2(15A), added by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000]. The SEBI has issued guidelines for ESOS of listed companies. These guidelines are also applicable for Employee Stock Purchase Scheme (ESPS) which means a scheme under which the company offers shares to employee as part of public issue or otherwise.

SEBI Guidelines, in this regard, inter alia, provide as follows:

1. No ESOS shall be offered unless the disclosures, as specified in Schedule IV, are made by the company to the prospective option grantees and the company constitutes a Compensation Committee for administration and superintendence of the ESOS. Compensation committee shall be a committee of the Board of directors consisting of a majority of independent directors.
2. Issue of stock options at a discount to the market price would be regarded as another form of employee compensation and would be treated as such in the financial statements of the company regardless of the quantum of discount on the exercise price of the options.
3. Subject to the aforesaid financial treatment ESOS would not be covered by the pricing provisions of SEBI's preferential allotment regulations.
4. The issue of ESOS would be subject to approval by shareholders through a special resolution.
5. There would be no restriction on the maximum number of shares to be issued to a single employee. However, separate resolution in general meeting shall be obtained in case of; (a) employees being offered equal to or more than 1% shares during any one year; (b) grant of option to employees of subsidiary or holding company.
6. A minimum period of one year between grant of options and its vesting has been prescribed. After one year, the period during which the option can be exercised would be determined by the company. Company may specify a lock in period.

The employee shall not have right to receive any dividend or to vote or in any manner enjoy the benefits of a shareholder in respect of option granted to him, till shares are issued on exercise of option.

7. The operation of the ESOS scheme would have to be under the superintendence and directions of a Compensation Committee.
8. ESOS would be open to all permanent employees (whether working in India or abroad) and to the directors (whole-time or part-time) of the company but not to: (i) employee who is a promoter or belongs to the promoter group; (ii) a director who either by himself or through his relatives or through anybody corporate holds more than 10% of the outstanding equity shares of the company. With the specific approval of the shareholders, the Scheme would be allowed to cover the employees of a subsidiary or a holding company.

9. Directors report shall contain the following disclosures:

- (i) the total number of shares covered by the ESOS as approved by the shareholders;
- (ii) the pricing formula;
- (iii) options granted, options vested, options exercised, options forfeited, extinguishment or modification of options, money realized by exercise of options, total number of options in force, employee-wise details of options granted to senior managerial personnel and to any other employee who receive a grant in any one year of options amounting to 5% or more of options granted during that year.
- (iv) fully diluted earnings per share (EPS) computed in accordance with international accounting standards.

10. Company may vary the terms of ESOS by passing a special resolution provided variation:

- (i) relates to options not yet exercised;
- (ii) is not prejudicial to the interests of option holders.

11. Option granted to an employee shall not be transferable to any person.

12. Options granted cannot be pledged, hypothecated, mortgaged or otherwise alienated in any other manner.

13. In the event of death, options granted to an employee shall vest in the legal successor/nominee.

14. In case of permanent incapacity, all options granted shall vest in him as on the date of incapacitation.

15. Auditor to certify that the scheme has been implemented as per guidelines. Certificate of the auditor to be placed at AGM.

16. By virtue of the powers under Section 11 read with Section 11A of the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act, 1992, SEBI has made amendments to ESOS/ESPS guidelines and Listing Agreement as per Circular CIC/CFD/DIL/3/2013.

As per clause 22B, no ESOS/ESPS of listed companies shall involve acquisition of securities from the secondary market.

Further to this circular, listed entities are required to do the following:

- 1. If their ESOS/ ESPS involves dealing of securities in secondary market, such companies will be required to inform the details of their schemes to the Stock Exchanges within 30 days from date of this circular, in the format provided in Annexure II (ie., 17.02.2013).
- 2. Also, they shall align their ESOS / ESPS with the new rule on or before 30.06.2013

EMPLOYEE STOCK PURCHASE SCHEME [ESPS]

A. Eligibility to participate in ESPS

- 1. An employee shall be eligible to participate in ESPS of the company.
- 2. An employee who is a promoter or belongs to the promoter group shall not be eligible to participate in the ESPS.
- 3. A director who either by himself or through his relatives or through any body corporate, directly or indirectly holds more than 10% of the outstanding equity shares of the company shall not be eligible to participate in the ESPS.

B. Shareholder Approval

1. No ESPS can be offered to employees of a company unless the shareholders of the company approve ESPS by passing a special resolution in the general meeting.
2. The explanatory statement to the notice shall specify:
 - (a) the price of the share and also the number of shares to be offered to each employee.
 - (b) the appraisal process for determining the eligibility of employee for ESPS.
3. The number of shares offered may be different for different categories of employees.
4. The special resolution shall state that the company shall conform to the specified accounting policies.

C. Pricing and Lock-in

1. The company shall have the freedom to determine price of shares to be issued under an ESPS.
2. Shares issued under an ESPS shall be locked-in for a minimum period of one year from the date of allotment.
3. If the ESPS is part of a public issue and the shares are issued to employees at the same price as in the public issue, the shares issued to employees pursuant to ESPS shall not be subject to any lock-in.

D. Disclosure and Accounting Policies

The Directors' Report or Annexure thereto shall contain, inter alia, the following disclosures:

- (a) the details of the number of shares issued in ESPS;
- (b) the price at which such shares are issued;
- (c) employee-wise details of the shares issued to;
 - (i) senior managerial personnel;
 - (ii) any other employee who is issued shares in any one year amounting to 5% or more shares issued during that year;
 - (iii) identified employees who were issued shares during any one year equal to or exceeding 1% of the issued capital of the company at the time of issuance;
- (d) diluted earnings per share (EPS) pursuant to issuance of shares under ESPS; and
- (e) consideration received against the issuance of shares.

E. Preferential Allotment

Nothing in these guidelines shall apply to shares issued to employees in compliance with the SEBI Guidelines on Preferential Allotment.

F. Listing

In case of listed companies, the shares arising pursuant to an ESOS and shares issued under an ESPS, shall be eligible for listing in any recognized stock exchange only if such scheme (i.e., ESOS or ESPS) is in accordance with these Guidelines.

Note- By virtue of the powers under Section 11 read with Section 11A of the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act, 1992, SEBI has made amendments to ESOS/ESPS guidelines and Listing Agreement as per Circular CIC/CFD/DIL/3/2013.

As per clause 22B, no ESOS/ESPS of listed companies shall involve acquisition of securities from the secondary market.

Further to this circular, listed entities are required to do the following:

1. If their ESOS/ ESPS involves dealing of securities in secondary market, such companies will be required to inform the details of their schemes to the Stock Exchanges within 30 days from date of this circular, in the format provided in Annexure II (ie., 17.02.2013).
2. Also, they shall align their ESOS / ESPS with the new rule on or before 30.06.2013

- (e) Procedural requirements: The register of member shall contain the particulars of differential rights to which the holder of such shares is entitled to.

1.3.3 Preference Shares – various provisions

PREFERENCE SHARE - Meaning

According to Section 85 of the Companies Act, 1956, a preference share is one which carries the following two rights:

1. a right to receive dividend at a stipulated rate or of a fixed amount before any dividend is paid on equity shares; and
2. a right to receive repayment of capital on winding up of the company, before the capital of equity shareholders is returned.

Issue and Redemption of Preference Shares

There must be specific provisions in the articles of association empowering the board to issue preference shares, as well as setting out the terms and conditions subject to which such preference shares can be issued. The legal framework for this is set out in Section 80 of the act. The maximum period for which preference shares can be issued shall not exceed 20 years (according to Section 80A). This means that preference shares must be redeemed within a period of 20 years from the date of issue and companies are prohibited from issuing irredeemable preference shares. It is also necessary to ensure that the authorized capital of the company provides for issue of preference shares. If not, Clause V of the memorandum of association (ie, the capital clause) must be amended before issuing preference shares

The articles may set down terms and conditions subject to which preference shares can be issued. Such conditions should include the following;

- Such preference shares shall be redeemed out of the profits of the company which are otherwise available for dividends or out of the proceeds of a fresh share issue made specifically for redemption.
- No such shares shall be redeemed unless they are fully paid.
- If payable on redemption, the premium shall be provided out of the company's profits or the company's security premium account before the shares are redeemed.
- Where shares are redeemed otherwise than from the proceeds of a fresh issue, the company is required to transfer, out of the profits of the company which would otherwise be available for dividends, to a capital redemption reserve account a sum equal to the nominal amount of shares redeemed. The reserve account is treated as if it were paid-up share capital. This is based on the fundamental principle that the capital of the company must be maintained intact. The subscription made to the capital of a company cannot be taken back, but can be converted into liquid cash by the sale of relative shares in the market. For the same reason, the redemption of preference shares must be done only out of the company's profits. Such redemption is an exception to the prohibition contained in Section 77 of the act as the company cannot buy its own shares.
- The articles may also provide for other terms and methods of redeeming preference shares. This may include:
 - whether the preference shares are convertible into equity shares of the company;
 - the timing of conversion or redemption, or whether this is at the option of the company;
 - whether the dividend payable is cumulative or non-cumulative; and
 - whether redemption will be made in installments by drawing lots or in full as the board may decide in accordance with the articles.

In the case of cumulative preference shares, the fixed dividend accumulates to the credit of the preference shareholder.

Redemption of Redeemable Preference Shares [Section 80]

Which Company can Issue Redeemable Preference Shares?

A Company limited by shares may, if authorised by its Articles, issue redeemable preference shares.

Can a Company Issue Irredeemable Preference Shares after the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988?

No Company limited by shares shall issue irredeemable preference shares. [Section 80(5A)]

What can be the Maximum Period of Redemption?

After the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988, no company limited by shares shall issue any preference share which is redeemable after the expiry of a period of 20 years from the date of issue. [Section 80(5A)]

What are the Restrictions on the Redemption of Redeemable Preference Shares ?

According to Section 80, the redemption of preference shares is subject to the following restrictions:

- (i) Fully paid—Such shares can be redeemed only if they are fully paid,
- (ii) Two Sources of Redeeming such shares

Such shares can be redeemed only out of the following two sources:

- (a) Divisible Profits i.e. Profit available for distribution as dividend. Some of the examples of Divisible Profits are as under:

1. General Reserve	2. Reserve Fund
3. Dividend Equalisation Fund	4. Insurance Fund
5. Workman's Compensation Fund	6. Workman's Accident Fund
7. Profit and Loss Account

- (b) Proceeds of fresh issue of shares (whether Equity or Preference) made for the purpose of redemption.

What constitute the proceeds is explained as follows:

In case of fresh issue of shares	What constitute the proceeds.....
(a) At Par	Nominal value of shares issued
(b) At Premium	Nominal value of shares issued
(c) At Discount	Net amount received (i.e., Nominal Value less discount on issue of shares)

Note: These shares may be Equity shares or Preference shares.

- (iii) Two Sources of providing Premium if any, payable on redemption.

The premium, if any, payable on redemption must be provided for out of any of the following two sources:

- (a) Securities Premium Account
- (b) Profits (whether divisible or not) e.g. Capital Reserve

- (iv) Transfer to CRR A/c—Where any such shares are redeemed out of divisible profits, an amount equivalent to the nominal value of the shares so redeemed, must be transferred out of divisible profits to Capital Redemption Reserve Account.

- (v) Utilization of CRR—The Capital Redemption Reserve Account may be applied by the company in issuing fully paid bonus shares to the members of the company.

- (vi) The provision of this Act relating to the reduction of share capital of a company shall apply to Capital Redemption Reserve Account as if it is paid up share capital of the company. [Section 80(1)(d)]

Does the Redemption of Preference Shares Constitute Reduction of Authorised Share Capital?

The redemption of preference shares by a company shall not be taken as reducing the amount of its authorised share capital. [Section 80(3)]

Has Company Power to Issue New Shares?

Where in pursuance of this section, a company has redeemed or is about to redeem any preference shares, it shall have power to issue shares upto the nominal amount of the shares redeemed or to be redeemed as if these shares have never been issued. [Section 80(4)]

Does the Issue of New Shares Constitute an Increase of Authorised Share Capital?

For the purpose of calculating the fees payable u/s 611, the share capital shall not be deemed to be increased by the issue of new shares before the redemption of old shares, if the old shares are redeemed within 1 month after the issue of the new shares. [Section 80(4)]

Penalties for Contravention

If a company fails to comply with the provisions of Section 80, the Company and every officer of the company who is in default shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ₹ 10,000. [Section 80(6)]

1.3.4. Share Capital – alteration, reduction, consolidation, conversion, sub-division, increase, forfeiture, cancellation and surrender of shares

Alteration of Share Capital Clause [Sec. 94 to sec. 97]

The provisions relating to the alteration of Share Capital are given below:

- 1. Authority in Articles: A limited company having a share capital may alter the Capital Clause of its memorandum only if it is authorised by its articles of association to do so. [Section 94(1)]
- 2. Manner of Alteration: A company may alter the Capital Clause in the following manner:
 - (a) by increasing its nominal share capital by issue of new shares; [e.g. from 1 crore to 5 crore]
 - (b) by consolidating the existing shares into shares of larger amount than its existing shares; [e.g. Conversion of Shares of ₹ 10 each into shares of ₹ 100 each]
 - (c) by Converting fully paid shares into stock or vice versa;
 - (d) by sub-dividing the existing shares into shares of smaller amount than its existing shares; [e.g. Conversion of shares of ₹ 100 each into shares of ₹ 10 each]
 - (e) by cancelling its unissued shares.

Note: A cancellation of shares under Section 94 shall not be deemed to a reduction of share capital within the meaning of the Act.

- 3. Ordinary Resolution: An ordinary resolution is required to be passed at its general meeting. [Section 9(2)]
- 4. Notice to Registrar within 30 days: A notice specifying alteration made must be given to the Registrar within 30 days of alteration. [Sections 95(1) and 97(1)]
- 5. Duty of Registrar: The Registrar shall make the necessary alteration in the memorandum or articles or both. [Section 95(2)]
- 6. Consequences of Default: If default is made in filing the notice as aforesaid, the company and every officer in default must be punishable with the fine upto ₹ 500 for every day during which the default continues. [Sections 95(3) and 97(3)]

- 7. Inapplicability of Provisions to Stock: Where a company has converted any of its shares into stock, such provisions of the Act as are applicable to shares shall cease to apply to such shares which have been converted into stock. [Section 96]
- 8. Notice of Increase: Notice of increase in authorised capital or number of members beyond registered number in case of a company not limited by shares must be given to the Registrar. [Section 97]

Note: Notice of increase must be given to the registrar even when the new shares may not have been issued to any shareholder. [Mahalaxmi Mills Co. Ltd. v. State, (1969) Comp. Case 342]

Increase of Share Capital

Sec. 94A. Share capital to stand increased where an order is made under section 81(4):

- (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Companies Act, where the Central Government has, by an order made under sub-section (4) of section 81, directed that any debenture or loan or any part thereof shall be converted into shares in a company, the conditions contained in the memorandum of such company shall, where such order has the effect of increasing the nominal share capital of the company, stand altered and the nominal share capital of such company shall stand increased by an amount equal to the amount of the value of the shares into which such debentures or loans or part thereof has been converted.
- (2) Where, in pursuance of an option attached to debentures issued or loans raised by the company, any public financial institution proposes to convert such debentures or loans into shares in the company, the Central Government may, on the application of such public financial institution direct that the conditions contained in the memorandum of such company shall stand altered and the nominal share capital of such company shall stand increased by an amount equal to the amount of the value of the shares into which such debentures or loans or part thereof has been converted.
- (3) Where the memorandum of a company becomes altered, whether by reason of an order made by the Central Government under sub-section (1) of section 81 or sub-section (2) of this section, the Central Government shall send a copy of such order to the Registrar and also to the company and on receipt of such order, the company shall file in the prescribed form, within thirty days from the date of such receipt, a return to the Registrar with regard to the increase of share capital and the Registrar shall, on receipt of such order and return, carry out the necessary alterations in the memorandum of the company.

Sec.97. Notice of Increase of Share Capital or of Members:

- (1) Where a company having a share capital, whether its shares have or have not been converted into stock, has increased its share capital beyond the authorised capital, and where a company, not being a company limited by shares, has increased the number of its members beyond the registered number, it shall file with the Registrar, notice of the increase of capital or of members within thirty days after the passing of the resolution authorising the increase ; and the Registrar shall record the increase and also make any alterations which may be necessary in the company's memorandum or articles or both.
- (2) The notice to be given as aforesaid shall include particulars of the classes of shares affected and the conditions, if any, subject to which the new shares have been or are to be issued.
- (3) If default is made in complying with this section, the company, and every officer of the company who is in default, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees for every day during which the default continues.

Procedure for increasing Share Capital

The following procedure has to be followed by a limited company having a share capital, for increasing its authorised share capital:

1. The company has to make sure that its articles of association contain a provision authorising it to increase its authorised share capital. If there is no such provision then the company has to take steps for alteration of its articles of association in accordance with the provisions of section 31 of the Companies Act, 1956, so as to provide for increase in the share capital of the company before increasing its authorised share capital.
2. Issue notice in accordance with the provisions of Section 286 of the Act for convening a Board meeting.
3. Hold the meeting—
 - (i) to decide about the increase in the authorised share capital of the company;
 - (ii) to fix time, date and venue for holding general meeting of the company to pass an ordinary resolution for increasing the authorized share capital of the company [Refer Section 94(2)];
 - (iii) to approve notice, agenda and explanatory statement to be annexed to the notice of the general meeting as per Section 173(2) of the Act;
 - (iv) to authorise the company secretary to issue, on behalf of the Board, notice of the general meeting as approved by the Board.
4. Soon after the conclusion of the Board meeting, send to the stock exchanges, where the securities of the company are listed, particulars of the proposed increase in the authorised share capital of the company.
5. Issue notice of the general meeting to all members, directors and the auditors of the company.
6. In case of a listed company forward three copies of the notice of the general meeting to the concerned stock exchanges as per the Listing Agreement.
7. Hold the general meeting and pass ordinary/special resolution the resolution for increasing the authorised share capital of the company [Refer Section 94(2)];
8. Forward a copy of the proceedings of the general meeting to the concerned stock exchange as per the Listing Agreement.
9. File with the Registrar within thirty days of passing of the resolution, if it is a special resolution, e-form 23 with a certified true copy of the special resolution passed at the general meeting along with a copy of the explanatory statement annexed to the notice of the general meeting, copy of altered Memorandum of Association and Articles of Association, and the prescribed filing fee.
10. File with ROC, e-form 5 along with the registration fee on increased authorised capital as per rates prescribed under Schedule X to the Act within 30 days of the passing of the resolution.

The mandatory attachments along with e-form 5 are:

- (a) Altered memorandum of association
- (b) Altered articles of association
- (c) Proof of receipt of Central Government order, if any for increase of authorized share capital.

Note:

- Stamp duty on e-Form 1, Memorandum of Association (MOA) and Articles of Association (AOA) can be paid electronically through MCA portal and in such case submission of physical copies of the uploaded e-Form 1, MoA and AoA to the office of the ROC is not required.

- Payment of stamp duty electronically through MCA portal is mandatory in respect of the States which have authorized the Central Government to collect stamp duty on their behalf. In respect of the States from whom the authorization is yet to be received, the company will continue to pay stamp duty outside the MCA portal. List of states/union territories for which stamp duty cannot be paid electronically is available on the website of MCA.
 - In case stamp duty is not paid electronically through MCA portal, it is required to deliver simultaneously the original stamped physical copies of the uploaded e-Form 1, MoA and AoA along with a copy of challan/receipt in the concerned office of RoC failing which such e-Form shall be put into "Waiting for user clarification" in term of Regulation 17 of the Companies Regulations, 1956
 - Refund of stamp duty, if any, will be processed by the respective state or union territory government in accordance with the rules and procedures as per the state or union territory Stamp Act.
11. In the case of a listed company, forward six copies (one of them certified) of the amendment to the memorandum to all the stock exchanges, where the securities of the company are listed.
 12. Alter the capital clause in all the copies of the memorandum and articles of association of the company lying in the office of the company so that no unaltered copy thereof be issued to any person.

FORFEITURE OF SHARES

Meaning of Forfeiture of Shares

Forfeiture of shares is compulsory termination of membership of a member and confiscation of his shares as a penalty for non-payment of a call or other sum due on shares.

Power to Forfeit Shares in Articles of Association

Power to forfeit the shares can be exercised only if the Articles expressly so provide. Such power must be exercised bona fide (i.e., in good faith) and for the benefit of the company. It must not be collusive or fraudulent. Such power should not be exercised to expel a member or relieve a friend or relative from liability. Such power must be exercised, strictly according to the procedure stated in the Articles.

Grounds for Forfeiture of Shares in Articles of Association

The Articles may provide for forfeiture of shares not only for non-payment of call but also for other grounds say non-compliance of any other arrangement according to the prescribed condition. But such grounds must not be opposed to statute or public policy. [Calcutta Stock Exchange v. S.N. Nandy & Co., (1950) (Cal)]

In Naresh Chander Sanyal v. The Calcutta Stock Exchange, (1971) (SC), where the Articles provide for forfeiture if a member failed to carry out the arrangement according to the prescribed conditions. The forfeiture was held to be valid.

Procedure for a Valid Forfeiture

Regulations 29,30,31 and 34 of Table A of Schedule I of the Companies Act, 1956 provides for the procedure to be followed for forfeiture:

1. As per Articles: Power of forfeiture must be exercised only on the basis of various grounds specified in Articles.
2. Notice: Notice must be served upon the defaulting member. Such notice must—
 - (a) require the member to pay unpaid call together with an accrued interest (if any)
 - (b) mention a day at least 14 days ahead from the date of service of the notice on or before which the payment is required to be made.

- (c) state that if the payment is not made on or before the date mentioned in the notice, the shares in respect of which call was made would be liable to be forfeited.

Note: A notice is deemed to be served if sent by registered post with acknowledgement due (A.D.) at the registered address of the members. But where a notice, though sent, came back unserved, the company must make enquiry at the proper address of the member whose shares are to be forfeited.

- 3. Board's Resolution: The Board of directors must pass a resolution before actual forfeiture is exercised.

Effects of Forfeiture

1. On forfeiture of shares, member ceases to be a member of the company.
2. Liability of Ex-member

If the Company goes into liquidation	Liability of Ex-Members
(a) Within 1 year of forfeiture	He may be put on 'B' list of contributories
(b) After 1 year but within 3 years of forfeiture	He may be held liable as an ordinary debtor but not as a contributor.

3. Reduction of Capital Forfeiture of shares results in reduction of capital unless the shares are reissued.
4. Forfeited shares become the property of the company.
5. The annual return must specify the total number of shares forfeited [Section 159]

Re-issue of Forfeited Shares

1. The forfeited shares may be reissued in accordance with the provision of Articles.
2. The reissue does not amount to allotment. It is merely a sale of forfeited shares. Hence, no return is to be filed in respect of reissue of forfeited shares.
3. Re-issue price cannot be less than the amount unpaid on those shares.
4. Profit on reissue of partly paid up forfeited shares belong to the company and not to the defaulter.
5. Profit on re-issue of fully paid up forfeited shares may be refunded to the defaulter. [Naresh Chandra Sanyal v. The Calcutta Stock Exchange]

STOCK

Meaning of Stock

"Stock" is an aggregate of fully paid shares which have been legally consolidated. The consolidated amount is divisible into fractions of any amount, regardless of the nominal value of the shares that have been consolidated. It thus represents a part of the fully paid capital of the company.

Conditions for Conversion of Share into Stock [Sec. 94(1)(c)]

- (a) A company must be limited by shares.
- (b) Articles must authorise the conversion of share into stock.
- (c) Ordinary resolution must be passed in a general meeting,
- (d) Shares must be fully paid up.
- (e) The notice of conversion must be given to the Registrar within 30 days of the conversion.

Note: All the provisions which are applicable to shares only, shall cease to apply as to so much of share capital as is converted into stock. [Sec. 96]

Reconversion of Stock into Shares

- (1) A limited company that has converted paid-up shares into stock (before the repeal by this Act of the power to do so) may reconvert that stock into paid-up shares of any nominal value.
- (2) A company may exercise the power conferred by this section only if its members have passed an ordinary resolution authorising it to do so.
- (3) A resolution under subsection (2) may authorise a company to exercise the power conferred by this section—
 - (a) on more than one occasion;
 - (b) at a specified time or in specified circumstances.

Notice to registrar of reconversion of stock into shares

- (1) If a company exercises a power conferred by section 620 (reconversion of stock into shares) it must within one month after doing so give notice to the registrar, specifying the stock affected.
- (2) The notice must be accompanied by a statement of capital.
- (3) The statement of capital must state with respect to the company's share capital immediately following the exercise of the power—
 - (a) the total number of shares of the company,
 - (b) the aggregate nominal value of those shares,
 - (c) for each class of shares—
 - (i) prescribed particulars of the rights attached to the shares,
 - (ii) the total number of shares of that class, and
 - (iii) the aggregate nominal value of shares of that class, and
 - (d) the amount paid up and the amount (if any) unpaid on each share (whether on account of the nominal value of the share or by way of premium).
- (4) If default is made in complying with this section, an offence is committed by—
 - (a) the company, and
 - (b) every officer of the company who is in default.
- (5) A person guilty of an offence under this section is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale and, for continued contravention, a daily default fine not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale.

Sub-Division or Consolidation of Shares

- (1) A limited company having a share capital may—
 - (a) sub-divide its shares, or any of them, into shares of a smaller nominal amount than its existing shares, or
 - (b) consolidate and divide all or any of its share capital into shares of a larger nominal amount than its existing shares.
- (2) In any sub-division, consolidation or division of shares under this section, the proportion between the amount paid and the amount (if any) unpaid on each resulting share must be the same as it was in the case of the share from which that share is derived.

- (3) A company may exercise a power conferred by this section only if its members have passed a resolution authorising it to do so.
- (4) A resolution under subsection (3) may authorise a company—
 - (a) to exercise more than one of the powers conferred by this section;
 - (b) to exercise a power on more than one occasion;
 - (c) to exercise a power at a specified time or in specified circumstances.
- (5) The company's articles may exclude or restrict the exercise of any power conferred by this section.

Notice to registrar of sub-division or consolidation

- (1) If a company exercises the power conferred by section 618 (sub-division or consolidation of shares) it must within one month after doing so give notice to the registrar, specifying the shares affected.
- (2) The notice must be accompanied by a statement of capital.
- (3) The statement of capital must state with respect to the company's share capital immediately following the exercise of the power—
 - (a) the total number of shares of the company,
 - (b) the aggregate nominal value of those shares,
 - (c) for each class of shares—
 - (i) prescribed particulars of the rights attached to the shares,
 - (ii) the total number of shares of that class, and
 - (iii) the aggregate nominal value of shares of that class, and
 - (d) the amount paid up and the amount (if any) unpaid on each share (whether on account of the nominal value of the share or by way of premium).
- (4) If default is made in complying with this section, an offence is committed by—
 - (a) the company, and
 - (b) every officer of the company who is in default.
- (5) A person guilty of an offence under this section is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale and, for continued contravention, a daily default fine not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale.

Cancellation of Shares

According to clause (e) of Sub-section (1) of Section 94 of the Companies Act, 1956, a limited company having a share capital may, if so authorised by its articles, cancel its shares which, at the date of the passing of the resolution in that behalf, have not been taken or agreed to be taken by any person, and diminish the amount of its share capital by the amount of the shares so cancelled.

Sub-section (2) of Section 94 of the section lays down that the powers conferred by this section shall be exercised by the company in general meeting and shall not require confirmation by court.

A cancellation of shares in pursuance of this section shall not be deemed to be a reduction share capital within the meaning of the Companies Act. Infact, this is known as diminution of share capital. [Refer Section 94(3)].

Here the cancellation of shares means cancellation of shares of a particular unissued class of shares and not the paid up share capital.

Section 95(1) of the Act makes it obligatory on the part of a limited company having share capital, which has cancelled any share capital, to give notice thereof to the Registrar, within thirty days of the passing of the resolution, specifying the shares cancelled and the Registrar shall record the same in the memorandum of the company. Sub-section (2) of this section says that the Registrar shall thereupon record the notice, and make any alterations which may be necessary in the company's memorandum or articles or both.

Surrender of Shares

Surrender of shares is voluntary return of shares for the purpose of cancellation.

Power to accept Surrender of Shares In Articles

Power to accept the surrender of shares can be exercised only if the Articles expressly so provide.

Condition for a Valid Surrender of Shares

Surrender of shares in accordance with Articles is valid—

- (a) in case of partly paid up shares if it is accepted to avoid the formalities for a valid forfeiture only. [Bellerby v. Rowland & Marwood's Steamship & Co. Ltd. (1902)]
- (b) in case of fully paid up shares, if it is accepted in exchange of new shares of the same nominal value. [Rowellv, John Rowell & Sons Ltd. (1912)]

Invalid Surrender of Shares

The surrender of shares is invalid if—

- (a) it involves reduction of share capital
- (b) it amounts to a purchase by the company of its own shares
- (c) it releases the member from further liability in respect of shares. [Collector of Muradabad v. Equity Insurance Company, (1948)]

Effects of Surrender of Shares

Surrender of shares has the same effect as forfeiture of shares has.

Distinction between Forfeiture and Surrender of Shares

Forfeiture of shares differs from surrender of shares in the following respects:

Basis of Distinction	Forfeiture of Shares	Surrender of Shares
1. Meaning	Forfeiture of shares is compulsory termination of membership of a penalty for non-payment of a call.	Surrender of shares is a voluntary return of shares for the purposes of cancellation.
2. Instance	It is at the instance of company.	It is at the instance of member.
3. Purpose	Its purpose is to penalise the defaulter.	Its purpose is to avoid the formalities for a valid forfeiture.
4. Notice	Notice precedent to forfeiture is required.	No such notice is required.
5. Provision in the Act & Table A	Both the Act and Table A provide for forfeiture.	Both the Act and Table A are silent on surrender.

1.3.5. Buy Back of Shares [Section 77A]

Meaning of Buy-back of Shares

The term buy-back of shares implies the act of purchasing its own shares by a company.

Three Sources of Funds for Buy-Back [Section 77 A(1)] A company may purchase its own shares or other specified securities out of—

- (i) its free reserves; or
- (ii) the securities premium account; or
- (iii) the proceeds of any shares or other specified securities;

Provided that no buy-back of any kind of shares or other specified securities shall be made out of the proceeds of an earlier issue of the same kind of shares or same kind of other specified securities,

"Specified securities" includes employees' stock option or other securities as may be notified by the Central Government from time to time.

Buy-back from Whom? [Section 77A(5)] The buy-back may be—

- (a) from the existing security holders on a proportionate basis; or
- (b) from the open market; or
- (c) from odd lots, that is to say, where the lot of securities of a public company, whose shares are listed on a recognised stock exchange, is smaller than such marketable lot, as may be specified by the stock exchange; or
- (d) by purchasing the securities issued to employees of the company pursuant to a scheme of stock option or sweat equity.

Conditions for Buy-Back [Section 77A(2)]

1. Authorised by Articles—The buy-back must be authorized by the Articles
2. Special Resolution/Board's Resolution—The special resolution must be passed in the General Meeting of shareholders.
OR
The Board must pass a resolution at its meeting where the buy-back does not exceed 10% of the total equity paid up capital and free reserves of the company.
3. Minimum Time Interval between Two buy-back—No offer of buy back must be made within a period of 365 days from the date of preceding offer of buy-back.
4. Overall Maximum Limit—The buy-back of the shares must not exceed 25% of total paid-up capital and free reserves.
5. Maximum Limit of Buy-back in any Financial Year—The buy-back of equity shares in any financial year must not exceed 25% of its total paid up equity capital
6. Maximum Debt-Equity Ratio—The debt-equity ratio must not be more than 2:1 after such buy-back.

Here Debt = Secured + Unsecured Debt and Equity = Capital + Free Reserves
Free Reserves = Free Reserves as per Sec 372A + Securities Premium as per Sec 78.
7. Fully Paid Shares—All the shares for buy-back must be fully paid-up.
8. Time Limit—The buy-back must be completed within 12 months from the date of passing the Special Resolution/Board's Resolution.

- 9. Solvency Declaration—The company must file solvency declaration with the Registrar and SEBI in the form of an affidavit signed by at least two directors of the company. The affidavit must state that the Board has made full inquiry into the affairs of the company as a result of which they have formed an opinion that the company is capable of meeting its liabilities and will not render insolvent within a period of one year from the date of declaration adopted by the Board [77A(6)].
- 10. Transfer of Certain Sums to Capital Redemption Reserve Account—Where a company purchases its own shares out of free reserves, than a sum equal to the nominal value of the shares so purchased shall be transferred to the capital redemption reserve account referred to in Clause (d) of the proviso to Sub-section (1) of Section 80 and details of such transfer shall be disclosed in the balance sheet.
- 11. As per SEBI Guidelines—Buy-back must be as per SEBI Guidelines

Proportionate Buy-back

In case the number of securities tendered for buy-back are more than the number of securities to be bought back, the number of securities to be bought back from each member shall be determined as follows:

$$= \frac{\text{Acceptance tendered to a Member}}{\text{Total Acceptance tendered to all Members}} \times \text{No. of Securities to be bought back}$$

Extinguishment of Certificates within 7 days [Sec 77A(7)] Where a company buys-back its own shares, it must extinguish and physically destroy the securities so bought back within 7 days of the last date of completion of buy-back in the presence of merchant bankers or Registrar or Statutory auditor.

No Further issue within a Period of 6 Months [Section 77A(8)] Where a company completes a buy-back of its shares or other specified securities under this section, it must not make further issue of same kind of shares (including allotment of further shares under section 81 (1) (a) or other specified securities within a period of 6 months except by way of bonus issue or in the discharge of subsisting obligations such as conversion of warrants, stock option schemes, sweat equity or conversion of preference shares or debentures into equity shares.

Register of Buy-back Securities [Section 77A(9)] Where a company buys back its securities under this section, it must maintain a register of the securities so bought, the consideration paid for the securities bought-back, the date of cancellation of securities, the date of extinguishing and physically destroying of securities and such other particulars as may be prescribed.

Filing of Buy-back Return [Section 77(A)(10)] A company must, after completion of the buy-back under this section, file with the Registrar and the SEBI, a return containing prescribed particulars.

Provided that no return is to be filed with the SEBI by a company whose shares are not listed on any recognised stock exchange.

Prohibition of Buy-back in Certain Circumstances [Section 77B] No company shall directly or indirectly purchase its own shares or other specified securities—

- (a) through any subsidiary company including its own subsidiary companies; or
- (b) through any investment company or group of investment companies; or
- (c) if a default, by the company, in repayment of deposit or interest payable thereon, redemption of debentures or preference shares or payment of dividend to any shareholder or repayment of any term loan or interest payable thereon to any financial institutions or bank, is subsisting; or
- (d) in case such company has not complied with provisions of Sections 159, 207 and 211.

Penalty for Default [Section 77A(11)] In case of default the company or its officer in default shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term upto 2 years, or with fine upto ₹ 50,000 or with both.

Procedure before Buy-back [Section 77A(3)] The notice of the meeting at which special resolution is proposed to be passed must be accompanied by an explanatory statement stating—

- (a) a full and complete disclosure of all the material facts;
- (b) the necessity for the buy-back;
- (c) the class of security intended to be purchased under the buy-back;
- (d) the amount to be invested under the buy-back; and
- (e) the time limit for completion of buy-back.

1.3.6. Reduction of Share Capital [Section 100 to 105]

Meaning of Reduction of Share Capital

Reduction of share capital may involve reduction in respect of that portion of:

- (a) issued capital which has been subscribed, called up and paid up, or
- (b) issued capital which has been subscribed but not called up.

To which Company the Restriction as to Reduction of Share Capital applies

The restriction as to reduction of share capital apply to the following two companies:

- (a) A company limited by shares
- (b) A company limited by guarantee having share capital.

Thus, such restrictions do not apply to unlimited companies whether having share capital or not and companies limited by guarantee not having share capital.

Manner of Capital Reduction

A company may reduce its share capital in any way and in particular:

- (a) by extinguishing or reducing the liability of members in respect of capital not paid up. e.g. where the shares of ₹ 100 each with ₹ 75 paid up are reduced to ₹ 75 fully paid up shares, the shareholders are relieved from liability on the uncalled capital of ₹ 25 per share.
- (b) by cancelling any paid up share capital which is lost or is unrepresented by available assets, with or without extinguishing or reducing liability of members.
- (c) by paying off any paid up share capital which is in excess of the wants of the company with or without extinguishing or reducing liability.

Example I: Where the fully paid shares of ₹ 100 each are reduced to ₹ 75 fully paid up shares and ₹ 25 are returned to the members. Thus, in this case nominal value of the share is reduced and not merely the paid up value.

Example II: Where the fully paid shares of ₹ 100 each are reduced to ₹ 75 paid up and ₹ 25 are returned to the members on the condition that when required, the company may call it up again. Thus, in this case the paid up value of share is reduced and not the nominal value.

Note: Interest of creditors is really involved only in the circumstances referred to in (a) and (c).

Procedure for Reduction of Capital

The procedure for reducing the capital is given below:

- 1. Authorised by Articles The articles must authorise the company to reduce the share capital. If the articles do not so authorise, then these must be altered by a special resolution first.

Note: It is not enough to provide this authority in the Memorandum.

2. Special Resolution A special resolution must be passed at a general meeting.

3. Court's* Confirmation After passing the special resolution, the company has to apply to the court for an order confirming the reduction.

Mandatory and Discretionary Powers of the Court*: The mandatory and discretionary powers of the Court* are as under:

- (i) After the petition for the court's confirmation has been filed, the Court* must settle the list of creditors who are entitled to object in accordance with Section 101(2)(a) (e.g. the creditors having a debt or claim admissible on a winding up). [Section 101(2)(b)]
- (ii) For settling the list of creditors, the court* must ascertain the names of those creditors and the nature and amount of their debts or claims. [Section 101(2)(b)]
- (iii) The court* may publish notices fixing a day or days within which the creditors not entered on the list are to claim to be so entered or are to be excluded from the right of objecting to the reduction. [Sec 101(2)(b)]
- (iv) Where a creditor entered on the list whose debt or claim is not discharged or has not determined does not consent to the reduction, the court* may dispense with the consent of that creditor if the company secures the payment of his debt or claim by appropriating the full amount or the amount fixed by the court. [Section 101(2)(c)]
- (v) The court* has discretionary power having regard to any special circumstances of the case to direct that the provisions of Section 101(2) shall not apply as regards any class(s) of creditors. [Section 101(3)]

Note: Special circumstances must be such as would convince the court* that with reasonable foresight it can be said the proposed reduction of capital would not adversely affect the relevant creditor and would not render him any worse off than if he had attended and objected to the application for confirmation.

[Re Lucanic Tempscule Billard Hall (London) Ltd., 1965 3 All E.R. 879]

- (vi) The court* may make an order confirming the reduction on such terms and conditions as it think fit if the court is satisfied that either the consent of every creditor who is entitled to object to the reduction, has been obtained or his debt or claim has been discharged or has been determined or has been secured. [Section 102(1)]
- (vii) The court* may order that the words 'And Reduced' be added to the name of the company for a certain period. [Section 102(2)(a)]
- (viii) The court* may require the company to publish, the reason for the reduction and the causes which led to the reduction. [Section 102(2)(b)]

4. Registration of Order and Minutes of Reduction

- (i) The Registrar must register the order and minute—
 - (a) on the production of an order of the court* confirming the reduction of the share capital, and
 - (b) on the delivery of a certified copy of the order and of a minute approved by the court*. [Section 103(1)]
- (ii) On the registration of the order and minute and not before, the resolution shall become effective. [Section 103(2)]
- (iii) The notice of registration must be published in such a manner as the court* may direct. [Section 103(3)]
- (iv) The Registrar shall issue a certificate which shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of the Act as to the reduction have been complied with and that the share capital is such as is stated in the minute. [Section 103(4)]

- (v) The minutes shall be deemed to be substituted for the corresponding part of the memorandum thereby altering the memorandum within the meaning of Section 40. [Section 103(5) and (6)]

- 5. Liability of Members in Case of Reduced Share Capital [Section 104]: On the reduction of share capital the extent of the liability of any past or present member on any call or contribution shall not exceed the difference between (a) the amount already paid on the share or the reduced amount if any which is deemed to have been paid thereon by the member and (b) the amount of the shares as fixed by the minute of the reduction.

In the event any creditor entitled to object to the reduction of capital is not entered on the list of creditors by reason of his ignorance and after such reduction, the company is unable to pay his debt or claim:

- (a) every member at the time of registration of court's* order for reduction, shall be liable to contribute for the payment of that debt or claim an amount not exceeding the amount which he would have contributed on the day before registration of the order.
- (b) In case the company is wound up, the court* on the application by the creditor and on proof of his ignorance may settle a list of contributories and make and enforce calls and orders on the contributories settled on the list as if they were ordinary contributories in a winding up.

It is further provided that, if any officer of the company conceals the name of any creditor entitled to object to the reduction, he shall be liable to be punished with imprisonment up to one year, or with fine or with both [Section 105].

[*Tribunal as per Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002.]

Distinction between Reduction of Share Capital and Diminution of Share Capital

Reduction of capital may involve reduction in respect of issued capital which has been subscribed but not called up and paid up, or issued capital which has been subscribed but not called up but diminution involves cancellation of that portion of the issued capital which has not been subscribed. [Section 94(1)(e)]

Reduction of share capital differs from the diminution of share capital in the following respects:

Basis of Distinction	Reduction of Share Capital	Diminution of Share Capital
1 . Relevant Section	Section 100 to 104	Section 94
2. Which capital is involved	It involves reduction in respect of issued capital which has been subscribed.	It involves reduction in respect of authorised capital.
3. Nature of resolution required	It requires a special resolution. [Section 100]	It requires an ordinary resolution. [Section 94]
4. Court's Confirmation	It requires Court's* confirmation. [Section 101]	It does not require Court's confirmation [Section 94(2)]
5. Alteration of M/A	It does not involve alteration of capital clause of M/A.	It involves alteration of capital clause of M/A.
6 . Order for 'and reduced' words	The court may order to add the words 'And Reduced' to the name of the company. [Section 102(3)]	No such provision exists in this case.

7. Documents to be filed with the Registrar	It requires the registration of the following with the Registrar: (a) the court's* order confirming reduction (b) minutes approved by the court	It requires only a notice to the Registrar.
8. Time limit for filing the documents with the Registrar	There is no time limit specified in the Act for filing the documents with the Registrar.	Notice to Registrar must be given within 30 days from the date of cancellation.
9. Can Creditors object?	Yes. Creditors can object since their interests are affected.	No. Creditors cannot object since their interest are not affected.

Cases not requiring Compliance of Sec. 100 to 104.

The compliance of Sec. 100 to 104 is not required in the following cases:

1. Purchase of own shares by a company in pursuance of an order made by CLB u/s 402 (Under section 402, the CLB has the power to direct the company to purchase the shares of any member and effect consequent reduction of capital in order to end oppression or mismanagement. The requirements of Sec. 100 to 104 are not required to be complied with in such a case).
2. Buy-back of shares u/s 77A
3. Redemption of Preference Shares u/s 80
4. Diminution or Cancellation of Capital u/s 94.
5. Forfeiture of Shares
6. Surrender of Shares

1.3.7. Debentures

Debenture includes debenture stock, bonds and any other securities of a company whether constituting a charge on the assets of a company or not as defined in Sec. 2(12) of the Companies Act. This is an inclusive definition and amounts to borrowing of monies from the holders of debentures on such terms and conditions subject to which the debentures have been issued. Basically it is a document or certificate signed by the authorized officers of a company acknowledging money lent and guaranteeing repayment with interest and creating security on the assets of the company for due performance of its obligation. This is a debt instrument and is the commonest method of raising loan capital, as part of project financing. Debentures may be redeemable as envisaged in the Companies Act or mandatorily convertible wholly into the equity shares of a company as envisaged under FEMA. While the articles of a company should contain an enabling provision for issue of debentures and creation of security therefore by the Board, the quantum of such issue should be adequately covered by a borrowing resolution of its shareholders under section 293(1)(d) of the Companies Act, 1956 (the Act).

Issue of Debentures and creation of Security

Debentures are commonly issued in a similar manner as shares by means of a prospectus inviting applications, the money being usually payable by instalments on application, allotment and on specified dates. The power to issue debentures rests with the Board of Directors (Sec. 292). Debentures may be issued at par, at a premium or at a discount, unless the Articles specifically forbid issue of debentures at a discount.

The company must complete and keep ready for delivery the debenture certificates within 3 months of allotment, unless the terms of the issue provide a longer period (Section 113).

A company which issues debentures is under an obligation to create security therefor pursuant to section 117A of the Act by executing trust deed. The need for executing a trust deed will arise when a company wants to issue a prospectus or letter of offer to the public for securing subscription to its debentures and for this purpose should appoint one or more debenture trustees. The above documents should state that the debenture trustees have consented to be appointed as such as required by section 117B of the Act. Thus a debenture trustee enjoys a unique position of being an independent entity unconnected with the issuer of security but appointed to protect the interest of holders of debentures.

Provisions Regulating Issue of Debentures

The power to issue debentures can be exercised on behalf of the company at a meeting of the Board of Directors [Section 292(1)(b) of the Companies Act]. A public company may, however, require the approval of shareholders to borrow money in excess of the aggregate of its paid up capital and free reserves [Section 293 (1) (d)]. Consent of the shareholders would also be required for selling, leasing or disposing of the whole or substantially the whole of the undertaking of the company under section 293 (1) (a).

The attributes of a debenture are:

- a. A movable property.
- b. Issued by the company in the form of a certificate of indebtedness.
- c. It generally specifies the date of redemption, repayment of principal and interest on specified dates.
- d. May or may not create a charge on the assets of the company.

Section 372 A of the Companies Act also regulates inter-corporate loan and investments and stipulates the ceiling limits on investments and the amount of loan that can be borrowed by a company. The explanation clause of this section states that the loan shall include debentures.

Section 117 to Sections 123 of the Companies Act, 1956 regulate the provisions relating to debentures, appointment of debenture trustees, their duties, creation of Debenture Redemption Reserve Account, liability of trustees etc.

The debentures issued under the Act shall not carry any voting rights. In the case of public issue of debentures, there would be a large number of debenture holders on the register of the company. As such it shall not be feasible to create charge in favour of each of the debenture holder. A common methodology generally adopted is to create Trust Deed conveying the property of the company. A Trust deed is an arrangement enabling the property to be held by a person or persons for the benefit of some other person known as beneficiary. The Trustees declare the Trust in favour of the debenture holders. The Trust Deed may grant the Trustees fixed charge over the freehold and leasehold property while a floating charge may be created over other assets. The Company shall allow inspection of the Trust Deed and also provide copy of the same to any member or debenture holder of the company on payment of such sum as may be prescribed. Failure to provide the same would invite penalties by way of fine under the Act. Any provision contained in the Trust Deed, which exempts a Trustee from liability for breach of Trust, is void.

As per Section 125 (4) of the Companies Act, registration of a charge for purpose of issue of debentures is mandatory. Section 128 stipulates that where a company issues series of debentures which is secured by charge, benefit of which will be available to all debenture holders pari passu, the company shall file the prescribed particulars in Form 10 and 13 with the Registrar of Companies for registration of charge. These forms shall be filed within 30 days after the execution of the deed.

Appointment and Duties of Debenture Trustees

In terms of Section 117 B, it has been made mandatory for any company making a public/rights issue of debentures to appoint one or more debenture trustees before issuing the prospectus or letter of offer and to obtain their consent which shall be mentioned in the offer document. The Debenture Trustees shall not:

- a. beneficially hold shares in a company.
- b. be beneficially entitled to monies which are to be paid by the company to the debenture trustees.
- c. enter into any guarantee in respect of principal debt secured by the debentures or interest thereon.

This section also lists the functions that shall be performed by the Trustees. These include:

- i. Protecting the interests of the debenture holders by addressing their grievances.
- ii. Ensuring that the assets of the company issuing debentures are sufficient to discharge the principal amount.
- iii. To ensure that the offer document does not contain any clause which is inconsistent with the terms of the debentures or the Trust Deed.
- v. To ensure that the company does not commit any breach of the provisions of the Trust Deed.
- v. To take reasonable steps as may be necessary to undertake remedy in the event of breach of any covenant in the Trust Deed.
- vi. To convene a meeting of the debenture holders as and when required.

If the debenture trustees are of the opinion that the assets of the company are insufficient to discharge the principal amount, they shall file a petition before the Central Government and the latter may after hearing the parties pass such orders as is necessary in the interests of the debenture holders. As per the SEBI (Debenture Trustees) Regulations, 1993, [hereinafter referred to as the 'Regulations'] a Debenture Trustee can be a scheduled bank, an insurance company, a body corporate or a public financial institution.

Debenture Trust Deed

A Debenture Trust Deed shall, interalia, include the followings:

- a. An undertaking by the company to pay the Debenture holders, principal and interest.
- b. Clauses giving the Trustees the legal mortgages over the company's freehold and leasehold property.
- c. Clauses that may make the security enforceable in the event of default in payment of principal or interest i.e. appointment of receiver, foreclosure, sale of assets etc.
- d. A clause giving the Trustees the power to take possession of the property charged when security becomes enforceable.
- e. Register of Debenture holders, meeting of all debenture holders and other administrative matters may be included in the Deed.

In addition thereto, the SEBI regulations have laid format of the Trust Deed in Schedule IV to the regulations.

Some of the important provisions would include:

- f. Time limit of creation of security for issue of debentures.
- g. Obligations of the body corporate towards the debenture holders.
- h. Obligations towards the debenture holders - equity ratio and debt service coverage ratio.
- i. Procedure for the inspection of charged assets by the Trustees.

Debenture Redemption Reserve

Section 117C of the Companies Act requires that every company issuing debentures should create DRR for the purpose of redemption of debentures to which adequate amounts should be credited from the profits of the company until debentures are redeemed. This is a mandatory provision. SEBI regulations also require companies issuing debentures to provide for DRR as required under the Companies Act.

The Act, however, does not stipulate the time period for creation of security. SEBI regulations provides for creation of security within six months from the date of issue of debentures and if a company fails to create the security within 12 months, it shall be liable to pay 2% penal interest to the debenture holders. If the security is not created even after 18 months, a meeting of the debenture holders will have to be called to explain the reasons thereof. Further, the issue proceeds will be kept in escrow account until the documents for creation of securities are executed between the Trustees and the company.

Even where debentures are compulsorily convertible into the equity shares of the debenture issuing company, as in the case of FEMA, creation of DRR is unavoidable till the date of conversion. However, after conversion of debentures, the amount in the DRR may be transferred to general reserve or in such other manner as the Board thinks fit and proper. The amount credited to DRR cannot be utilized except for the redemption of debentures. DCA Circular No. 9/2002 dated 18-4-2002 provides some relief as under in the matter of DRR in the case of banking Institutions, All India Financial Institutions, NBFCs and others keeping in view the genuine problems likely to be caused to these institutions :

- (a) No DRR is required for debentures issued by All India Financial institutions (AIFIs) regulated by RBI and banking companies for both public as well as privately placed debentures. For other FIs within the meaning of section 4A, DRR will be as applicable to NBFCs registered with RBI.
- (b) For NBFCs registered with RBI under section 45-1A of the RBI Act, [inserted by the RBI (Amendment) Act, 1997] the adequacy of DRR will be 50% of the value of debentures issued through public issue as per present SEBI (Disclosure and Investor Protection) Guidelines, 2000 and no DRR is required in the case of privately placed debentures.
- (c) For manufacturing and infrastructure companies, the adequacy of DRR will be 50% of the value of debentures issued through public issue and 25% for privately placed debentures.
- (d) Section 117C will apply to debentures issued and pending to be redeemed and such DRR is required to be created for debentures issued prior to 13.12.2000 and pending redemption subject to clarification issued herein.
- (e) Section 117C will apply to non-convertible portion of debentures issued whether they are fully or partly convertible. By another circular issued by DCA [General circular No. 4/2003 dated 16.1.2003] the requirement of DRR has been modified in the case of Housing Finance Companies. In the case of these companies registered with National Housing Bank under Housing Finance Companies (NHB) Directions, 2001 the adequacy of DRR will be 50% of the value of debentures through public issues and no DRR is required in the case of privately placed debentures.

It is also clarified by the DCA that since DRR will have to be carved out of profits of the company, there is no obligation to create DRR if there is no profit in a particular year. DRR is an insurance and it enables the issuer of security to redeem the debentures and fulfill its obligation. If, for any reason, the issuer of security fails to redeem the debentures, the aggrieved party may approach CLB/Tribunal which will issue a direction to the company to redeem the debentures forthwith together with interest. Failure to do so is punishable with imprisonment extending upto three years and fine of not less than five hundred rupees for each day of default (section 117C of the Act).

Default

In the event of failure on the part of the company to redeem the debentures on the date of maturity, the Company Law Tribunal may, on the application of any debenture holder, direct redemption of debentures forthwith by payment of principal and interest due thereon. If a default is made in complying with the orders of the Tribunal, every officer of the company who is in default shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years and shall also be liable to fine of not less than Rs.500/- for every day during which the default continues. (Section 117C) Further this offence is not compoundable under section 621A of the Act.

There are contradictions between the Companies Act and the SEBI regulations on issues relating to:

- a. Utilisation of Debenture Redemption Reserves. The Act provides that the Debenture Redemption Reserve will be used towards redemption of debentures only whereas the SEBI regulation states that these will be a part of the General Reserves, which can be utilised for the purpose of bonus issues.
- b. Any debentures issued with a maturity period of 18 months or less is exempted from the creation of Debenture Redemption Reserve Account, whereas no such exemption is provided under the Companies Act.
- c. No Public Issue/Rights Issue of Debentures shall be made by a company unless it has appointed one or more Debenture Trustees for such debentures whereas under SEBI guidelines, appointment of Debenture Trustees is compulsory only in case of debentures with maturity of 18 months or more.

A listed company though subjected to SEBI regulations must comply with stringent norms between the two legislations / regulations made there under.

Issue of Convertible Debentures or Raising of Loans [Sec. 81(3)]

With an Option to Convert Them into Shares

Scope of Sec. 81 (3)

Sec. 81 (3) permits a company to—

- (a) issue convertible debentures or loans; or
- (b) issue debentures or raise loans with an option to subscribe for new shares.

Conditions of Sec. 81 (3)

- (a) Power in terms of issue — The terms of issue of such debentures or loans must contain term regarding conversion of such debentures or loans into shares.
- (b) Approval of CG — The terms must be approved by Central Govt. before issue of such debentures or loans. However, the approval of Central Govt. is not required if the terms are as per Central Govt. Rules.
- (c) Special Resolution— The terms must be approved by a special resolution.

Bonds

Bond is a negotiable certificate evidencing indebtedness. It is normally unsecured. A debt security is generally issued by a company, municipality or government. A bond investor lends money to the issuer and in exchange, the issuer promises to repay the loan amount on a specified maturity date. The issuer usually pays the bond holder periodic interest payments over the life of the bond.

Issue of Bonds

Bonds are issued by public authorities, credit institutions, companies and supranational institutions in the primary markets. The most common process for issuing bonds is through underwriting. When a bond issue is underwritten, one or more securities firms or banks, forming a syndicate, buy the entire issue of bonds from the issuer and re-sell them to investors. The security firm takes the risk of being unable to sell on the issue to end investors. Primary issuance is arranged by bookrunners who arrange the bond issue, have direct contact with investors and act as advisers to the bond issuer in terms of timing and price of the bond issue. The bookrunner is listed first among all underwriters participating in the issuance in the tombstone ads commonly use to announce bonds to the public.

The bookrunners' willingness to underwrite must be discussed prior to any decision on the terms of the bond issue as there may be limited demand for the bonds.

In contrast, government bonds are usually issued in an auction. In some cases both members of the public and banks may bid for bonds. In other cases only market makers may bid for bonds. The overall rate of return on the bond depends on both the terms of the bond and the price paid. The terms of the bond, such as the coupon, are fixed in advance and the price is determined by the market.

In the case of an underwritten bond, the underwriters will charge a fee for underwriting. An alternative process for bond issuance, which is commonly used for smaller issues and avoids this cost, is the private placement bond. Bonds are sold directly to buyers and may not be tradeable in the bond market.

Different types of Bonds:

- 1) Zero coupon bond-This bond is issued at a discount and repaid at a face value. No periodic interest is paid at the time of maturity. The difference between the issue price and the redemption price represents the return of the holder. The maturity period of these bonds vary from 5 to 12 years. These bonds were first issued in India by Mahindra and Mahindra Ltd.
- 2) Deep discount bond-This bond is issued at a very high discount on its face value and face value is paid at the time of maturity. IDBI and SIDBI had issued this instrument. IDBI had issued deep discount bond of face value of ₹1 lac at a price of ₹2,700/- with a maturity period of 25 years. The bond appreciates to its face value over the maturity period of 25 years. Alternatively, the investor can withdraw from the investment periodically after 5 years.
- 3) Convertible Bond-A bond gives the investor the option to convert the bond into equity at a fixed conversion price.
- 4) Dual convertible bond-A dual convertible bond is convertible into either equity shares or debentures/preference shares at the option of the investor.
- 5) Stepped coupon bonds-Under stepped coupon bonds, the interest rates is stepped up or down during the tenure of the bond. The main advantage to the investor is the attraction of higher rate of interest in case general rise in interest.
- 6) Disaster Bonds-These are issued by companies and institutions to share the risk and expand the capital to link investors return with the size of investors losses, the smaller the return and vice-versa.
- 7) Easy exit bonds-Easy exit bonds are bonds which provide liquidity and easy exit route to the investor by way of redemption where investor can get ready encashment in case of need to withdraw before maturity.
- 8) Floating rate bonds and notes-In this case, interest is not fixed and is allowed to float depending upon market conditions. This instrument is used by the issuer to hedge themselves against the volatility in interest rates.
- 9) Capital Indexed Bonds- These bonds are inflation protection securities. Such bonds, therefore, provide good hedge against inflation risk. The return to the investors in these bonds is connected with the wholesale price index.
- 10) Commodity Bonds-Commodity bonds are bonds issued to share the risk and profitability of future commodity prices with the investors. For example, Petro bonds, gold bonds, silver bonds etc.
- 11) Industrial revenue bonds-These are issued by financial institutions in connection with the development of the industrial facilities. These may become attractive if certain income tax and wealth tax concessions are offered. The bond proceeds could be used to purchase or construct facilities which are subsequently leased or sold to the company.

1.3.8. Transfer and Transmission of Shares

Meaning of Transfer of Shares

Transfer of Shares means the voluntary conveyance of the ownership rights from a member who wishes to cease to be a member to a person who wishes to become a member. The shares or other interests of a member of company are movable properties transferable in the manner prescribed by the Articles of the company [Section 82]. The shares in a public company are freely transferable [Sec 111 A]. The articles of a public company cannot contain such absolute provision by which the right to transfer shares is altogether taken away. The right of a shareholder to transfer his shares in a company is absolute and inherent in the ownership of shares. [Thenappa Chettiar v. Indian Overseas Bank Ltd, (1943)13 Comp. as 2002]

Procedure for Transfer of Shares

In addition to comply with the provisions of the Articles, the following procedure must be followed before a company can lawfully register a transfer:

1. Prescribed Form: The instrument of transfer must be in the prescribed form i.e. Form No. 7B.
 2. Presentation to the Prescribed Authority: The instrument of transfer must be presented to the prescribed authority (i.e. the Registrar), before it is signed by the transferor or transferee and before any entry is made in it. The prescribed authority shall stamp or otherwise endorse on the instrument the date on which it is so presented.
 3. Execution: The instrument must—
 - (i) be duly stamped.
 - (ii) be executed by or on behalf of the transferor and the transferee
 - (iii) be completed in all respects
 - (iv) specify the name, address and occupation if any, of the transferee.
 - (v) be signed by both the transferor and the transferee.
 4. Share Certificate/Letter of Allotment: The instrument must be accompanied by share certificate or letter of allotment (if no such certificate is in existence).
 5. Time Limit for Delivery: The instrument must be delivered to the company for registration—
 - (i) In case of listed shares at any time before the date of closure of Register of Members for the first time after the date of the presentation to the prescribed authority, or within 12 months from the date of such presentation whichever is later.
 - (ii) In any other case, within 2 months from the date of presentation to the prescribed authority.
- Extension of Time Limit: The Central Government is empowered to extend the aforesaid time limit on an application made either before or after the expiry of aforesaid period. [Section 108(1D)]
6. Transfer by Legal Representative [Section 109]: A legal representative of a deceased member although he may not be a member, can validly transfer shares.
 7. Who can submit Transfer deed [Section 110]: The transfer deed may be presented to the company by the transferor or transferee.
 8. Notice in the Case of Transfer of Partly Paid Shares [Section 110]: Where the transferor makes an application for registration of partly paid shares, transfer must not be registered unless the company gives notice of the application to the transferee and the transferee makes no objection to the transfer within 2 weeks from the receipt of the notice. [Section 110(2)]

Note: Notice to the transferee shall be deemed to have been duly given if it is despatched by prepaid registered post to the transferee at the address given in the instrument of transfer and shall be deemed to have been duly delivered at the time at which it would have been delivered in the ordinary course of post. [Section 110(3)]

- 9. Time Limit for Registration of Transfer: The Board of Directors considers the application and if found alright in all respects, registers the transfer. An endorsement is made on the back of the share certificate recognising the transferee as the new member. In Register of Members, the name of the transferor is strike off and the name of the transferee is entered. The share certificate is required to be despatched to the transferee within 2 months of the application for registration.

Notice of Refusal and Remedy against Refusal [Section 111]

- 1. Notice: If a private company refuses to register a transfer, it must send the notice of refusal giving reasons to the transferor and the transferee, within 2 months of the date of delivery of the instrument of transfer.
- 2. Remedy: The transferor or transferee may file an appeal with the Company Law Board as follows:

Refusal /failure	Time limit for Appeal
(a) Refusal to register the transfer	Within 2 months of the receipt of notice of refusal
(b) Failure to register within 2 months or for not giving reason for refusal	Within 2 months from the expiry of 2 months of date of delivery of instrument of transfer.

Note: There is no time limit in case of refusal by a public company.

- 3. Penalty: For default in registration of transfer within 2 months or for not giving reason for refusal. The company and its every officer in default is punishable with fine upto ₹ 500 for every day of default.
- 4. Power of CLB: The Company Law Board may either dismiss the appeal or direct the company to register the transfer within 10 days of the receipt of the order.
- 5. Penalty for Non-compliance of Order: For default in complying with the CLB order, the company and its every officer in default is punishable with fine upto ₹ 10,000 and with a further fine of ₹ 1,000 for every day of continuing default.

Transfer of Securities of a Public Company [Section 111A]

- 1. The Board of directors of a company or the concerned depository has no discretion to refuse or withhold transfer of any security. The transfer has to be effected by the company/depository automatically and immediately.
- 2. Right to Appeal: Where the transfer of security effected in contravention of the SEBI Act, 1992 or SICA, 1985, a depository, company, participant or investor or SEBI may make an appeal to Company Law Board to rectify the register or records of the company or depository within 2 months from the date of transfer of securities or from the date on which the instrument of transfer or the intimation of transmission was delivered to the company as the case may be.
- 3. Power of CLB: The Company Law Board—
 - (a) may direct the company or the depository to rectify the register or the records of ownership if after making enquiry, if it is satisfied that the contravention has taken place.
 - (b) may suspend the voting rights in respect of the securities subject to enquiry if enquiry has not yet completed.
- 4. Right of Transferee: During the pendency of the application before the CLB, the transferee can transfer the security and such further transfer would entitle the transferee to voting rights also unless voting rights in case of transferee have also been suspended by CLB.

Certificate of Transfer [Section 112]

1. Lodging Certificate: Where a member wishes to transfer only a part of his shareholding or wishes to sell them to two or more persons, he is required to submit the share certificate with the company. This is known as lodging the certificate.
2. Certification: Where he has already submitted the share certificate alongwith an instrument of transfer for a part of his shareholding, he may request the company to certify on the instrument of the transfer that the share certification for the shares covered by the instrument of transfer has been lodged with the company. An act of noting on the instrument that share certificate in respect of shares to be transferred has been lodged with the company is called certification. An instrument of transfer shall be deemed to be certified if it bears the words 'Certificate lodged' or 'Certificate deposited' the words to the like effect. [Section 112(3)(a)]

Note: The company is under no obligation to certify any instrument of transfer of shares at all.

3. Balance Ticket: When only a part of the shares is transferred, the company issues a ticket for the balance of shares not transferred. Such a ticket is known as 'Balance Ticket'.
4. What Certificate represents: [Section 112(1)] Certification merely represents that the documents showing the prima facie title to the shares mentioned in the instruments have been produced to the company. It does not represent that the transferor has any title to the shares.
5. Company's Liability: The company will be responsible for the certification only if:
 - (a) the person issuing the instrument is authorised to issue such instrument on the company's behalf, and
 - (b) the certificate is signed by any officer or servant of the company or any other person authorised to certify transfer on the company's behalf.
6. Liability in Case of Wrong Certification: Where any person acts on the faith of an erroneous certification made by a company negligently, the company shall be liable to him in a manner as if the certification has been made fraudulently.

Practical Illustration: The secretary of X Ltd. after certifying the transfer negligently returns the original certificate to the transferor. If transferor pledges the same, the company shall not be liable to the pledgee because of two reasons:

- (i) it covers no duty to the pledgee,
- (ii) the immediate cause of his loss was not the issue of the certificate.

[Longman v. Bath Electric Tramways, (1905) Ch. 646]

Blank Transfer

Meaning of Blank Transfer

A transfer of shares is said to be blank if an instrument of transfer contains only the name and signature of the transferor and does not contain the name and signature of transferee and the date of sale.

Procedure for Blank Transfer

The transferor delivers to the buyer (a) share certificate; and (b) blank transfer deed.

Effect to Blank Transfer

(a) Option 1 — The buyer may become the owner of such shares

- (i) The buyer does not automatically become the owner of shares on receipt of the share certificate and the blank transfer deed,

- (ii) The buyer gets an implied authority to complete the transfer deed. He shall become the owner of shares only when —
- he completes the blanks in the blank transfer deed;
 - he delivers the share certificate and duly filled in transfer deed to the company for effecting transfer of shares in his name; and
 - the company registers the transfer of shares in the name of the buyer.
- (iii) When the name of the buyer is registered as a shareholder by the company, he shall acquire a good title to the shares notwithstanding the fact that shares were transferred to him under a blank transfer deed.
- (b) Option 2 — The buyer may transfer such shares
- If the buyer does not intend to become the owner of such shares, and wants to further transfer such shares, he may do so merely by delivering the share certificate and blank transfer deed to a new buyer.
 - Similarly, the new buyer has the same 2 options, i.e., to become the owner shares, or to transfer such shares to another new buyer.

Transferee

- (a) The list holder of blank transfer deed will become the 'transferee' of shares, and no intervening buyer of shares shall be regarded as 'transferee'.
- (b) Until some buyer is registered as a shareholder, the original holder of shares (i.e., the transferor) shall continue to be the owner of the shares.

Validity Period

A blank transfer deed shall remain valid only for such period as is prescribed u/s 108.

Effects of Blank Transfers

1. Indefinite circulation of the instrument of transfer.
2. Avoidance of stamp duty on transfer.
3. Concealment of beneficial owners behind their nominees.
4. Evasion of tax by suppression of secret profit invested in holdings on blank transfer.

Present Position

Now, the blank instrument of transfer is required to be presented to the prescribed authority who will stamp the instrument alongwith the date of presentation. Such instrument can then remain in circulation for 12 months or upto the closure of the registrar of members whichever is later.

Forged Transfer

Meaning of Forged Transfer

The term 'forged transfer' means transfer of shares made on the basis of transfer deed on which the transferor's signatures are forged.

Forged transfer is void ab Initio

A forged transfer is a nullity (i.e., without any legal effect).

Rights of Parties

- (a) The transferee does not become the owner of such shares.
- (b) The original owner continues to be the shareholder.

- (c) Where a company has registered the transferee as a shareholder on the basis of a forged transfer, following consequences shall follow:
- (i) The original owner can compel the company to restore his name on the register of members.
 - (ii) The company may cancel the share certificate issued to the transferee, and consequently the transferee shall cease to be a member of the company,
 - (iii) Where the transferee has already transferred the shares to an innocent purchaser, the position will be as follows:
 - ✓ The company can refuse to register the new purchaser of shares, as a member.
 - ✓ However, the new purchaser of shares shall have a right to claim damages for the company.
 - ✓ The company shall have a right to recover damages from the person who had lodged the forged transfer deed.

Judicial Rulings

1. If a company registers a forged transfer and removes the name of the true owner from the Register of Members, the true owner can compel the company to restore his name to the register and can claim any dividend which may not have been paid to him during the intervening period. [Boston v. North Staffordshire Railway Co., 38 Ch. D. 456]
2. If a company registers a forged transfer and issues a new certificate to the subsequent buyer for value acting in good faith (i.e. without the knowledge of forgery), it would be liable to compensate him since it cannot deny the liability accruing from its own act. [Balkin Consolidated Co. v. Tamkinser, (1982) A.C. 1961]
3. If a transferee gets a certificate from the company on a forged transfer, he will be liable to indemnify the company against its liability to the true owner of the shares. [Sheffield Corporation v. Barelly, (1905) B.C. 393]
4. If a transferee without any negligence brings about a transfer he is liable to indemnify the company against its liability to the true owner of shares. [Starkey v. Bank of England, (1903) A.C. 104]
5. If a share certificate was issued fraudulently by forging the signatures of the directors, the share certificate was rendered void. Forgery is nullity and cannot be a source of a valid transfer of title and thus, it confers no rights upon a subsequent buyer and the company may deny being liable towards him. [Rubben v. Great Fingal Consolidated Co.]

Effects of Transfer

The transferee does not acquire a legal title to the shares until his name has been entered in the Register of Members. Position during the intervening period may be summarised as follows:

1. Legal Title: The transferor continues to be the legal owner of the shares but on the principle of equity he holds them in trust for the transferee.
2. Call: If any call is demanded by the company before transfer is registered, the transferor must pay the calls in the first instance and may later recover the amount from the transferee.
3. Dividend: If dividends are declared and paid before transfer is registered, the company must pay it to the transferor. The transferor is required to retain dividends where shares have been sold ex-dividend and is required to return dividends to transferee where shares have been sold-cum-dividend.

- 4. Voting Rights: If voting rights are to be exercised before transfer is registered, the transferor must vote as the transferee directs where transferee has already paid the price and may vote as he likes where transferee has not paid the price.

Transmission of Shares [Sec 109]

Meaning of Transmission of Shares

Transmission of shares means the transfer of shares under the operation of law.

When does Transmission of Shares take place?

It takes place—

1. If a registered member dies, or
2. If a registered member is adjudged as insolvent, or
3. If a registered member being a company goes into liquidation.
4. If all the joint holders die where the shares are held jointly by 2 or more persons.

Effects of Transmission

1. Upon death, the shares of the deceased vest in his executors or administrators and the executors become liable for calls if shares are partly paid up.
2. Upon insolvency, the shares of the insolvent vest in the Official Assignee or the Receiver.
3. Upon liquidation of company, the shares vest in the Liquidator.
4. A person entitled to the shares on transmission becomes a member only when he makes an application in writing to the company and the company registers him as a member by entering his name in the Register of Members.

Other Provisions

1. No instrument of transfer is to be executed.
2. No stamp duty is payable.
3. It does not involve any consideration.
4. It is always subject to original liabilities attached to shares so transmitted.

Distinction between Transfer and Transmission

Transfer differs from transmission in the following respects:

Basis of Distinction	Transfer	Transmission
1. Results	Transfer is the result of deliberate act of a member.	Transmission is the result of operation of law on the death/insolvency of a member, or liquidation of a member being a company.
2. Instrument of transfer	Instrument of transfer is required to be executed.	No Instrument of transfer is required to be executed.
3. Stamp Duty	Stamp Duty is payable.	No Stamp Duty is payable.
4. Consideration	It generally involves consideration.	It does not involve any consideration.

1.4 INVESTMENTS, LOANS

1.4.1. Procedure for Inter-corporate loans, Investments, giving off guarantee and security

Investments

Meaning of 'investments' - The word 'Investments', in its natural connotation, would include any property or right in which money or capital is invested. However, we shall be using the word 'investments' in a limited sense to mean the investing of money in shares, stock, debentures or other securities. Investment in other assets does not seem to be covered under this head by the various provisions of the Companies Act in this regard.

Investments to be held in company's own name- According to sub-section (1) of section 49, investments made by a company (other than an investment company) on its own behalf shall be made and held by it in its own name.

The requirement that the investments made by the company must be held in its own name is confined to only those investments which are made by it on its own behalf. If the company makes investments on behalf of someone else, such investments need not be held in its own name. Thus, where the company is a trustee, the investment is supposed to be made on behalf of the beneficiaries of the trust and not on its own behalf. In such a case, there should be no objection to the investments being made by the company as the trustee but held in the name of the beneficiaries. Conversely, the mere fact that the trustee chooses to hold the shares in its own name cannot give rise to any legal inference that the trustee had made the investments on its own behalf.

Again, companies have been now allowed to hold investments in the name of a depository when such investments are in the form of securities held by the company as a beneficial owner.

Qualification shares in respect of nominee directors or nominee holders -Where a company has a right to nominate a director or directors on the Board of another company and the Articles of that company provide for 'share qualification' it would be open to the appointing or nominating company to hold the shares (i) in its own name, (ii) jointly in its own name and the name of appointee or nominee director, or (iii) exclusively in the name of the appointee or nominee.

Holding shares in a subsidiary in the name of nominee - As per section 49(3), a company may hold any share or shares in its subsidiary through nominee or nominees of the company if it is so required to ensure that the number of members of the subsidiary does not fall below the minimum number prescribed under the Act for public and private companies. It's through this enabling provision that a company can create a 100 per cent subsidiary.

The word "company" in the context will include a foreign company [Vide sections 53(1) and 4(6) of the Act].

Certificate or Letter of Allotment to be in the custody of the company - The certificate or letter of allotment relating to the shares or securities in which investments have been made by a company shall, except in two cases covered by subsections (4) and (5) be in the custody of such company or with the State Bank of India or a scheduled bank, being the bankers of the company [Section 49(6)].

Exemptions:

1. Sub-section (4) of section 49 exempts a company from the requirement of holding shares or securities on its own behalf and in its own name if its principal business consists of buying and selling of shares or securities.
2. In terms of the provisions of section 49(5), section 49(1) does not prevent a company:
 - (a) from depositing with the bank, being the bankers of the company, any shares or securities for collection of any dividend or interest payable thereon; or

- (b) from depositing with or transferring to, or holding in the name of, the State Bank of India or a scheduled bank, being the bankers of the company, shares or securities, in order to facilitate the transfer thereof. However, if within a period of 6 months from the date from which the shares or securities are transferred by the company to, or are first held by the company in the name of, the State Bank of India or a scheduled bank as aforesaid, no transfer of such shares or securities takes place, the company shall, as soon as practicable, after the expiry of that period, have the shares or securities retransferred to it from the State Bank of India or the scheduled bank or, as the case may be, again hold the shares or securities in its own name; or
- (c) from depositing with, or transferring to, any person any shares or securities, by way of security for the re-payment of any loan advanced to the company or the performance of any obligation undertaken by it.

Thus, it is not necessary for the company to hold the shares or stocks or debentures in its own name if they are deposited with the bank as aforesaid. A resolution of the Board of directors in this behalf is sufficient. The bank is entitled to have the shares or debentures registered in its own name with the specific purpose of collecting dividend or interest from the company whose shares or debentures are deposited with the bank. The company holding the investment in the name of the bank is only required to enter into a separate agreement with the bank that the latter will collect dividend and interest and credit the company with the amounts so collected. It may be noted that the deposit of shares, stocks and debentures with the bank need not be by way of a pledge but may be made for the specific object of enabling the banker to act as agent of the company to collect dividend and interest.

Where there is an agreement between a company being the seller of any shares held by it and the buyer of such shares, the company may agree with the buyer to transfer the shares temporarily to a designated party for the sole purpose of realising the purchase consideration on its behalf and to pass on the shares, by executing a transfer to the intended buyer. The designated party must necessarily be either the State Bank of India or a scheduled bank. However, to take the aforesaid benefit, the buyer and the seller must complete the transaction within a period of 6 months.

Register of investments not held in company's own name- When any shares or securities in which investments have been made by a company but are not held by it in its own name pursuant to permissible conditions in section 49, the company shall forthwith enter in a register maintained by it for the purpose particulars specified under sub-section (7) of section 49.

Penalty

If default is made in complying with any of the aforesaid requirements of subsections (1) to (8), the company and every officer of the company who is in default, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to 50,000 rupees.

Investments in other companies and bodies corporate/Inter-corporate loans and investments - Section 372A, inserted by Companies (Amendment) Act, 1999, contains the consolidated provisions with respect to inter-corporate loans and investments. Thus, the provisions, earlier contained in sections 370 and 372 have been combined together with certain modifications. Sections 370 and 372 have been rendered non-operational by the introduction of section 372A. The new section, viz., section 372A provides as follows :

(1) Ceiling on loans, guarantees, investments etc. - No company shall, directly or indirectly,—

- (a) make any loan to any other body corporate;
- (b) give any guarantee, or provide security, in connection with a loan made by any other person to, or to any other person by, anybody corporate; and
- (c) acquire, by way of subscription, purchase or otherwise the securities of any other body corporate,

exceeding sixty per cent of its paid-up share capital and free reserves, or hundred per cent of its free reserves, whichever is more.

It may be noted that by combining the provisions of sections 370 and 372, fixing the ceiling of 60% of paid-up capital and free reserves or 100% of free reserves, whichever is more with respect to loans and guarantees etc. and investments instead of 30% with respect to loans and another 30% for investments as per the earlier provisions, the Amendment Act has granted more flexibility to the companies in choosing between lending and investments in other bodies corporate and at the same time retaining the overall combined ceiling of the erstwhile sections 370 and 372 in regard to loans and investments. However, in case of a company with a small capital base but large reserves, the ceiling now shall be 100 per cent of free reserves.

Approval by way of special resolution: Where the aggregate of the loans and investments so far made, the amounts for which guarantee or security so far provided to in all other bodies corporate, along with the investment, loan, guarantee or security proposed to be made or given by the Board, exceeds the aforesaid limit, no investment or loan shall be made or guarantee shall be given or security shall be provided unless previously authorised by a special resolution passed in a general meeting.

The special resolution, as aforesaid, must be passed through postal ballot [as per rule 4 of the Companies (Passing of the Resolution by Postal Ballot) Rules, 2001].

However, the Board may give guarantee, without being previously authorised by a special resolution, if—

- (a) a resolution is passed at a meeting of the Board authorising to give guarantee in accordance with the aforesaid provisions;
- (b) there exists exceptional circumstances which prevent the company from obtaining previous authorisation by a special resolution as aforesaid; and
- (c) the resolution of the Board under (a) above is confirmed within 12 months, in a general meeting of the company or the annual general meeting held immediately after passing the Board's resolution, whichever is earlier.

It may be noted that the aforesaid relaxation does not cover 'investments', 'loan' or 'security'.

Matters to be specified in the notice of special resolution: The notice of the special resolution as aforesaid must indicate clearly: (i) the specific limits; (ii) the particulars of the body corporate in which the investment is proposed to be made or loan or security or guarantee to be given; (iii) the purpose of the investment, loan or security or guarantee; (iv) specific sources of funding and such other details.

The Department of Company Affairs has, through a Circular warned companies against:

- (a) approving inter-corporate investments and loans much beyond the net-worth of the company;
- (b) blanket approval for inter-corporate loans and investments.

The Circular also requires the companies to specify the specific securities in which it proposes to make investments. However, in case of guarantees, the resolution can indicate the amount annually.

- (2) Rate of Interest: No loan to anybody corporate shall be made at the rate of interest lower than the prevailing 'bank rate'. [Bank rate means the rate at which the RBI lends to the commercial banks] being the standard rate made public by the Reserve Bank of India [sub-section (3)]
- (3) Unanimous resolution of the Board and approval of the public financial institutions: No loan or investment shall be made or guarantee or security given by the company in pursuance of sub-section (i) unless the resolution sanctioning it is passed at a meeting of the Board with the consent of all the directors present at the meeting and where any term loan is subsisting, the prior approval of the public financial institution referred to in section 4A is obtained.

No approval of the public financial institution (PFI) shall be necessary in the above case when loan, investment, etc. covered by sub-section (1) is within the alternative limit of 60% of the paid-up capital and free reserves, and no default has occurred in repayment of the loan or payment of interest to the concerned public financial institution(s). It may be observed that possibly due to drafting error, the other condition of 100 per cent of the free reserves as contained in sub-section (1) has been left out. Taking the spirit of the provision it seems no permission as aforesaid would be required if loans, investments, etc. is also within 100 per cent of the free reserves provided no default has been made with regard to loan repayment or interest payments to the PFI.

(4) Register of Investments and Loans:

- (a) Every company shall keep a register showing the following particulars in respect of every investment or loan made, guarantee given or security provided by it in relation to anybody corporate under sub-section (1), namely :—
- (i) the name of the body corporate;
 - (ii) the amount, terms and purpose of the investment or loan or security or guarantee;
 - (iii) the date on which the investment or loan has been made; and
 - (iv) the date on which the guarantee has been given or security has been provided in connection with a loan.
- (b) The particulars of investment, loan, guarantee or security referred to in clause (a) shall be entered chronologically in the register aforesaid within seven days of the making of such investment or loan, or the giving of such guarantee or the provision of such security [sub-section (5)].

It is noticed that though by virtue of sub-section (8), particulars of rights issues need not be entered in this Register, it would be desirable to do so. Place of keeping the Register - The register referred to in sub-section (5) shall be kept at the registered office of the company concerned and: -

(a) shall be open to inspection at such office; and

(b) extracts may be taken therefrom and copies thereof may be required, by any member of the company to the same extent, in the same manner, and on payment of same fees as in the case of the register of members of the company; and the provisions of section 163 shall apply accordingly [sub-section (6)]. If default is made in connection with this Register, then the company and every officer of the company who is in default, shall be punishable with fine extending to rupees five thousand and with a further fine up to rupees five hundred for each day of default after the first day.

(5) Guidelines: The Central Government may prescribe guidelines for the purposes of this section, i.e., inter-company loans, investment, guarantee, etc.

(6) Default in repayment of Deposits, etc.:- No company which has defaulted in complying with the provisions of section 58A shall, directly or indirectly, make any loan, give any guarantee or provide security or make any investment as above till the default is subsisting [sub-section (4)].

(7) Exemptions: Nothing contained in section 372A shall apply to any loan made, any guarantee given or any security provided or any investment made by—

- (i) a banking company, or an insurance company, or a housing finance company in the ordinary course of its business, or a company established with the object of financing industrial enterprises, or of providing infrastructure facilities;
- (ii) a company whose principal business is the acquisition of shares, stock, debentures or other securities;
- (iii) private company, unless it is a subsidiary of a public company;

- (iv) the company in shares allotted in pursuance of section 81(1)(a, i.e., rights issues;
- (v) any loan made by a holding company to its wholly owned subsidiary;
- (vi) to any guarantee given or any security provided by a holding company in respect of loan made to its wholly owned subsidiary; or
- (vii) to acquisition by a holding company, by way of subscription, purchase or otherwise, the securities of its wholly owned subsidiary [sub-section (8)].

(8) Penalty: If default is made in complying with the provisions of this section, other than sub-section (5) (i.e., other than with respect to the maintenance of Register), the company and every officer of the company, who is in default, shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to two years or with fine which may extend to fifty thousand rupees.

However, where any such loan or any loan in connection with which any such guarantee or security has been given or provided by the company, has been repaid in full, no punishment by way of imprisonment shall be imposed and where such loan has been repaid in part, the maximum punishment which may be imposed by way of imprisonment shall be appropriately reduced.

All persons who are knowingly parties to any such contravention shall be liable, jointly and severally, to the company for the repayment of the loan or for making good the same which the company may have been called upon to pay by virtue of the guarantee given or the securities provided by such company.

Explanations—For the purposes of section 372A,—

- (a) "loan" includes debentures or any deposit of money made by one company with another company, not being a banking company;
- (b) "free reserves" means those reserves which, as per latest audited balance-sheet of the company, are free for distribution as dividend and shall include balance to the credit of the securities premium account but shall not include share application money.

The Department of Company Affairs had clarified that the following investments would not attract the regulatory provisions of section 372. It may therefore be safely inferred that these exemptions shall continue to be available under section 372 A also :

1. Inter-corporate investments made by the exempted companies mentioned in sub-section (14) of section 372 [Now sub-section (8) of section 372A], and outstanding after the cessation of exemption under sub-section (14) would not come within the restrictions contained in section 372 (now sec. 372A) and the compliance of the said section would not, therefore, be required in this regard (Taxmann's Circulars and Clarifications, 1992 Edition, page 408).
2. Where a private company is converted into a public company or becomes a public company by virtue of the provisions of section 43A, the investment made by it prior to the date of its becoming a public company would not be hit by the provisions of either section 372(4) [now section 372A(1 and 2)] or section 373, and it would not, therefore, be necessary for the company to dispose of any of the said investments so as to bring them down to the percentage limit prescribed in section 372(2). [now section 372A(1)] (Taxmann 's Circulars and Clarifications, 1992 Edition, page 404).
3. The units issued by the Unit Trust of India under section 21 of the Unit Trust of India Act, 1963.
4. The restrictions contained in section 372 (now section 372A) are not applicable to acquisition of shares of one company by another company by way of gift (Taxmann's Circulars and Clarifications, 1992 Edition, page 408).

Can a subsidiary company invest in its holding company- Though sub-section (1) of section 372A is generally worded and therefore seems to permit investment by a subsidiary company in the shares of its holding company yet, inasmuch as section 42 prohibits such investment, a subsidiary company shall not be allowed to invest in its holding company.

Implication of Pledge of Shares Held as Investment In an Associated Company to a Bank for Grant of Loan by the Bank to the Associated Company – According to the decision of the Supreme Court in Lallan Prasad v. Rahmat Ali AIR 1967 SC 1322 - a pawnee (here pledgee) has only a special property in the pledge but the general property therein remains in the pawner and wholly reverts to him on discharge of the debt. This pledge is in reality a guarantee for the loan to the associated company and as such the Board of the pledger company should pass an unanimous resolution for making the pledge, provided the limit under section 372A has not been exceeded.

Applicability of section 372A to section 25 company or a guarantee company not having share capital- The provisions shall apply to these companies even when there is no share capital. There is no difficulty since the computation shall be based upon free reserves, if any.

Inter-Company loans

Section 372A vis-a-vis section 295- It would be worthwhile to take note of the fact that the provisions of section 295 of the Companies Act dealing with "Loans to Directors, etc." will have an impact on loan by a company to another private company in which a director of the first company is a director or member of the private company. Prior approval of the Central Government will be necessary for such loan, etc. Similarly if any one or more directors of the lending company exercise 25% or more of the total voting power in any other body corporate, then giving of the loan etc. will be subject to previous approval of the Central Government in terms of section 295 of the Act.

1.4.2. Acceptance of Deposits, Renewal, Repayment, Default and Remedies

Meaning of deposits

Explanation to section 58A appearing after sub-section (10) of section 58A of the Companies Act, 1956 defines the expression 'deposit' to mean any deposit of money with and includes any amount borrowed by a company but shall not include such categories of amount as may be prescribed in consultation with the Reserve Bank of India.

The expression 'deposit' has been further elaborated by Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975. Rule 2(b) provides that 'deposit' means any deposit of money with and includes any amount borrowed by a company. However according to rule 2(b) the expression 'deposit' does not include:

- (i) any amount received from the Central Government or a State Government or any amount received from any other source, and whose repayment is guaranteed by the Central Government or State Government or any amount received from a local authority or a foreign Government or any other foreign citizen, authority or person;
- (ii) any amount received as a loan from any banking company, State Bank of India (along with its subsidiaries), a nationalised bank including a co-operative bank;
- (iii) any amount received as loan from any of the notified financial institutions (including Industrial Finance Corporation Ltd., State Financial Corporations, Shipping Development Fund Committee, Unit Trust of India, Industrial Development Bank of India, Rehabilitation Industries Corporation of India Ltd., State Trading Corporation of India Ltd., Minerals and Metals Trading Corporation of India Ltd., any electricity board set up under the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948, Rural Electrification Corporation Ltd., Agricultural Finance Corporation Ltd., Industrial Reconstruction Bank (earlier Corporation) of India Ltd., the Industrial Credit and Investment Corporation of India Ltd., the National Industrial Development Corporation of India Ltd., the Tamil Nadu Industrial Investment Corporation Ltd., the State Industrial and Investment Corporation of Maharashtra Ltd., Life Insurance Corporation of India, General Insurance Corporation of India Ltd., and its subsidiaries, Gujarat Industrial Investment Corporation Ltd., any financial company wholly owned by the Central Government or State Government, Oil Industry Development Board, Housing Development Finance Corporation Ltd., any other financial company or Public Financial Institution which may be notified by the Central Government in this behalf in consultation with the Reserve Bank of India);

- (iv) any amount received by a company from any other company;
- (v) any amount received from an employee of the company by way of security deposit;
- (vi) any amount received by way of security or as an advance from any purchasing agent, selling agent or other agents in course of or for the purposes of the business of the company or any advance received against orders for the supply of goods or properties or for the rendering of any service;
- (vii) any amount received by way of subscriptions to any shares, stock, bonds or debentures pending the allotment of the said shares, stock, bonds or debentures and any amount received by way of calls in advance on shares, in accordance with the articles of association of the company so long as such amount is not repayable to the members under the articles of association of the company. Bonds or debentures referred herein represent bonds and debentures issued by the company, (a) on the basis of security of immovable property of the company and (b) with an option to convert them into shares of the company. These are the bonds and debentures more fully described under clause (x) below:
- (viii) any amount received in trust or any amount in transit;
- (ix) any amount received from a person who, at the time of the receipt of the amount, was a director of the company or any amount received from a relative of a director or its member by a private company:

Provided that the director, relative of a director or member, as the case may be, from whom money is received, furnishes to the company at the time of giving the money, a declaration in writing to the effect that the amount is not being given out of funds acquired by him by borrowing or accepting from others.

Thus, now a public company can accept any amount from its Directors. The ceilings of section 58A and other restrictive provisions thereunder shall not be applicable to such deposits.

Deposits received in joint names of director and non-director/shareholder and non-shareholder:

There may be circumstances of deposits being received in joint names of a director and a non-director and in the name of a shareholder and a non-shareholder in the case of a private company. These deposits would be exempt deposits as per clarification given in Circular No. 1/1/80-CLV, dated 3-5-1980. Under this clarification deposits received from a firm, all the partners of which are not directors in the deposit accepting company will not be exempt. On the other hand if all the partners are also directors of the borrowing company then the deposit (borrowing) will be exempt. The same logic will apply to a private company accepting deposit from a firm, where all the partners of the firm are not shareholders of the private company. The deposit so taken will not be exempt. On the other hand, when all the partners of the lending firm are shareholders of the borrowing private company, the amount received will be exempt - vide Circular No. 3/13/84-CLX, dated 27-11-1984. [Adapted, in the light of revised rule].

Acceptance of Deposits by a private company through an Advertisement:

Section 3(1)(iii)(d) introduced by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 renders a private company, a public company, if such a private company invites or accepts deposits from the public, other than its members, directors or their relatives.

- (x) any amount raised by the issue of bonds or debentures secured by the mortgage of any immovable property of the company or with an option to convert them into shares in the company provided that in the case of such bonds or debentures secured by the mortgage of any immovable property, the amount of such bonds or debentures shall not exceed the market value of such immovable property;

- (xi) any amount brought in by the promoters by way of unsecured loans in pursuance of stipulations of financial institutions subject to the fulfilment of the following conditions, namely :—
 - (a) the loans are brought in pursuance of the stipulation imposed by the financial institutions in fulfilment of the obligation of the promoters to contribute such finance;
 - (b) the loans are provided by the promoters themselves and/or by their relatives and not from their friends and business associates; and
 - (c) the exemption shall be available only till the loans of financial institutions are repaid and not thereafter;
- (xii) any amount received as loan from the National Dairy Development Board by companies owned by it directly or through its subsidiary companies.

The term 'financial institution' for the aforesaid sub-clause shall mean:

- (a) a public financial institution specified in or under section 4A of the Companies Act, 1956;
- (b) a State Financial, Industrial or Investment Corporation;
- (c) the State Bank of India or any of its subsidiary bank;
- (d) a nationalised bank;
- (e) the General Insurance Corporation of India; (f) the Industrial Reconstruction Bank of India;
- (g) any other institution which the Central Government may, by notification, specify in this behalf.

Deposit and loan : As per Explanation to section 58A and rule 2(b) referred to above, the expression 'deposit' has been defined to include any amount borrowed by a company. However, there had been a number of judicial decisions in the past bringing out distinction between a loan and a deposit. In Abdul Hamid Sahib v. Rahmat Bi AIR 1965 Mad. 417, it was observed that in a sense, deposit is also a loan with the difference that a loan is repayable the minute it is incurred. In the case of deposits repayment will depend on the maturity date fixed therein or the terms of agreement relating to the demand on the making of which the deposit becomes payable. In other words, unlike a loan which may become repayable instantly or on notice, there is no immediate obligation to repay in the case of deposits. It is repayable only on the basis provided in the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules.

In another case, the Supreme Court observed that the terms 'deposit' and loan' are not synonymous and whether a transaction is a deposit or a loan does not merely depend on the terms of documents, but has to be judged from the intention of the parties – Annamalai v. Veerappa AIR 1956 SC 12. Even the Limitation Act, 1963 provides for different periods of limitation for loan and deposit. In the case of a loan the period of limitation commences from the date when the loan is made, whereas in the case of deposits, it commences from the date when the demand is made.

It may also be noted that Rule 2(c) of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules states that the term "depositor" includes any person who has given a loan to a company.

Deposit and Debenture: According to section 2(12) of the Companies Act, 1956, debenture includes debenture stock, bonds and any other securities of a company whether constituting a charge on the assets of the company or not. A debenture is a document which either creates or acknowledges a debt. A debenture may be secured or unsecured. Where the debenture is unsecured, it will squarely fall within the definition of deposit. It is only the debentures which satisfy the conditions stipulated in Rule 2(b)(x) of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, which are excluded from the definition of deposits.

Invitation and acceptance of deposits

Section 58A and Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975 made thereunder contain the restrictions and limitations subject to which deposits may be invited and accepted by companies. The provisions of the section, as amended by the Amendment Act, 1988 and summary of the important rules made thereunder may be noted as follows:

1. Certain companies prohibited to invite deposits - No company with a net owned fund of less than Rupees one crore shall invite public deposits, [w.e.f. 28-11-2001]
2. Deposits not to be invited without issuing an advertisement- 'No company shall invite or accept any deposit except after the publication of an advertisement specifying therein the financial condition, management structure and other specified particulars of the company.

The advertisement shall be made in a leading English newspaper and in one vernacular (local language) newspaper circulating in the State in which the registered office of the company is situated. The advertisement must contain reference to the conditions subject to which deposits shall be accepted by the company.

The 'renewal of deposits' is 'acceptance of deposits' — Jagjivan HiralaDoshi v. Registrar of Companies [1989] 65 Comp. Cas. 553.

3. Deposits not allowed in case of default in repayment - The Companies (Amendment) Act, 1996 has added a new clause viz., clause (c) to sub-section (2) of section 58A whereby no company can invite or allow any other person to invite or cause to be invited on its behalf any deposit, if the company has made a default in the repayment of any deposit or part thereof and any interest thereupon in accordance with the terms and conditions of such deposit.

In order to check defaults in repayments of deposits or interest thereon, section 372A forbids such a company from making inter-company loans and investments till that default is made good.

4. Repayment of deposits- Every deposit received by a company, unless renewed in accordance with the Rules made under sub-section (1) of section 58A, shall be repaid in accordance with the terms and conditions of such deposits [subsection (3A) of section 58A added by the Amendment Act, 1988].
5. Declaration by the depositor- The form of application shall contain a declaration by the depositor that the money is not being deposited out of funds acquired by him by borrowing or accepting deposits from any other person.

The application shall be made in the form supplied by the company.

6. Nomination - A depositor may, at any time, make a nomination and the provisions of sections 109A and 109B, as far as may be, shall apply to the nomination."
7. Premature Repayment of Deposits: Under Rule 8(1) of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975, no deposit shall be repaid within 3 months of its acceptance. Thereafter, interest is payable on premature withdrawals as follows:

(a) Upto 6 months	Nil
(b) After 6 months	1% less than the rate applicable to the period for which deposit has actually run

Thus, if a company makes repayment of a deposit after a period of 6 months but before the date of maturity, the rate of interest payable on such deposit shall be less by 1 % from the rate that is applicable for the period for which such deposit has run, for example, suppose that a deposit was received for a period of three years and the rate of interest was 8%. If such a deposit is repaid on the expiry of second year and if the rate of interest for a 2-year maturity deposit was 7%, then the interest payable will be 6% (7% - 1%).

However, if a premature repayment is made for—

- (a) complying with the provisions of Non-banking Non-financial Companies (Reserve Bank) Directions, 1966, or

- (b) complying with the provisions of Rule 3 of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposit) Rules, 1975, or
- (c) converting with the consent of depositors into secured debentures in accordance with applicable rules in regard to the issue of "Rights Debentures", or
- (d) to provide for war risk or other related benefit to the personnel of naval, military or air forces or to their families on an application made by the association or society formed by such personnel, during the period of emergency declared under article 352 of the Constitution, then the aforesaid reduction in the rate of interest will not be made. Similarly there are regulatory provisions for renewing a deposit before its maturity to enable the depositor to have the benefit of a higher rate of interest. The renewal, in such a case, should be for a period longer than the unexpired period of the original deposit and the rate of interest as stipulated at the time of acceptance or renewal is reduced by 1 % for the expired period of the deposit and is paid or adjusted or recovered accordingly.

RBI Guidelines for premature payment of public deposits [Circular No. DNBS(PD) C.C. No. 44/02.02/2005, dated 5-10-2004] provide as follows:

- (i) Minimum lock-in-period- Minimum lock-in-period is 3 months.
- (ii) Problem companies - Problem companies are prohibited from making premature repayment of public deposits except the following:
 - (a) existing contractual obligations executed upto 5-10-2004.
 - (b) repayment to surviving depositors or to nominee in case of death of depositor.
 - (c) tiny deposits upto ₹10,000. In case of deposits above ₹10,000, premature withdrawal upto ₹10,000 can be paid before maturity to depositor for meeting expenses of emergent nature. All deposits standing in the name of sole/first depositor in the same capacity will be treated as one deposit for this purpose.
- (iii) Normally Run Companies-In case of normally run companies, after lock-in-period, premature repayment is at the sole discretion of the company and cannot be claimed as right, except when existing contract executed upto 5-10-2004 gives such a right. In case of death of depositor, premature repayment can be made even during lock-in-period.
- (iv) Interest for pre-mature repayment- (a) repayment within three months is prohibited (except in case of death of depositor). For premature repayment after 3 months but before 6 months, no interest will be payable, (b) in case of premature repayment of deposit/public deposit after 6 months interest payable will be 2% lower than the interest rate applicable to deposit for the period for which the deposit has actually run. If no interest rate was specified for that period, interest will be 3% lower than the minimum rate at which deposits are accepted by the company.

The companies shall intimate their depositors at least 2 months before the maturity of their respective deposits/public deposits, details of such maturity to ensure that matured deposits do not remain with company as unclaimed deposits.

- 8. Furnishing of Receipts to Depositors - Every company shall, on the acceptance or renewal of a deposit, furnish to the depositor or his agent a receipt for the amount received by the company within a period of eight weeks from the date of receipt of the money. The said receipt shall be signed by an officer of the company duly authorised by the company in this behalf.
- 9. A company cannot accept or renew deposits payable on demand.
- 10. Also, a company cannot accept deposits repayable before 6 months or after 36 months of the receipt. However, deposits for less than 6 months may be accepted provided such deposits do not exceed 10% of the paid-up capital and free reserves, and they are received against unsecured debentures or from shareholders in case of a public company or were guaranteed by the directors of the company.

However, in no case shall a company accept deposits repayable before 3 months.

11. Interest on Deposits - No company shall invite or accept or renew any deposits in any form, on a rate of interest exceeding 12.5% p.a. at rests which shall not be shorter than monthly rests.
12. Ceiling on Deposits - A company shall not accept deposits over and above the following limits:
 - (a) 10 per cent of the paid up capital and free reserves, in the case of deposits in the form of any deposit against an unsecured debenture, deposit from a shareholder (not being a deposit accepted by a private company from its shareholders) or any deposit guaranteed by the Directors of the company;
 - (b) any other deposit not exceeding 25% of the aggregate of the paid-up share capital and free reserves of the company.

No Government company shall accept any deposits in excess of 35 per cent of its paid-up capital and free reserves.

Paid-up Capital and Free Reserves: It is essential to deduct the amount of unprovided depreciation from the aggregate of paid-up share capital and free reserves for determining the limits up to which deposits can be accepted by a company, for the purpose of Explanation to Rule 3 of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975 (Circular No. 4/28/81 -CL-X, dated 2-9-1981). The limits up to which a company can accept deposits are to be computed with reference to aggregate of paid-up capital and free reserves as appearing in the latest audited balance sheet of the company and any change arising thereafter is to be disregarded (Circular No. 2/18/81-CL-X, dated 27-7-1981). But, there is no prescription in the Explanation to Rule 3 that latest audited balance sheet' means only the balance sheet of the company for a year in relation to which the audit has been completed before March 31st of the year in which the return is filed - Malayala Manorama Co. Ltd v. ROC [1990] 69 Comp. Cas. 339, 345/[1990] 3 Comp. LJ 167 (Ker.).

Meaning of Free Reserves: According to Rule 2(d) of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975, the term 'free reserve' means "the balance in the share premium account, capital and debenture redemption reserves shown or published in the balance sheet of the company and created by appropriation out of the profits of company, but does not include the balance in any reserve created:

- (i) for repayment of any future liability or for depreciation in assets or for bad debts;
- (ii) by the revaluation of any assets of the company".

The Department of Company Affairs has clarified that the amount of surplus of profit and loss account appearing in the balance sheet of the company shall form part of the 'free reserve' (Communication No. 3/1 /80-CL.X, dated 3-2-1982).

The Department has further stated that the subsidy received under the Central Government Outright Grant & Subsidies Scheme, 1971 shall also be treated as free reserve provided the following conditions are satisfied:

- (i) the subsidy is received in cash;
- (ii) the subsidy has been utilised for the purpose for which it was received;
- (iii) the period of 5 years from the commencement of production has elapsed and the subsidy has not become recoverable in terms of the conditions of grant (Communication No. 3/5/ 84-CL.X, dated 5-12-1984).

Changes in paid-up capital subsequent to the close of the financial year: As already noted, the limits up to which a company can accept deposits are to be computed with reference to aggregate of paid-up capital and free reserves as appearing in the latest audited balance sheet of the company and any change arising thereafter is to be disregarded (Circular No. 2/18/81-CL-X, dated 27-7-1981). The reason is that there are several elements other than paid-up capital which go into computation of net worth on the basis of which the limits laid down under Rule 3 of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules for acceptance of deposits are worked out. By taking into account only the variation in the share capital of the company and at the same time ignoring the other components of net worth the position would get distorted (Communication No. 4/2/84-CLX, dated 25-7-1984 of the Department of Company Affairs). Explanation to Rule 3 of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975 makes it clear that in arriving at the aggregate of paid-up capital and free reserves of the company, deduction should be made from such aggregate:

- (a) the amount of accumulated losses,
- (b) balance of deferred revenue expenses, and
- (c) intangible assets, if any, appearing in the latest audited balance sheet by reference to which the aggregate of paid-up capital and free reserves is to be determined for ascertaining the permissible amount of deposits.

13. Penalties for Contravention - Any deposit received in contravention of the provisions of the Act/ Rules must be paid back within 30 days from the date of acceptance of such deposit. The period of 30 days may be extended by the Central Government by another period but not exceeding 30 days.

In case of default, the company shall be subjected to fine which shall not be less than twice the amount not repaid and $\frac{1}{2}$ of the fine shall be paid to the depositor. In addition, every officer of the company, who is in default, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend upto 5 years [Section 58A(5)].

Penalty for acceptance of deposit- Where the contravention relates to acceptance of deposit, the company may be subjected to fine which shall not be less than the amount of deposit so accepted.

Penalty for invitation of any deposit - Where contravention relates to the invitation of any deposit, the company shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ₹10 lakh but shall not be less than ₹50,000.

In both these cases of acceptance or invitation of deposit in contravention of the requirements of section 58 A and the rules made thereunder, every officer of the company who is in default shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years and shall also be liable to fine — H.H. Marthanda Varma & H.H. Bhupendra Narayana Singh v. Registrar of Companies [1988] 64 Comp. Cas. 125.

14. Consequences of Non-Refund - Where a company has failed to repay any deposit or part thereof in accordance with the terms and conditions of such deposit, the Company Law Board (now Tribunal*) may, if it is satisfied, either on its own motion or on the application of the depositor, that it is necessary so to do to safeguard the interests of the company, the depositors or the public, direct by order, the company to make repayment of such deposit or part thereof forthwith or within such time and subject to such conditions as may be specified in the order [Sub-section (9) added by the Amendment Act, 1988].

Besides, the company shall not be allowed to invite or allow any other person to invite on its behalf any deposit till the default in repayment of any deposit or interest thereon continues [Section 58A(2)(c)].

In Re, Thapar Agro Mills Ltd. [1997] 2 CLJ 270 (NR) the case before the CLB (now Tribunal') was that in view of the precarious financial position of the company the repayment of matured fixed deposits be further deferred. The applications were made by depositors who were not repaid the matured deposits. The CLB (now Tribunal') taking note of the precarious financial condition of the company and its potential capability of repaying the deposits and having regard to the existence of non-encumbered assets of the company allowed the company a further period of two years to make the payment along with additional interest. It also directed that eventually if the company turns sick and a reference is made to BIFR, the company shall draw the attention of the BIFR to the Order of the CLB (now Tribunal*) in this respect.

Even where company has been declared as a sick company and reference has been registered with BIFR, in Smt. Usha D. Rohrav. Electrex India Ltd. [2000] 28 SCL 275 (CLB - Chennai) it was held that the company would be liable to repay deposits made by the depositors with the company.

While making an order for repayment, CLB (now Tribunal*) should give reasonable opportunity to all concerned including the company. As to whether the repayment should be ordered forthwith or within the extended time and whether any conditions should be imposed, it is necessary to keep in mind the interest of the company, the depositors and the public interest. While permitting time for repayment, interest of small depositors have to be kept uppermost in mind and management has to strain its resources to give priority to small depositors - Modern Denim Ltd., In re [1998] 15 SCL 436 (CLB - New Delhi). It was further observed that while considering proposal for extension of time for repayment:

- (i) needs of depositors who are in indigent circumstances like hospitalisation, old age, marriage in the family, etc., have to be kept in view.
- (ii) no proposal for repayment can extend to a period exceeding 3 years.
- (iii) the chairman of the company can be ordered to execute a personal guarantee in favour of the secretary, CLB (now Tribunal*) which shall be liable to be implemented in case of any deviation from the Schedule.

Any repayment scheme proposing a lesser rate of interest than contracted rate shall not be accepted - Members of Public Holding Public Deposits in the Company v. DCM Financial Services Ltd. [1998] 18SCL 1 (CLB-New Delhi)". Where reference to BIFR has been made because the company has become potentially sick, CLB (now Tribunal*) held that even though the company had not specifically sought re-scheduling of the deposits, it would not be appropriate to direct the company to repay all the deposits immediately - Savita Jain v. Viniyoga Clothex Ltd. [1998] 17 SCL 309 (CLB - New Delhi). CLB (now Tribunal*) in this case, further held that since the rehabilitation proposals were under consideration, the repayment of the deposits should be justifiably postponed for a period of 2 years from the date of maturity. However, the deposits of those persons who were in indigent circumstances like old age, serious sickness, other urgent family needs, etc., could be paid. Besides, company should continue to pay the current interest on deposits and clear the arrears of accumulated interest, if any, within one month from the date of receipt of copy of this Order.

In Air Force Naval Housing Board v. KHSL Industries Ltd. [1998] 16 SCL 631 (CLB - New Delhi), the company and the depositors agreed for a schedule of repayment and the company failed to comply with the first installment itself. The CLB (now Tribunal*), in order to ensure that the repayment did take place, as per the Schedule, ordered that, in the event of any default, Vice-Chairman/Director shall be identified as the 'officer in default'. It may be clarified that in the following circumstances, application under section 58A(9) of the Act will not lie :

- (i) Deposit made for booking/purchase of scooter, car, etc.
- (ii) Deposits accepted by financial companies like hire-purchase, finance company, a housing finance company, an investment company, a loan/mutual benefit financial company, an equipment leasing company, a chit fund company or a company, which receives deposits under any scheme; or arrangement by way of contributions/subscriptions or by sale of units/certificates.
- (iii) Deposits accepted by a sick industrial company covered by the Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985, in respect of which the Board for Industrial & Financial Reconstruction, has specifically, by order, suspended the operation of any contract, agreement, settlement, etc. under section 22(3) of the said Act.

(iv) Deposits accepted by relief undertakings which are notified as such under the State laws.

Procedure for filing an application before the Company Law Board for nonpayment of matured deposits - The procedure for filing an application for non-payment of matured deposits or investments by a company before the Company Law Board (CLB) provides for filing Form No. 4 prescribed under the CLB Regulations 1991, in duplicate along with photocopy of deposit receipts accompanied by a demand draft of ₹50 drawn in favour of Pay and Accounts Officer, Department of Company Affairs (DCA) payable at New Delhi, Mumbai, Kolkata and Chennai, as the case may be. Each depositor is required to file separate Form No. 4. Those having more than one deposit in the same company may file only one Form No. 4 application. The jurisdiction of the Bench is as per the location of the registered office.

There are four CLB Benches located in New Delhi, Mumbai, Kolkata and Chennai with the Principal Bench in New Delhi.

Dealing with complaints relating to Deposits, Mutual Funds, Collective Investment Scheme, etc. [Press Note: 3/2001, dated 2-7-2001 issued by the Department of Company Affairs]

The Department of Company Affairs receives from general public a number of complaints relating to Deposits, Mutual Funds, Collective Investment Scheme, etc. in liquidation and also other investor complaints.

The Department of Company Affairs has informed the general public through this Press Note that there are four types of companies, namely:-

- (a) Banking Companies;
- (b) Non-Banking Financial Companies;
- (c) Non-Banking Non-Financial Companies (Listed); and
- (d) Non-Banking Non-Financial Companies (Unlisted).

The complaints relating to deposits in Banking Companies and Non-Banking Financial Companies are dealt with RBI. Investors complaints relating to Non-Banking Non-Financial Companies (Listed) are dealt with by the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI). The complaints in respect of Non-Banking Non-Financial Companies (Unlisted) are dealt with by the Department of Company Affairs. The public is advised to approach these regulatory bodies for redressal of their grievances in the first instance itself. Similarly, complaints against companies in liquidation should be addressed to the concerned Official Liquidators attached to the High Courts.

In the case of deposits from Non-Banking Non-Financial Companies, the depositors should, in the first instance, approach the Company Law Board* and if the orders passed by the above Board are not honoured then they should approach to the concerned Registrar of Companies with a certified copy of the order of CLB.

Investors complaints of unlisted companies are dealt with by the Department of Company Affairs. On receipt of a complaint, the same is registered and number is given. The Department pursues the matter with the company and in the case of non-settlement of the complaint, the matter is referred to Registrar of Companies for prosecution.

Petition should be accompanied by a demand draft of the prescribed amount payable to Pay and Accounts Officer, DCA. It should be further accompanied by affidavits verifying application from all the petitioners drawn on non-judicial stamp paper of requisite value duly attested by notary public or Oath Commissioner.

It may be clarified that the depositors can, besides getting the relief under the Companies Act, take action against the defaulting companies under the normal civil law of the country.

Vide companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002, Now Tribunal - Yet to take effect

15. Small depositors - Special provisions (Sections 58AA and 58AAA) - The Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 has added two new sections, viz., sections 58AA and 58AAA, for the protection of small depositors. 'A small depositor' means a depositor who has invested in a financial year a sum not exceeding Rupees twenty thousand in a company and includes his successors, nominees and legal representatives. (Explanation to section 58AA)

- (a) The provisions contained in these sections are as follows - If any default is made by a company in repayment of any public deposits accepted from small depositors or part thereof or any interest thereupon, section 58AA makes it obligatory on the part of the company to give an intimation on monthly basis to the Company Law Board within 60 days from the date of default. Such intimation shall include particulars in respect of the names and addresses of each small depositor, the principal sum of deposits due to them and interest accrued thereupon.

The Company Law Board shall, on receipt of the intimation, exercise on its own motion, powers conferred upon it by sub-section (9) of section 58A and pass an appropriate order within a period of 30 days from the date of receipt of intimation from the company.

The Company Law Board may pass the above order after giving the small depositors an opportunity of being heard. However, it shall not be necessary for a small depositor to be present at the hearing of the proceedings.

- (b) Prohibition on companies to accept further deposits - Sub-section (4) prohibits a company to accept further deposits from 'small depositor' unless each small depositor, whose deposit has matured, had been paid the amount of the deposit and the interest accrued thereupon.

This prohibition will, however, not apply in the following cases:

- (i) where such deposit has been renewed voluntarily by the small depositor; or
- (ii) where repayment of the deposit has become impracticable due to the death of the small depositor or a competent court or authority has stayed its repayment.

- (c) Advertisement and Application Form - Where a company has defaulted in repayment of deposit or part thereof or any interest thereon to a small depositor, it shall state, in every future advertisement and application form for inviting deposits from the public, the total number of small depositors and amount due to them in respect of which such default has been made [Sub-section (5)].

- (d) Waiver of interest due to depositors - Where any interest accrued on deposits of the small depositors has been waived, the fact of such waiver shall be mentioned by the company in every advertisement and application form inviting deposits issued after such waiver [Sub-section (6)].

- (e) Loan for working capital to be used for repayment of deposits - If a company has accepted deposits from small depositors and subsequent to this obtains funds by way of loan for working capital from any bank, it shall first utilise such funds for the repayment of any deposit or any part thereof or any interest thereupon to the small depositor before applying such funds for any other purpose [Sub-section (7)].

It may be noted that the aforesaid provision mentions only loan raised from bank and not from any other source. Further, since the funds are raised for working capital, the same may not be permitted by the lending bank towards repayment of small depositors, there being no corresponding duty cast upon the bank.

- (f) Application form to contain statement- As per sub-section (8) of section 58AA, every application form issued by a company to a small depositor for accepting deposits from him shall contain a statement to the effect that the applicant has been apprised of—

- ❖ every past default by the company in repayment of deposit or interest thereon; and
- ❖ the waiver of interest as above and the reasons therefore.

It may be noted that the prohibition to accept any deposit from small depositors under sub-section (4) applies where there is a subsisting default. As against this, sub-section (8) dealing with issue of application form to small depositors relates to past default(s) which presumably are no longer subsisting.

[Note: It appears from the provisions that the companies may have two sets of forms for accepting deposits from public - one to be issued to the small depositors and the other for others. Alternatively, to escape the aforesaid regulatory provisions, a company may not accept deposits of ₹20,000 or less].

- (g) Penalty for Default - Sub-section (9) of section 58AA provides that whoever knowingly fails to comply with the provisions of this section or comply with any order of the Company Law Board shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to three years and shall also be liable to fine for not less than ₹500 for every day during which such non-compliance continues. Further, the punishment may be awarded to every director of the company as well as the company [Section 58AA(10)].

It may be noted that sub-section (10) does not draw any distinction between the executive and non-executive directors and deems every director to be guilty of the offence.

Section 58AAA makes every offence connected with or arising out of acceptance of deposits under section 58A or section 58AA to be cognizable offence under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. But, no court shall take cognizance of any offence connected with or arising out of acceptance of deposits except on a complaint made by the Central Government or any officer authorised by it in this behalf.

Rule 8A of the Acceptance of Deposits Rules, 1975 (inserted by the Amendment Rules, 2001, w.e.f. 28-11 -2001) provides for payment of penal rate of interest on overdue deposits. The Rule provides as follows :

A penal rate of interest of eighteen per cent shall be paid for the overdue period in case of public deposits matured and claimed but remaining unpaid. In case of deposit made by a small depositor, the penal rate of interest shall be twenty per cent compoundable on an annual basis.

16. Maintenance of Liquid Assets - As per Rule 3A, every company shall before the 30th day of April of each year, deposit or invest, as the case may be, a sum which shall not be less than 15 per cent (w.e.f. 1st April, 1992) of the amount of its deposits maturing during the year ending on the 31st of March next following in any one or more of the securities prescribed in this regard. The amount so invested or deposited shall only be used in repayment of the deposits outstanding and repayable within next 31st March. At no time such investment or deposit shall fall below 10% of the deposits repayable within next 31st March.

Under rule 3A of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975 liquid assets are deposits or investments made in:

- a current account or other deposit account with any scheduled bank free from any charge or lien.
- unencumbered securities mentioned in clauses (a) to (d) and (ee) of section 20 of Indian Trusts Act, 1882.
- unencumbered securities of Central Government or of any State Government.
- unencumbered bonds issued by the Housing Development Finance Corporation Ltd.

Companies are required to deposit or invest in such liquid assets before 30th April of each year, a sum not less than 15% of the amounts of deposits maturing during the year ending 31st March of next following year.

For the purpose of compliance, the securities will be reckoned at their market value. The liquid assets can be used only for repayment of deposits maturing during the year. However, the amount remaining deposited/invested at any time shall not be less than 10% of the deposits maturing and remaining to be repaid until 31st March of that year.

Non-compliance of Rule 3A - not a continuing offence - Offence of violating rule 3A of Deposit Rules, 1975 is not a continuing offence and complaint against such an offence after expiry of six months would be barred by limitation - Sivandhi Adityan v. Additional Registrar of Companies [1995] 83 Comp. Cas. 616 (Mad.).

Register of deposits

According to Rule 7 of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975, every company accepting deposits shall keep at its registered office one or more registers in which there shall be entered separately in the case of each depositor the following particulars, namely:—

- (a) name and address of the depositor;
- (b) date and amount of each deposit;
- (c) duration of the deposit and the date on which each deposit is repayable;
- (d) rate of interest;
- (e) date or dates on which repayment of interest will be made;
- (f) any other particulars relating to the deposit.

The register of deposit shall be kept for a minimum period of 8 years from the financial year in which the latest entry is made in the register.

Brokerage on deposits

With effect from 2-1-1986, a company can pay brokerage on deposits collected by, or through, a broker at a rate not exceeding the rates prescribed as under:

Deposits upto one year	1% of the deposits collected by or through brokers.
Deposits for a period of more than one year but upto 2 years	1½ of the deposits collected by or through brokers.
Deposits for a period exceeding 2 years	2% of the deposits collected by or through brokers.

The payment of brokerage should be only on one time basis.

Any person who is authorised by a company in writing to solicit deposits on its behalf and through whom deposits are procured will only be entitled to brokerage and payment of brokerage to any other person for procuring deposits shall be deemed to be not in conformity with the rules. [Explanation to rule 1(d)].

Exemptions

The provisions of section 58A do not apply to:

1. A banking company [Section 58A(7)].
2. Companies other than banking companies as the Central Government may, after consultation with the Reserve Bank of India, specify in this behalf.

Exemption of small scale units: In pursuance of its powers, the Central Government has, after consultation with the Reserve Bank of India, granted exemption from the applicability of the provisions of section 58A to the companies which are small scale units as per the parameters notified from time to time.

According to the Notification GSR No. 73(E), dated 2-2-1996, the exemption from the provisions of section 58A of the Act shall be available to small scale industrial units only if they fulfil all the following conditions, namely:

- (a) the paid-up capital of the company does not exceed rupees 25 lakhs;
- (b) the company accepts deposits from not more than 100 persons;
- (c) there is no invitation to public for deposits; and
- (d) the amount of deposits accepted by the company does not exceed rupees 20 lakhs or the amount of its paid-up capital, whichever is less.

3. Financial Companies as the Central Government may, after consultation with the Reserve Bank of India, specify in this behalf.

However, the Central Government cannot exempt the financial companies from the provisions relating to advertisement contained in section 58A(2)(&). The Central Government, in exercise of its aforesaid powers, exempted all classes of financial companies* from all the provisions of section 58A except the provisions relating to advertisement—vide Notification No. SO 523(E), dated 18-9-1975.

4. Companies exempted by the Central Government [Section 58A(8)J: The Central Government has been empowered to grant partial or total exemption from the provisions of section 58A for a specified period to a company (or a class of companies) after consultation with the Reserve Bank of India. The Central Government is also empowered to grant extension of time to any company (or a class of companies) after consultation with the Reserve Bank in complying with these provisions. The Department of Company Affairs has announced certain guidelines for filing applications under sub-section (8) of section 58.

Issue of Commercial Paper Exempted: The Department of Company Affairs has vide notification dated 29-12-1989 exempted the class of companies which fulfil the criteria under the Non-Banking Companies (Acceptance of Deposits through Commercial Paper) Directions, 1989 from the provisions of section 58A with respect to deposits received by non-banking companies by the issue of commercial paper as per the aforementioned Directions. The following conditions are required to be satisfied:

- (i) the companies comply with the terms and conditions stipulated from time to time by the Reserve Bank of India relating to the issue of such commercial paper; and
- (ii) the companies in their annual account disclose the maximum amount raised at any time during the financial year and the amount outstanding as at the end of the financial year.

Advertisement for inviting deposits [Rule 4]

Every company intending to invite deposits or allowing or causing any person to invite deposits on its behalf is required to issue an advertisement for the purpose in a leading English newspaper and in one vernacular newspaper circulating in the State in which the registered office of the company is situated. Each advertisement should contain the particulars as prescribed in Rule 4 of the Acceptance of Deposits Rules, 1975. The advertisement must be issued on the authority and in the name of the Board of directors of the company. It must also state the date on which the text was approved by the Board of directors. It must contain reference to the conditions subject to which the deposits shall be accepted by the company.

According to section 58B, an advertisement inviting deposits is a prospectus and consequently all the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956, applicable to the prospectus, are applicable to the advertisement inviting deposits.

Signing of Advertisement: The advertisement should be signed by a majority of the directors in the Board of the company, as constituted at the time the Board approved the advertisement, or their duly authorised agents, in writing and a copy of the same should be delivered to the Registrar of Companies for registration. Even a letter of authority is sufficient for this purpose and power of attorney is not necessary.

Period of validity of advertisement and delivery of the text to the Registrar: The advertisement shall remain valid for a period of 6 months from the date of the closure of the financial year in which it is issued or until the date the balance sheet is laid before the company in general meeting or where the Annual General Meeting is not held, the latest date on which the meeting should have been held, whichever is earlier. A fresh advertisement has to be made in each succeeding financial year for inviting deposits thereafter.

Statement in lieu of advertisement [Rule 4A]: Where a company intends to accept deposits without inviting or allowing or causing any other person on its behalf, to invite such deposits, it need not issue the advertisement. It is, however, required to file with the Registrar a statement in lieu thereof containing all the particulars required to be included in the advertisement under the Rules and signed (in the same manner as the advertisement for deposits is to be signed) before accepting any deposit.

The statement in lieu of advertisement shall be valid until the expiry of 6 months from the date of closure of the financial year in which it is so delivered or until the date on which the balance sheet is laid before the company in the annual general meeting, or, where the annual general meeting for any year has not been held, the latest day on which that meeting should have been held in accordance with the provisions of the Act, whichever is earlier.

Acceptance of deposits in joint names [Rule 8(2)]

Where depositors so desire, deposits may be accepted in joint names not exceeding three, with or without any one of the clause namely "either or survivor", "Number one or survivor", "any one or survivor" [This sub-rule (2) has been inserted by Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1992, Notification No. GSR 814(E), w.e.f. 19-10-1992].

Penal interest on overdue deposits

Rule 8A of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975 (w.e.f. 28-11-2001) provides for payment of penal rate of interest on overdue deposits. The rule provides as follows:

A penal rate of interest of 18% shall be paid for the overdue period in case of public deposits matured and claimed but remaining unpaid. In case of deposit made by a small depositor, the penal rate of interest shall be 20% compoundable on an annual basis.

Return of deposits [Rule 10]

Every non-banking non-financial company is required to file with the Registrar on or before the 30th day of June of every year, a return of deposits in the prescribed form furnishing information contained therein as on 31st of March of that year duly certified by the auditors of the company. A copy of the return is required to be simultaneously furnished to the Reserve Bank of India. The form of return of deposits as prescribed in Rule 10 of the Deposit Rules has been revised w.e.f. 19-4-1985. All the returns of deposits as on 31st March, 1985 and subsequent years are to be filed subsequent to 10-4-1985 in the revised form.

Offence of not filing a return under rule 10 of the Companies (Acceptance of Deposits) Rules, 1975 is not punishable if no complaint is made within six months of 30th June - Shree Dharma Sugar Industries (P.) Ltd. v. Registrar of Companies [1989] 66 Comp. Cas. 337 (Kar.).

5. Reasons to be stated for unfavourable or qualified answers

Where, in the auditor's report, the answer to any of the questions referred to in paragraph 4 is unfavourable or qualified, the auditor's report shall also state the reasons for such unfavourable or qualified answer, as the case may be. Where the auditor is unable to express any opinion in answer to a particular question, his report shall indicate such fact together with the reasons why it is not possible for him to give an answer to such question.

1.5.2. Statutory Auditors – Cost Auditors and Financial Auditors

Who can be appointed as an Auditor (Qualifications to be an Auditor)

Section 226 of the Act prescribes the qualifications and disqualifications for being appointed as a company auditor. An auditor of a company possessing the qualifications prescribed in section 226 of the Act is generally known as the statutory auditor of the company as he derives his duties, power and authority from the statute i.e., the Companies Act. According to section 226(1) "a person shall not be qualified as auditor of a company unless he is a chartered accountant within the meaning of the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949". It is further provided that a firm whereof all the partners practising in India are qualified for appointment as auditor, may be appointed by its firm name to be the auditor of a company. In this regard, it may be noted that under the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949, only a chartered accountant holding a certificate of practice can be engaged in the public practice of accountancy. Thus, it is only a practising chartered accountant who can be appointed as an auditor of a company.

Further, such a chartered accountant is also subject to the requirements of ethical conduct as contained in the Chartered Accountants Act. The High Court of Delhi in the case of the Council of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. B. Ram Goel [2001] 29 SCL 257 has held the chartered accountant concerned as guilty for writing a letter to the shareholders of a company where he rendered professional service, for sale of their shares in that company (originally, the Council of the Institute held the chartered accountant as guilty).

In another case Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. S.K. Jain [2001] 29 SCL 265, the same High Court held the chartered accountant concerned as guilty of gross negligence in certifying a statement of export of leather goods, without verifying facts from relevant books/documents of the concerned company.

Apart from practising chartered accountants, section 226(2) allows a holder of a certificate in an erstwhile Part B State which entitled him to act as an auditor of companies in the territories of that State, to be appointed as an auditor of companies registered anywhere in India.

Thus, an auditor of a company must either be:

1. a practising chartered accountant; or
2. the holder of a certificate in erstwhile Part B States entitling him to act as an auditor of companies.

Who cannot be appointed as an Auditor (Disqualifications)

The following entities or persons have been disqualified under section 226 of the Act from being appointed as an auditor of a company—

- (a) a body corporate;
- (b) an officer or employee of the company;
- (c) a person who is a partner or who is in the employment of an officer or employee of the company;
- (d) a person who is indebted to the company for an amount exceeding ₹1,000 or who has given any guarantee or provided any security in connection with the indebtedness of any third person for an amount exceeding ₹1,000.
- (e) a person holding any security of the auditee company when such security carries voting right.

A question may arise as regards this disqualification insofar as a firm is concerned. A firm is not a person in the eye of law and as such if any one partner happens to hold security, prima facie, that partner is disqualified but not the firm. However, having regard to the proviso to section 226(1) of the Act, wherein, it is stated that 'any partner so practising may act in the name of the firm', it appears that the identity of the firm becomes the identity of the partner. Accordingly, it seems that even if a single partner becomes disqualified under this ground, the firm in which he is a partner also becomes disqualified.

- (f) a person who by virtue of the above listed provisions is disqualified for appointment as auditor of any other body Corporate which is that company's subsidiary or holding company or a subsidiary of that company's holding company or would be so disqualified if the body corporate were a company.

Disqualification may come to an auditor if he ceases to be a member of the ICAI or is adjudged as having unsound mind or is an undischarged insolvent (vide sections 8 and 20 of the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949). Further, in a clarification issued by the Central Government, Department of Company Affairs, it has been stated that if a person is appointed as statutory auditor, he cannot simultaneously be appointed internal auditor of the company for the same period.

If after his appointment an auditor becomes subject to any of the disqualifications listed above, he shall be deemed to have vacated his office forthwith. Thus, after appointment as auditor of banking company, if the auditor takes loan from the bank (including any branch of the bank) exceeding rupees one thousand, he becomes disqualified and has to vacate the office of the auditor in the banking company. The council of the ICAI has decided that no auditor/audit firm who/which does not have the Peer Review Certificate issued by the Peer Review Board can carry on audit of listed companies in respect of accounting periods commencing from April 1, 2009. Also such auditor/audit firm is debarred from attesting the financial statements in respect of IPOs of companies - Source - The Hindu Business Line (N. Delhi Edition) of April 20, 2009.

The erstwhile Dept. of Company Affairs had issued the Circular No. 14/51/62-PR; it reads as under:

"It is the view of the Department that it would not be desirable practice for a practising Chartered Accountant X who is connected with the managing director of company, A or where X acts as auditor of company A, to be on the Board of Company B or to act or be employed as tax or financial advisor to company B, where companies A and B are in the same group, because he may find it difficult to exercise an independent judgment." It may be noted that the circular does not possess the legal force. It roots on subjective proposition of desirability.

Appointment of First Auditors

Section 224(5) lays down that the first auditor or auditors of a company shall be appointed by the Board of directors within one month of the date of registration of the company. The auditor or auditors so appointed shall hold office until the conclusion of the first annual general meeting. The company may, however, at a general meeting, remove any such auditor or auditors and appoint in his, their place any other person who has been nominated for appointment by any member of the company and of whose nomination notice has been given to the members of the company not less than fourteen days before the date of the meeting.

If the Board of directors fails to exercise its power, the company in general meeting may appoint the first auditor or auditors.

Sometimes, the first auditors of a company are named in the Articles of Association. Such appointment of auditors cannot be held valid since the Companies Act grants it no recognition. The first auditors would be validly appointed only by a resolution of the Board of directors or that of the company in the general meeting.

Appointment of subsequent Auditors

Subsequent auditor or auditors of a company are appointed every year by the members in annual general meeting by passing an ordinary resolution. Section 224(1) provides that “every company shall, at each annual general meeting, appoint an auditor or auditors to hold office from the conclusion of that meeting until the conclusion of the next annual general meeting, and shall, within seven days of the appointment, give intimation thereof to every auditor so appointed”. Sub-section (1A) requires the auditors so appointed to communicate his acceptance or refusal to the Registrar within a period of thirty days of the receipt from the company of the intimation of his appointment. Acceptance or refusal has to be communicated in writing and must be in the Form prescribed under the Act. It may be noted that this requirement of intimation and communication in writing about acceptance or refusal to accept is restricted to appointment made in the annual general meeting only.

Where the auditor appointed by the members does not accept the appointment, can the vacancy so caused be treated as a casual vacancy and the Board of directors be authorised by the shareholders to appoint new auditors? The matter was referred to the Research Committee of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India which opined as follows:

‘The provisions of section 224 of the Act do not envisage changing the normal law of contract. Hence no appointment or reappointment is complete and effective if the auditor declines the same. Such a case is neither a vacancy caused by resignation nor a casual vacancy.

It further opined that the Companies Act clearly envisages that the appointment of the auditor should, as a general rule, rest with the shareholders. The shareholders have to exercise this power in all cases, except in the case of filling casual vacancy or appointing the first auditors. This power cannot be delegated to the Board of directors.

As such, another general meeting has to be convened to appoint a new auditor.

Tenure of Appointment

Section 224(1) provides that an auditor is appointed from the conclusion of one annual general meeting until the conclusion of the next annual general meeting. But, if the annual general meeting is not held within the period prescribed by section 166, should the office of the auditor fall vacant by the date general meeting ought to have been held. Unlike the case of directors, the answer seems to be in the negative—the auditor is expected to continue in office till the annual general meeting is actually held and concluded. Thus, if an annual general meeting is adjourned, his tenure will extend till the conclusion of the adjourned meeting.

Further, section 227(2) requires an auditor to report on every balance sheet and the profit and loss account which are laid before the company in general meeting during the tenure of his office. Thus, it seems that the duty of an auditor cannot be regarded as one restricted to auditing the accounts only of a particular accounting year.

For instance: 'A' was appointed as the auditor at the seventh annual general meeting of a company- 'X' Ltd. However, due to certain reasons, he could not complete the audit. Later, the company convened its eighth annual general meeting, the agenda for which did not include adoption of audited accounts since they were not ready. Let us assume, auditor 'B' is appointed in place of 'A' in this meeting. The question that arises is whether B is entitled or required to audit accounts of the earlier year also, since the financial statements pertaining to that year are proposed to be laid before the 9th annual general meeting. In view of the provisions of section 224(1), read with section 227(2), the legal position seems to be that 'B' should report on the financial statement of the earlier year also.

Reappointment of retiring auditor

In accordance with the provisions of section 224(2) of the Act, a retiring auditor, by whatsoever authority appointed, shall be reappointed by passing an ordinary resolution except in the following circumstances—

1. Where he is not qualified for reappointment.
2. Where he has given the company notice in writing of his unwillingness to be reappointed.
3. Where a resolution has been passed at that meeting appointing somebody else instead of him or providing expressly that he shall not be reappointed.
4. Where a notice has been given of an intended resolution to appoint some person or persons in the place of retiring auditor, and by reason of death, incapacity or disqualification of that person or of all other persons, the resolution cannot be proceeded with.

He would also not be eligible to be appointed as the auditor where he holds the audit of specified number of companies or more than that on the day of the appointment in terms of section 224(1B) of the Act.

Where 25% or more of the subscribed capital of the company is held by public-financial institution(s) Government company(ies), etc. or a combination of them, the retiring auditor is to be appointed only by a special resolution.

It may be noted that the circumstances in (1) to (4) are different from the rest two. Assuming disabilities under (5) and (6) do not exist as also circumstances under (1) to (4) are not there, the retiring auditor will be reappointed by the members by passing ordinary resolution. The reappointment will not be automatic. It may also be noted that non-reappointment of the retiring auditor in the AGM is not removal of the auditor as contemplated in section 224(7) of the Act. It is simple retirement.

Rights of retiring auditor [Section 225(2) & (3)]

The rights given to retiring auditor, which follow the principles of natural justice and ensure that shareholders get all the relevant information before deciding upon the resolution that the retiring auditor shall not be reappointed or that a person other than the retiring auditor be appointed as auditors are as follows :

- (1) right to receive notice of the resolution.

The Karnataka High Court in Ajit Kumar Iddya v. Institute of Chartered Accountants of India [1994]80Comp.Cas. 197:[1994]3Comp. LJ564:[1994] 13 Corpt. LA 445 (Kar.) has held that the mode of serving the retiring auditor with a copy of the resolution appointing a new auditor is not prescribed by the Companies Act. The law does not compel the company to send such a notice by registered post. Institute has no control over companies and, therefore, cannot prescribe the mode of service. The guidelines of the Institute have no binding effect upon companies.

- (2) right to make a written representation to the company and request its notification to members of the company.

- (3) right to get his representation circulated among the members. (The fact that the representation has been received must be mentioned in any notice of the resolution given to members).

The company or any other aggrieved person may make an application to the CLB alleging that by his written representation, the auditor is abusing the rights conferred by this section to secure needless publicity for defamatory matters. The CLB may, on such an application, direct that the representation need not be circulated or read out at the meeting and award costs against the auditor though the auditor is not a part to the application.

- (4) right to get his representation read out at the meeting, if it has not been sent to the members because of delay or default on the part of the company.

- (5) right to be heard at the meeting.

Appointment by Special Resolution

Section 224A of the Act, provides that in the case of a company in which twenty-five per cent or more of the subscribed share capital is held, whether singly or in any combination, by:

- (a) a public financial institution or a Government company or Central Government or any State Government, or
- (b) any financial or other institution established by any provincial or State Act in which a State Government holds not less than fifty-one per cent of the subscribed share capital, or
- (c) a nationalised bank or an insurance company carrying on general insurance business;

the appointment of an auditor or auditors shall be made in the annual general meeting by a special resolution only.

However, indication in notice that appointment of auditor is in accordance with section 224A is itself sufficient to mean that the resolution is to be passed as special resolution Subash Chand Agarwal v. Associated Limestone Ltd. [1998] 92 Comp. Cas. 525 (CLB - New Delhi).

The DCA has clarified that the aforesaid sub-clauses (a) to (c) to section 224A(1) are not mutually exclusive.

The provisions of sub-section (1) of that section would, therefore, apply to all cases of shareholdings in any combination by any of the institutions mentioned in the three clauses.

Section 224A does not specify the date on which twenty-five per cent of the subscribed capital must be held by the specified bodies/institutions to require the appointment of the auditor by a special resolution. The DCA, Government of India, has clarified that the material date is the date of the annual general meeting at which the special resolution is required to be passed.

If the company fails to pass a special resolution, it shall be deemed that no auditor or auditors had been appointed by the company at its annual general meeting and the Central Government will be empowered to make the appointment.

Appointment by Central Government

Section 224(3) of the Act provides that where at an annual general meeting no auditor or auditors are appointed or re-appointed, the Central Government may appoint a person to fill the vacancy. For this purpose, the company is charged with the responsibility of intimating the above fact to the Central Government within seven days from the date of such meeting. The company and every officer of the company who is in default in this respect are punishable with fine which may extend to rupees five thousand.

Where appointment by the Central Government becomes necessary, an application is required to be made to the Regional Director. There is no prescribed form of application but the circumstances in which the company failed to appoint an auditor in its annual general meeting should be detailed. It may be of interest to note that section 224(1B) of the Act providing for ceiling on the number of company audit that an auditor can undertake does not mention the appointment by the Central Government. Question remains on whether the ceiling rule is inapplicable where Central Government is the appointing authority. Having regard to the provisions of section 619 of the Act which clearly provides for application of section 224(1B) for appointment of auditor in the Government companies, it seems reasonable to construe that the Central Government will be guided by the ceiling rule even for the appointment under section 224(3) of the Act.

Casual vacancy

A casual vacancy in the office of the auditor can be filled by the Board of Directors [Sec. 224(6)], provided such vacancy has not been caused by resignation of the auditor. In the case of a casual vacancy arising on account of resignation, only the company in general meeting can fill the vacancy. The expression 'casual vacancy' has not been defined in the Act. Taking its natural meaning, it stands for the vacancy created by the auditor ceasing to act after he was validly appointed and the appointment was accepted. This may arise due to variety of reasons which include death, resignation, disqualification, dissolution, of the firm of auditors, etc. The provision to require filling of casual vacancy caused by the resignation of the auditor by the annual general meeting is in consonance with the principle of auditor's independence. This process may bring out facts regarding the auditor's resignation to the notice and scrutiny of the shareholders. Any abuse of authority or financial impropriety by the management that might have contributed to the resignation will be known. If the resigning auditor could be found to be conscientious and honest the general meeting may even request him to consider his decision and take appropriate steps to cure the evils, if any, in the management. The auditor appointed to a casual vacancy shall hold office till the conclusion of the next general meeting. However, it should be noted that a casual vacancy does not arise in the office of auditors on the expiry of one year of their appointment if the annual general meeting is not held in time.

Ceiling on audits (Restriction on number of audits)

The Companies (Amendment) Act, 1974 added two new sub-sections, viz., 224(1B) and 224(1C), with a view to restricting the number of companies in which a person can be appointed as an auditor. The idea probably is to prevent concentration of audits in few hands. Section 224 was further amended by the Amendment Act of 1988.

According to section 224(1B), an individual cannot be auditor of more than twenty companies at a time. Further, out of these twenty companies, not more than ten should be companies having a paid up share capital of ₹25 lakhs or more. In case the auditor is a partnership firm, the ceiling is twenty companies per partner of the firm. And where any partner is also a partner in any other firm or firms of auditors, the overall ceiling in relation to such a partner will be twenty.

Section 224(1B) has been amended by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988 to disallow the appointment of persons who are in full time employment elsewhere. Even in case of partnerships, such a partner shall be excluded from counting the number of audits per partner. However, although intention of the legislation seems to be as aforesaid, a drafting error of the section has resulted in unwarranted interpretations including that a person in whole-time employment elsewhere can be appointed auditor of specified number of companies. Also, another unintended interpretation is possible as regards an individual chartered accountant who is not employed elsewhere on whole time basis. There appears to be no bar to such an individual to hold any number of company audits.

Specified number of audits - In computing the specified number of audits, the following shall be taken into account:

- (i) all company audits where a person or a firm is appointed as joint auditor;
- (ii) audit of non-profit companies; and
- (iii) companies limited by guarantee and having share capital.

The following shall, however, be not taken into account:

- (a) Audit of private company (introduced by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000).
- (b) Branch audits- Thus, if X & Co. are the auditors of 'A Ltd.' and its ten branches, the assignment will be counted as only one audit. The DCA has also endorsed this view.
- (c) Guarantee companies not having share capital.
- (d) Special audits, investigations and audits of corporations set up under a separate Act.
- (e) Audits of foreign companies. Foreign companies fall outside the scope of section 224.

The company and its Board of directors, as the case may be, before appointing or re-appointing an auditor must obtain a certificate from the proposed auditor that the appointment or re-appointment, if made, will be in accordance with the limits specified in sub-section (1B) (discussed above). It is important to note that the ceiling rule provided by the Act does not mandate that in a firm of auditors each partner will sign audit reports for the number of companies specified for him. A Partner, can sign as many audit reports of companies as his firm is entitled to audit. A Proviso has been added in section 224(1B) to the effect that on and after the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 i.e., w.e.f. 13-12-2000 no requirement contained in section 224(1B) will apply to a private company. It has few ramifications and they are as under:

1. Audits held in Private Companies irrespective of paid-up capital, will not be counted for determining whether the proposed auditor is exceeding the ceiling on the number of company audits held;
2. A private company is free to appoint or re-appoint any person (qualified under section 226 of the Act) who is in full-time employment elsewhere; and
3. The requirement in section 224(1) to obtain a written certificate as regards exceeding or not exceeding the ceiling on the number of company audits held by the proposed appointee to the office of the auditor will automatically become redundant insofar as a private company is concerned. It may be noted that this is the result of the amendment to section 224(1B) while the concerned requirement for certificate contained in section 224(1) remains unaltered.

In nutshell, so far ceiling rule is concerned, a private company will neither count nor be counted.

Appointment of auditors of Government Companies and certain other companies

Section 619 of the Act lays down special provisions regarding the appointment of auditors of Government companies. The section provides that the auditor of such a company shall be appointed or re-appointed by the Comptroller and Auditor General of India (CAG) who is given power to direct the manner in which the company's accounts shall be audited and to give instructions to him in regard to any matter relating to the performance of his functions as such. He may also conduct a supplementary or test audit of such company's accounts by persons authorised by him in this behalf. For the purposes of such audit he has the power to require information or additional information to be furnished to the persons so authorised, on such matters and in such form, as he may direct.

The auditor must submit a copy of his audit report to the CAG who has the right to comment upon or supplement the audit report in such manner as he may think fit and the same should be placed in the annual general meeting at the same time and in the same manner as the audit report.

The Companies Amendment Act, 1974 introduced section 619B according to which the provisions of section 619 of the Act, as stated above, also apply to a company in which the Central Government or any State Government or any Government corporation hold either singly or jointly not less than fifty-one per cent of the paid up share capital.

A person should keep these provisions in mind while accepting an appointment as the auditor of a company since a circular of the CLB states that, "the onus of complying with the provisions of section 619B lies with the concerned companies. All the same it would be necessary on the part of the auditors appointed/re-appointed under section 224 of the Act to ensure, before accepting the appointment/re-appointment that the company concerned is in fact outside the ambit of section 619B of the Act. It is needless to mention that in the event of the company being already hit by section 619B of the Act, any appointment or re-appointment of auditors by the company concerned under section 224 of the Act would be ab initio void".

Resignation of Statutory Auditor

The auditor may resign as an auditor of the company for any reason. Only the shareholders can fill such a vacancy. This provision is to uphold the independence of the auditor. The shareholders should know the reason of resignation of the auditor. It is possible that the board of directors is not cooperating with him or that the board might create a situation that he is not in a position to continue as an auditor. Perhaps he comes across a situation of a mis-statement in financial statements and does not want to take the risk.

It is also possible that he is resigning to take up a bigger audit or intends to become a director of the company or for that matter he is retiring from practice.

Whatever the reason, it is only the shareholders who can fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of an auditor.

If a statutory auditor has resigned during financial year, generally it will also be clearly understood between the auditor and management as to who will complete the audit and from what date the resignation will take place and from what date the new auditor appointment letter will be issued after appointing him in the EGM.

This is because unless the new auditor gets no objection certificate from old auditor, he cannot commence the audit of the new client (ICAI Guidelines).

Moreover the new auditor has to inform the ROC by way of intimation about his new assignment.

The right course would be:-

1. First the old auditor resign
2. Convene board meeting on the issue
3. Take acceptance of the new auditor that he is free to take the appointment if appointed by EGM
4. Hold an EGM and appoint new auditor in place of old auditor who resigned
5. Send new auditor intimation of his appointment in EGM formally and then take his acceptance
6. The new auditor will then get NOC from old auditor, file intimation of his new assignment to roc and then commence his audit.

Removal of an Auditor

In order to make the removal of independent and conscientious auditors difficult, the Act has laid down specific procedure in this regard. The procedure contains many safeguards to ensure the independence of auditors.

Removal before expiry of the term

An auditor may be removed, at any time before the expiry of his term in the following manner:

1. First auditor - First auditor, appointed by the Board of directors may be removed by merely passing an ordinary resolution. However, a nomination notice from a member of the company of at least 14 days is required for the appointment of any other person in his place.

2. Subsequent auditors - For removal of subsequent auditors before the expiry of the term, besides passing an ordinary resolution, prior permission of the Central Government must be obtained. Thus, it is difficult to remove an auditor before the expiry of his term since adequate grounds must exist to prove that such auditor is unsuitable for continuing as the auditor.

In Basant Ram & Sons v. Union of India the Delhi High Court upheld the removal of the auditors before expiry of the term as such removal had the approval of shareholders, and prior approval of the Govt. of India. Besides, there existed a chequered history of litigation between the petitioners and the company and the Petitioners' objections to certain transactions were raised only-when they had fallen foul with the management and to resist their removal. [2001] 29 SCL 119.

In a more recent case, the same High Court upheld the removal when illegality of removal procedure was contended by the petitioner, as according to him the decision was already taken by the Board and only subsequently approvals of the Central Government and of the general meeting were obtained. The Court was of the view that legally laid down procedure has been followed. The earlier decision of the Board does not matter - Devinder K. Jain v. Union of India [2007] 78 SCL 268.

In both (1) and (2) mentioned above, the procedure laid down in sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 225 shall have to be complied with. There is no requirement of any special notice in case of removal under section 224(7) and the Board of directors itself can initiate the removal process. The prior approval of the Central Government may be taken even after passing the Board resolution to remove but it must be before the general meeting decision and actual act of removal. It may even be permissible for the general meeting to pass a resolution to remove an auditor, subject to approval taken from the Central Government, before actually issuing the removal communication.

Appointing a new auditor in place of retiring auditor

For retiring an auditor, at the expiry of his term, though only an ordinary resolution is required but section 225 lays down the following procedure which must be observed before an auditor can be retired :

1. Special notice of such a resolution must be given providing expressly that the retiring auditor shall not be re-appointed.
2. On receipt of notice of such a resolution, the company must forthwith send a copy thereof to the retiring auditor.
3. Where notice is given of such a resolution and the retiring auditor makes with respect thereto representations in writing to the company (not exceeding a reasonable length) and requests their notification to members of the company, the company must, unless the representations are received by it too late for it to do so—
 - (a) in any notice of the resolution given to members of the company, state the fact of representations having been made;
 - (b) send a copy of the representations to every member of the company to whom notice of the meeting is sent.

In case a copy of the representations is not sent as aforesaid because they were received too late or because of the company's default, the auditor may require that the representations be read out at the meeting. The auditor also has the right to be heard at the general meeting.

However, the copies of the representations need not be circulated or read out in the meeting if, on the application of the company or any other aggrieved person, CLB, is satisfied that the auditor is abusing his right to secure unnecessary publicity for defamatory matters. In such a case, CLB may even order that the auditor should meet the company's costs in making the application either fully or partly. The procedure given above about sending the copy of the notice for removal of the auditor, its prompt circulation and rights of the auditor to make written and oral representations apply equally to mid-term removal of the first auditor as also the removal of the auditor appointed in the annual general meeting, under sections 224(5) and 224(7) of the Act. Though the wording of section 224(7) does not make a mention of the requirement of a notice, having regard to the provisions of section 225(2), read with section 225(4), it seems clear that a notice is certainly required to remove an auditor appointed in the annual general meeting. The only additional procedure is the requirement of obtaining prior approval of the Central Government.

1. It would not be sufficient for the incoming auditor to accept a certificate from the management of the company that the applicable provisions of the Companies Act have been complied with. It is necessary for him to verify relevant records of the company to ascertain whether in fact applicable provisions have been complied with. Where the company is unwilling to allow the incoming auditor to verify the relevant records, the incoming auditor should not accept the audit assignment.
2. The incoming auditor should verify the following:
 - (i) Whether a member of the company has given special notice of the resolution as required under section 225(1) at least 14 days before the date of the general meeting. A true copy of this notice should be obtained.
 - (ii) Whether this special notice has been sent to the members of the company as required under section 190(2).
 - (iii) Whether this special notice has been sent to the retiring auditor forthwith as required under section 225(3).
 - (iv) Whether representation received from the retiring auditor, if any, has been sent to the members of the company as required under section 225(3).
 - (v) Whether the representation received from the retiring auditor has been considered at the general meeting and the resolution proposed by the special notice has been properly passed at the general meeting.

A copy of the relevant minutes of the general meeting, duly certified by the Chairman of the meeting, should also be obtained by the incoming auditor for his record.

3. The incoming auditor should also communicate with the outgoing auditor in writing before accepting the audit assignment to inquire whether any professional reason exists for him not to accept the audit. This emanates from the provisions of the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949.

Remuneration of Auditors

Regarding remuneration of auditors, section 224(8) provides as follows :

1. In the case of an auditor appointed by the Board of directors or the Central Government, his remuneration may be fixed by the Board or the Central Government, as the case may be.

2. In all other cases, it must be fixed by the company in general meeting or in such manner as the company in general meeting may determine. In this category the appointment of auditor under sections 619 and 619B is also covered where the appointment is made by the CAG.

The expression 'remuneration' includes any sums paid by the company in respect of the auditor's expenses in carrying out his duties.

Notice that, it is not necessary that the amount of remuneration be specified by the company in its general meeting. It would be enough if the manner in which the remuneration is to be fixed is laid down in the general meeting. It is also not essential that the remuneration be fixed in the same general meeting in which the auditor is appointed.

However, an auditor may receive separate remuneration for services rendered other than the audit work, e.g., for advising on taxation matters, writing up the accounts, etc. Such a remuneration does not ordinarily require the sanction of the general meeting. However, a separate disclosure of all amounts paid to the auditor in different capacities is required to be made in the Profit and Loss Account under Part II of Schedule VI, classified as below:

1. As auditor.
2. For—
 - (a) taxation matters;
 - (b) company law matters;
 - (c) management services;
 - (d) other services;
 - (e) reimbursement of expenses.

Rights of the Company Auditor

To enable the auditor to discharge his duties effectively, the Act gives him certain rights. They are:

- (a) Right of access to books and account, etc. -As per section 227(1), every auditor of company has a right of complete access at all times to the books, accounts and vouchers of the company, wherever kept. The term 'Vouchers' includes all documents, correspondence, agreements, etc., which support any of the transactions or data disclosed in the financial statements, directly or indirectly. Similarly, the term 'books' includes the financial, statutory, and statistical books. The phrase 'all times', however, implies only to the normal business hours.
- (b) Right to obtain Information or Explanation - Section 227(1) also entitles the auditor of a company "to require from the officers of the company such information and explanations as the auditor may think necessary for the performance of his duties as auditor". This right of an auditor has been strengthened by casting a corresponding duty on the officers of the company vide section 221. Section 221 makes it obligatory for the officers of a company to furnish without delay information sought by the auditor in connection with audit of the company.

A failure of the officer to provide the information will entail penalty provided it was wilfully done. The penalty may involve imprisonment up to six months or a fine up to rupees fifty thousand or with both.
- (c) Right to inspect Branch Accounts - Section 228(2) provides that where the accounts of any branch office are audited by a person other than the company's auditor, the company's auditor shall be entitled to visit the branch office, if he deems it necessary to do so for the performance of his duties as auditor. He shall also have access at all times to the books and accounts and vouchers of the company maintained at the branch office.

However, in case of a banking company having a branch office outside India, it shall be sufficient, if the auditor is allowed access to such copies of, and extracts from, the books and account of the branch as have been transmitted to the principal office of the company in India.

Branch Audit Exemption Rules - Section 228(4) of the Act has, however, empowered the Central Government to make rules providing for exemption of any branch office from the requirement of statutory audit.

The matters that are to be taken into consideration by the Central Government in making the rules are as under:—

- (a) the arrangement made by the company for the audit of accounts of the branch office by a person otherwise qualified for appointment as branch auditor even though such person may be an officer or employee of the company;
- (b) the nature and quantum of activity carried on at the branch office during a period of three years immediately preceding the date on which the branch office is exempted from the provisions of this section;
- (c) the availability at a reasonable cost of a branch auditor for the audit of accounts of the branch office ;
- (d) any other matter which in the opinion of the Central Government justifies the grant of exemption to the branch office from the provisions of this section.

Accordingly, the Central Government has prescribed the Companies (Branch Audit Exemption) Rules, 1961.

It is, therefore, legally possible for some of the branches remaining outside the scrutiny of statutory audit. If for any company, some of the branches are not audited because of the aforesaid Exemption Rules, the auditor should state that fact by specifying the number or naming the branch(es) which have not been audited while reporting under section 227(3) of the Act.

Section 2(9) of the Act has defined “branch office” as under:—

- (a) any establishment described as a branch by the company; or
- (b) any establishment carrying on either the same or substantially the same activities as that carried on by the head office of the company; or
- (c) any establishment engaged in the production, processing or manufacture, but does not include any establishment specified in any order made by the Central Government under section 8. Section 8 empowers the Central Government to declare any establishment of a company as not a branch either generally or for a specified purpose.

It is recognised that all significant branches should be audited.

- (d) Right to receive notices, etc. - Section 231 provides that all notices of and other communications relating to any general meeting of a company, which any member of the company is entitled to have sent to him, shall also be forwarded to the auditor of the company.
- (e) Right to attend general meeting - Under section 231 the auditor has the right to attend any general meeting and be heard, at any general meeting which he attends, on any part of the business which concerns him as auditor. The auditor may make any statement or explanation with regard to the accounts as he may deem fit.

Section 230 makes it obligatory that the auditor's report be read at the general meeting and also shall be open to inspection by any member of the company.

- (f) Right to remuneration - An auditor is entitled to his remuneration on the completion of his work. The above-mentioned rights of an auditor are his statutory rights and cannot be limited or abridged either by the Articles or resolution of the members. Any provision of this nature is ultra vires and hence void - Newton v. Birmingham Small Arms Co. [1906]2Ch.378.

- (g) Auditors' lien - In terms of the general principles of law, any person having the lawful possession of somebody else's property, on which he has worked, may retain the property for non-payment of his dues on account of the work done on the property. On this premise, auditor can exercise lien on books and documents placed at his possession by the client for non-payment of fees, for work done on the books and documents. The Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales has expressed a similar view on the following conditions:
- (i) Documents retained must belong to the client who owes the money.
 - (ii) Documents must have come into possession of the auditor on the authority of the client. They must not have been received through irregular or illegal means. In case of a company client, they must be received on the authority of the Board of directors.
 - (iii) The auditor can retain the documents only if he has done work on the documents assigned to him.
 - (iv) Such of the documents can be retained which are connected with the work on which fees have not been paid.

Under section 209 of the Act, books of account of a company must be kept at the registered office. These provisions ordinarily make it impracticable for the auditor to have possession of the books and documents. However, under the Act, further provisions are there-under which books of account could be kept at a different place, pursuant to a Board's resolution of which notice must be given to ROC. If in a company, Board passes such a resolution and hands over the books of account to the auditor and makes the necessary notification to the ROC, the auditor may in such circumstances, exercise the right of lien for non-payment of fees. However, as per section 209 he must provide reasonable facility for inspection of the books of account by directors and others authorised to inspect under the Act. Taking an overall view of the matter, it seems that though legally auditor may exercise right of lien in cases of companies, it is mostly impracticable for legal and practicable constraints. His working papers being his own property, the question of lien on them does not arise.

Statement on Standard Auditing & Assurance Practices-3 (SSAP-3) issued by the ICAI on Documentation also states that, "working papers are the property of the auditor. The auditor may at his discretion make portions of or extracts from his working papers available to his clients. The auditor should also adopt reasonable procedures for custody and confidentiality of his working papers and should retain them for a period of time sufficient to meet the needs of his practice and satisfy any pertinent legal or professional requirements of record retention".

The Companies (Amendment) Act of 1965 introduced two sub-sections (1A) and (4A) in section 227 of the Act.

It may be noted that sub-section (1A) requiring certain inquiries to be made by the auditor is independent both of sub-section (1) which narrates the powers of auditors, and of sub-sections (2) and (3) which state the function and duties of the auditors. It is merely a directive to the auditor to make certain specific enquiries. In the circumstances, it would be presumed that the Legislature by its introduction did not intend to extend the scope of audit report or its form generally. This view is strengthened by the introduction of sub-section (4A). It empowers the Central Government to extend the scope of the audit report in respect of a particular class or description of companies by requiring a statement on such matters as may be specified by the Central Government by a general or special order to be included therein.

It could be said that the effect of the introduction of sub-section (1A) is that the auditor should make a report to the members in case he finds that answer to any of the matters under inquiry is adverse. But he has to enquire into all the matters specified in the sub-section. In case of any adverse finding showing adverse functioning of the company, the auditor should report the same in bold letters or in italics [vide ' section 227(3)(e)].

Scope of Audit Report under section 227 - Sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 227 provide that it is the duty of the auditor to report to the members of the company on the accounts examined by him and on every balance sheet and profit and loss account and every other document declared by the Act to be part of, or annexed to, the balance sheet and the profit and loss account, laid before the company in general meeting during the tenure of his office; also that the report shall confirm the position, envisaged in the under-mentioned manner in which the requirements are to be met.

Sub-section (2) under clauses (i) and (ii) specifically requires that the auditor should report whether in his opinion and to the best of his information and according to the explanations given to him, the said accounts give the information required by the Act, in the manner so required and that the balance sheet gives a true and fair view of the company's affairs at the end of financial year and the profit and loss account gives a true and fair view of the profit or loss for the financial year.

Sub-section (3) requires that the auditor shall report on the following matters:

- (a) Whether he has obtained all the information and explanations which to the best of his knowledge and belief were necessary for audit-The significance of such a requirement is that the auditor must obtain due satisfaction about the scope of work carried out by him and affirm that in the discharge of his duties he has maintained professional standards of diligence and care.

Justice Lindley in his famous judgment, in the London and General Bank case, propounded his view. The relevant passage from the judgment is quoted below:

"An auditor, however, is not bound to do more than exercise reasonable care and skill in making enquiries and investigations. He is not an insurer; he does not guarantee that the books do correctly show the true position of the company's affairs; he does not guarantee that his balance sheet is accurate according to the books of the company, if he did, he would be responsible for an error on his part, even if he were himself deceived without any want of reasonable care on his part say, by the fraudulent concealment of a book from him."

Lopes L.J. held in his judgment in the case of Kingston Cotton Mills that auditors must not be made liable for not tracking out ingeniously and carefully laid scheme of fraud when there is nothing to arouse their suspicion and when those frauds have been perpetrated by the tried servants of the company and have been undetected for years by the directors.

Thus, for the collection of information, the auditor is entitled to rely upon trusted servants of the company; he can accept representations made by them either orally or in writing, provided reasonable care was taken to ensure that the data or information furnished are true and could be trusted to have been prepared in the course of the working of the company. If, however, there are any circumstances that should arouse suspicion, it would be the auditor's duty to probe it to the bottom. So long as there is no such suspicion, he is only expected to exercise normal caution and care.

- (b) Whether in his opinion, proper books of account as required by law have been kept by the company, so far as appears from his examination of those books and proper returns adequate for the purpose of his audit have been received from branches not visited by him - The term 'proper books of account' is defined indirectly under sub-section (1) of section 209 wherein it is stated that a company shall not be deemed to have kept proper books of account in respect of matters specified in sub-sections (1) and (2) of section 209, if there are not kept such books as are necessary to give a true and fair view of the state of affairs of the company or branch office, as the case may be, and to explain its transactions. The Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988 further requires that the proper books of account shall not be deemed to be kept if such books are not kept on accrual basis and according to the double entry system of accounting.

Further, in section 541(2), it is provided that a company that is being wound up shall be deemed not to have maintained proper books of account if it had not kept:

- (i) such books of account as are necessary to exhibit and explain the transactions and financial position of the business of the company including books containing entries made from day to day in sufficient detail of all cash received and all cash paid; and

- (ii) where the business of the company has involved dealing in goods, statement of annual stock-taking and (except in the case of goods sold by way of ordinary retail trade) of all goods sold and purchased, showing particulars of goods and those of buyers and sellers in sufficient detail to enable those goods and those buyers and sellers to be identified.

In the circumstances, proper books of account as required by law are those which contain a record of all the transactions specified both in section 209 and section 541(2) in a manner that they present a true and fair view of the state of affairs of the financial position and profitability of the company.

The cost records prescribed under section 209(1)(d) also form part of books of account required to be maintained under law.

- (bb) Whether the report on the accounts of any branch office audited wider section 228 by a person other than the company's auditor has been forwarded to him as required by section 228(3)(c) and how he has dealt with the same in preparing the auditor's report - The Research Committee of the ICAI had obtained the views of a senior Counsel on this matter and an extract there from is given below:

"Having regard to the scheme of sub-section (2), it is clear that though the company in general meeting appoints a branch auditor, the company's auditor still has a certain measure of responsibility in respect of the accounts and papers of the branch. This is shown by the fact that he has a right to visit the branch and has access to the papers and documents of the branch. He must discharge this responsibility by looking into the branch auditor's report and satisfying himself that, having regard to the report and what he has seen of the branch and documents of the branch, affairs of the branch are in order."

- (c) Whether the company's balance sheet and profit and loss account dealt with by the report are in agreement with the books of account and returns - The work of an auditor culminates in the verification of statements of account. It is apparent that the duty, in this regard, would not be properly discharged if he fails to verify them on making a reference to the books of account before proceeding to make a report thereon. When the auditor reports that proper books of account have been kept and the accounts are in agreement therewith, he confirms that he has discharged the specific duty in this regard imposed on him by the law. If proper books of account have not been kept and if there is a discrepancy in the statements of account and the entries as they appear in the books, he should refer to such a position in his report.
- (d) Whether, in his opinion, the profit and loss account and balance sheet have complied with the accounting standards referred to in sub-section (3C) of section 211.

The Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000, has added two new matters in section 227(3) for auditor's report. Clauses (e) and (f) are the additions.

While clause (e) requires the auditor to state in thick type or in italics the observations and comments of the auditors which have any adverse effect on the functioning of the company, clause (f) requires a statement in the audit report on whether any director is disqualified from being appointed as director under section 274(1)(g) of the Act.

Clause (e) requires the auditor to put in thick letters or in italics such of the components of his report including any on section 227(1A) and on C(AR)0 [vide section 227(4A)], on the accounts which bear adverse finding/opinion. For example, if proper books of account were not maintained, it amounts to a serious lapse in the accounting records keeping and may be highlighted by using thick letters or italics. In effect, this requirement is, perhaps motivated by the anxiety to draw specific attention of users of the financial statements, on highly adverse matters in auditor's report. Also to be noted that this clause does not have the word "whether" to start with. So, it is not an independent clause.

It is not enough that reporting in bold/italics is meant only on the report that the auditor submits to the company. The company, in turn, has to ensure that auditor's report circulated to the shareholders and others also contain these matters in bold/ italics.

Clause (f) reads as under:

"Whether any director is disqualified from being appointed as director under clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 274 of the Act." This clause has been inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 specifying that a person who is already a director of a public company and such a company has not filed the annual accounts and annual returns for any continuous three financial years commencing on and after the first day of April, 1999 or has failed to repay its deposits or interest thereon on due date or redeem its debentures on due date or pay dividend (obviously after declaration) and such failure continues for one year or more, is disqualified from being appointed as a director in any company. It further states that such person shall not be eligible to be appointed as a director of any other public company for a period of five years from the date of the failures mentioned above. The drafting of the clause suggests that the disqualification is twofold - such a person as is referred to above will be disqualified (i) for appointment as a director in any company including a private company and (ii) he will be barred from appointment as a director in a public company for a period of five years from the date of failure to file the documents or pay the amounts as above.

Cost Audit [section 233B]

It is an audit process for verifying the costs of manufacture or production of an article on the basis of accounts as regards utilisation of material or labour or other items of costs, maintained by the company. Under the provisions of section 233B of the Act, such an audit shall ordinarily be conducted by a Cost Accountant within the meaning of the Cost and Works Accountants Act, 1959.

The cost auditor shall be appointed by the Board of directors of the company which is required under clause (d) of sub-section (1) of section 209 of the Act to include in books of account, the particulars referred to therein, if the Central Government so directs. The cost auditor has the same powers and duties as prescribed under section 227(1) of the Act for the auditors appointed under section 224. The Board of the company shall appoint the cost auditor with prior approval of the Central Government. As the Central Government has the power to approve the appointment, it has the concurrent power to disapprove any proposal of appointment on due consideration of facts surrounding the proposal.

The Revised Procedure for Appointment of Cost Auditor :-

The MCA, by General Circular No. 15/2011, dated 11-4-2011, has announced the revised procedure for appointment of cost auditor under section 233B(2) of the Act. The important matters in the revised procedure are as under:

1. The Audit Committee of the Board shall be the first point of reference for this appointment where the company has an Audit Committee; otherwise the Board of Directors, as in the past will initiate the process. The Audit Committee shall see that the recommendee does not suffer from any disqualification under section 233B(5) read with sections 224 and 226 of the Act. The Audit Committee as well as the recommendee should ensure that he does not exceed the ceiling on number of cost audit that he can hold at the time of appointment. The Audit Committee shall also take a certificate from the recommendee that he stands in arm's length relationship with the company and his independence is not affected.
2. The company shall e-file its application with the Central Government in Form 23C within 90 days of the commencement of the financial year. The application shall be deemed to be approved unless contrary is heard within 30 days of filing the application. If within aforesaid 30 days the Central Government directs the company to resubmit the application with further details/more information, the deeming will run for 30 days from the date of resubmission.
3. After expiry of the 30 days of deeming approval, the company can issue the formal letter of appointment to the recommendee.

4. Upon receipt of formal letter of appointment the cost auditor shall inform the Central Government in the prescribed form. No time for this has been provided, which implies that it should be done within a reasonable time.
5. The company shall disclose full particulars of the cost auditor and the due date and actual date of filing the cost audit report in its annual report for that financial year.
6. The revised procedure takes effect from 1st April, 2011.

The company as well as the cost auditor are subject to penalties for any violation of the requirements of these procedures.

According to sub-section (1) of section 233B, the cost auditor appointed under this section is expected to conduct the audit in such manner as may be specified in the order issued by the Central Government. Further, as required by sub-section (4) read with Rules 4(7) and 5 of the Cost (Audit Report) Rules, 2001 he must forward his report to the Central Government and to the company within 180 days of the closing of the year to which the audit related. The report is to be given in the form prescribed for the purpose. (Vide G.S.R. 924(E), dated 27-12-2001 of the D.C.A., Govt. of India). Rule 4(2) of the Cost (Audit Report) Rules, 2001 requires the cost auditor to reply to the Central Government within thirty days of receipt of any communication seeking clarifications on the cost audit report submitted by him.

The Government has issued Cost Audit (Report) Rules, 2001 specifying the form of the report and the additional information which should be included therein in the form of annexures. The Rules have also laid down the various points on which the cost auditor should make his observations and give his conclusions.

The cost auditor must further report on the adequacy of cost accounting records maintained by the company as prescribed by the Government under section 209(1)(d) of the Act to confirm that they give a true and fair view of the cost of production, cost of sales and margin on the product. If there is any additional information, that he would like to furnish, he may include it in an annexure to the report. The Government has issued notification under section 209(1)(d) as regards various industries, e.g., cement, cycles, etc. With each notification a schedule is attached containing detailed items under which the cost of production must be analysed to arrive at the total cost. Each company concerned is required to make available to the cost auditor, relevant cost accounting records, cost statements, other books and documents annexures and proforma to the report, duly completed within one hundred thirty five days from the close of the financial year of the company. The company and every officer of the company including persons mentioned in section 209(6) of the Act are responsible to render necessary assistance to the cost auditor to complete the cost audit and submit his report in time. By Notification No. GSR 148(E), dated 8-3-2006. The Ministry of Company Affairs" has amended the Cost Audit (Report) Rules, 2001 to enable e-filing of the report and to insert a new Form I in the Rules. The existing 'Form' is now fitted as Form II.

Authentication of the Annexures and Proforma of the Cost Audit Report-The Board of directors of the company shall approve the annexures and proforma before the cost auditor submits the same to the Central Government. These should be signed by at least one director of the company and the company secretary where there is one, otherwise these should be signed by at least two directors of the company. Any default by the company in these regards attracts punishment for the company and officers responsible which may extend to rupees five thousand and for continuing default further fine of rupees five hundred for each day of the contravention excluding the first day. For failure of the cost auditor to submit his report, a fine up to rupees five thousand is leviable.

The Government's view, so far as it can be ascertained from the pronouncements is that cost audit will not be required annually, but only for the financial year or years specified in the order.

The copy of the cost audit report sent to Central Government should also be sent to the company concerned simultaneously. The company shall, within 30 days from the date of the receipt of the copy of the report, furnish the Central Government with full information and explanations on every reservation or qualification contained in such report. The Central Government, after consideration of the report and the information and the explanations furnished by the company, may seek further explanation from the company if it so needs. The Central Government may direct the company concerned to circulate to members along with the notice of the general meeting to be held for the first time after submission of the relevant cost audit report, the whole or part of the report as it may specify. The cost auditor has to provide clarification to the Government, on the same being sought, within thirty days of the receipt of the requirement.

Cost Audit to be in addition to financial audit- Cost audit requirement under section 233B is in addition to the audit conducted by an auditor appointed under section 224 of the Act. Unlike statutory financial audit, cost audit is to be conducted only if the Central Government makes an order for a particular year and for a specified company or specified class of companies. The order for cost audit can be made only in respect of companies engaged in the production, processing, manufacturing or mining activities. The Central Government has framed, and may from time to time frame rules in respect of industries of the nature referred to above providing maintenance of particulars relating to utilisation of material or labour or other items of cost in the books of account.

Ceiling on Cost Audits - Section 233B, as amended by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988 has extended the provisions of section 224(1B) to cost audits. Accordingly, the ceiling on number of audits as specified there under shall apply to cost audits also. Thus, like a statutory financial auditor, a cost accountant cannot be auditor of more than twenty companies out of which not more than ten should be companies having a paid-up share capital of ₹25 lakhs or more. In case the cost auditor is a partnership firm of cost accountants, the ceiling is twenty companies per partner of the firm. And where any partner is also a partner in any other firm or firms of cost auditors, the overall ceiling in relation to such a partner will be twenty. It may be noted that the number of cost audits for the purpose of ceiling does not include cost audit of private companies.

Section 224(1B) as amended by the Amendment Act, 1988 disallows the appointment of persons who are in full time employment elsewhere. Even in case of partnerships such a partner shall be excluded from counting the number of audits. The Board of directors other than of a private company should obtain a written certificate from the person proposed to be appointed as cost auditor that his appointment if made shall be within the aforesaid limits.

Appointment of a firm of cost accountants as cost auditors - A firm of cost accountants can also be appointed as cost auditors if all the partners of the firm are practising cost accountants and the firm itself has been constituted with the previous approval of the Central Government as required under Regulation 113 under the Cost and Works Accountants Act, 1959. In such a case, the cost audit report may be signed by any one of the partners of the firm for and on behalf of the firm. The audit report cannot however be signed merely by affixing the firm's name."

Cost Auditor cannot be internal auditor- The DCA has clarified that since the cost auditor is required to comment on the scope and performance of internal audit as per the provisions of the Cost (Audit Report) Rules, it would tend to militate against proper and dispassionate discharge of the duties of the cost auditor if he was also the internal auditor of the company for the same period for which he is conducting the cost audit. The Department is therefore of the view that the cost auditor should not also be the internal auditor of a company for the period for which he is conducting the cost audit.

Disqualifications - A person cannot be appointed as a cost auditor of a company if he attracts any of the disqualifications listed in sub-sections (3) and (4) of section 226 and u/s 233(B) of the Act. Thus, the following entities/persons cannot be appointed as cost auditors:

- (i) A body corporate;
- (ii) an officer or employee of the company;
- (iii) a person who is a partner or who is in the employment of an officer or employee of the company;
- (iv) a person who is indebted to the company for an amount exceeding ₹1,000 or who has given any guarantee or provided any security in connection with the indebtedness of any third person to the company for an amount exceeding ₹1,000;

- (v) a person holding any vote carrying security of the company;
- (vi) a person who is disqualified to be the cost auditor of its subsidiary or holding company or of another subsidiary of its holding company;
- (vii) a person appointed under section 224 as an auditor of a company [Section 233B(5)(b)]

If a person appointed for conducting the audit of cost accounts of a company becomes subject, after his appointment, to any of the aforesaid disqualifications, he shall on and from the date on which he becomes so subject, cease to conduct the audit of the cost accounts of the company [Section 233B(5)(c)].

Additional disqualifications - In addition to the aforesaid disqualifications the Institute of Cost and Works Accountants of India has notified that any cost accountant who accepts an appointment as the cost auditor of a company in the following situations shall be deemed to be guilty of professional misconduct.

- (a) if he is an employee of the company's auditor appointed under section 224;
- (b) if he is an employee of any of the partners of a firm of chartered accountants which is appointed as company's auditor under section 224.

Penalties - Section 233B(11) provides that a company is liable to be punished with fine which may extend to rupees five thousand for any default in complying with the provisions of section 233B. It further provides that every officer of the company who is in default, is liable to be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine which may extend to fifty thousand rupees, or with both. In this regard rule 8(2) of the Cost (Audit Report) Rules, 2001 deals with penalty for non-compliance with rules 6 and 7 of the aforesaid Rules, which relate to furnishing of the cost records to the cost auditor in time and authentication of the Annexures etc. of the cost audit report. The company and every officer in default of the company are punishable with fine which may extend to rupees five thousand with further fine of rupees five hundred for every day of continuing default. This penal provision under rule 8(2) is restricted to violation of rules 6 and 7 and is different from the penal provision of section 233B(11). However, there is overlapping in these penal provisions in so far as providing assistance to the cost auditor is concerned. Therefore, the penal provisions in the Rules are largely redundant as for default covered by section 233B(6) and rule 6 as stated above. These need to be harmonised. Rule 8(1) of the aforesaid Rules provide for punishment of the cost auditor for any default in complying with rules 4 and 5 which relate to form of the report and time span for submission of the report. The punishment is a fine which may extend to rupees five thousand. Section 233B, however, does not contain any penal provision for the cost auditor. Under this circumstance, the penal provision of the rules will apply to the cost auditor for the non-compliances of rules 4 and 5. It may be noted that section 233 provides for penalty on the statutory auditor for non-compliance with sections 227 and 229 of a sum which may extend to rupees ten thousand. These two penal provisions - one applicable to the statutory auditor and the other to the cost auditor are strikingly different and inequitable. This aspect also needs urgent attention of the law makers.

Where a company and its auditor had applied for extension of time to submit report, but no reply was received from Government and fact of labour problem was proved by documentary evidence, it could be said that the company had acted honestly and diligently and delay in submitting cost records/ audit report was beyond its control and thus, it could not be punished for offence under section 233B (11) - M. Meyyappan v. Registrar of Companies [2003] 42 SCL 758 (Mad.).

- (3) Every company as specified in sub-rule (1) of rule 3 shall, keep and maintain cost details, statements, schedules, etc. for each unit and each product or activity comprised in each product group, duly authenticated by atleast two Directors of the company and the cost auditor.

- (4) The cost details, statements, schedules, etc. of every company, as specified in sub-rule (3), relating to a period of not less than eight financial years immediately preceding a financial year, or where the company had been in existence for a period less than eight years, in respect of all the preceding years shall be kept in good order:
 - (5) Every cost auditor, who submits a report under sub-rule (1), shall also furnish performance appraisal report, duly authenticated by the cost auditor, to the Board/Audit Committee of the company in the prescribed form.
 - (6) Every cost auditor, who submits a report under sub-rule (1), shall also give clarifications, if any, required by the Central Government on the cost audit report submitted by him, within thirty days of the receipt of the communication addressed to him calling for such clarifications.
- 5. Time limit for submission of Report – Every cost auditor shall forward his report referred to in sub-rule (1) of rule 4 to the Central Government and to the concerned company within one hundred and eighty days from the close of the company's financial year to which the report relates.
- 6. Cost Auditor to be furnished with the cost accounting records etc. – Without prejudice to the powers and duties the Cost Auditor shall have under sub-section (4) of section 233B of the Act, the company and every officer thereof, including the persons referred to in sub-section (6) of section 209 of the Act, shall make available to the cost auditor, such cost accounting records, cost statements, other books and documents, and Annexure to the Report, duly completed, as would be required for conducting the cost audit, and shall render necessary assistance to the cost auditor so as to enable him to complete the cost audit and submit his report within the time limit specified in rule 5.
- 7. Authentication of Annexure to the Cost Audit Report – The Annexure prescribed with the cost audit report shall be approved by the Board of Directors before submitting the same to the Central Government by the cost auditor. The Annexure, duly audited by the cost auditor, shall also be signed by the Company Secretary and at least one Director on behalf of the company. In the absence of Company Secretary in the company, the same shall be signed by at least two Directors.
- 8. Penalties –
- (1) If default is made by the cost auditor in complying with the provisions of rule 4 or rule 5, he/she shall be punishable with fine, which may extend to five thousand rupees.
 - (2) If a company contravenes any provisions of these rules, the company and every officer thereof who is in default, including the persons referred to in sub-section (6) of section 209 of the Act, shall be punishable as provided under sub-section (2) of section 642 read with sub-sections (5) and (7) of section 209 and sub-section (11) of section 233B of Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956).
- 9. Savings- The supersession of the Cost Audit Report Rules, 2001, shall not in any way affect-
- a) any right, obligation or liabilities acquired, accrued or incurred thereunder;
 - b) any penalty, forfeiture or punishment incurred in respect of any contravention committed thereunder; and
 - c) any investigation, legal proceeding or remedy in respect of any such right, privilege, obligation, liability, penalty, forfeiture or punishment as aforesaid, and; any such investigation, legal proceeding or remedy may be instituted, continued or enforced and any such penalty, forfeiture or punishment may be imposed as if those rules had not been superseded

1.6 DIVIDENDS

Dividend - Meaning

The dictionary meaning of 'dividend' is "sum payable as interest on loan or as profit of a company to the creditors of an insolvent's estate or an individual's share of it". In commercial usage, however, 'dividend' is the share of the company's profits distributed among the members (Barjor Hoshangi Vakil v. Mettur Chemical & Industrial Corporation Ltd [1963] 33 Comp. Cas. 932).

Thus, we may say that corporate earnings and profits not retained in the business, and when distributed among shareholders, are known as 'dividend'.

The term 'dividend' is also used to include distribution of the company's assets, in cash or in specie, which remain with the liquidator after he has realised all the assets and discharged all the liabilities, in the event of its winding up.

In CIT v. Girdhar Das & Co. (P.) Ltd. [1967] 21 Comp. L. J., the Supreme Court defined the expression 'dividend' as follows:

- "As applied to a company which is a going concern, it ordinarily means the portion of the profits of the company which is allocated to the holders of shares in the company.
- In the case of winding-up, it means a division of the realised assets among creditors and contributories according to their respective rights."

With the introduction of sub-section (14A) in section 2, by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000, the term 'dividend' includes any interim dividend. This definition assumes that the term should be understood only in its commercial sense and has only widened its scope to include "interim dividend", the expression which did not earlier find a place in the Act except in Table A.

However, issue of bonus shares by capitalising accumulated profits is not construed as dividend.

The Institute of Chartered Accountants of India has defined 'dividend' as "a distribution to shareholders out of profits or reserves available for this purpose". (Vide -Guidance Note on Terms used in Financial Statements).

1.6.1. Profits and ascertainment of Divisible Profits

Profits v. Divisible Profits

Meaning of Divisible Profits - All the profits of a company cannot be said to be divisible. Only those profits which can legally be distributed to the shareholders of the company in the form of dividend are called as 'divisible profits'. However, specific definition of 'divisible profits' has not been laid down even by the Companies Act.

In Buenos Ayres Great Southern Rly. Co., In re [1947] Ch. 384 'divisible profits' were described to mean the profits which the directors consider should be distributed after making provision for past losses, reserves and for other purposes.

The following four considerations may govern the determination of divisible profits :

- Principles of Accounting,
- Provisions of Memorandum and Articles,
- Provisions of the Companies Act, and
- Legal Decisions.

'Profits available for Distribution' v. 'Profits available for dividend'- The term 'profits available for distribution' and 'profits available for dividend' have different meanings and should not be confused. The first term means the maximum profits which the law allows a company to distribute to the shareholders by way of dividend. The latter term implies the profits which the directors consider should be distributed after making provision for past losses, for transfer to reserve or for other purposes.

If the directors have on some fair basis taken a decision as to the proportion of profits which should be distributed by way of dividend, the Courts do not interfere in this matter even if there are larger profits and more dividend could have been paid (Stewart v. Sashalite Ltd. [1936] 2 All ER 1481). The Courts do not compel directors to declare a dividend against their judgment.

Sources out of which dividends may be paid

According to section 205, dividends may be declared out of the following three sources:

1. Current profits.
2. Past reserves created out of profits or credit balance in the profit and loss account brought forward.
3. Out of moneys provided by Government, if any.

Out of current profits - Dividends may be declared out of the profits of the company for the current year after providing for depreciation.

However, the Central Government may, if it thinks necessary so to do in public interest, allow any company to declare or pay dividend for any financial year out of the profits of the company for that year or any previous financial year or years without providing for depreciation [Proviso (c) to section 205(1)].

Compulsory transfer of profits to reserves [Section 205(2A)] - A company must transfer a prescribed percentage of its profits (usually, not exceeding 10 per cent) to its reserves before declaring dividends. According to the Rules framed by the Central Government in this behalf, a company has to transfer a percentage of its profits for that year to its reserves as specified below:

1. Where the dividend proposed exceeds 10 per cent but not 12.5 per cent of the paid up capital, the amount to be transferred to the reserves shall not be less than 2.5 per cent of the current profits;
2. Where the dividend proposed exceeds 12.5 per cent but does not exceed 15 percent of the paid up capital, the amount to be transferred to the reserves shall not be less than 5 per cent of the current profits;
3. Where the dividend proposed exceeds 15 per cent, but does not exceed 20 per cent of the paid up capital, the amount to be transferred to the reserves shall not be less than 7.5 per cent of the current profits; and
4. Where the dividend proposed exceeds 20 per cent of the paid-up capital, the amount to be transferred to reserves shall not be less than 10 per cent of the current profits.

It may be noted that no transfer to reserve is required if the rate of dividend proposed is 10% or less. The rates of dividend for the different slabs mentioned above refer to the rates of equity dividend and the part of the dividend which holders of participating preference shares are entitled to after receiving the fixed percentage of dividend that such shares carry. The profit out of which the dividend will be paid should be after charging depreciation for the year and any arrear of depreciation or carry forward loss, whichever is lower, taxes and statutory transfer to reserve like investment allowance reserve or development rebate reserve. The reserve stipulated in section 205(2A) is a free reserve.

A company can make a transfer of more than 10 per cent to reserves voluntarily provided it ensures the minimum distribution specified in Rule 3 of the Companies (Transfer of Profits to Reserves) Rules, 1975. The minimum distribution is the rate of dividend equal to the average of the rates of dividend for the last 3 financial years. Where bonus shares have been issued during the financial year, minimum distribution would be construed as the average of the amount of dividend for the last three financial years. Where, however, the net profits after tax for the financial year are lower by 20 per cent or more than the average net profits after tax of the last two financial years, it will not be necessary to ensure the minimum distribution for making a higher transfer to reserve. Where no dividend is declared, the transfer to reserves should be lower than the average amount of dividends declared during the last three financial years. A newly incorporated company is not allowed to transfer more than 10 per cent of its profits to reserves. The requirement of transfer to the reserves equally applies to declaration/payment of interim dividend in view of provisions of sub-sections (1A) and (1C) introduced by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000. The Board of directors has to estimate the "Current Profits" for the year in which interim dividend is declared.

Out of past reserves - Dividends may be declared out of the profits of the company for any previous financial year or years arrived at after providing for depreciation in accordance with the provisions of section 205 of the Act and remaining undistributed. However, the Central Government may, if it thinks necessary so to do in the public interest, allow any company to declare or pay dividend for any financial year out of the profits of the company for that year or any previous financial year or years without providing for depreciation.

Section 205A(3) inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1974 requires that dividend can be declared out of reserves only in accordance with the rules framed by the Central Government in this behalf. However, where a company wishes to declare a dividend otherwise than as per these rules it may do so with the previous approval of the Central Government. The credit balance, if any, carried in the profit and loss account will be available for declaration of dividend without restriction if such balance was carried after charging depreciation, tax etc. in the previous year(s).

The rules framed by the Central Government in this regard provide that in the event of absence or inadequacy of profits in any year, dividend may be declared by the company out of accumulated past profits provided the following conditions are satisfied:

1. The rate of the dividend declared does not exceed the average of the rates at which dividend was declared by it in the 5 years immediately preceding that year or 10 per cent of its paid-up capital, whichever is less.
2. The total amount to be drawn from the accumulated profits earned in previous years and transferred to the reserves does not exceed an amount equal to 1/10th of the sum of its paid-up capital and free reserves and the amount so drawn must first be utilised to set off the losses incurred in the financial year before any dividend in respect of preference or equity shares is declared.
3. The balance of reserves after such drawal does not fall below 15 per cent of its paid-up share capital.

Section 205A(3) begins with words 'where owing to inadequacy or absence of profits in any year'. Therefore, the pre-condition for the application of the said provision is that there is an 'inadequacy or absence of profit in the year' in which the company proposes to declare dividend out of the accumulated profits earned by it in previous years and transferred by it to the reserve - Nestle India Ltd., In re [2009] 89 SCL 454/ 147Comp.Cas.712(Delhi).

It may be noted that though interim dividend is also a dividend, profit earned in the past and kept in reserves cannot be used to pay interim dividend. This position appears to be clear from the very wording of aforesaid sub-section (3) which deals with declaration of dividend "in any year". It has got to be annual (final) dividend and not the interim dividend.

Funds provided by Government- A company can also declare dividends out of the funds provided by the Central Government or a State Government for payment of such dividend in pursuance of a guarantee given by that Government.

Depositing dividend declared in a separate bank account- As per sub-section (1A) of section 205 inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000, any dividend i.e., whether interim or annual, when declared, the amount thereof shall have to be deposited in a separate bank account within five days of declaration. Sub-section (1B) of section 205 introduced by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 further states that the amount of dividend including interim dividend, deposited in a separate bank account as above shall be used for payment of interim dividend. When sub-section (1A) is read in conjunction with sub-section (1B), it seems that the legislative intent in this regard has not been correctly brought out. Sub-section (1A) requires deposits of any dividend declared in a separate bank account obviously to segregate it from the other bank account(s) of the company so that the declared dividend can be paid without any difficulty and the payment is to be effected in terms of the declaration. If it is annual dividend, the payment shall be made of that dividend out of the special bank account and same will be the case with interim dividend. There is no question of annual dividend declared and deposited in the separate bank account to be used for payment of interim dividend. The drafting of sub-sections (1A) and (1B) is patently deficient. Sub-section (1A) basically empowers the Board of directors to declare interim dividend and both sub-sections (1A) and (1B) should have dealt with interim dividend only without adding the word "dividend". If annual dividend is also to be deposited in a separate bank account, the same could have been done either by adding one more sub-section in section 205 or by suitably modifying section 207. Anyway, the sub-sections mentioned in this paragraph provide for : -

- (a) power of the Board of directors to declare interim dividend,
- (b) deposit of any dividend declared in a separate bank account, within five days of declaration, and
- (c) payment of the dividend declared out of the separate bank account.

It is apparent that for declaration of interim dividend approval of the general meeting is not required. It may also be observed that this separate bank account need not be with a scheduled bank, though this lacuna also appears to have come out of oversight in the drafting.

Provision for Depreciation

According to section 205, depreciation must be provided before any dividend can be declared out of profits of any financial year falling after the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1960.

As to how much depreciation should be provided for determining the divisible profits, section 205(2) provides that depreciation must be provided either:

- (a) to the extent specified in section 350, or
- (b) in respect of each item of depreciable asset, for such an amount as is arrived at by dividing 95 per cent of the original cost by the specified period, or
- (c) on any other basis approved by the Central Government by which 95 per cent of the original cost of each such depreciable asset can be written off on the expiry of the specified period, or
- (d) in respect of any other depreciable asset for which no rate of depreciation has been laid down by the Act or the Rules made thereunder, on such basis as may be approved by the Central Government by general or special order.

Depreciation under section 350- According to section 350 the amount of depreciation is to be calculated with reference to the written down value of the assets as shown by the books of the company at the end of the financial year expiring at the commencement of this Act or immediately thereafter and at the end of each subsequent financial year, at the rate specified in Schedule XIV. The Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 now allows provision of depreciation on straight line basis also as per the rates contained in Schedule XIV. However, if any asset is sold, discarded, demolished or destroyed for any reason before depreciation of such asset has been provided for in full, the excess, if any, of the written clown value of such asset, over its sale proceeds or as the case may be, its scrap value, shall be written off in the financial year in which the asset is sold, discarded, demolished or destroyed. This will equally apply when depreciation is provided in accordance with (b) or (c) above.

The above provisions of section 350 do not state the specific methods to arrive at the value of the assets. The section merely prescribes the reference to which the mode of calculation will apply and extent of depreciation to be provided as computed in terms of Schedule XIV to the Act. Schedule XIV, however, requires the depreciation methods used, and depreciation rates/the useful lives of the assets to be disclosed.

Arrears of depreciation and past losses - Legal position regarding arrears of depreciation may be summarised as follows:

1. Where a company has not provided for depreciation for any financial year after the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1960, this should be done before any dividend is declared. Such arrears of depreciation may be provided out of the current profits or the profits of previous financial years, remaining undistributed.
2. Where a company has incurred any loss in any previous financial year or years falling after the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1960, then the lower of the following two amounts, namely,—
 - (a) the amount of the loss, or
 - (b) the amount of depreciation provided for that year or those years, should be set off against:
 - (i) the profits of the company for the year for which dividends are proposed to be declared or paid, or
 - (ii) against the profits of the company for any previous financial year or years; arrived at in both cases after providing for depreciation, or
 - (iii) against both.

Proviso (b) to section 205(1) of the Act which provides as above does not seem to convey the requirement in a very clear manner. Ordinarily, a profit or loss is determined after providing for depreciation. This is intended here also as the proviso refers to the amount of depreciation provided. Accordingly, when one has to find out the lesser of:

- (a) the loss, and
- (b) the depreciation content of the loss; it may only bring confusion. To clarify a practical situation is given below:

Assume that the profit in a particular previous year was ₹500 before providing for depreciation. If depreciation provided for was ₹1,200 for that year, then there will emerge a loss of ₹700. The comparison is to be made with the figure of loss, i.e., ₹700 and the depreciation provided, viz. ₹1,200; the loss of ₹700 being lower, this requires to be offset against current year's profit after depreciation. There cannot be a situation where the loss can be lesser than the depreciation, when there was originally a loss situation, say of ₹200 before providing for depreciation of ₹1,200, then the loss after providing for depreciation is ₹1,400 and in that circumstance only ₹1,200 need be offset and not ₹1,400. This situation perhaps is again not in conformity with the spirit of the proviso, because it fails to require offsetting of ₹200 of actual loss or ₹1,400 of actual loss after depreciation. This deficiency in the proviso need urgent correction to require offsetting of the entire carried forward loss arrived after charge of depreciation.

Views of the Company Law Department on depreciation

1. Re-computation of specified period-Specified period once computed need not be recomputed. The companies may, therefore, continue to charge depreciation at the old SLM (Straight Line Method) rates (in spite of new rates of depreciation prescribed under Schedule XIV) in respect of the already acquired assets against which depreciation has been provided in earlier years on SLM basis [Circular No. 2 of 1989, dated 7-3-1989].

2. Can depreciation be provided at rates higher than Schedule XIV rates?

The Department has opined that the rates as contained in Schedule XIV should be viewed as the minimum rates, and, therefore, a company shall not be permitted to charge depreciation at rates lower than those specified in the Schedule in relation to assets purchased after the date of applicability of the Schedule. However, if on the basis of a bona fide technological evaluation, higher rates of depreciation are justified, they may be provided with proper disclosure by way of a note forming part of annual accounts [Circular No. 2 of 1989, dated 7-3-1989].

Insertion of Schedule XIV has in effect, resulted in delinking of computation of depreciation under the Companies Act from depreciation calculated under the Income-tax Act. Non-compliance of the provisions of Schedule XIV to the Act will tantamount to a default under the Companies Act and shall thus attract penal consequences. This will be so, even though depreciation is provided as per the Income-tax Act. However, in general, the rates of depreciation under Income-tax Act are higher than the rates under Schedule XIV. To that extent companies may provide the higher rates as under the Income-tax Act. But if Schedule XIV rates are higher, say for example, in case of data processing machines (including computers) the rate of depreciation is 40% (WDV rate) but under Income-tax Rules it is 20%, depreciation at 40% (i.e., Schedule XIV rates) only will be applicable.

3. Depreciation on immovable properties held as investments -The Company Law Department has also opined that adequate depreciation must be provided for on all assets that depreciate. Thus, even where immovable property is held as an investment, depreciation should be provided unless the company deals in buying and selling of properties.

Different methods of depreciation for different types of assets -Companies are free to adopt different methods of depreciation for different types of assets. However with regard to a particular asset the same basis must be consistently adopted from year to year. Thus, a company may charge depreciation on straight line method in respect of buildings and adopt the written down value method for plant and machinery.

Where an asset has already been reduced to 5 per cent or less of its original cost, it would not be statutorily necessary to provide for further depreciation every year till the asset is sold, discarded, demolished or destroyed.

Pro rata depreciation - Note 4 to Schedule XIV provides for provision of depreciation on pro rata basis in respect of assets which are purchased during a financial year. The provision was incorporated to check a large scale malpractice of purchasing the assets towards the end of the financial year but charging depreciation for the full year. Likewise, where any asset has been sold, discarded, demolished or destroyed, the depreciation on such assets shall be calculated on a pro rata basis. Thus, in the case of assets purchased, sold, discarded or destroyed during a financial year, depreciation will be calculated from the date of purchase or, as the case may be, upto the date on which such asset has been sold, discarded, demolished or destroyed.

With regard to pro rata depreciation, the Research Committee of the ICAI has expressed the view that a company may group additions and disposals in appropriate time period(s), e.g., 15 days, a month, a quarter, etc., for the purpose of charging pro rata depreciation in respect of additions and disposals of its assets keeping in view the materiality of the amounts involved¹.

A question that may arise in this regard is whether depreciation is to be charged on pro rata basis even in respect of those assets for which a depreciation rate of 100% has been prescribed in Schedule XIV. In this regard, it is reasonable to draw a distinction between low-cost items (which can be fully written off in the year of acquisition on ground of materiality) and those items for which a depreciation rate of 100% is prescribed. In respect of the items falling in the latter category, the requirement for providing depreciation on pro rata basis seems to be as much as in respect of other assets for which lower rates are prescribed.

Depreciation for double or triple shift working shall be provided:

- (a) only when the concern has actually so worked uniformly throughout the year;
- (b) in case the concern has not worked uniformly, as in (a) above, extra shift depreciation shall be provided in proportion to the number of days for which the concern worked extra shift which it bears to the normal number of working days during the year.
‘Normal working days’, for this purpose, shall be:
 - (i) in the case of a seasonal factory or concern, the number of days on which the factory or concern actually worked during the year or 180 days, whichever is greater;
 - (ii) in any other case, the number of days on which the factory or concern actually worked during the year or 240 days, whichever is greater.
- (c) no extra shift depreciation shall be charged on assets marked N.E.S.D. (meaning ‘No Extra Shift Depreciation’) and also in respect of items of machinery and plant specified under Note 6 to Schedule XIV to which the general rate of depreciation of 15 per cent applies.

1.6.2. Declaration of dividend on preference and equity shares

The Companies Act does not give any specific power to the companies registered thereunder to declare and pay any dividend. The power to pay dividend is inherent in a company and is not derived from the Companies Act or the Memorandum or Articles of Association although the Articles of Association generally regulate the manner in which dividends are to be declared. It may, however, be noted that section 86, as amended by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000, allows companies to issue equity shares with differential rights as to dividend.

Regulation 85 of Table A requires that the dividend is to be declared in the general meeting but the amount/rate of dividend declared cannot exceed the amount/rate recommended by the Board. If Table A has been adopted as Articles of the company or regulation 85 has been included in any independent Articles of Association or has not been excluded therefrom, then only the aforesaid position prevails. The recommendation of final dividend or declaration of interim dividend has to be made by the Board and not by any Committee of the Board. It is desirable that where an Audit Committee exists, the final accounts of the company be reviewed by that Committee before the Board makes the recommendation or the declaration.

Proportion in which dividend is payable- When the shares are fully paid, no special difficulty arises as regards the proportion of dividend, because all the shares will be entitled to dividend at the rate at which it is declared. Problems, however, may be experienced if outstanding shares are neither fully paid nor paid in equal proportion, e.g., some shares are fully paid while some shares are partly paid or where fresh issue of shares has been made during the year for which dividend is to be declared. Section 93 of the Act provides that a company may, if so, authorized by its articles, pay dividend in proportion to the amount paid up on each share. Regulation 88 of Table A is the basis for the provision. Taking the logic of section 93 read with Regulation 88 of Table A in case of fresh issue of shares during the year, dividend on these shares can be paid in a composite proportion to the time period for which these shares were outstanding during the year and the amount paid-up thereon. For example, existing equity shares which were there for the full year and were fully paid were to receive a dividend of rupees four per share, then shares issued during the year – and remaining outstanding for only six months with a paid-up amount of rupees five per share will be entitled to only rupee one as dividend. Where Table A has been excluded and the company's independent article does not contain any provision about payment of dividend in proportionate manner, then dividend has to be paid at the same rate calculated on the face value of the shares to all the outstanding shares irrespective of their paid up value or date of fresh issue.

Dividend on preference shares - The distinguishing feature of a preference share is that its holder is entitled to a dividend of a fixed amount, usually expressed as a percentage of the nominal or paid-up value of the share, before any dividend is paid on the ordinary shares. If there are two or more classes of preference shares, the shareholders of the class which has priority are similarly entitled to their preferential dividend before any dividend is paid in respect of the other class. But these rights in respect of dividends are subject to two qualifications. In the first place, preference shares are part of the company's share capital, and are not loans; consequently, preference dividends can be paid only if the company has earned sufficient profits. Secondly, a dividend becomes payable to the shareholder only when it is declared in the manner laid down by the company's articles. Thus, unless the preference dividends for the year or other period is properly declared, the preference shareholders cannot sue the company for it'. If the company is able to pay the dividend without endangering its business, and the directors or equity shareholders prevented such payment, the preference shareholders may be entitled to a remedy on the ground that they are being treated unfairly, but they are not entitled to treat the preference dividend as a debt and sue for its payment in the first instance. However, if the Articles specified the way in which the company's profits shall be applied, and this includes payment of the preference dividend, the preference shareholder has a contractual right to its payment, and can sue for it even though it has not been declared - Evling v. Israel & Oppenheimer Ltd, [1918] 1 Ch. 101.

The terms of issue of preference shares usually provide that the preference dividend shall be paid out of 'profits' or out of 'profits available for dividend'. The meaning of the two expressions is the same, namely that the dividend may be declared out of the net profits after provision has been made for all proper matters according to the company's wishes - Re Buenos Ayres Great Southern Rly. Co. Ltd. [1947] Ch. 384, [1947] 1 All ER 729. Consequently, if the company has suffered trading losses in earlier years, it was held that the company could write the losses off against the current year's profits, even though this reduced the residual profits to a level which was insufficient to pay current year's preference dividend - Long Acre Press Ltd. v. Odhams Press Ltd. [1930] 2 Ch. 196; [1930] All ER Rep. 237. Furthermore, if the directors have power by the Articles to transfer any part of the profits to reserves before a dividend is declared, they may make such transfers, even though the residual profits will be insufficient to pay the preference dividend". But transfer to reserves cannot be made if they will benefit equity shareholders exclusively. Thus, a transfer to reserve cannot be made in order to provide money to maintain the equity share dividend at a minimum rate in future years when trading profits may be small

Also if the articles specify the order in which profits shall be applied, and the payment of the preference dividend precedes the setting aside profits to reserves or any similar appropriation, the preference shareholders are entitled to be paid their dividend for the current year and the unpaid dividends for earlier years (if any) before other appropriations are made - Evling v. Israel Oppenheimer Ltd. (supra).

Cumulative preference dividend - Preference dividend is usually expressed to be cumulative by the terms of issue of the shares. This means that if the profits available for dividend in one year are insufficient to pay the preference dividend in full, the unpaid balance¹ of the dividend is carried forward and is payable out of the profits of later years. In other words, no dividend may be paid on the equity shares or junior classes of preference shares until the preference dividends for all past years and the current year have been paid in full to the preference shareholders having a prior claim. If preference shares of the same class have been issued at different times and the dividend is in arrear in respect of some shares for more years than it is in respect of others, the total arrears must be satisfied rateably when a dividend is eventually paid.

Non-cumulative preference dividend - The terms of issue of preference shares may, of course, provide that the preference dividend shall be non-cumulative, but this is rare in practice. If the dividend is non-cumulative, it is payable only out of the profits for the year in question so that if those profits are for any reason insufficient, the unpaid balance of the dividend for that year is not carried forward to be paid out of the profits of future years.

Participation in residual profits - A preference shareholder as such is entitled only to his fixed preference dividend out of the company's distributed profits, and there is no implication that he is also entitled to a share in the residual profits of the company left after that dividend has been paid*. Secondly, where the terms of issue of preference shares provided that they should carry a cumulative preference dividend of ten per cent, it was held that their holders were not entitled to share rateably in distribution of residual profits with the ordinary shareholders, even though the Articles provided that 'subject to any priority that may be given on the issue of any new shares, the profits of the company available for distribution... shall be distributed as dividend among the members in accordance with the amounts paid on the shares held by them respectively'.

However, when preference shareholders are expressly given the right to share in distribution of residual profits after payment of their preference dividend, their shares are known as participating preference shares. The participation then may be limited to the profits of the company remaining after it has paid both the current year's preference dividend and a specified dividend of its equity shares, or it may extend to the whole of the residual profits after payment of the fixed preference dividend.

Arrears of preference dividend in a winding-up - Unpaid preference dividend for " periods preceding the winding-up of a company are not payable out of its assets in a " winding-up, even though the company has earned sufficient profits to pay them - Re London Indian Rubber Co. [1858] LR 5 Eq 519, unless :

- (a) The dividends have been declared, in which case they will be debts owing from the company and will be payable in the winding-up immediately after all its other debts have been discharged; or
- (b) The articles or terms of issue provide that the profits of the company while a going concern shall be applied in making specified payments which include the payment of preference dividend, but in this case the arrears can be paid only if sufficient profits have been earned; or
- (c) The articles or terms of issue provide that unpaid preference dividend shall be paid in a winding-up.

Dividend on equity shares - Equity shareholders are entitled to be paid a dividend on their shares only after all preference dividends have been paid to date. Although the equity shareholder stands behind in priority for payment of the dividend, he generally enjoys the privilege of higher dividends. The preference dividend is fixed and cannot be increased, however large the company's profits may be, unless the preference shares carry the right to participate in surplus profits. Except in that case, therefore, the whole of the residual profits of the company after paying the preference dividend may be paid out as a dividend to the equity shareholders either immediately or in later years (including the bonus issue). The equity shareholders are further compensated by enjoying the voting power at general meetings.

Default in complying with section 80A - Under section 205(2B), a company which fails to comply with the provisions of section 80A of the Act regarding redemption of preference shares shall not declare any dividend on its equity shares, so long as such default continues.

Equity shares with differential rights - The Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 has introduced a new variety of equity shares [vide sections 2(46A) and 86 of the Act] which may have differential rights to govern such shares. As these shares may have differential dividend rights, whether with or without voting rights, it is to be seen that dividend on these shares is declared/paid in accordance with rules framed by the Central Government.

Declaration of dividend - Articles commonly contain provisions on the declaration of dividend, and it is the usual practice to leave it to the general meeting to sanction or declare the final dividend. Section 173(1) of the Companies Act, 1956 also requires that the declaration of the dividend should be shown as an ordinary business at an annual general meeting of a company. Similarly, there is a reference to dividend in section 217 where under directors are required to mention in their report to the shareholders the amount, if any, which they recommend should be paid by way of dividend. Therefore, it could be assumed that the intention of the legislature is to empower the annual general meeting to declare dividend. In Raghu Nandan Neotia v. Swadeshi Cloth Dealers Ltd. [1964] 34 Comp. Cas. 570, the Calcutta High Court held that the cumulative effect of all the provisions of the Act is that declaration of dividend should be made at the annual general meeting. Likewise in Kanti Lai v. Commissioner of Income-tax [1956] 26 Comp. Cas. 357 (Bom.), the Bombay High Court held that it is well established and the law is clear that a dividend can only be declared by the shareholders of the company. Articles of companies usually contain provisions with regard to declaration of dividend on the pattern of regulations 85 to 94 of Table A of the Companies Act. Under Regulation 85, the power to declare a dividend vests with the general meeting, but it has no power to declare a dividend exceeding the amount recommended by the Board of directors.

Should the dividends be declared only at an annual general meeting ? - From the aforesaid discussion, it is clear that dividend is usually declared at an annual general meeting of the company. However, a company which could not declare dividend at an annual general meeting may do so at a subsequent general meeting. But if a dividend is so declared at the general meeting, neither the company nor the directors can declare a further dividend for the same year (Circular No. 22, issued by Department of Company Affairs, dated 25-10-1975). Also, there can be no declaration of dividend for past years, in respect of which the accounts have already been closed at previously held annual general meeting - Raghu Nandan Neotia v. Swadeshi Cloth Dealers Ltd. (supra).

Revocation of final dividend - Ordinarily, a dividend once declared, cannot be revoked, except with the consent of the shareholders, for a declaration of dividend creates a debt to the shareholders in whose favour it is declared. Thus, if a dividend is declared and the amount is credited or paid to the shareholders as dividend, the character of the credit or payment as dividend cannot be altered by a subsequent resolution - Kishinchand Chellaram v. C/T [1962] 32 Comp. Cas. 1046, 1050 (SC).

But, where a dividend has been illegally declared, or where, events like war, imposition of fresh taxes, fire to properties etc. intervene after the declaration and it is advisable to conserve the remaining assets, the Board of directors will be justified in revoking the declaration of dividend.

Interim dividend

A part of profits may be distributed before the accounts are finally passed and the declaration of the dividend sanctioned in the annual general meeting. Such dividends are called 'Interim dividend'. The 'interim dividend' is thus a dividend paid between two annual general meetings of the company. Sub-section (1A) of section 205 (added by the Amendment Act, 2000) empowers the Board of Directors of a company to declare interim dividend. Regulation 86 of Table A of Schedule I to the Companies Act provides:

"The Board may from time to time pay to the members such interim dividends as appear to it to be justified by the profits of the company."

Till the passing of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000, there was no provision in the Companies Act (except Reg. 86 of Table A)* relating to interim dividend. The Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 has introduced sub-section (14A) in section 2 whereby 'interim dividend' is now part of 'dividend' and accordingly all provisions of the Companies Act relating to 'dividends' have become applicable to 'interim dividend' also.

- To put things beyond doubt, section 205 has also been amended to provide for the following: The Board of Directors may declare interim dividend and the amount of -dividend including interim dividend shall be deposited in a separate bank account within five days from the date of declaration of such dividend.
- The amount of dividend including interim dividend so deposited above shall be used for payment of interim dividend.
- The provisions contained in sections 205, 205A, 205C, 206, 206A and 207, as far as may be, also apply to any interim dividend.

Provisions of the Companies Act, applicable to interim dividend- Apart from what has already been stated, the following further provisions arising out of sub-sections (1B) and (1C) of section 205 of the Act may be noted:

- (i) The interim dividend is to be paid out of the amount deposited in a special bank account from the date of the Board meeting in which the dividend was declared to the registered shareholder(s) or to his order or to his banker.
- (ii) Depreciation on depreciable assets to be provided for the full year.
- (iii) If there is a carried forward loss from past years, the amount of the loss or the depreciation content of the loss, whichever is lower, should be first adjusted against estimated profits available for distribution as interim dividend.
- (iv) If any amount of interim dividend remains unpaid/unclaimed on expiry of thirty days from the date of declaration by the Board of directors, then within seven days thereof, the unpaid/unclaimed amount is to be transferred to a special account in a scheduled bank, to be called "Unpaid interim dividend account of.....Company Limited/Company (Private) Limited."
- (v) Where (iv) above has not been complied with in full or in part, the company shall pay interest at the rate of twelve per cent per annum on the amount not transferred to the special bank account from the day of default, until the transfer is made and the interest as above shall accrue to the benefit of members of the company whose amounts remain unpaid in proportion to the amount remaining unpaid.
- (vi) Any amount remaining unpaid/unclaimed in the special bank account for seven years shall be transferred to the Investor Education and Protection Fund established under section 205C of the Act.
- (vii) Where, on the record date, any application for transfer of shares received remained undisposed, the interim dividend applicable to the concerned shares shall be transferred to the special bank account opened for unpaid/unclaimed dividend, unless the transferor has authorised the company to make the payment to the transferee. Any offer of right shares or fully paid-up bonus shares relatable to shares under transfer shall remain in abeyance. ?
- (viii) Every director of the company who is knowingly a party to any non-payment of interim dividend after declaration within the specified thirty days shall be punishable with simple imprisonment up to three years and fine of rupees one thousand per day for the days of default. Further, the company itself shall be liable to pay simple interest at eighteen per cent per annum for the period of default. However, no offence will be deemed to have arisen if conditions (a) to (e) of proviso to section 207 of the Act exist(s). (Vide section 207 of the Act).

Procedure for payment of interim dividend - A company desirous of declaring interim dividend should follow the procedure given below:

1. Verify that the Board of Directors has declared the interim dividend.
2. Ascertain whether profits for the part of the financial year up to the time of proposed declaration are sufficient to justify payment of interim dividend. Availability of profits should be ascertained after taking into account depreciation and compulsory transfer to reserves. Auditor's opinion should also be obtained.
3. Intimate the stock exchange(s) about the Board meeting to consider the payment of interim dividend.
4. Resolution of the Board of directors should state the rate of dividend, deposit of interim dividend in a separate account within five days from the date of its declaration, the date in reference to which shareholders registered in the Register of Members are to receive interim dividend, record date or the period of closure of the Register of Members and transfer books, date of posting of dividend warrants, etc. The Secretary may be authorised to take necessary action in this regard.
5. Inform the Stock Exchange of the date of the closure of Register of Members.
6. At least seven days before the closure of the Register of Members or the record date fixed, publish a notice in this regard in a newspaper circulating in the district in which the registered office of the company is situate.

7. Open a separate 'Interim Dividend Account' with a Bank and issue necessary instructions to the Bank.
8. Post 'Dividend Warrants' within 30 days from the declaration of interim dividend.
9. Dividend warrants to non-resident shareholders should be posted after securing necessary permission of the Reserve Bank as per the provisions of FEMA, 1999. However, if dividend balancing rule is applicable to the company paying dividend, no foreign exchange will be released.
10. Depreciation and transfer to reserves vis-a-vis interim dividend- On a plain and conservative reading of the provisions of section 205(1C) relating to applicability of provisions regulating 'dividend' to interim dividend, it has been stated in the procedure given above that quantum of interim dividend is to be ascertained, inter alia, after taking into account depreciation and transfer of profit to reserves. Actual book entry is not then required. There is no unanimity on this interpretation of the law. Corporate entities generally prefer to declare interim dividend, ignoring depreciation and transfer to reserves. The key to this interpretation lies in the words 'as far as may be' in section 205(1C) of the Act. The requirements of section 205 apply to interim dividend as far as they may be practicable to apply. Requirements for providing depreciation and compulsory transfer of profits to reserves are all contained in section 205 of the Act. [Vide sub-sections (1) and (2A)]. In both the cases the requirement relates to the concerned 'financial year'. The expression 'financial year' has been defined in section 2(17) of the Act to mean the 'period in respect of which any profit and loss account is laid before the annual general meeting'. Therefore, financial year would mean the whole period for which the profit and loss account is prepared for laying before the AGM. Interim dividend is declared before the expiry of such whole period and as such the question of meeting the requirements of sub-sections (1) and (2A) of section 205 insofar as declaration of interim dividend is concerned may not arise. Even then it would be prudent to provide depreciation for the full financial year concerned to safeguard against any possibility of payment of dividend out of capital. A judicial decision is needed to come to a conclusion on this controversial issue.

Does declaration of interim dividend require ratification by the AGM?

As the current definition of dividend given in section 2(14A) includes interim dividend, an area of lack of clarity has arisen having regard to the provisions of section 173(1)(a) of the Act, which requires declaration of dividend to be considered by the AGM. Prima facie, it may appear that though interim dividend has already been declared by the directors and paid off still the same has to come before the AGM, as a specific item. This seems to be stretching the matter too far based on technicality. When annual financial statements come for consideration of the AGM, declaration [and payment of interim dividend are clearly reflected therein. If such financial statements are approved, it automatically meets the stretched requirements of section 173(1)(g) of the Act. Besides, it is the Board of directors, which under full authority of the Act (not merely of the Articles) has declared and paid the interim dividend, it is again to recommend the final dividend in terms of Regulation 85 of Table A (if not excluded) and it can be presumed that the Board, while declaring the final dividend must have taken into account, the interim dividend already paid. Any irregularity or lack of application of mind by the Board would be noticed in the AGM and the AGM may disapprove the recommendation of the Board and ask it to recast the annual financial statements in light of its observations.

A communication No. 8/15/(205A)/79-CLV, dated 18-7-1981 by the Department of Company Affairs has observed that interim dividend paid by the Board needs to be regularized in the next following Annual General Meeting. This communication does not possess statutory basis.

Payment of dividend

Dividend payable to whom - Section 206 provides that no dividend shall be paid by a company in respect of any share therein except:

- (a) to the registered holder of such share or to his order or to his bankers; or
- (b) in case a share warrant has been issued in respect of the share in pursuance of section 114, to the bearer of such warrant or to his bankers.

Thus, if a shareholder has issued a mandate for the payment of dividend on his shares to a bank, the company paying the dividend to the bank accordingly, would get a good discharge for the payment so made and the dividend shall be deemed to have been paid to the shareholder in cash as contemplated under sub-section (3) of section 205 of the Act.

Payment of dividend in case of sale of shares -As noted above, the dividend is required to be paid to the registered shareholder. The company, therefore, does not recognise anybody except the person whose name is shown as the shareholder in the Register of Members of the company and is not bound to pay the dividends to the purchaser even though the transaction between the seller and purchaser has been completed-Chuni Lal Khusaldas Patel v. U.K. Adhyaru [1956] 26 Comp. Cas. 168 (SC). However, the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988 inserted a new section, namely section 206A' which provides that in the case of shares, the transfer deed in respect of which has been lodged with the company and is pending registration at the time of payment of dividend, the dividend shall be paid to the transferee only in case the transferor has given a mandate in writing to that effect. In case no such mandate has been given, the dividend in respect of such shares should be transferred to the 'unpaid dividend account'.

Dividend is to be paid in cash-Sub-sections (3) and (5)(b) of section 205 of the Companies Act, 1956 contain guidelines for payment of dividend. Sub-section (3) provides that no dividend shall be payable except in cash. However, the sub-section does not prohibit the capitalisation of profits or reserves of a company for the purpose of issuing fully paid up bonus shares or paying up any amount, for the time being unpaid on any shares held by the members of the company.

Sub-section (5)(b) lays down that any dividend payable in cash may be paid by cheque or warrant sent through the post directed to the registered address of the shareholder entitled to the payment of the dividend or in the case of joint shareholders, to the registered address of that one of the joint shareholders which is first named in the Register of Members or to such person and to such address as the shareholder or the joint shareholders may in writing direct.

The Deptt. of Company Affairs has clarified that dividend can also be transmitted electronically to the shareholders after obtaining their consent in this regard and asking them to nominate specific bank account number to which dividend due to them should be remitted. In fact, the Deptt. has advised that the practice should be encouraged since it will ensure not only timely payment but also will protect investors against loss of dividend warrants in transit—Deptt.'s Circular No. 5/99 dated 12-5-1999.

Time within which dividends to be paid-Section 207 casts an obligation on the company to pay dividend, which is declared to the shareholder entitled therein within 30 days from its declaration. The term 'payment' implies the act of posting of dividend warrant or cheque as provided under the law irrespective of the fact whether the shareholder concerned receives it or not. Thus, the offence under the section takes place when there is failure to pay or a cheque or a warrant therefor is not posted to the registered address of the shareholder. The section makes the failure to post within 30 days and not the non-receipt of the warrant by a shareholder, an offence. Therefore, the obligation to pay within the prescribed time is satisfied once the dividend is paid or a cheque or a warrant therefor is posted at the registered address of the shareholder. On such posting, the post office becomes the agent of the shareholder and the loss of the dividend warrant during transit thereafter is at the risk of the shareholder - Hanuman Prasad Gupta v. Hira Lai [1970] 40 Comp. Cas. 1058 (SC). It may be noted that this obligation to make the payment of the dividend applies to interim dividend as well.

Right to complain - Where shares are lodged for registration of transfer, as long as shares are not transferred, complaint for non-payment of dividends can be lodged by transferor and not by transferee [G.R. Desai v. Registrar of Companies [1998] 18 SCL 55 AP].

Penalty for default - Section 207 provides for penalty for non-payment of dividend or non-posting of warrant in respect thereof within the prescribed period of 30 days. The section makes every director of the company who is knowingly a party to the default punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to 3 years and with fine of ₹1000 for every day the default continues. Besides, the company shall pay simple interest @ 18 per cent per annum during the period default continues. The offence is not compoundable under section 621 A.

The provision under section 207 contemplates the implication of any director of the body corporate only in the event of such director being knowingly a party to the default - N. Kumar v. M.O. Roy, Assistant Director, S.F.I.O. [2007] 80 SCL 55 (Mad.).

However, in NEPC India Ltd v. R. O. C [1999] 97 Comp. Cas, 500 (Mad.); it was held that to invoke penal provisions of section 207, the complaint must have been filed within one year of the issue of show-cause notice. In view of section 468 of Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, a complaint under section 207 filed more than one year after the date of issue of show-cause notice shall prima facie be time barred - N. Kumar v. MO. Roy, Assistant Director, S.F.I.O. [2007] 80 SCL 55 (Mad.).

When default is excusable - The proviso to section 207 provides for certain circumstances where the default shall be excusable. These circumstances are:

- (a) Where the dividend could not be paid by reason of the operation of any law. However, if dividend cannot be paid by operation of law, its non-deposit in the special account shall be an offence - Consolidated Pneumatic Tools Co. (P.) Ltd, v. ROC [1989] 65 Comp. Cas. 259 (Bom.).
- (b) Where a shareholder has given direction to the company regarding the payment of the dividend and those directions cannot be complied with.
- (c) Where there is a dispute regarding the right to receive the dividend.
- (d) Where the dividend has been lawfully adjusted by the company against any sum due to it from the shareholder.
- (e) Where, for any other reason, the failure to pay the dividend or to post the warrant within 30 days was not due to any default on the part of the company.

Jurisdiction for purposes of complaint -In Hanuman Prasad Gupta v. Hira Lal [1956] of 2 Comp. LJ 136, it was held by the Allahabad High Court that a complaint for failure to pay dividend could be filed by an aggrieved shareholder in a court having jurisdiction over his own place of address, where the dividend has to be paid. This decision was reversed by the Supreme Court, which held that the failure to pay the dividend or post the dividend warrant would arise only at the place of the registered office of the company, and the Court having jurisdiction over that place alone could have jurisdiction to entertain the complaint—Hanuman Prasad Gupta v. Hiralal [1970]2Comp.LJ195.

As a matter of policy also, it would be dangerous and intolerable if numerous shareholders, residing in numerous different places, choose to file complaints against the company in Courts having jurisdiction over the places of their residence.²

Dividend Warrants

Clause (b) of sub-section (5) of section 205 specifically provides that any dividend payable in cash may be paid by cheque or warrant and it shall be deemed to have been paid when the cheque or warrant therefor is posted to the registered address of the shareholder entitled to the payment of dividend.

'Dividend warrant' is an order by the company to its banker to pay the amount specified therein to the shareholder whose name is written therein. The warrant is crossed as "payee's account only" and, therefore, the banker makes the payment to the shareholder not in cash but by crediting his banker's account. The shareholder may, at his discretion thereafter draw the amount of the warrant from his account that his banker is maintaining and with whom he deposits the warrant for collection.

By Notification No. GSR 598(E) dated 28th July, 1994, the DCA has directed that if the amount of the dividend payable to a shareholder is in fraction then fifty paise and above shall be rounded off to a full rupee and less than fifty paise shall be ignored.

Loss of dividend warrant - If a dividend warrant issued to but not received by a shareholder is encashed by an unauthorised person either directly or through a banker, the company is not protected, however, bona fide the payment may have taken place, because in such case the dividend cannot be said to have been paid to the registered holder within the meaning of section 2063. Thus, the consequences of loss through wrong payment will fall on the company.

Dividend mandate

The shareholders who desire that their dividends be credited direct to their bank accounts have to make the request in prescribed form supplied by the company. The aforesaid form when duly filled and sent to the company is known as 'Dividend Mandate'. The shareholder fills in the form and puts his signature authorising the company to pay dividends direct to his banker. This form is also used for similar requests for payment of interest on debentures or other types of securities. The advantages of 'dividend mandate' are:

- (a) It reduces the amount of unclaimed dividends which the company has to carry forward from year to year.
- (b) It enables the use of one dividend warrant for the payment of dividends due to several shareholders having accounts with the same bank.

A specimen form of 'Dividend mandate' is given below:

Procedure for payment of final dividend

1. Arrange to hold meeting of the Board of directors to consider the amount of dividend to be recommended to the ensuing annual general meeting for declaration.
2. Notify to the recognised stock exchange with which the shares of the company are listed without delay the date of the aforesaid Board meeting.
3. Ensure that the required percentage of profits is transferred to the company's reserves [Rule 2 of the Companies (Transfer of Profits to Reserves) Rules, 1975].
4. Fix up the book closure date/record date for payment of dividend and give due notice to the stock exchange(s) where the shares are listed.
5. Forthwith inform the recognised stock exchange(s) with which the shares of the company are listed after the holding of the Board meeting in which dividend is recommended or declared.

6. Include in the agenda of the annual general meeting, the business of declaration of dividend.
7. Pass an ordinary resolution in the annual general meeting declaring the dividend.
8. Fix and notify the recognised stock exchange with which the shares of the company are listed in advance of the date on and from which the dividend will be payable and issue simultaneously the dividend warrants which shall be encashable at par at all the branches of the company's bankers so as to reach the shareholders on or before the date fixed for payment of dividend.
9. Arrange to make payment within 30 days of declaration either in cash or by cheque/warrant sent through the post directed at the registered address of the shareholder entitled to the payment of the dividend. In the case of joint shareholders the dividend should be sent to the registered address of the joint shareholder who is first named on the Register of Members or to such person and to such address as the shareholder or the joint shareholders may in writing direct [Section 205A].
10. Hold a Board meeting to authorise opening of dividend account with provision for:
 - (a) Styling the dividend account as 'Unpaid Dividend Account' after 37 days from the date of declaration of dividend;
 - (b) Autographic signatures of authorised signatories of the company on the dividend warrants above certain amount;
 - (c) Execution of indemnity in connection with collection of paid warrants from the bank.
11. Arrange to transfer the total amount of dividend which remains unpaid or unclaimed within 7 days from expiry of 30 days from the date of its declaration to a special account to be opened by the company in this behalf.
12. Where instruments of transfer have been received by the company in relation to some shares and the transfer of such shares has not been registered when the dividend warrants were posted, ensure that amount of dividend in relation to such shares is also kept in the 'unpaid dividend account' unless the company is authorised by the registered holder of those shares in writing to pay the dividend to the transferees [Section 206A].
13. Regarding dividend on new shares issued during the year, ensure that:
 - (a) where the offer document provides for payment of dividend on the paid-up value, dividend is calculated only on the paid-up value of shares;
 - (b) dividend is calculated on the pro rata basis on the shares allotted during the year from the date of allotment.
14. Where duplicate dividend warrants are to be issued, obtain duplicate indemnity in lieu of dividend warrants lost/torn/defaced/mutilated.
15. Obtain permission of the RBI for payment of dividend, in foreign exchange. If dividend-balancing arrangement applies, no foreign exchange can be drawn for payment of dividend.

1.6.3 Unpaid and unclaimed dividends

Unpaid dividends - According to section 205A amended by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000 where a dividend has been declared by a company but has not been paid or claimed within 30 days from the date of the declaration to any shareholder entitled to the payment of the dividend, the company shall within 7 days from the date of expiry of the said period of 30 days transfer the total amount of dividend which remains unpaid¹ or unclaimed within the said period of 30 days to a special account to be opened by the company in that behalf in any scheduled bank to be called "Unpaid Dividend Account of.... Company Limited/Company (Private) Limited". If default is made in transferring the unpaid or unclaimed dividend to the said account, the company shall pay interest from the date of default @12% per annum. Such interest will be paid to the members of the company in proportion to the amounts remaining unpaid to them.

Transfer of unpaid dividend to Investor Education and Protection Fund - Section 205A (5) provides that any money transferred to the unpaid dividend account of a company which remains unpaid or unclaimed for a period of seven years from the date of such transfer must be transferred by the company to the Fund set up by the Central Government under Section 205C.

The company shall be entitled to a receipt from the authority or committee under sub-section (4) of section 205C for any money transferred by it to the Fund and such a receipt shall be effectual discharge of the company in respect thereof [Sec. 205A(7)].

Payment of unpaid or unclaimed dividend [Section 205B]-No claims shall lie against the Fund or the company in respect of individual amounts which were unclaimed and unpaid for a period of seven years from the dates they first became due for payment and no payment shall be made in respect of such claims [Explanation to sub-section (2) of section 205C].

Penalty - If a company fails to comply with any of the above requirements, the company and every officer of the company who is in default shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ₹5000 for every day during which the failure continues.

Establishment of Investor Education and Protection Fund [IEPF] [Section 205C]

The Central Government shall establish a fund to be called the Investor Education and Protection Fund (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Fund") [Sec. 205C(1)].

There shall be credited to the Fund the following amounts, namely:—

- (a) amounts in the unpaid dividend accounts of companies;
- (b) the application moneys received by companies for allotment of any securities and due for refund;
- (c) matured deposits with companies;
- (d) matured debentures with companies;
- (e) the interest accrued on the amounts referred to in clauses (a) to (d);
- (f) grants and donations given to the Fund by the Central Government/State Governments, companies or any other institutions for the purposes of the Fund; and
- (g) the interest or other income received out of the investments made from the Fund. [Sec. 205C(2)].

However, no such amount referred to in clauses (a) to (d) shall form part of the Fund unless such amounts have remained unclaimed and unpaid for a period of seven years from the date they became due for payment. [Section 205C(2)].

No claims shall lie against the Fund or the company in respect of individual amounts which were unclaimed or unpaid for a period of seven years from the dates that they first became due for payment and no payment shall be made in respect of such claims. The Fund shall be utilised for promotion of investor awareness and protection of the interests of investors in accordance with such rules as may be prescribed. [Sec. 205C(3)]. Accordingly, the Investor Education and Protection Fund (Awareness and Protection of Investors) Rules, 2001 have been issued.

The Central Government shall, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify an authority or committee, with such members as the Central Government may appoint, to administer the Fund, and maintain separate accounts and other relevant records in relation to the Fund in such form as may be prescribed in consultation with the Comptroller and Auditor-General of India. [Sec. 205C(4)]. The Committee for administering the Fund has since been constituted by Notification No. SO 1087(E), dated 11-11-1999.

It shall be competent for the authority or committee appointed under sub-section (4) to spend moneys out of the Fund for carrying out the objects for which the Fund has been established. [Sec. 205C(5)]. The Authority has also been empowered to provide financial assistance from the Fund to any organisation/entity/person in terms of Guidelines announced by appropriate authority.

Can dividends be paid out of Capital

Dividends (including interim dividend), as per section 205, may be paid out of the following three sources only:

- out of current profits,
- out of profits for any previous financial year or years, and
- out of moneys provided by the Central or State Government for the payment of dividend.

Accordingly, dividends are not allowed to be declared out of capital. If the memorandum or articles give power to the company to pay dividends out of capital, such a power shall be invalid- Verner v. General & Commercial Investment Trust Ltd. [1894] 2 Ch.239.

Consequences of payment of dividend out of capital

In case dividends have been paid out of capital, the following consequences follow:

1. Directors who knowingly paid dividends out of capital shall be held personally liable to make good the amount to the company - Oxford Benefit Building & Investment Society, In re [1886] 35 Ch. D. However, directors shall incur no liability where such payment was made on the faith of bona fide valuation of a company's assets which subsequently proved to be an over-estimate - Stringer's case [1869] 9 QBD 436.
2. The members who receive dividends know that they have been paid out of capital, the directors may have a right of indemnity against such members to the extent that they have respectively received dividends - Moxham v. Grant [1900] 1 QB 88 (CA).
3. Where an interim dividend has been paid out of capital owing to a bona fide mistake and the directors propose to recoup such dividend out of profits before distributing any further dividends, a member who has received such dividend cannot maintain an action against the directors - Towers v. African Tug Co. [1904] 1 Ch.558.
4. When dividends improperly paid out of capital have been made good out of subsequent profits, liability ceases to attach to the directors - Boaler v. The Watchmaker's Alliance [1903].

The only situation where a return on investment may be allowed out of capital is where interest is paid out of capital, on the shares of the company, with the previous approval of the Central Government under section 208. If interest is paid out of capital otherwise, it amounts to reduction of capital which is not allowed to be made except by following the procedure laid down in sections 100 to 105.

In the event of payment of dividend out of capital, except as aforesaid, not only the directors and officers of the company making such payment would commit an offence under the Act but shall also be liable to make good the amount so paid as dividend to the company. Where, however, the shareholders receive the dividend paid out of capital and they had the full knowledge that dividend was being paid out of capital they cannot keep the dividend with them and have to return the amount received to the company - Towers v. African Tug Co. [1904] 1 Ch. 558 (CA). Only when a misrepresentation was made to the shareholders by the directors that the dividends were being paid out of profits while they were actually paid out of capital, the shareholders would not be accountable and the directors alone would be accountable to the company.

Payment of dividend out of capital profits

The term 'capital profits' may be defined to mean those profits which arise otherwise than in the normal course of the business. Thus, capital profits would arise where a company sells part of its fixed assets at a price higher than the original cost of such assets or where it receives premium on issue of shares, etc. Such profits may be realised or take the form of book figures only created by such matters as revaluation. Whether such profits can be distributed as dividends or not has not been specifically dealt with in the Companies Act.

However, the position in this regard in our country has been the same as that in England, based, as it is, on the decision in the under mentioned two important cases:

- (1) Lubbock v. British Bank of South America [1892] 2 Ch. 198
- (2) Foster v. The New Trinidad Lake Asphalt Co. Ltd. [1901] 1 Ch. 208.

Following the decisions of these two cases, capital profits are not considered as available for distribution as dividend unless :

- (i) the Articles of Association permit such a distribution;
- (ii) the surplus is realised; and
- (iii) such surplus remains after a valuation of the whole of the assets and liabilities has been fairly taken.

1.7 BOARD OF DIRECTORS

1.7.1. Directors and Managerial Personnel

Meaning of a Director

Section 2(13) of the Companies Act, 1956 defines a 'director' as including "any person occupying the position of a director by whatever name called". Thus, it is not the name by which a person is called but the position he occupies and the functions and duties which he discharges that determine whether in fact he is a director or not. In Re, Forest of Dean Coal Mining Co. * it was stated that function is everything; name matters nothing. So long as a person is duly appointed by the company to control the company's business and authorised by the Articles to contract in the company's name and on its behalf, he functions as a director. A company is indeed a person, but a juridical person and the directors as a body endow the juridical person with human face that can act and react. Under the scheme of the Companies Act, the company itself and its directors or the Board of directors are primary agents of the company to transact its operations. The Companies Act specifies where the company itself is to act both as principal and the agent and where the Board of directors is to act on its behalf. In respect of the properties and assets of the company the directors or the Board of directors act as Trustees. Therefore, the directors have different attributes in relation to the company depending upon the facts of each case.

As stated earlier, directors apart from being trustees for the assets and properties of the company are also the agents of the company as it is the directors, collectively as Board, act on behalf of the company on all matters except those specifically reserved for the company to act. However, it may be noted that even though the directors for certain purposes can be considered as the agent of the company, yet in respect of such matters for which the directors (i.e., the Board) are empowered to take a decision, the company in any manner, including in the general meeting, cannot direct the directors to take a particular decision. For example, allotment of shares, transfer of shares, investments etc. If the body of the shareholders did not approve the decision, they are free to change the directors in the manner given in the Act. As stated elsewhere in the chapter a director apart from being the agent and trustee of the company, can also be treated as officer of the company, hence an employee for purposes specified in the Act.

Section 303(1) of the Companies Act (though for the limited purpose of maintenance of Register of directors, etc.) provides that any person with whose directions or instructions the Board of directors is accustomed to act is also deemed to be a director.

A manager or any other managerial personnel, is however, not a director - Andhra Pradesh High Court in Deen Dayalu v. Sri B.P. Reddy [1984] 2 Comp. LJ 396.

According to section 2(30) of the Act, the definition of an "officer" includes a director as well as any person under whose directions or instructions the Board or any one or more of the directors are accustomed to act.

Independent Director- Now-a-days the role of independent director is drawing wide attention specially in the context of public companies. This class of directors are actually elected directors who are not executive directors and who do not participate in day-to-day activities of the company. The Kumarmangalam Birla Committee has defined an independent director as an entity who does not have a "material pecuniary relationship or transactions with the company, its promoters, its management or its subsidiaries, which in judgment of the Board, may affect the independence of judgment."

Who may be appointed as a Director?

Section 253 of the Companies Act provides that no body corporate, association or firm can be appointed director of a company. Only an individual can be appointed as director.

However, no company shall appoint or re-appoint any individual or director of the company unless he has been allotted a Directors Identification Number (DIN) under section 266B [Proviso added to section 253 vide Companies (Amendment) Act, 2006].

In Oriental Metal Pressing Works (P.) Ltd. v. B.K. Thakoor [1961] 31 Comp. Cas. 143, the Supreme Court pointed out the reason as to why it is necessary that only an individual should be director of a company. It was held that the office of the director being to some extent an office of trust, there should be somebody readily available who can be held responsible for the failure to carry out the trust, and it might be difficult to fix that responsibility if the director was a corporation or an association of persons.

Qualifications for Directors

The Companies Act has not prescribed any academic or professional qualifications for directors. Also, the Act imposes no share qualification on the directors. So, unless the company's Articles contain a provision to that effect, a director need not be a shareholder unless he wishes to be one voluntarily. But the Articles usually provide for a minimum share qualification. As per Reg. 66 of Table A, a director must hold at least one share in a company. Where a share qualification is fixed by the Articles of a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company, section 270 provides that:

- (i) each director must take his qualification shares within 2 months after his appointment;
- (ii) the nominal value of the qualification shares must not exceed ₹5,000 or the nominal value of one share where it exceeds ₹5,000;
- (iii) share warrants will not count for purposes of share qualification.

In case of joint shareholdings, only one of the joint shareholders can be said to possess share qualification except where Articles provide otherwise - [Grundy v. Briggs [1910]].

If a director fails to obtain his qualification shares within two months, he vacates office automatically on the expiry of two months after the date of his appointment, and if he acts as a director after the expiry of said two months without taking qualification shares, he shall be liable to a cumulative (₹500 + ₹5,000) fine up to ₹5,500 for every day until he "stops acting as such (section 272, read with section 283).

However, the Articles of a company cannot compel a person to hold qualification shares before he is elected as a director nor can they require him to obtain qualification shares within a shorter period than two months after his appointment; and if any provision to this effect is made in the Articles, it shall be void.

The effect of this provision is that, if the company is wound up during this period of two months, the director cannot be placed in the list of contributories, inasmuch as there is no express or implied contract under which he would be bound to take the qualification shares, since his name cannot be put on the Register of Members unless he has applied for shares and these are allotted to him - Zamir Ahmed Raz v. D.R. Banaji [1951] 27 Comp. Cas. 634.

The fact that the shares have been pledged or mortgaged will not affect the qualification unless Articles provide otherwise.

Qualification shares vis-a-vis private company -Provisions of sections 270 and 272 do not apply to a private company unless it is subsidiary of a public company (Section 273). Thus, a pure private company may or may not provide in its articles any requirement of share qualification.

Thus, a provision in the articles of a private company requiring its directors to obtain qualification shares is not repugnant to the provisions of section 273. [Mrs. Aruna Suresh Mehra v. Jifcon Tools (P.) Ltd. [1998] 18 SCL 79 (CLB - New Delhi)].

Disqualifications of a Director

Section 274 of the Companies Act, 1956 provides that the following persons shall not be capable of being appointed as directors of any company:

- (a) a person found by a competent court to be of unsound mind and such finding remaining in force,
- (b) an undischarged insolvent;
- (c) a person who has applied to be adjudged an insolvent;
- (d) a person who has been convicted by a Court of an offence involving moral turpitude and sentenced in respect thereof to imprisonment for not less than six months, and a period of five years has not elapsed from the date of the expiry of the sentence;
- (e) a person who has not paid any call in respect of shares of the company held by him, whether alone or jointly with others and six months have elapsed from the last date fixed for the payment of the call; and
- (f) a person who has been disqualified by a Court/Tribunal in pursuance of section 203. Section 203 empowers the Court/Tribunal to restrain fraudulent persons from managing companies, unless the leave of the Court/ Tribunal has been obtained for his appointment;
- (g) a person who is already a director of a public company which,—
 - (A) has not filed the annual accounts and annual returns for any continuous three financial years commencing on and after the first day of April, 1999;
 - or
 - (B) has failed to repay its deposit or interest thereon on due date or redeem its debentures on due date or pay dividend and such failure continues for one year or more.

However, a director disqualified under section 274(1)(g) shall not be eligible to be appointed as a director of any other public company for a period of five years from the date on which such public company, in which he is a director, failed to file annual accounts and annual returns under sub-clause (A) or has failed to repay its deposit or interest or redeem its debentures on due date or pay dividend referred to in clause (B).

In view of language mentioned in clause (g) incorporated in section 274(1) on 13-12-2000, if on date of commencement of amended section 274(1) any person has been director in a defaulting company, he will be affected by section 274(1)(g) - Nebandu Dutta v. Arindam Mukherjee [2004] 55 SCL 146

(Cal.)

The Department of Company Affairs has clarified that special directors appointed under section 16(4) of the SICA, 1985 by the BIFR shall not be disqualified for appointment as directors in view of new section 274(1)(g) of the Companies Act, 1956. -Press Release, dated 1-6-2001.

Again, the Department of Company Affairs (Circular No. 8/2002, dated 22-3-2002) has clarified that:

- (i) nominee directors appointed by the public financial institutions and companies established under the Acts of Parliament having non obstante provisions over the Companies Act, 1956 like IDBI, LIC, UTI, IIBI, etc, in their respective statutes shall not be liable to be disqualified for appointment as directors by virtue of section 274(1)(g);
- (ii) nominee directors appointed on the Boards of assisted concerns or other public companies by (a) Public Financial Institutions within the meaning of section 4A of the Companies Act, 1956; (b) Central or State Government; and (c) Banking Companies are also exempt from the provisions of section 274(1)(g) of the Companies Act, 1956."

The Central Government vide powers conferred by clause (b) of section 642(1) has made certain rules to carry out the purpose of section 274(1)(g). These Rules, inter alia, provide as follows:

1. Whenever a company fails to file the annual accounts and annual returns, as described in sub-clause (A) of clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 274, persons who are directors on the last due date for filing the annual returns for any continuous three financial years commencing on and after the first day of April, 1999, shall be disqualified.
2. If a company has failed to repay any deposit, irrespective of the enactment, rules or regulations under which the deposits have been accepted by the companies, or interest thereon, or redeem its debentures, or pay any dividend declared on the respective due dates, and if such failure continues for one year, as described in sub-clause (B) of clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 274, then the directors of that company shall stand disqualified immediately on expiry of that one year from the respective due dates:

Provided that all the directors who have been directors in the relevant year, from the due date to the expiry of one year after the due date, will be disqualified:

Provided further that disqualification on account of the reasons cited under this Rule shall also apply to the re-appointment as a director.

3. Duty of Statutory Auditor to report on disqualification

- (a) It shall be the duty of statutory auditor of the appointing company as well as disqualifying company, as required under section 227(3)(f) to report to the members of the company whether any director is disqualified from being appointed as director under clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 274 and to furnish a certificate each year as to whether on the basis of his examination of the books and records of the company, any director of the company is disqualified for appointment as a director or not.

Auditor cannot submit a report about disqualification of directors under section 274(1)(g) on the basis of statement supplied by company alone; he has to examine and even he has to make an independent enquiry about collected materials from other sources to submit such report – Pawan Jain v. Hindustan Club Ltd. [2005] 62 SCL 610 (Cal.).

- (b) It shall be the duty of statutory auditors of the "disqualifying company" as required in section 227(3)(f) to report to the members of the company whether any director in the company has been disqualified during the year from being reappointed as director, or being appointed as director in another company under clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 274.
4. Duty of company to intimate disqualification - Whenever a company fails to file the annual accounts and returns, or fails to repay any deposit, interest, dividend, or fails to redeem its debentures, as described in clauses (A) and (B) of clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 274, the company shall immediately file a return in duplicate in Form 'DD-B', prescribed under these rules for this purpose, to the Registrar of Companies, furnishing therein the names and addresses of all the Directors of the company during the relevant financial years:

Provided that names of such directors who have been exempted from application of section 274(1)(g) by the Central Government, from time to time, shall be excluded:

Provided further that no unusual abbreviations or short forms shall be used in filing up Form 'DD-B', which shall give such details as may be necessary to distinguish and identify each director without any ambiguity.

5. Failure to intimate disqualification shall render director as officer in default—When a company fails to file Form 'DD-B' as above within 30 days of the failure that would attract disqualification under section 274(1)(g), officers of the company listed in section 5 of the Companies Act, 1956 shall be officers in default.
6. Registrar to Register—
 - (a) Upon receipt of Form 'DD-B' in duplicate under rule 5, the Registrar of Companies shall immediately register the document and place one copy of it in the document file for public inspection.
 - (b) The Registrar of Companies shall forward the other copy to the Central Government.
7. Names of the disqualified directors on the website etc.—
 - (a) The Central Government shall place on the website of the Department of Company Affairs the names and addresses and such other details including names and details of the companies concerned, as maybe necessary, in respect of all the disqualified directors.
 - (b) The Central Government may also publicize the names of disqualified directors in such manner as it may consider appropriate.
 - (c) The Central Government shall take such steps as may be required to update its website to ensure that name of the person, in whose respect disqualification period has expired after 5 years, is deleted from the website.

In view of non-filing of declaration prescribed in statutory form [vide section 274(1)(g)] by any of directors seeking appointment and reappointment, said director is not automatically disqualified; before a person is declared to be disqualified by auditor or any other person, a view has to be formed whether grounds mentioned in section 274 have been proved without any doubt—Pawan Jain v. Hindustan Club Ltd. [2005] 62 SCL 610 (Cal).

8. Duty of every Director- Every director in a public company registered under the Companies Act, 1956 shall file Form 'DD-A', prescribed under these Rules, before he is appointed or reappointed.
9. Punishment for contravention of the rules - If a company or any other person contravenes any provision of these rules for which no punishment is provided in the Companies Act, 1956, the company and every officer of the company who is in default or such other person shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five thousand rupees and where the contravention is a continuing one, with a further fine which may extend to five hundred rupees for every day after the first, during which the contravention continues.

The disqualifications at (d) and (e) above may be removed by the Central Government by a notification in the Official Gazette [Sec. 274(2)]. On the other hand, a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company may add to the above list of disqualifications [Sec. 274(3)]. By necessary implication, public companies are prohibited from including additional disqualification(s) for their directors in their Articles- Cricket Club of India Ltd. v. Madhav L. Apte [1975] 45 Comp. Cas. 574 (Bom.).

Appointment of Directors

The discussion on appointment of a director may be dealt with under the following heads:

Appointment of first directors - The first directors are usually appointed by name in the articles or in the manner provided therein. Where the articles do not provide for the appointment of first directors, the subscribers to the memorandum, who are individuals, shall be deemed to be the first directors of the company subject to the regulations of the company's articles. The first directors can hold office until the directors are duly appointed in accordance with the provisions of section 255 (Section 254).

As section 254 says that the subscribers will be deemed to be directors only subject to the regulations in the articles, if the articles provide for any share qualification, should only those subscribers who possess the necessary share qualification be deemed to be directors.

Where all subscribers to the memorandum are bodies corporate - If all the subscribers to the Memorandum happen to be bodies corporate none of the subscribers can be deemed to be directors; and the company will have no directors until the first directors are appointed under section 255, in the absence of other provisions in the articles. Presumably, the articles at the time of registration will contain the names of the first directors until directors are appointed at the first general meeting - A. Ramaiya—Guide to the Companies Act, 12th Edition, Page 1214.

It may, however, be noted that in case of a public company, a list of persons who are to be the first directors of a company along with their consent in writing must be delivered to the Registrar of Companies.

Thus, where the articles of the company name the first directors, the provisions of section 254 deeming the subscribers as directors would not apply. Where the articles, as in Regulation 64 of Table A, simply state that the number of directors and names of the first directors shall be determined in writing by the subscribers of the memorandum or a majority of them, the subscribers of the Memorandum shall continue to be deemed to be directors until the subscribers or a majority of them determine as to who shall be the first directors.

Where, for any reason, for example, death, the persons named in the list of first directors do not assume office, it will be necessary for the subscribers of the Memorandum (who will then be the only members) to convene a meeting for the appointment of directors. To the extent to which the articles do not make any other provisions in that behalf, subscribers who would be entitled to requisition a meeting may call the meeting. Notice of the meeting must be served on every subscriber in the manner in which notices are required to be served by the Act.

A meeting is not necessary if all the subscribers concur in the appointment - Re Great Northern Salt & Chemical Works, ex p Kennedy [1890] 44 Ch. D 472.

Appointment of directors at general meeting - According to section 255, the directors must be appointed by the company in general meeting. In the case of a public company or of a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company, unless the articles provide for the retirement of all directors at every annual general meeting, at least two-third of the total number of directors must be persons whose period of office is liable to determination by rotation. In other words, only one-third of the total number of directors can be non-rotational directors.

Appointment of directors in case of a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company - In case of a private company, which is not a subsidiary of a public company, if the articles are silent as to the appointment of directors, or do not specifically provide for appointment of directors otherwise than in a general meeting, then the directors are to be appointed in general meeting by the shareholders [Section 255(2)] as interpreted by the Calcutta High Court in the case of Swapan Das Gupta v. Navin Chand Suchanti [1988] 3 Comp. LJ 76 (Cal).

Section 256 provides that one-third or nearest to one-third of the directors subject to retirement by rotation must retire at an annual, general meeting. It follows that all such directors must retire in the course of three years, one-third of them retiring in each year. The directors to retire by rotation at every annual general meeting shall be those who have been longest in office since their last appointment. As between persons appointed on the same day, retirement is to be determined by mutual consent and in case of default, by lots [Section 256(2)].

If the directors do not hold a general meeting in time, can they continue till the meeting is held?-The Delhi High Court in B.R. Kim dm v. Motion Pictures Association [1976] 46 Comp. Cas. 339 held that directors cannot prolong their tenure by not holding a meeting in time. The directors due to retire by rotation must vacate office at the latest on the last day on which an annual general meeting ought to have been held. Retiring directors are, however, eligible for re-election.

Deemed re-appointment of a retiring director [Section 256] - The vacancy caused by the retirement of a director by rotation should be filled up at the same meeting or at an adjourned meeting. If it is not so done, the retiring director shall be deemed to have been appointed at such adjourned meeting except in the following cases:

1. at any previous meeting, a resolution for his re-appointment was put to vote, but was lost; or
2. the retiring director has, in writing, expressed his unwillingness to continue; or
3. he is not qualified or is disqualified for appointment; or
4. a special or ordinary resolution is necessary for his appointment or re-appointment by virtue of any provisions of the Companies Act; or
5. it is resolved to fill two or more vacancies by a single resolution [Proviso to section 263(2)].

Rotational and non-rotational directors vis-a-vis private company-In reply to a query: "Whether under the law it is compulsory for the private companies to have rotational directors?", the Department of Company Affairs expressed the following views:

In the case of a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company, it is not compulsory under the law that they must have rotational directors unless the Articles of Association of the company so require.

It is, therefore, possible for an independent private company to provide in its Articles that none of its directors is liable to retirement by rotation. Thus, where a person was a director of two private companies and he was not required to retire by rotation by the Articles of those companies and after the two companies were amalgamated, the Articles of the amalgamated company, also a private company, did not provide for retirement of directors by rotation, it was held that managing director of the amalgamated company was not liable to retire. The managing director will continue in office for an indefinite period. But if the company becomes a public company, then on the expiry of the term of 5 years, the managing director will retire and at the next concluded AGM he will retire as a director—Swapan Dasgupta v. Navin Chand Suchanti [1988] 64 Comp. Cas. 562 (Cal.).

Appointment of a director other than a retiring director [Section 257]—Section 257 provides for the procedure of appointment of a person other than retiring director in a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company. If any person, other than the retiring director wishes to stand for directorship or any member proposes a person for directorship, he must signify his intention to do so by giving 14 days' notice to the company before the general meeting and the company must inform the members not later than seven days before the general meeting either by individual notices or by advertisement of this fact in at least two newspapers circulating in the place where its registered office is located, of which one must be in English and the other in the regional language of that place. Also, the candidate or the member who intends to propose him as director has to deposit a sum of ₹500 which shall be refunded to such person or the member, as the case may be, if the candidate succeeds in being elected. In case such person is not elected as director, he or the member, as the case may be, will not be entitled to the refund of ₹500 and the amount deposited shall stand forfeited by the company.

Additional director, etc. seeking appointment as regular director - An additional director, or a director who has been appointed to a casual vacancy or an alternate director or a director nominated by any financial institution or any other similar body or by the Central Government under section 408, if he seeks appointment by the shareholders at a general meeting he must satisfy the requirements of section 257, as any such director is not a 'director retiring by rotation'. The expression 'director retiring by rotation' refers only to a director appointed by a company in general meeting and retiring.

The Department of Company Affairs, in this regard, has expressed the view that if a person who is appointed as an additional director wants to be elected as a director at the next annual general meeting, the provisions of section 257 will have to be complied with since he cannot be considered to be a director retiring by rotation at that meeting—Letter No. 8/3 (270)/63-PR dated 27-7-1963.

In Smt. Namita Gupta v. Cachar Native Joint Stock Co. Ltd. [1999] 21 SCL 394/98 Comp. Cas. 655 (CLB - N. Delhi), it was observed that normally there should be individual resolution relating to rejection of election of a retiring director and a separate resolution for election of a new director in that place, after following the procedure as per section 257.

Consent of a director to be filed with the Company and the Registrar - Section 264 requires every person proposed as a candidate for the office of the director to sign and file with the company his consent to act as a director, if appointed. Further, subsection (2) of section 264 requires a person appointed as a director to sign and file with the Registrar his consent in writing to act as such director. The consent with the Registrar must be filed within 30 days of his appointment. However, the consent with the Registrar shall not be required to be filed in the case of:

- (a) a director re-appointed after retirement by rotation or immediately on the expiry of his term of office; or
- (b) an additional or alternate director, or a person filling a casual vacancy in the office of a director under section 262, appointed as a director or re-appointed as an additional or alternate director, immediately on the expiry of his term of office; or

(c) a person named as director of the company under its articles as first registered.

It may be noted that the provisions of section 264 are not applicable to a private company unless it is a subsidiary of a public company.

Consequences of not filing the consent-Non-filing of consent with the R.O.C. is at the most only an irregularity, and will not render invalid an appointment made without such consent having been filed - Lalji Bhai Kapadia v. Laljibhai Desai [1973] 43 Comp. Cas. 17.

Likewise, the Deptt. of Company Affairs has opined that non-filing of consent with the Registrar shall not result in the vacation of office as a director. The only consequence shall be that penalty under section 629A would be attracted. Such consent may be filed after 30 days but with payment of penal fee.

Appointment by Board of directors - The Board of directors can exercise the power to appoint directors in the following three cases:

(i) Additional Directors (Section 260)

(ii) Filling up the Casual Vacancy (Section 262)

(iii) Alternate Directors (Section 313).

(i) Appointment of Additional Directors-If the Articles authorise, the Board may appoint additional directors. Such additional directors together with the directors constituting the Board should not exceed the maximum number fixed by the articles. Also, the additional directors are entitled to hold office only up to the date of the next annual general meeting of the company (Section 260).

It may thus be noted that without a power given by the Articles, the Board cannot appoint additional directors. The section applies to all companies, public as well as private - Needle Industries (India) Ltd. v. Needle Industries Newey (India) Holdings Ltd. AIR 1981 SC 1298.

Powers of Additional Directors- Additional directors will enjoy the same powers and rights as other directors. Through this route, the Board of directors can therefore appoint competent persons on the Board who may find it difficult to come through election.

Is a resolution passed at Board meeting necessary for appointment of Additional Directors ?- Unlike in case of filling a casual vacancy which can be done only in a regular meeting of the Board (Section 262), the appointment of additional directors may be made either at a meeting of the Board or by passing a resolution by circulation as provided in section 289.

Tenure of Additional Director - As noted above, an additional director is entitled to hold office only up to the date of the next annual general meeting of the company. But, in case annual general meeting is not held on time, can the stay of the additional director be extended thereby? In Krishna Prasad Pilani v. Colaba Land and Mills Company [1959] 29 Comp. Cas. 273, it was held that a director appointed as an additional director vacates his office, at the latest, on the last day on which the annual meeting could have been called as required by section 166, and cannot continue in office thereafter on the ground that the meeting was not or could not be called within the time prescribed by that section. The expression "up to the date of the annual general meeting" means "upto the date when the next Annual General Meeting ought to be held at the latest".

The provision for an additional director is one which is meant to enable the companies to have the benefit of the services of a person, who otherwise is suitable for serving on the board, and whose presence in the board is desirable in the interests of the company, till the time the next AGM is held. That provision is not meant to enable the company to keep on its board a person as additional director for an indefinite period of time by not holding the AGM. Section 260, therefore, must necessarily be read with section 166 which stipulates that the AGM be held every year and not more than fifteen months shall elapse between the date of one AGM and the next - P. Matarajan v. Central Government

In Ador-Samia Ltd. v. Indocan Engg. Systems Ltd. [1999] 35 CLA 224 (CLB - N. Delhi), it was held that for application of section 260, time limit fixed under section 166 alone is relevant and not that under section 210.

Can an Additional Director be appointed as a Managing/Whole time Director - A managing director or whole time director, unless the articles of a company provide otherwise, is to be appointed by the Board of directors. However, since any director can be appointed as a managing or whole time director and there being nothing in the Companies Act suggesting that an additional director cannot be appointed as the managing/whole time director, there should be no objection to the appointment of an additional director as a managing or whole time director. But the tenure of an additional director being limited to the holding of the Annual General Meeting if the company at the Annual General Meeting does not re-appoint him as a director, he will automatically vacate his office as managing or whole time director also. It is because no person who is not a director can function as a managing or whole time director.

The aforesaid view has also been endorsed by the Department of Company Affairs which has expressed its opinion as follows:

"An additional director can be appointed by the Board of Directors of a company under section 260 of the Act. Such a person continues to be the additional director till the commencement of the next Annual General Meeting. As soon as the AGM opens, he ceases to be the additional director of the company. If such a person while he was the additional director of a company had been appointed as the managing director, the latter appointment also ceases simultaneously with his ceasing of directorship at the commencement of the AGM. However, if such a person is re-elected as a full-fledged director at the AGM and thereby he continues as a director of the company, he shall continue as a managing director also for the period for which he is so elected by the AGM. (Extracted from the Department of Company Affairs Letter No. 8/212(60), dated 17-3-1977, addressed to the Institute of Chartered Secretaries and Administrative India Association, Calcutta)."

Qualification shares vis-a-vis Additional Director - A person who is appointed as a director must not suffer from any disqualification. This rule equally applies to the requirement of share qualification where the articles so provide. Thus, if the articles require a person to acquire certain shares by way of qualification to become a director of the company, a person who does not possess or undertakes to possess within two months the prescribed qualification shares may not be entitled to be appointed as an additional director.

Can General body appoint additional directors?- In Ananthalakshmi v. Indian Trade & Investments Ltd. [1952] 22 Comp. Cas. 324, it was held that general body can also appoint additional directors except where Articles specifically provide otherwise.

(ii) Filling up casual vacancies - Casual vacancy means a vacancy in the office of a director appointed by the shareholders in a general meeting and caused by the death, resignation, insolvency or disqualification. The expression does not include vacancy caused by efflux of time or retirement by rotation. Section 262 empowers the Board to fill casual vacancies in the case of a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company. Thus, if the office of any director appointed by the company in general meeting is vacated before his term of office expires in the normal course, the resulting casual vacancy may, subject to any regulations in the articles of the company, be filled by the Board of Directors at a meeting of the Board.

Tenure- It has to be noted that as per sub-section (2) of section 262, if the director fills up a casual vacancy, the person appointed will hold office not until the next Annual General Meeting only but for the entire period for which the person in whose place he was appointed would have held office. Thus, if Ram had been elected a director and died a month later, Bharat appointed in his place would continue for the whole period for which Ram, if he had not died, would have continued. But though

Bharat would continue for the whole of the unexpired term for which Ram had been appointed; on the expiry of that term, Bharat will not be eligible for re-appointment as 'a director retiring by rotation'.

Department's clarification - The following query was addressed to the Department: "(a) Whether a person appointed as a director to fill up a casual vacancy would continue in office until the date when retirement of the original director in whose place the former is appointed will fall due in the usual course, irrespective of the date of the next Annual General Meeting following the date of filling up of the casual vacancy.

(b) If the answer to item (a) above is in the affirmative, whether a person acting against the casual vacancy may be re-appointed by the General Meeting at the time when the director in whose place he was appointed will have retired, without the formalities prescribed under section 257 being observed."

The Department gave the following reply: "The Department's reply to the query raised in (a) above is in the affirmative while the reply to that raised in (b) above is in the negative, since the director appointed to a casual vacancy is not himself director within the meaning of section 257(1)" [Company News and Notes, dated July 1, 1963].

Filling of casual vacancy by a private company- Section 262 does not apply to a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company. Such a company will fill-casual vacancies as provided by its own articles and/or section 255(2), that is, in a General Meeting. It need not follow the provisions of section 262.

Vacancy created by resignation, etc. of a director appointed to fill casual vacancy-The following query was addressed to the Department:

"X, a director of a company, was appointed at the Annual General Meeting. Due to some reason, X resigned from the Board and casual vacancy thus created was filled by the appointment of Y at a meeting of the Board of Directors. Necessary return concerning this change was filed with the Registrar. Later on, Y resigned and the directors again invited X to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Y. The question is: Is the action of the Board in appointing X, in the second instance, quite in accord with the provisions of section 262(1) and particularly considering the fact that the appointment of X consequent upon the resignation of Y, for the purpose of filling the casual vacancy at a Board meeting does not, in effect, satisfy the statutory requirement which states "if the office of any director appointed by the company in general meeting is vacated?"

The Department gave the following reply:

"The Department's view on the point raised is that the appointment of X, by the Board, in the second instance, in the vacancy caused in the Board by the resignation of Y cannot, strictly speaking, be deemed to be an appointment to a casual vacancy in the office of director appointed by the company in general meeting, within the meaning of section 262(1) inasmuch as the appointment of Y himself was not originally made by the company in general meeting. However, in the interest of the smooth working of the company, if the casual vacancy is in an office which was filled by election at a general meeting, the Department would have no objection to the Board of Directors of the company filling that casual vacancy as many times as may be necessary." [Company News and Notes dated July, 1963].

However, A.M. Chakraborti does not agree with the aforesaid view of the Department. In his view, if a casual vacancy arises in the office of a director appointed in the casual vacancy under section 262, there is no casual vacancy within the meaning of section 262 and cannot be filled up by the Board of Directors. In such an eventuality, he opines, the Board may appoint an additional director. The term of office of such an appointee shall then be governed by section 260 and not by section 262.

Director appointed in general meeting not assuming office -No casual vacancy arises if a director appointed by the company in general meeting does not assume office (e.g., resigns or dies before assuming office). There is no question of someone vacating any office if he had never assumed that office. The words "director appointed by the company in general meeting" used in section 262(1) must be read with the words following, i.e., "is vacated before his term of office will expire" – M. K. Srinivasan v. W. S. Subrahmanya Ayyar [1932] 2 Comp. Cas. 147.

Procedure for filling casual vacancy

1. Ascertain the provisions with regard to appointment of a director in a casual vacancy as contained in the Articles. Ensure that the procedure laid down is followed.
2. See that the written consent of the person proposed to be appointed is filed with the company.
3. Take steps to call a meeting of the Board of directors to appoint the director to hold office for the remaining period of the vacating director's term.
4. Intimate the appointee of his appointment as director.
5. See that the person so appointed files with the Registrar his consent to act as director within 30 days.
6. File, with the Registrar, return as per section 303 notifying the change in directorship within 30 days.
7. See that necessary entries are made in the Register of directors and Register of directors' shareholdings.

(iii) Alternate director (Section 313) - The Board of directors of a company may, if so authorised by its articles or by a resolution passed by the company in general meeting, appoint an alternate director to act for a director during his absence for a period of not less than three months from the State in which meetings of the Board are ordinarily held. However, the question of appointment of alternate director must be considered fairly in the interest of the company and its shareholders - D. Ross Porter v. Pioneer Seed Co. Ltd. [1989] 66 Comp. Cas". 363 (Delhi).

The alternate director merely fills a temporary vacancy in the office of a director which already exists and no new office of director is created by his appointment. Many provisions of this Act do not apply to the alternate director. For instance, appointment of an alternate director is not considered as an increase in the strength of the Board of directors. Likewise, alternate directorship held by a person cannot be counted towards maximum number of directorships which a person can hold. An alternate director is not required to hold any qualification shares." However, the alternate director is subject to the same liability and supposed to perform the same duties as any other director. This follows even from the very definition of 'director' in clause (13) of section 2, which includes any person occupying the position of director by whatever name called. The alternate director occupies the position of a director and although he is called alternate director, he is nevertheless a director.

It is the prerogative of the Board of directors to appoint an alternate director. The articles of the company or a resolution passed by the shareholders must give an enabling power to the Board to appoint an alternate director. Neither the shareholders of the company nor any other person can exercise the power to appoint alternate director.

An alternate director is neither an agent of the original director nor his proxy. The original director cannot nominate alternate director to the directorship held by him. He may nevertheless make his recommendation. Similarly, an alternate director is not obliged to act as per instructions of the original Director.

Consent: An alternate director appointed as such for the first time shall be required to file his consent with the Registrar. However, on his regular appointment as a director in continuation, it would not be necessary to file the consent [Sec. 264(2)(b)].

When does an alternate director vacate his office - An alternate director shall not hold office as such for a period longer than that 'permissible' to the original director in whose place he has been appointed and shall vacate office if and when the original director returns to the State in which meetings of the Board are ordinarily held.

The Department of Company Affairs has clarified that the alternate director vacates his office whether or not the original director attends the Board meeting on his return to the State - Letter No. 6/16(313)/68-PR, dated 5-2-1968.

Where the original director is a non-retiring director, an alternate director appointed in his place can continue indefinitely subject only to the condition that he shall vacate the office as and when the original director returns to the State in which the meetings of the Board are ordinarily held.

The provisions contained in various sub-sections of section 313 leave quite a few matters unexplained. Few lack of clarities have been mentioned earlier in this paragraph. The further issues that need attention are as under:

- (i) should the original director be considered an interested director in passing the resolution appointing the alternate directors? Answer is possibly no as the alternate director is independently appointed by the Board.
- (ii) Whether use of the word "returns" in sub-section (2) of section 313 dealing with vacation of office by the alternate director is correct as in large number of cases, the original directors are foreigners and the office of the alternate director was basically created to meet the eventuality of foreign directors not being in a position to regularly attend Board meetings of the company. There is no question of 'returning' by such original directors to the State in which Board meetings are ordinarily held.
- (iii) There could be companies which may not hold Board meetings regularly in one State i.e. either the State of their registration or the State where the head office is located. Then there may not be a State in which Board meetings are ordinarily held. Then how the absence of the original director from the State in which Board meetings are ordinarily held to be seen? A possible view, in such a situation, would be to reckon the State of registration of the company concerned.
- (iv) Why not the resolutions passed by circulation be kept apart for original directors? In other words, the alternate directors shall attend the meetings and act therein as directors but circular resolutions are to be considered by the original ones. There may be a valid argument against this situation. The original director, not being in regular touch with the affairs of the company may not be able to do justice to the matter(s) in the circular resolution.
- (v) Can an alternate director be alternate to more than one director? Possible answer is no. Similarly can more than one alternate director be appointed for one original director? Here also, the answer seems to be no, as section 313 allows 'an alternate director' to be appointed for a director.
- (vi) In view of MCA's General Circular No. 28/2011, dated 20-5-2011 allowing video conferencing for conducting Board/Committee Meetings, it is now a matter of consideration whether at all the 'Alternate Director System' in the Act remains relevant.

Appointment of directors by proportional representation [Section 265]

Ordinarily, directors are appointed by simple majority vote on the resolutions moved for their appointment. As a result majority shareholders controlling 51 per cent or more votes may elect all directors and a substantial minority, as high as 49 per cent, may find no representation on the Board. In order to enable the minority shareholders to have a proportionate representation on the Board, section 265 of the Companies Act gives an option to companies to appoint directors through a system of proportional representation. The section provides that a company may provide in its Articles for the appointment of not less than 2/3rds of the total directors according to the principle of proportional representation by single transferable vote or some system of cumulative voting or otherwise. Such appointment shall be made once in every three years (Section 265).

Single transferable vote - Under the system of single transferable vote, a quota of votes is fixed. A person gets elected if he gets the required number of votes fixed as quota. Quota is fixed in the following manner:

Suppose in an election 600 votes are cast and there are 5 seats. The quota shall be obtained by dividing the total number of votes cast by the total number of seats plus one and adding one to the result. Thus, the quota in this case will be 101 votes, calculated as follows:

$$\frac{600}{5+1} + 1 = 101 \text{ votes}$$

Now, let us see how this system works. Suppose there are seven candidates, viz., A, B, C, D, E, F & G. The voters shall cast their votes by giving preference as preference 1, say, to A, preference 2 to B, preference 3 to C, and so on. At the first instance first preference votes are counted. All those candidates who get 101 or more first preference votes get elected.

Let us suppose, on counting of first preferences, the following tally emerges:

A gets	190 votes
B gets	90 votes
C gets	85 votes
D gets	75 votes
E gets	60 votes
F gets	58 votes
G gets	42 votes
Total votes polled	600 votes

Since A gets more than the quota, he shall be declared elected. We find that A has surplus 89 first preferences. His papers are scrutinised and the second preference found in them is counted. The second preferences in A's papers are noted as follows:

D	30
E	10
F	15
Total	175

Accordingly, surplus of 1st preferences of A, i.e., 89 votes shall be transferred to D, E, F and G in the ratio of their second preferences, viz., 30:10:15:120. It shall come to:

$D = \frac{30 \times 89}{175}$	= 15
$E = \frac{10 \times 89}{175}$	= 5
$F = \frac{15 \times 89}{175}$	= 8
$G = \frac{120 \times 89}{175}$	= 61

Now the tally is:

A = 190

B = 90

$$C = 85$$

$$D = 75 + 15 = 90$$

$$E = 60 + 5 = 65$$

$$G = 42 + 61 = 103$$

G gets the quota and is therefore elected. Now, since there are no surplus votes in any account; the elimination round starts. E, who has got the lowest adjusted number of first preference votes is eliminated. His 60 papers are scrutinised to note the second preferences therein and they are:

In favour of B - 11

In favour of C - 5

In favour of D - 15

In favour of F - 25

After transferring second preference in E's papers, the tally is :

A-190

$$B-90+11 = 101$$

$$C - 85 + 5 = 90$$

$$D-90+15=105$$

E - 65

B and D get elected having obtained quota or more votes. Now, C has the next lowest and is therefore eliminated. His ballot papers shall now be scrutinised. It is found that there are 15 second preference in favour of F. These will be added to F's tally of 91 votes who then stands elected. Thus, A, B, D, F and G get elected.

Cumulative voting - As per the cumulative voting system, the total number of votes cast would be equal to the total number of shares multiplied by the number of directors to be elected. Again, each share carries that many votes as are the vacancies. Thus, if there are 1000 shares and ten directors are to be elected, the total number of votes cast would be equal to 10,000. A candidate getting 1000 votes should be declared elected. Now assuming that the minority holds 10 per cent of shares, i.e., 100 shares, the total votes which the minority can therefore cast in favour of one or more candidate would be equal to $100 \times 10 = 1000$. In case, the minority is bent upon having at least one of its representatives on the Board, it can do so by casting all the votes in favour of that single candidate and in that event its representative would get elected.

Appointment of directors by the Central Government [Section 408]

The Central Government has been empowered to appoint directors on an order passed by the Company Law Board. The Company Law Board may so order either on a reference by the Central Government or on the application of not less than 100 members of the company or of members holding not less than 1/10th of the total voting power. Such appointments shall be so ordered by the Company Law Board where it finds that the affairs of the company have been conducted in a manner oppressive to any member of the company or in a manner prejudicial to the interests of the company or to public interest. Such a director may be appointed for any term but not exceeding three years.

In lieu of passing an order as aforesaid, the Company Law Board may direct the company to amend its Articles so as to provide for election of directors by the system of proportional representation. It may also direct that until new directors are appointed in pursuance of the order aforesaid, such number of persons as it may specify as being necessary to effectively safeguard the interests of the company or its shareholders or the public interest shall hold office as additional directors of the company [Section 408(2)].

A person appointed by the Central Government in pursuance of the above provisions shall not be:

- (a) considered for the purpose of reckoning 2/3rd or any other proportion of the total number of directors of the company [Section 408(3)],
- (b) required to hold qualification shares [Section 408(4)], and
- (c) required to retire by rotation [Section 408(4)].

The Central Government may remove any such director from his office at any time and appoint another person to hold office in his place [Section 408(4)].

The provisions of this section are applicable to both public and private companies.

Once the Central Government has exercised its power to appoint director(s) under section 408, it is concurrently empowered to issue any direction to the company as may be necessary/appropriate. The directions may include directions to suitably alter the Articles of Association or remove the auditor and to make fresh appointment of another auditor in his place.

Appointment of Directors by third parties (Nominee Directors)

There may be occasions when directors represent certain third parties in the Board. This usually happens when the Government, foreign collaborators, holding companies, financial institutions or other lenders, etc., nominate a director to represent their interest on the Board. The phenomenon of nominee directors has become an important feature of the modern Indian corporate scene. It is primarily because of the role of the various lending institutions like banks, mutual funds, public financial institutions, State financial corporations, etc. These lending institutions, in the modern corporate world have assumed a pivotal role in financing the various projects of the companies. Because of their heavy commitments, such providers of money naturally desire to safeguard their interests. Besides, they will also like to ensure that the money is invested in the stipulated purposes only. The right to nominate the directors on the Boards of financed companies is usually contained in the contract itself. However, the special legislations governing certain public financial institutions and State financial corporations envisage the appointment of certain director on the Boards of borrowing companies and such a provision has an overriding applicability in spite of the normal regulatory provisions of the Companies Act, the memorandum of Association and the Articles of Association.

Except where a statute provides for nomination of directors on the Board of a company, nominee directors can be appointed only if a provision to that effect exists in the Memorandum of Association or Articles of Association of the company. It is because section 255 of the Companies Act, 1956 provides that unless the Articles provide for the retirement of all directors at every annual general meeting, not less than 2/3rds of the total number of directors of a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company shall be liable to retire by rotation. Sub-section (2) of section 255 provides that the remaining directors shall, in default of and subject to any regulation in the Articles of the company, also be appointed by the company in general meeting. Therefore, it would be necessary for the company to specifically provide in its Articles, or amend its Articles to provide, for appointment of a non-rotational director by the assisting financial institution(s) except those created by special Acts and having the overriding provision in this regard. Therefore, if the Articles do not contain a provision in this regard, they shall have to be first amended and only then the appointment can be made. It may be mentioned that in the case of statutes governing certain statutory financial institutions like the LIC, UTI, SFCs and IDBI empower them to appoint nominee directors. Therefore, in their cases, the above procedure need not be followed as these special statutes override the provisions of the Companies Act and the Articles of Association.

It should be ensured that the total number of non-rotational directors does not exceed 1/3rd of the total strength of the Board.

Liability of nominee directors – Nominee directors are in the same position and they owe same duties to the company as any other director.

However, by virtue of special provisions in the respective Acts governing different financial institutions, the directors nominated by the financial institutions have been given immunity from action for any liability as a director in the company and administrative instructions have also been issued to the Department of Company Affairs not to launch any prosecution against such directors.

Responsibilities of nominee directors – Department of Company Affairs, vide its Circular No. 8/2002, dated 22-3-2002, has cast the following responsibilities on the nominee directors of Public Financial Institutions / Banks / Government:

- (i) The Nominee Directors are expected to work assiduously towards observance of good corporate governance practices in the company with due regard to the legitimate interests of the various stakeholders. The various provisions relating to good corporate governance have been introduced in the Companies Act/Rules/Regulations and clause 49 of the Listing Agreement introduced by the SEBI. The Nominee Directors are expected to study these provisions of corporate governance and have them implemented.
- (ii) Ensure that the operations of the company are conducted in consonance with public policy.
- (iii) Ensure strict compliance in letter and spirit of all the statutory provisions in particular the provisions of the Companies Act and the regulations, clarifications etc. issued thereunder. It is the duty of the nominee directors to fully acquaint themselves in the relevant provisions of the Company Law and ensure that measures are instituted to monitor and certify that these statutory provisions are being observed.
- (iv) The Nominee Directors should see that important committees of the Board of Directors are constituted and are functioning effectively such as Audit Committee, Nominations Committee, Remuneration Committee etc. The Nominee Directors are expected to seek membership of these important committees and through their active participation in such committees ensure that the objectives of setting up these committees are being achieved.
- (v) The Nominee Directors are expected to regularly attend and actively participate in the proceedings of the Boards and in committee on which they are included. Their frequent absence for insufficient reasons from the meetings of the Board of Directors/Committees would negate the purpose for which the Nominee Directors have been nominated by the Institutions and they would not be able to perform the various responsibilities listed out in this paragraph.
- (vi) Duly safeguard the interest of the Government/Banks/Financial Institutions which they represent. Ensure proper utilization of financial assistance by the assisted company and prevent any misuse/diversion of funds by the promoters/management of the companies.
- (vii) Provide adequate feedback to the nominating Institutions/Banks/Companies on the affairs and operations of the assisted concerns.
- (viii) The Financial Institutions are expected to closely monitor the participation by the Nominee Directors on the Boards/Committees as above and to ensure that they are discharging their responsibilities as listed out above. In case any Nominee Director is failing to discharge his/her responsibilities the Institutions are expected to take steps to replace him/her. The Institutions are also expected to send a six monthly report to the Department of Company Affairs (ROC) bringing out the steps taken by them to ensure that their Nominee Directors are discharging their responsibilities. The Financial Institutions should also in a separate section of their Annual Report clearly bring out the measures instituted by them to ensure that the system of Nominee Directors is functioning effectively.

The above amply show that the responsibility on a nominee director is far wider than to look after the interests of the nominating body. His basic responsibility is to the company on whose Board he is serving. He can ill afford to ignore his fiduciary responsibility to all stakeholders of the company and the company itself.

Remuneration and sitting fee for Nominee Director- As the Act treats all the directors alike, there is no doubt that nominee directors are equally entitled to remuneration and sitting fee for Board and Committee Meetings. But the question is whether the remuneration and the fee earned is personal to such director or through the director the amounts are payable to the nominating body/authority. The Act does not deal with the issue of nominee director; it is a matter either in the Articles of the company or in the statute governing the body/authority making the nomination. But as all directors in the company are recognized by the Act as individual persons, presumably there will not occur irregularity if nominee directors receive these payments in their personal capacity in the absence of a provision in the Articles or in any relevant statute. On the other hand nominee directors are there in the company not by virtue of their personal standing but only because their employing body/authority has nominated them and as such, such directors have no right to appropriate the money. Till a court decision comes in this regard, the issue will remain open. Safer course for the company will be to obtain a written instruction from the nominating body/ authority in this regard.

Appointment of special directors under Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act (SICA), 1985

Under section 16(4) of SICA, 1985 as amended in 1994, it is provided that where the Board of Industrial and Financial Reconstruction (BIFR) constituted under the Act (SICA) deems it necessary that an enquiry should be made into an industrial company the BIFR shall appoint one or more persons as special directors 'for safeguarding financial and other interests of the company or in public interest'. It is further stated in sub-section (4A) that the BIFR may issue such directions to a special director as it may deem necessary or expedient for proper discharge of his duties. Again, sub-section (5) provides that the provisions relating to share qualification, age limit, number of directorships, removal from office, etc. shall not apply to any director appointed by the BIFR. The Department of Company Affairs has clarified that special directors appointed under section 16(4) of the SICA, 1985 by the BIFR shall not be disqualified for appointment as directors in view of new section 274(1)(g) of the Companies Act, 1956. - Press Release, dated 1-6-2001. The Act, however, contains no provision as to powers exercisable by the special directors.

The difference between a special director appointed under SICA, 1985, and a director appointed as nominee of a financial institution, etc., is that the special director is appointed to safeguard the interests of the company or public interest while the nominee director safeguards the interests of the nominating institution/person along with that of the company.

Minimum and maximum number of directors

Provisions in this regard are as follows:

Minimum number of directors - Section 252 provides that every public company (other than a public company which has become such by virtue of section 43A) must have at least 3 directors and every private company (including a deemed public company) must have at least 2 directors. However, a public company having—

(a) a paid-up capital of five crore rupees or more;

(b) one thousand or more small shareholders;

may have a director elected by such small shareholders in the manner as may be prescribed.

The expression 'small shareholders' means a shareholder (including a preference shareholder) holding shares of nominal value of twenty thousand rupees or less in a public company to which this section applies.

The Department of Company Affairs, in this regard, has prescribed the Companies (Appointment of the Small Shareholders' Director) Rules, 2001. These rules, inter alia, provide for the following:

- (i) Small shareholders intending to propose a person as their representative on the board of the company would be required to give 14 days notice prior to shareholders meeting.
- (ii) The proposed name would have to be endorsed by signatures of at least 100 small shareholders who together represent at least a tenth of the total small shareholders in a company.
- (iii) The nominee would necessarily have to be a small shareholder of the company.
- (iv) The proposed nominee shall give, in writing, his consent to represent small shareholders.
- (v) Listed public companies shall elect the small shareholders nominee through a postal ballot while unlisted company shall appoint such nominee if majority of the small shareholders recommend his candidature at their meeting.

The rules also empower the company to act suo motu to elect a small shareholders' director from amongst shareholders.

- (vi) A nominee of the small shareholders would not be eligible for appointment as whole time director or managing director of the company.
- (vii) The tenure of such director shall be a maximum of three years and he need not retire by rotation. The person can be elected for another period of three years on expiry of his tenure.
- (viii) A person shall not hold office as small shareholders' director in more than two companies.
- (ix) Disqualifications - Rule 5 provides that a person shall not be capable of being appointed as small shareholders' director of a company if—
 - (a) he has been found to be of unsound mind by a Court of competent jurisdiction and the finding is in force;
 - (b) he is an undischarged insolvent;
 - (c) he has applied to be adjudicated as an insolvent and his application is pending;
 - (d) he has been convicted by a Court of any offence involving moral turpitude and sentenced in respect thereof to imprisonment for not less than six months, and a period of five years has not elapsed from the date of expiry of the sentence;
 - (e) he has not paid any call in respect of shares of the company held by him, whether alone or jointly with others, and six months have elapsed from the last date fixed for the payment of the call; or
 - (f) an order disqualifying him for appointment as director has been passed by a Court in pursuance of section 203 and is in force, unless the leave of the Court has been obtained for his appointment in pursuance of that section.

The above grounds are similar to those provided under section 274 of the Act for disqualification of directors except the ground contained in clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 274. Omission of this ground in above rule appears to be a drafting lapse and, therefore, needs correction.

- (x) Vacation of office - Rule 6 provides that a person appointed as small shareholders' director shall have to vacate the office if—
 - (a) such person so elected as director of small shareholders, ceases to be a small shareholder, on and from such date on which he ceased to be a small shareholder;
 - (b) he has been rendered disqualified by virtue of sub-rule (1) of rule
 - (c) he fails to pay any call in respect of shares of the company held by him, whether alone or jointly with others, within six months from the last date fixed for the payment of the call;

- (d) he absents himself from three consecutive meetings of the Board of directors, or from all meetings of the Board for a continuous period of three months, whichever is longer, without obtaining leave of absence from the Board;
- (e) he, or any firm of which he is a partner or any private company of which he is a director, accepts a loan, or any guarantee or security for a loan, from the company in contravention of section 295;
- (f) he acts in contravention of section 299;
- (g) he becomes disqualified by an order of Court under section 203; and
- (h) he is removed in pursuance of section 284.

Maximum number of directors - Regarding the maximum number of directors, there is nothing provided in the Act. Thus, there is no limit to the maximum number of directors. All members may also be appointed directors. The Articles of a company may, and usually do, fix the minimum and maximum number of directors of its Board. For instance, the Articles of a company may fix 6 as the minimum and 10 as the maximum number of directors for the Board.

For the purpose of maximum limit fixed by the Articles, directors appointed by the Central Government under section 408 of the Act or by the Company Law Board (now Tribunal*) under section 397 or 398 of the Act are not to be taken into account.

Similarly, nominee directors appointed by the public financial institutions are also not to be counted within the maximum limit fixed by the Articles.

Presumably, the special directors appointed pursuant to SICA also will not be counted to determine whether the number of directors has exceeded the maximum number in the Articles.

Again, since an alternate Director takes the place of original Director he is not counted for determining maximum or minimum number of Directors.

Increase or reduction in the number of directors

A company in general meeting may, by ordinary resolution, increase or reduce the number of its directors within the limits fixed in that behalf by its Articles (Section 258).

In certain cases, the increase in number of directors also requires the approval of the Central Government. Section 259 provides that if a public company, or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company wishes to increase the number of its directors beyond the maximum fixed by its Articles as originally framed the increase even though decided upon by resolution of the company in general meeting will not have any effect unless approved by the Central Government, and shall become void, if and insofar as it is disapproved by the Central Government. But, if the increase in the number does not make the total number of directors more than twelve, no approval of the Central Government shall be necessary. It may be noted that the above provision is equally applicable in respect of a company in existence as on 21st day of July, 1951 insofar as such a company requiring to increase the number of directors exceeding the number provided in its Articles, then in force. Here also an increase upto twelve in number will not be required to be approved by the Central Government.

Independent private companies and Government companies exempted - It may be noted that the restrictive provisions of section 259 do not apply to:

- (i) a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company;
- (ii) a Government company (Notification GSR 235, dated 31-1-1978); and
- (iii) section 25 company (S.O. Number 1578, dated 1-7-1961).

Therefore, though technically all the members of the above said companies can be made the directors, it is usual to provide in the articles the maximum number to avoid confusion.

Number of Directorships

As per section 275 of the Companies Act, 1956, a person cannot hold office at the same time as a director in more than fifteen companies. However, section 278 provides that in computing this number of fifteen directorships, the directorships of,

- (i) private companies [other than subsidiaries or holding companies of public company(ies)],
- (ii) unlimited companies,
- (iii) associations not carrying on business for profit or which prohibit payment of a dividend, and
- (iv) alternate directorships (i.e., he is appointed to act as a director only during the absence or incapacity of some other director), will be omitted.

In case any company ceases to fall in the categories under (i), (ii) or (iii) above, the directorships shall continue to remain excluded up to a period of three months from such cessation [Section 278(2)].

Foreign Companies-Directorships in foreign companies shall not be counted for the aforesaid ceiling of 15 companies under section 275 as they do not come within the definition of 'company' in the Act.

Vacation of office of a director [Section 283]

Section 283 provides for the office of a director becoming vacant on the happening of certain events. It provides that the office of a director shall become vacant if:

- (a) he fails to obtain within the time specified in sub-section (1) of section 270 (two months after the date of appointment as a director), or at any time thereafter ceases to hold, the share qualification, if any required of him by the Articles of the company;
- (b) he is found to be of unsound mind by a Court/Tribunal of competent jurisdiction;
- (c) he applies to be adjudicated an insolvent;
- (d) he is adjudged an insolvent;
- (e) he is convicted by a Court of any offence involving moral turpitude and sentenced in respect thereof to imprisonment for not less than six months;
- (f) he fails to pay any calls in respect of shares of the company held by him, whether alone or jointly with others, within six months from the last date fixed for the payment of the call unless the Central Government has, by notification in the Official Gazette, removed the disqualification incurred by such failure;
- (g) he absents himself from three consecutive meetings of the Board of directors or, from all meetings of the Board for a continuous period of three months, whichever is longer, without obtaining leave of absence from the Board;

Thus, where a director absented himself from the Board meeting held on 12-1-2005, 4-2-2005 and 5-3-2005, his disqualification as envisaged in section 283(1)(g) would not arise without completion of a continuous period of three months from the date of the first meeting [D. Srinivasan v. H.S. Vishwanath [2007] 75 SCL 59 (CLB-Chennai)].

Further, where there was no proof that notices of board meetings were served on directors, directors could not be removed on the ground that they abstained from attending meetings''' [Vijay Krishan Jaidka v. Jaidka Motor Co. Ltd. [1996] 10 SCL 244 (CLB)].

Again, where the director had been deliberately kept out of the affairs of the company and eventually was not allowed to continue in office as director of the company and there was no definite evidence as to the service of notices of Board meetings, he could not be removed from his position of a director by reason of non-attendance of three Board meetings [Bagri Cereals (P.) Ltd., In re[1997]5Comp.LJ. 145 (Cal.)].

- (h) he (whether by himself or by any person for his benefit or on his account), or any firm in which he is a partner or any private company of which he is a director, accepts a loan, or any guarantee or security for a loan from the company in contravention of section 295;
- (i) he acts in contravention of section 299 [Disclosure of interest by the directors];
- (j) he becomes disqualified by an order of Court under section 203;
- (k) he is removed in pursuance of section 284;
- (l) having been appointed a director by virtue of his holding any office or other employment in the company, he ceases to hold such office or other employment in the company; or
- (m) where a director or any other officer of a company has been convicted of an offence under section 209A, he shall, on and from the date on which he is so convicted, be deemed to have vacated his office as such and on such vacation of office, shall be disqualified for holding such office in any company, for a period of five years from such date [Section 209A(9)].

A private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company may, by its articles, provide that the office of director shall be vacated on any grounds in addition to those specified above, for example, when a director's activities appear prejudicial to the bona fide interest of the company, the remaining members of the Board may require such director to vacate his position/resign, by writing a letter to him, signed by all of them. Articles of a private company simpliciter may contain a clause to this effect.

However, sub-section (2) of section 283 provides that the disqualification referred in clauses (d), (e) and (f) above shall not take effect:

- (a) for thirty days from the date of the adjudication, sentence or order;
- (b) where any appeal or petition is preferred within the thirty days aforesaid against the adjudication, sentence or conviction resulting in the sentence, or order until the expiry of seven days from the date on which such appeal or petition is disposed of; or
- (c) where within seven days aforesaid, any further appeal or petition is preferred in respect of the adjudication, sentence, conviction, or order, and the appeal or petition, if allowed, would result in the removal of the disqualification, until such further appeal or petition is disposed of [section 283(2)].

Penalty - If a person functions as a director after his office has become vacant on account of any of the disqualifications specified in (a) to (l) above, he shall be punishable with fine upto ₹5,000 for every day during the period he so functions [section 283(2A)]. It appears reasonable to view that the company itself and the co-directors should as well be made liable for the illegal continuance. Unfortunately, the law is silent on this aspect.

Removal of a director

The discussion on removal of a director may be grouped under the following three heads:

- 1. Removal by shareholders - Section 284 recognises the inherent right of shareholders to remove the directors appointed by them. It is not even necessary that there should be proof of mismanagement, breach of trust, misfeasance or other misconduct on the part of the directors. Where the shareholders feel the policies pursued by the directors or any of them are not to their liking, they have the option to remove the directors by passing an ordinary resolution in the same way as they have the right to appoint directors by passing an ordinary resolution.

Section 284 provides that a company may, by ordinary resolution passed in general meeting after due receipt of a special notice, remove a director before the expiry of his term of office.

In Queen Kuries & Loans (P.) Ltd. v. Sheena Jose [1993] 76 Comp. Cas. 821 (Ker.), it was held that the notice must disclose the grounds on which the director is proposed to be removed. The disclosure of the ground for removal is a matter of substance and not of form because the directors concerned are entitled to make a representation in writing against their removal at the meeting. The company is bound to send a copy of the representation to every member of the company to whom the notice of the meeting has been sent. It is only after these steps are taken that the resolution can be passed. So, where a special notice of the resolution was not given, it amounted to a serious lapse depriving the directors of their statutory right to make a representation. The resolution removing the director was therefore held to be invalid.

Note that the grounds for removal of the directors are required to be stated in the explanatory statement accompanying the notice of the meeting. Thus, where requisitionists themselves call and hold the meeting (on directors' failure to do so), the notice of the meeting must be accompanied by the said explanatory statement. But, where meeting is called and held by the directors, though on requisition, the responsibility of stating the grounds shall be that of the directors. The problem may, however, arise in view of the Supreme Court decision in L/C v. Escorts AIR 1986 SC where the apex court laid down that the requisitionists could not be compelled to state the grounds for removal of directors and calling of the meeting refused on this count. Directors may, therefore, be not aware of the grounds. It will appear that in such cases, the explanatory statement should carry the statement of the fact that the requisitionists have failed or refused to state the grounds. In the meeting, requisitionists will, however, be bound to disclose the reasons.

On receipt of the special notice for removal of a director, the company must forthwith send a copy thereof to the director concerned to enable him to make a representation. If he makes a representation in writing and requests the company to notify it to the members, the company must, unless it is received by it too late for it to send to the members, state the fact of the representation to every member of the company to whom notice of the meeting is sent. If the representation is not sent as aforesaid, the company must at the instance of the director read it out at the meeting. The director is also entitled to be heard on the resolution at the meeting.

Any omission to serve a special notice on the directors sought to be removed constitutes denial of their statutory right of reply and in the absence of such notice to the directors, any resolution for their removal would be vitiated by such omission - S. Varadarajan v. Udhayem Leasings & Investments (P.) Ltd [2005] 62 SCL 315 (CLB - Chennai).

The following directors, however, cannot be removed by the shareholders in general meeting:

- (i) a director appointed by the Central Government under section 408;
- (ii) a director of a private company holding office for life on April 1, 1952;
- (iii) a director elected by the principle of proportional representation under section 265;
- (iv) directors appointed by Central Government under Industries (Development & Regulation) Act, 1951;
- (v) special directors appointed under Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985;
- (vi) directors appointed by financial institutions under statutory powers;
- (vii) nominee directors;
- (viii) directors appointed by Company Law Board (now Tribunal) under section 402.

Filling vacancy caused by removal of a director - The vacancy caused by the removal of a director may be filled at the same meeting, and if so filled, person appointed thereto will only hold office for the residual period of the removed director [section 284(5)]. However, a special notice of the intended appointment must have been given. The special notice may or may not be simultaneous or from the same shareholder as regards removal and appointment as a result of removal.

If vacancy is not filled by the company in general meeting, the Board of directors may fill it as if it were a casual vacancy in accordance with section 262 [section 284(6)]. However, the Board cannot appoint the removed director.

2. Removal by Central Government - Under section 388B, the Central Government has the power to make a reference to the Company Law Board (now Tribunal) against any managerial personnel. The power can be exercised where, in the opinion of the Central Government, there are circumstances suggesting:

- (a) that any person concerned in the conduct and management of the affairs of a company is or has been guilty of fraud, misfeasance, persistent negligence or default in carrying out his obligations and functions under the law, or breach of trust in connection therewith; or
- (b) that the business of the company is not or has not been conducted and managed by such person in accordance with sound business principles or prudent commercial practices; or
- (c) that the business of the company is or has been conducted or managed by such person in a manner which is likely to cause or has in fact caused, serious injury or damage to the interest of trade, industry or business to which such company pertains; or

- (d) that the business of the company is or has been conducted and managed by such person with an intent to defraud its creditors, members, or any other person or otherwise for a fraudulent or unlawful purpose in a manner prejudicial to public interest.

The reference may be made by stating a case against the person aforesaid with a request that the Company Law Board (now Tribunal) may inquire into the case, record finding as to whether or not such person is fit and proper person to hold the office of director or any other office connected with the conduct and management of any company.

Under section 388C, the Company Law Board (now Tribunal) has the powers to pass an interim order suo-motu or on the application of the Central Government, in the interest of members or creditors or in the public interest. The interim order may direct the concerned managerial personnel not to discharge any of the function of the office until further order. The Company Law Board (now Tribunal) may further order the appointment of a suitable person to perform the duties of the personnel concerned and specify the terms and conditions thereof.

At the conclusion of the hearing of the case, the Company Law Board (now Tribunal) shall record its findings, stating therein specifically as to whether or not the director is a fit and proper person to hold the office of director or any other office connected with the conduct and management of any company (Section 388D).

On the basis of the aforesaid findings, the Central Government may, by order, notwithstanding any other provision contained in the Act, remove the delinquent respondent (director) from his office (Section 388E).

After the delinquent person has been, by order, removed, he shall not hold any managerial office of any company for a period of five years from the date of the order of removal, nor will he be paid any compensation for loss of office as a result of removal. The time limit may, however, be relaxed by the Central Government with the previous concurrence of the Company Law Board (now Tribunal).

However, in Union of India v. Satyam Computer Services Ltd. [2009] 89 SCL 393, the CLB, on a reference by the Central Government and taking facts into account ordered removal of the then Board of Directors and allowed the Central Government to constitute a Board comprising not more than ten members.

3. Removal by Company Law Board (now Tribunal) [Section 402(d)] - Where an application has been made to the Company Law Board (now Tribunal) under section 397 or 398 against oppression and mismanagement of a company's affairs, the Company Law Board (now Tribunal) may order for the termination or setting aside of an agreement which the company might have made with any of its directors. Such a director shall not be entitled to serve as a manager, managing director or director of the company without leave of the Company Law Board (now Tribunal) for a period of five years from the date of Company Law Board's (now Tribunal) order terminating or setting aside his contract with the company [section 407(6)]. He shall also not be entitled to claim any compensation from the company for the loss of office [Section 407(a)].

4. Removal by the Board of Directors - It may be interesting to debate as to whether a director can be removed by the Board of Directors if such a power is conferred upon it by the Articles of Association.

Section 283 of the Companies Act, 1956 provides for vacation of office of a director of any company on the happening of certain contingencies, and that according to its sub-section (3), no public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company can provide for any additional grounds for the vacation of office of a director. This means that a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company may, by its articles, provide that the office of director shall be vacated on any grounds in addition to those specified in section 283. It is sometimes provided in the articles of a private company that the office of director shall become vacant if he be requested in writing by all his co-directors to resign. It is doubtful whether it is lawful for a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company to include such a provision in its articles in view of the provisions contained in section 283(3). However, there is no bar to a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company for including such a provision in its articles.

Resignation by a Director

There is nothing in the Companies Act as to whether, and by what procedure, a director can resign. The Act, however, indirectly recognises the right of resignation through the provisions in section 318, one of which is that no director is entitled to a compensation if he resigns his office.

Articles of association usually provide for resignation by a director by giving written notice to the company. Even though there is no such provision in the articles, a director may resign unless the articles forbid him to do so. In S.S. Lakshmana Pillai v. Registrar of Companies [1977] 47 Comp. Cas. 652 (Mad.), the Madras High Court held that if there is a provision in the articles, resignation will take effect in accordance with such provision and, if there is no provision, resignation will take effect in accordance with its terms. Notice may be written or oral.

In the aforesaid case, the Madras High Court also held that the resignation shall be effective even when no other director was in office. In this case, of the two directors of a company, one died and the other wanted to resign.

The Court, however, observed that a director could not evade his obligations by severing his connection with the company. But, where a director has tendered his resignation and Board of directors has accepted it and has acted on it, such a director cannot be held liable for liability incurred by said company after date of acceptance of his resignation except the liability which has been incurred by him for purchase of shares of said company and nothing more - Saumil Dilip Mehta v. State of Maharashtra [2002] 39 SCL 102 (Bom.).

Resignation to be valid must be addressed to the company. Letter of resignation addressed to a third party shall have no effect - Registrar of Companies v. Orissa Paper Products Ltd [1988] 63 Comp. Cas. 460 (Ori.). In Saumil Dilip Mehta v. State of Maharashtra [2002] 39 SCL 102 (Bom.), it was held that a director can resign just by sending in writing a letter informing either chairman or secretary of company, his intention to resign from post of director of said company. He can tender his resignation unilaterally and without filling in Form No. 32 and without sending a notice to Registrar of Companies.

Once a resignation letter is submitted to the board, the date on which the intention to relinquish post is communicated to board would be the date from which the director ceases to be a director of the company - Mother Care (India) Ltd. v. Prof. Ramaswamy P. Aiyar [2004] 51 SCL 243 (Kar.).

Where a director has contracted to serve the company for a fixed period, he may resign subject to payment of damages, if any, suffered by the company as a consequence of premature termination of his service agreement.

Once a director has given a notice of resignation, he cannot withdraw it except with the consent of the company properly considered by the directors. But, where articles contain a provision that a director may resign only if the Board consents, the resignation shall not be effective until the Board's consent is given and the resignation may be withdrawn in the meantime - Glossop v. Glossop [1907] 2 Ch. 370.

A verbal resignation accepted at a meeting is sufficient, even if the articles provide for resignation in writing - Latchford Premier Cinema v. Ennion [1931] 2 Ch. 409.

A managing or whole time director cannot resign merely by giving a notice. In his case, a formal acceptance of the resignation by the company is essential. This is because of the fact that such a director, besides being an ordinary director, is also in the whole or substantially the whole time employment of the company. He has to be relieved of all the duties and responsibilities attaching to his office. The notice by a director holding office both of a whole time and ordinary director, for resignation shall apply to both the offices - Mosely v. Koffyfontein Mines Ltd. [1911] 1 Ch. 73.

Validity of the acts of a director where his appointment is invalid [Section 290]

Section 290 provides that the acts done by a director shall be valid even if his appointment is discovered to be invalid because of any defect or disqualification or where his appointment had terminated by virtue of any provision contained in the Companies Act or in the articles.

Exceptions

However, the aforesaid position shall not prevail in the following cases:

- (i) Where appointment is illegal or no appointment at all.
- (ii) Where the director continues in his office knowingly that his term has expired.
- (iii) Where the director knew from the beginning that his appointment was defective.
- (iv) In case of acts done after his appointment has been shown to him to be invalid,
- (v) Acts of a managing director, manager or secretary.
- (vi) Acts ultra-vires the company
- (vii) Where requirement as to minimum number of directors not satisfied '[Sly, Spink and Co. (supra)]'.
- (viii) Where the third party was aware of the irregularity, such party shall not be entitled to enforce against the company.

Managing Director

Meaning- Section 2(26) defines 'managing director' as a director who, by virtue of an agreement with the company or of a resolution passed by the company in general meeting or by its Board of directors, or by virtue of its Memorandum or Articles of Association, is entrusted with substantial powers of management which would not otherwise be exercisable by him. The expression includes a director occupying the position of a managing director, by whatever name called.

The definition makes it clear that the managing director's powers of managing the affairs of the company must be substantial. The power to do administrative acts of routine nature such as the power to affix the common seal of the company to any document or to draw and endorse any cheque on the account of the company in any bank or to sign any certificate of share shall not be deemed to be included within substantial powers of management.

The managing director exercises his powers subject to the superintendence, control and direction of the Board of directors.

The managing director is thus a-director who carries on the day to day business of the-company. He is the executive head of the company and, subject to the control of the Board of directors of the company, controls the company's affairs.

The managing director has necessarily to be a director. He, like any other director, has no powers of management except when acting as one of the members of the Board and to the extent those powers are delegated to him by the Board.

A director entrusted with managerial functions will be a managing director even though he may be called as 'technical director' or 'technical advisor' (Fourth Annual Report - year ended 31st March, 1960).

Appointment of Managing Director- In terms of section 2(26), a managing director may be appointed in any of the four ways, namely:

- (a) by virtue of an agreement with the company,
- (b) by virtue of a resolution passed by the company in general meeting,
- (c) by virtue of a resolution passed by the Board of directors, and
- (d) by virtue of the Memorandum/Articles of Association.

Section 269(1) of the Companies Act, 1956, as amended by the Act of 1988, makes it obligatory for a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company having a paid up share capital of such sum as may be prescribed (presently, Rupees five crores) to appoint (or re-appoint) a managing or whole time director (includes a director in whole time employment of the company) or a manager. Further, sub-section (2) of section 269 provides for the approval of the Central Government to be obtained in certain cases. This approval is to be taken in e-Form 25A.

The sub-section reads as follows:

“On and from the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988, no appointment of a person as a managing or whole time director or a manager in a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company shall be made except with the approval of the Central Government unless such appointment is made in accordance with the conditions specified in Parts I and II of Schedule XIII (The said Parts being subject to the provisions of Part III of that Schedule) and a return in the prescribed form is filed within 90 days from the date of such appointment.” The return is to be made in e-Form 25C.

Approval of the Government- Prior to the Amendment Act, 1988, no appointment of a managerial personnel could be made without the approval of the Central Government. The amended sub-section (2) of section 269 enables a company to appoint a managerial personnel even without the approval of the Central Government on fulfillment of the conditions laid down in Schedule XIII. However, in all other cases, the appointment made by the company must be approved by the Central Government. As per Schedule XIII, for appointment of a managing, whole time director or a manager, approval of the Central Government would not be required if the following conditions are satisfied:

- (a) He had not been sentenced to imprisonment for any period or to fine exceeding Rupees one thousand for conviction of an offence under any of the specified fifteen Acts mentioned in Schedule XIII;
- (b) He had not been detained for any period under the Conservation of Foreign Exchange and Prevention of Smuggling Activities Act, 1974;
- (c) He has completed the age of twenty-five years and has not attained the age of seventy years or the age of retirement, if any, specified by the company, whichever is earlier. With the amendment of Sch. XIII w.e.f. 12-9-1996, a company will now have the freedom to appoint a managerial person who has not completed the age of 25 years but has attained the age of majority or has attained the age of 70 years without the approval of the Central Government provided his appointment is approved by special resolution passed by the company in a general meeting;
- (d) He is a managerial person in more than one company and he draws remuneration from one or more companies subject to the ceiling provided in Section III of Part II (viz., higher maximum limit admissible from any one of the companies of which he is a managerial person).
- (e) He is resident in India;

In case any of the above conditions of Schedule XIII are not complied with, an application must be made to the Central Government within ninety days of the appointment [Section 269(3)].

The Central Government shall not accord its approval to an application made under section 269(3), if it is satisfied that :-

- (a) the managing or whole time director or the manager appointed is, in its opinion not a fit and proper person to be appointed as such or such appointment is not in the public interest; or
- (b) the terms and conditions of the appointment of managing or whole time director or the manager are not fair and reasonable. [Section 269(4)]

Further sub-section (5) of section 269 empowers the Central Government to accord approval for a period lesser than the period for which the appointment is proposed to be made.

In case the appointment is not approved by the Central Government, the appointee shall vacate the office immediately on communication of the decision of the Central Government to the company [Section 269(6)].

Number of companies of which one person may be appointed Managing Director- Section 316(1) states that a person, who is either the managing director or a manager of any other company (including a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company), cannot be appointed a managing director of a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company. But, such an appointment can be made if the Board of directors of such a company approves of the appointment by a unanimous resolution passed, at its meeting, specific notice of which had been given to all the directors then in India [Proviso to section 316(2)].

It may be noted that the prohibition contained in sub-sections (1) and (2) of section 316 is directed against a public company or a private company which is the subsidiary of a public company and it is only such a company that has to ensure the passing of an unanimous resolution of the Board. Suppose that an individual who is already the managing director of a public company or a private company which is the subsidiary of a public company, is appointed as managing director or manager of a private company, neither sub-section (1) nor sub-section (2) can operate against such subsequent appointment by the private company. Consequently, the proviso to subsection (2) of section 316 does not come into play in such a case.

Further sub-section (3) of section 316 puts a ceiling on the number of companies a person can be the managing director or manager of. According to the sub-section a person cannot hold the office either of managing director or of manager in more than two companies of which each one or at least one is a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company. However, the restriction does not apply to managing directorship in private companies, not being subsidiaries of public companies. Thus, a person may be managing director of any number of private companies.

Sub-section (4) of section 316, however, permits any person to be appointed as a managing director of more than two companies if the Central Government is satisfied that it is necessary that the companies should for their proper working, function as a single unit and have a common managing director.

On perusal of the above provision, it is clear that a person cannot be appointed as a whole time director of more than one company even with the approval of the Central Government.

Wholly owned Government companies exempted : It may be noted that the provisions of section 316 do not apply to the wholly owned Government company. [G.S.R. 577(E), dated 16-7-1985].

Tenure of appointment - According to section 317, the term of office of a managing director cannot exceed five years at a time. However, he may be re-appointed or re-employed or his term of office may be extended but again the period shall not exceed five years on each occasion. Further, such reappointment or extension shall not be sanctioned earlier than two years from the date on which it is to come into force.

Exemption - The provisions of section 317, however, do not apply to a private company unless it is a subsidiary of a public company.

Wholly owned Government companies have also been exempted. [G.S.R. 577(E), dated "16-7-1985].

Disqualifications - Section 267 prohibits the appointment of certain persons as managing director. The section provides that no company shall appoint or employ, any person as its managing or whole time director who—

- (a) is an undischarged insolvent, or has at any time been adjudged an insolvent;
- (b) suspends, or has at any time suspended, payment to his creditors, or makes or has at any time made, a composition with them; or
- (c) is, or has at any time been convicted by a court of an offence involving moral turpitude.

Since a managing director has necessarily to be a director, a person who is disqualified to be appointed as a director under section 274 (already discussed) cannot be appointed as managing director/whole time director.

Further, a person who does not satisfy the conditions of Schedule XIII cannot be appointed as a managing director of a company without the approval of the Central Government.

Manager

Meaning- Section 2(24) defines 'manager' as: "Manager" means an individual who, subject to the superintendence, control and directions of the Board of directors, has the management of the whole or substantially the whole of the affairs of the company, and includes a director or any other person occupying the position of a manager, by whatever name called and whether under a contract of service or not.

Thus, an individual must be in charge of the whole or substantially the whole of the affairs of the company, in order to be called a manager in accordance with the Companies Act. A person who is one of the departmental manager or a branch manager is not deemed to be a manager in this sense.

Please note that only an individual can be appointed a manager of a company. According to section 384, no company can appoint or employ any firm, body corporate or association as its manager.

Disqualifications of a manager - Section 385 lays down the disqualifications of a manager. The section provides that no company shall appoint or continue the appointment or employment of any person as its manager, who—

- (a) is an undischarged insolvent; or
- (b) has at any time within the preceding five years been adjudged an insolvent; or
- (c) suspends or has suspended within the previous five years payment to his creditors; or
- (d) makes, or has at any time, within the preceding five years made a composition with his creditors, or
- (e) is, or has at any time within preceding five years been convicted of an offence involving moral turpitude.

The Central Government may, however, by notification in the Official Gazette, remove any of the aforesaid disqualifications incurred by any person either generally or in relation to any company or companies specified in the notification [Section 385(2)].

Number of companies a person can be appointed manager- Sub-section (1) of section 386 disallows the appointment or employment of any person as manager if he is either the manager or the managing director of any other company except as provided in sub-section (2) of section 386. As per sub-section (2) of section 386, a company may appoint or employ a person as its manager, if he is the manager or managing director of one, and not more than one, other company. However, such appointment or employment must be made or approved by a resolution passed at a meeting of the Board with the consent of all the directors present at the meeting, and of which meeting and of the resolution to be moved thereat, specific notice was given to all the directors then in India.

The Central Government has been further empowered under sub-section (4) of section 386 to permit, by order, any person to be appointed as a manager of more than two companies, if it is satisfied that it is necessary that the companies should, for their proper working, function as a single unit and have a common manager.

Prohibition of simultaneous appointment of different categories of managerial personnel [Section 197A]

Notwithstanding anything contained in the Companies Act or any other law or any agreement or instrument, no company can, after the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1960, appoint or employ at the same time or continue the appointment or employment at the same time, of a person as a managing director as well as a manager.

It may be noted that section 197A prohibits the simultaneous appointment of a managing director and manager in a company. There is no legal prohibition against having whole time director and manager simultaneously or managing director and whole-time director simultaneously.

Effect of contravention of sec. 197A-In R. S. Mathur v. H. S. Mathur AIR 1968 All. 241 it has been held that this section prohibits only the company, and the persons appointed or whose employment is continued in contravention of the section are not punishable under section 629A. But the legal effect of such appointment is that it is not valid, the provision being mandatory.

Procedure for appointment of managing director/whole time director/manager

Following procedure is to be followed:

1. Where a person who is not a director of the company is proposed to be appointed as managing/ whole time director of the company, it is necessary that he be first appointed as the director of the company as per the procedure laid down under section 257 (discussed earlier under 'appointment of a director other than a retiring director'). He should also file his written consent with the company to act as a director as per section 264.
2. If the appointment of the managing director/whole time director/manager is in accordance with the conditions specified in Schedule XIII, the appointment would not require approval of the Central Government.
3. If the appointment does not fulfill the conditions of Schedule XIII, an application for approval of the Central Government will have to be made to the Central Government within ninety days from the date of appointment of whole time director/managing director/manager. The application to the Central Government for the purpose shall be made in Form No. 25A. The application must be accompanied by the following documents :
 - (i) certified copy of the memorandum and Articles of Association;
 - (ii) certified copies of the annual accounts together with directors and auditors' report for the last five financial years;
 - (iii) certified copies of the resolution of Board/share holder(s) including resolution under section 316(2) where applicable;
 - (iv) certified copy of scheme approved by the BIFR/Financial Institutions/ Bank, for the revival of the company, if any;
 - (v) certified copies of newspaper clipping of notices published under section 640B, in original.
5. The appointment and the terms and conditions of the proposed appointment are to be considered and approved by the Board. Where the appointment is made in the Board meeting, proper disclosure has to be made if any director is interested in the appointment (vide section 299 of the Act). In case approval of general meeting is required, the Board has also to decide about the place, date and time of the general meeting and will finalise the draft notice containing the necessary resolution and explanatory statement and authorise the company secretary to issue notice for the meeting.

6. Disclosure of director's interest in any contract for the appointment of a manager, if any; and abstract of the terms of the contract for the appointment of a manager of the company or variation of the contract clearly specifying the nature of the concern or interest of the director, if any, is required to be made to every member, under section 302 of the Act, within twenty-one days of entering into the contract by means of an abstract of the term. Where the notice of the general meeting is given to the members within twenty-one days, as aforesaid, no separate abstract is required to be given under section 302 and explanatory statement for the concerned resolution, accompanying the notice of the general meeting may be deemed to be notice under section 302 also, by making a statement to this effect in the explanatory statement.
7. On the appointed day the general meeting shall be held for passing necessary resolution (ordinary or special, depending upon the stipulation in the articles of association).
8. Three copies of the notice of the meeting and one copy of the proceedings of the meeting have also to be sent to the stock exchange, in case of listed companies (Standard Listing Agreement).
9. Where the resolution passed is a special resolution, a copy thereof with Form No. 23 shall be filed with the Registrar of Companies together with the filing fee within thirty days. Also a copy of the resolution of the Board or agreement executed by the company, relating to the appointment/re-appointment/ renewal of an appointment or variation of the terms of appointment of the managing director should be filed along with Form No. 23 with the Registrar of Companies [Section 192].
10. The remuneration payable to the appointee should be within the specified limits of Part II of Schedule XIII. Otherwise, approval of the Central Government shall have to be obtained.
11. A return in Form 25C of the Central Government's General Rules and Forms is required to be filed with the Registrar of Companies within ninety days of the appointment. This return should also contain a certificate signed by the auditor or the secretary or where there is no secretary, a secretary in whole time practice for the compliance with the requirements of Schedule XIII.

Distinction between Managing Director and Manager

On a perusal of the definitions of the terms "managing director" and "manager" under sub-sections (26) and (24) of section 2 respectively, along with other relevant sections of the Companies Act, the following points of distinction may be noted:

1. A 'managing director' is entrusted with substantial powers of management. A 'manager', on the other hand, has the management of the whole or substantially the whole of the affairs of a company.
2. A managing director is appointed either under an agreement or by a resolution of the Board or general meeting or under the provisions of the Memorandum or Articles. A manager, on the other hand, is usually appointed either under a contract of service or by the Board of directors though the Articles may also provide for his appointment.
3. A managing director must be director whereas a manager may or may not be a director.
4. A managing director, on his ceasing to be a director, shall automatically cease to be the managing director as well. A manager-director, however, can continue as a manager even though he ceases to be a director.
5. The grounds of disqualifications of a managing director as given in section 267 remain effective for whole life and cannot be waived by the Central Government. Most of the grounds of disqualification of a manager as given in section 385 are only for five years and these can also be waived by the Central Government.

Whole time Director

In many sections of the Companies Act, the term 'Whole time director' has been used side by side with that of the 'managing director'. Confusion is, therefore, likely to arise in respect of their respective position and role.

While the term 'managing director' has been specifically defined under section 2(26), no such definition of a whole time director is available. Explanation to section 269, however, states that the expression 'whole time director' includes a director in the whole time employment of the company.

Regarding appointment/re-appointment and remuneration of a whole time director, same provisions as are applicable to a managing director, are applicable. Under section 269, every public company and a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company must have a managing director or a whole-time director if its paid-up share capital is ₹5 crores or more. Similarly sections 267 and 268 providing for disqualifications of managing directors and approval of Central Government for their appointment/re-appointment also make the provisions applicable to whole time directors. Also, the provisions of sections 309, 310 and 311 dealing with remuneration of directors and other managerial personnel are applicable to whole time directors.

Distinction between Managing Director and Whole-time Director - The following points of distinction between a managing director and a whole time director may be noted :

1. A managing director may be appointed in that capacity in two or more companies at the same time but a whole-time director, by virtue of his whole time employment cannot act as such in more than one company.
2. The tenure of a managing director of a public company or a private company which is the subsidiary of a public company cannot be more than five years at a time. There is no such restriction in the case of a whole-time director.
3. Section 314 has clearly distinguished a managing director from a whole time director by explicitly exempting managing director from the rigours of that section leaving out the whole-time director.
4. A managing director is a special appointee having all embracing power of management and ordinarily he is not involved in day-to-day routine management. A whole-time director is an executive director having functional responsibilities e.g. Finance director.

Non-executive directors - This term has not been defined in the Companies Act, 1956. However, ever since the businesses started taking the corporate form, the nonexecutive directors came to be part and parcel of corporate form of management. The distinguishing feature is the fact that they cannot perform any executive function in the company where they are directors. The concept of non-executive directors, with the growing awareness for corporate governance, has now come up in sharp focus, as they constitute an integral part of the Board of directors, which is vested with the power of management of the company. Usually non-executive directors are taken in the Board of Companies for their special skill, professional status or experience to guide the Board in taking objective decisions and monitoring performance in unbiased and independent manner. The non-executive directors are often assumed to be independent directors, especially in the context of corporate governance. As the law stands today, the non-executive directors are officers of the company and share the responsibilities of management's decisions.

1.7.2. Payment of remuneration to Directors and Managerial Personnel

Remuneration paid to a Director in a professional capacity - The proviso to subsection (1) of section 309 excludes the remuneration received by a director in any other capacity provided the services rendered to the company are of a professional nature and, in the opinion of the Central Government, the director concerned possesses the requisite qualification for practice of the profession. This only means that the director must hold a position by virtue of which he can render services in his professional capacity. Thus, while the director is a medical man or an engineer or a legal advisor or a company secretary having the membership of the Institute of Company Secretaries of India or is a professionally qualified accountant being a member either of the Institute of Chartered Accountants or the Institute of Costs and Works Accountants, the remuneration received by him in such professional capacity will not be hit by the provisions of section 309 provided the Central Government is of the opinion as mentioned above.

A mere expression of opinion by the Central Government to say that the person concerned possesses the requisite qualification is enough. Once the Central Government is satisfied that the director possesses the requisite qualification and also renders the professional services, it is not permissible for that Government to put any restriction on the remuneration payable to him in respect of the professional services; the remuneration being excluded from managerial remuneration - Stup Consultants Ltd. v. Union of India [1987] 61 Comp. Cas. 784 (Delhi) and ~Sree Gajanana Motor Transport Co. Ltd. v. Union of India [1992] 73 Comp. Cas. 348 (Kar.).

Again, the Expert Advisory Committee of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India, in this regard, has expressed the following opinion:

Under the proviso to sub-section (1) of section 309, the Central Government's approval is required merely by way of confirmation of the director's professional qualifications and not in respect of specific remuneration paid to the director for his professional services. Such approval and confirmation by the Central Government may well be implied in the case of those professions - such as the legal profession and the accountancy profession - where the practice of the profession is not legally possible unless the person concerned is a member of a recognised institute or body. The Companies Act, however, does not indicate whether specific approval is required, or implied approval shall be sufficient. Therefore, the safer course would be to seek a specific confirmation approving the director's professional qualification.

Refund of excess remuneration - If any director draws or receives, directly or indirectly, by way of remuneration any such sums in excess of the limits prescribed under section 309 or without the prior sanction of the Central Government, where it is required, he shall refund such sums to the company and until such sum is refunded, hold it in trust for the company [section 309(5A)].

Sub-section (5B) of section 309 further provides that the company shall not waive the recovery of any sum refundable to it under sub-section (5A) unless permitted by the Central Government.

Additional remuneration from subsidiary, when prohibited - Sub-section (6) of section 309 specifies that no director of a company who is in receipt of any commission from the company and who is either in the whole time employment of the company or a managing director shall be entitled to receive any commission or other remuneration from any subsidiary of such company.

The provisions of sub-section (6), which prohibit a director from receiving any commission or other remuneration from the subsidiary of the company of which he is the director, are subject to a number of conditions to be fulfilled. First, the director concerned must be in receipt of commission from the holding company. Secondly, he should not be an ordinary director but should be either a managing or whole time director. There is, therefore, no bar against an ordinary director receiving remuneration or commission both from the holding and subsidiary companies. The prohibition would also not apply to a manager if he is not a director. Where, however, the manager is a director and is in whole time employment, then the prohibition may be attracted. Again, there is no bar against receiving commission or other remuneration from the subsidiary so long as remuneration other than by way of commission is received from the holding company. A person who is an executive and not a director in the holding company may receive both commission and other remuneration from the subsidiary in the capacity of manager or whole time director of the subsidiary. Similarly, an executive working in the subsidiary company may draw remuneration from the subsidiary and also from the holding company by way of both commission and other remuneration by working as a director in the holding company. Further, a director of the holding company can draw perquisites and remuneration in any form other than in the form of commission while at the same time drawing commission and other remuneration from the subsidiary company.

Sitting fee (Section 310) - The fee payable to a director for each meeting of the Board of Directors or a Committee thereof is called sitting fee. According to section 310, sitting fee shall not exceed such amount as may be prescribed by the Central Government. As per GSR 580 (E), dated 24-7-2003, the maximum sitting fee has been fixed at ₹20,000 for companies with a paid-up share capital and free reserves of rupees 10 crores or more or turnover of rupees 50 crores or more. [Now provided under Rule 10B of the Companies (Central Government) General Rules and Forms, 1956]. For other companies the sitting fee is 10,000 rupees. Companies will have discretion to pay such amount by way of sitting fee as may be considered appropriate within the aforesaid ceiling.

Increase in remuneration - Section 310 provides that any provision or an amendment thereof, either in the company's Memorandum or Articles or in an agreement entered into by the company or in any resolution of the shareholders or of the Board, which purports to increase or has the effect of increasing, whether directly or indirectly, the remuneration of any director, shall not have any effect (a) unless the increase is in accordance with the conditions specified in Schedule XIII, or (b) unless it is otherwise approved by the Central Government.

Thus, approval of the Central Government shall not be required if the fixation or the increase in remuneration is in accordance with the conditions specified in Schedule XIII. It may be noted that Schedule XIII does not specify any conditions for increase in remuneration. It simply specifies the limits within which salary, commission and other perquisites can be paid without Government approval.

Remuneration to Managing Director

A managing director may be remunerated either by way of a monthly payment or as a specified percentage of the net profits of the company or (partly by one way and partly by the other. However, such remuneration should not exceed five per cent of the net profits without the sanction of the Central Government. Where there are more than one managing director/whole-time director(s) the total remuneration payable to all of them must not exceed ten per cent of the net profits without sanction of the Central Government [Section 309].

Remuneration to Manager (Section 387) - The manager of a company may, subject to the provisions of section 198, receive remuneration either by way of a monthly payment, or by way of a specified percentage of the 'net profits' of the company calculated in the manner laid down in sections 349 and 350 or partly by one way and partly by the other. However, except with the approval of the Central Government, such remuneration shall not exceed in the aggregate five per cent of the net profits calculated as above.

Application of sections 269, 310, 311, 312 and 317 to managers: The provisions of certain sections relating to managing directors have been made applicable to managers also (Section 388). These provisions include:

- (a) Section 269 : appointment or re-appointment requires Central Government approval except in cases specified under Schedule XIII;
- (b) Sections 310-311: increase in remuneration requires the Central Government approval except where the increase covered under Schedule XIII;
- (c) Section 312 : prohibition on assignment of office by a director;
- (d) Section 317: term of appointment to be not more than five years at a time.

Provisions of sections 386 to 388 discussed above do not apply to a private company. The disqualifications for the position of manager as given in section 385, however, apply to all types of companies.

The provisions of section 388E apply to the Manager as well.

Exemption to Government Companies - Vide Notification No. GSR 235, dated 31-1-1978, the DCA had notified that restrictions with regard to managerial appointment and remuneration as contained in sections 198, 259, 265, 269, 309-311, 387 and 388 as well as Schedule XIII do not apply to Government companies.

1.7.3 Powers and Managerial Remuneration

Powers of the Board of Directors

Section 291 of the Companies Act, 1956 provides for General Powers of the Board of Directors. It provides:

Subject to the provisions of the Act, the Board of Directors of a company shall be entitled to exercise all such powers, and to do all such acts and things, as the company is authorised to exercise and do.

However, the Board cannot exercise any power or do any act or thing which is directed or required, whether by the Companies Act or any other Act or by the Memorandum or Articles of the company or otherwise, to be exercised or done by the company in general meeting.

In exercising the aforesaid powers or doing any of the aforesaid acts or things, the Board will be subject to the provisions contained in that behalf in the Companies Act or any other Act, or in the Memorandum or Articles of the company, or in any regulations not inconsistent therewith and duly made thereunder, including regulations made by the company in general meeting.

Thus, the Board may exercise all powers of the company and can do all such acts and things that the company can do except those which are specifically provided to be exercised or done by the company in a general meeting. But the exercise of such powers of the Board shall be in conformity with the provisions of the Companies Act or any other Act and Memorandum, Articles, and resolutions of the company passed in general meeting.

It is therefore clear that the powers of a company in respect of all matters are to be exercised by the Board of directors except where these are reserved for exercise by company in general meeting. In Nibro Ltd. v. National Insurance Co. Ltd., [1991] 70 Comp. Cas. 388 (Delhi), the Delhi High Court observed as follows:

"It is well settled that under section 291 except where express provision is made that the powers of a company in respect of a particular matter are to be exercised by the company in general meeting; in all other cases the Board of directors is entitled to exercise all its powers."

Do shareholders have the right to intervene? - Shareholders, by amending the articles may restrict the powers of the Board. But such amendment cannot be made retrospectively and a meeting of shareholders cannot therefore invalidate any act validly done by the Board. In Jagdish Prasad v. Pt. Paras Ram [1942] 12 Comp. Cas. 21 (All), it was observed that it is a first and elementary principle of company law that, when powers are vested in a Board of directors by the Articles of association of a company, they cannot be interfered with by the shareholders as such. If the shareholders are dissatisfied with what the directors do, their remedy is to remove them in the manner provided by the Articles or the Act. But so long as a Board of directors exists and particular powers are vested in it by the Articles, the Board is entitled to exercise those powers without interference by the shareholders and it is irrelevant whether the shareholders approve of what the directors have done or not. Further, majority shareholders cannot impugn the decision of the Board to institute judicial proceedings [Herbertsons Ltd. v. Kishore Rajaram Chabbaria [1999] 97 Comp. Cas. 429 (CLB-New Delhi)].

Exceptions - In the following cases, however, the general meeting of shareholders is competent to intervene and act in respect of a matter delegated to the Board of directors:

1. Directors acting mala fide - Where the directors act for their own personal interests in complete disregard to the interests of the company (Marshall's Valve Gear Co. v. Manning Wardle & Co. Ltd [1909] 1 Ch. 267), or where the personal interest of the directors clashes with their duties towards the company, or when they try to avoid taking steps for the redressal of the wrong done to the company, the majority shareholders may act to redress the wrong.
2. Directors themselves wrong doers - Where the directors who are the only persons to conduct litigation in the name of the company, are themselves the wrong doers and have acted mala fide, the shareholders can take steps to redress the wrong - Satya Charan Lalv. R.P. Bajoria [1950]

- 3. Incompetency of the Board - When the Board has become incompetent to act, e.g., where all the directors constituting the Board are interested in a dealing or where none of the directors was validly appointed, the majority of shareholders may exercise powers in a general meeting of the company. - B.N. Vishwanathan v. Tiffins B.A. and P Ltd. AIR 1953 Mad. 510.
- 4. Deadlock in management - When there is a deadlock in the management so that directors cannot exercise some of their powers, the majority shareholders may exercise the powers in a general meeting of the company. In Barron v. Potter [1914] 1 Ch. 895, the Articles of a company gave the Board of directors power to appoint additional directors. But owing to differences between the directors, no meeting could be held for the purpose. The Articles also did not confer any power on the shareholders to increase the number of directors. Held, the company retained the power to appoint additional directors in a general meeting.

Powers of the Individual Directors - Section 291 provides for general powers of the Board of directors. In other words, it is the collective wisdom of the directors which has been conferred the privilege of managing the affairs of the company. However, unless the Act or the articles otherwise provide, the decisions of the Board are required to be the majority decisions only. Individual directors do not have any general powers. They shall have only such powers as are vested in them by the Memorandum or Articles or otherwise by the Board of directors. Thus, unless a power to institute suit is specifically conferred on a particular director, he has no authority to institute a suit on behalf of the company - Nibro Ltd. v. National Insurance Co. Ltd. [1991] 70 Comp. Cas. 388 (Delhi).

The mode or manner of exercise of Board's powers - Section 292(1) of the Companies Act, 1956 provides that the Board of directors of a company shall exercise the following powers on behalf of the company and it shall do so only by means of resolution passed at meetings of the Board:

- (a) The power to make calls on shareholders in respect of money unpaid on their shares;
- (aa) The power to buy-back its shares under section 77A;
- (b) The power to issue debentures;
- (c) The power to borrow moneys otherwise than on debentures. However, a banking company can borrow from other banking companies or from the Reserve Bank of India, the State Bank of India or any other bank established by or under any Act [Explanation 1 to section 292(1)].
- (d) The power to invest funds of the company. This power shall however be subject to the provisions of sections 293 and 372A.
- (e) The power to make loans. Again this power is subject to the provisions contained in sections 295 and 372A.

The Board may, however, by a resolution passed at a meeting delegate to any committee of directors, managing director, the manager or any other principal officer of the company or in the case of a branch office of the company, a principal officer of its branch, the powers specified in clauses (c), (d) and (e) above on such conditions as the Board may prescribe [first proviso to section 292(1)].

Board's power to delegate functions under (d) and (e) is restricted to making loans and investments only to/in non-corporate entities and wholly owned subsidiaries as inter-corporate loans, investments etc. are governed by the specific provisions of section 372A of the Act.

Further, sub-section (5) of section 292 provides that the company in general meeting may impose any restrictions and conditions on the exercise by the Board of any of the powers specified above.

Section 25 - companies exempted: In the case of a company to which a licence has been granted under section 25, matters referred to in clauses (c), (d) and (e) of subsection (1) may be decided by the Board by circulation instead of at a meeting [Notification No. SO 2767, dated 5-8-1964].

Besides the powers specified in section 292 there are certain other powers also which can be exercised only at the meeting of the Board:

1. The power of filling casual vacancies in the Board [Section 262].
2. Sanctioning of a contract in which a director is interested [Section 297].
3. The power to recommend the rate of dividend to be declared by the company at the Annual General Meeting, subject to the approval by the shareholders.
4. The power to make political contributions [Section 293.A].

In the following cases, not only that the powers be exercised at the Board's meeting but also that every director present and entitled to vote must consent thereto:

1. The power to appoint a person as managing director or manager who is holding either office in another company [sections 316 and 386].
2. The power to give loan to, or invest in any shares of, any other body corporate [section 372A].

Power of the directors to institute a suit on behalf of the company - In Furruccio Sias v. Jai Manga Ram Mukhi [1998] 93 Comp. Cas. 750 (Delhi), the Court observed that it is a necessary requirement that there be proper authority by resolution of the Board of directors, or there has to be a power of attorney authorising institution of the suit on behalf of the corporation, or there has to be power conferred by the articles of association of a corporation, in a particular officer, to institute suits on behalf of the corporation.

Where authority conferred by Articles of Association was on the managing director and the joint managing director to institute suits and plaintiff was a wholetime director, in terms of Power of Attorney which has been granted to him by the company, the suit filed by the plaintiff as representing the company was not maintainable. Power of Attorney could not provide otherwise to the provision contained in the Articles.

Powers of the Board to institute legal proceedings - In Herbertsons Ltd. v. Kishore Rajaram Chhabria [1999] 97 Comp. Cas. 429 (CLB - New Delhi), it was held that initiating legal proceedings is within the independent powers of the Board. Further, not only the Act but all other statutes dealing with incorporated companies, whether criminal or civil, always recognise the Board of directors as one responsible for conducting the affairs of a company. Therefore, as a general proposition, majority shareholders cannot impugn the decision of the Board to institute judicial proceedings.

Restrictions on powers of directors: Section 293 of the Companies Act, 1956 provides that the Board of directors of a public company or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company cannot exercise the following powers without the consent of the shareholders in general meeting:

1. Sell, lease or otherwise dispose of the whole, substantially the whole, of the undertaking of the company, or where the company owns more than one undertaking, of the whole or substantially the whole, of any such undertaking.

Company Law Board (now Tribunal) in Aasia Properties Development Ltd. v. Juhu Beach Resorts Ltd. [2007] 74 SCL 153 (CLB - New Delhi) held that the provisions of section 293 are attracted only in cases of sale, lease or otherwise disposal of an undertaking. Thus, in a hotel industry where it is common to enter into a management contract with reputed international hotel chains, which use its expertise in manning and managing hotel for an agreed consideration as management fees, no sale or lease can be said to be involved so as to attract the provisions of section 293(1)(a).

Sale of shares with intent to transfer controlling interest cannot be equated to sale of any part of undertaking so as to attract section 293(1)(a). The sale of shares, whatever be their number, even if it amounts to a transfer of the controlling interest of a company, cannot be equated to the sale of any part of the 'undertaking' so as to come within the mischief of section 293(1)(a) - Brooke Bond India Ltd. v. U.B. Ltd. [1994] 79 Comp. Cas. 346 (Bom.) / CDS Financial Services (Mauritius) Limited v.

BPL Communications Limited [2004] 121 Comp. Cas. 374 (Bom.)

However, this restriction does not apply to the case of a company whose ordinary business is to sell or lease property [Sec. 293(2)(b)].

Again, the title of the buyer or lessee who buys or takes a lease of any undertaking in good faith and after exercising due care and caution shall not be affected [section 293(2)(a)].

2. Remit or give time for the repayment of any debt due by a director except in the case of renewal or of continuance of an advance made by a banking company to its directors in the ordinary "course of business.
3. Invest, otherwise than in trust securities, the amount of compensation received by the company in respect of compulsory acquisition of any property or fixed assets of the company.
4. Borrow monies exceeding the aggregate of the paid-up capital of the company and its free reserves. 'Borrowing' does not include temporary loans* obtained from the company's bankers in the ordinary course of business.

The resolution passed by the company in general meeting must specify the total amount upto which moneys may be borrowed by the Board of Directors.

A loan was taken by company under an agreement executed by general manager. Company pleaded that agreement was not bound on company as general manager was not authorised to borrow by a resolution passed at a meeting of the Board. The Court held that since the necessary books of minutes and resolutions were in company's possession and were not open to inspection by strangers, the burden of proving that the necessary resolution had not been passed was on the company. In case the company failed to produce those books, it would lead to inference that there was a resolution passed by the company authorising its general manager to borrow money and thus the company shall be held bound - Hoshiarpur Azad Transport Co. Ltd. v. Sutlej Land Finance (P.) Ltd. [2001] 29 SCL 363 (P&H).

It may be noted that the Companies Act does not expressly empower companies to borrow money. Therefore, most of the companies expressly provide for such borrowing powers in the Memorandum. In such cases, where Memorandum authorises the company to borrow, the Articles provide as to how and by whom these powers shall be exercised. It may also fix up the maximum amount which can be borrowed by the company. It may, however, be noted that a trading company has an inherent implied power to borrow even if the objects clause in the memorandum of association is silent on borrowal. But, in many instances it may be difficult to specify a company as clearly a trading company. As such, as a safety measure, it is usual for the companies to take the power to borrow through the memorandum of association.

5. Contribute in any year, to charitable and other funds not directly relating to the business of the company or the welfare of its employees any amount exceeding ₹50,000 or five per cent of its average net profits of the last three financial years, whichever is higher.

The resolution passed by the company in general meeting must specify the total amount which may be contributed to charitable and other funds in any financial year.

However, contributions to National Defence Fund, the Prime Minister's National Relief Fund or any other fund approved by the Central Government for the purpose are exempted from the above provisions. In respect of these funds, any amount may be contributed without obtaining the sanction of the company in general meeting [vide section 293B of the Act]. The amount contributed in these funds must be disclosed in the profit and loss account of the company for the year in which the contribution was made.

Private companies exempted: The restrictions on the powers of the Board of directors imposed by section 293 do not apply to a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company.

Managerial Remuneration

Meaning of managerial remuneration - Managerial remuneration may take the form of monthly payments, say, salary, or a specified percentage of net profits or a commission and/or by way of a fee for each meeting of the Board (called sitting fee). Besides, as per Explanation to section 198(4), the expression 'remuneration' shall also include:

- (a) any expenditure incurred by the company in providing any rent-free accommodation, or any other benefit or amenity in respect of accommodation free of charge, to any of its directors or manager;
- (b) any expenditure incurred by the company in providing any other benefit or amenity free of charge or at a concessional rate to any of the persons aforesaid;
- (c) any expenditure incurred by the company in respect of any obligation or service, which, but for such expenditure by the company, would have been incurred by any of the persons aforesaid; and
- (d) any expenditure incurred by the company to effect any insurance on the life of, or to provide any pension, annuity or gratuity for any of the persons aforesaid or his spouse or child.

Manner of payment of managerial remuneration - Sub-section (3) and sub-section (4) of section 309 lay down the manner by which the remuneration may be paid to the managerial personnel. According to sub-section (3), a director who is either in the whole time employment of the company or a managing director may be paid remuneration either by way of a monthly payment or at a specified percentage of the net profits of the company or partly by one way and partly by other.

Sub-section (4) provides that a director who is neither in the whole time employment of the company nor a managing director may be paid remuneration either:

- (a) by way of a monthly, quarterly or annual payment with the approval of the Central Government; or
- (b) by way of commission, if the company by special resolution authorises such payment.

However, special resolution passed, as aforesaid, shall not remain in force for more than 5 years but may be renewed from time to time by passing special resolution for further period of not more than 5 years at a time [sec. 309(7)].

No renewal can be effected earlier than one year from the date on which it is to come into force [Proviso to sec. 309(7)].

- (c) A director may receive remuneration by way of a fee for each meeting of the Board, or a committee thereof attended by him [section 309(2)]. This is known as sitting fee. Sitting fee is not taken into account for computing the overall managerial remuneration under section 198. Prior to commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1960, it was possible even to make the payment of sitting fee on a monthly basis. However, this has since been discontinued.

It has been clarified by the Government of India by Press Release 2005/06/142 dated 2-8-2005 that the appointment of foreign national as a director of an Indian company does not need approval of the RBI under FEMA, 1999. Further, non-whole time directors who are not resident in India shall be paid the sitting fee, travel expenses, commission and remuneration in Indian rupees.

Overall limits to managerial remuneration - Section 198 provides that the total managerial remuneration payable by a public company or a private company which is subsidiary of a public company to its director or manager in respect of any financial year must not exceed eleven per cent of the net profits of that financial year computed in the manner laid down in sections 349 and 350 of the Companies Act except that remuneration to director will not be deducted from gross profits of the company. In computing the aforesaid ceiling of eleven per cent, section 198(4) says that the fees payable to directors for attending Board meetings shall not be included.

Section 309, another section dealing with managerial remuneration, provides that subject to the general provisions of section 198, the remuneration be determined by the Articles, or by a resolution or, if the articles so require, by a special resolution, passed by the company in general meeting. The remuneration so payable shall be inclusive of the remuneration payable for services rendered by a director in any other capacity except where:

- (a) the services are of a professional nature, and
- (b) in the opinion of the Central Government, the director possesses the requisite qualifications for the practice of the profession.

Ceiling on managerial remuneration - According to sub-section (4) of section 309, a director who is neither in the whole time employment of the company nor a managing director may be paid remuneration subject to the following:

- (i) one per cent of the net profits of the company, if the company has a managing or a whole time director or a manager;
- (ii) three per cent of the net profits of the company in any other case.

In case a company has more than one such director, then the remuneration payable to all shall not exceed the aforesaid limits.

However, the company in general meeting may, with the approval of the Central Government, authorise the payment of such remuneration at a rate exceeding one per cent or, as the case may be, three per cent of its net profits.

As already noted, a director who is neither a managing director nor a whole time director may be paid remuneration either:

- (a) by way of a monthly, quarterly or annual payment, if approval of the Central Government is obtained; or
- (b) by way of commission, if the company by special resolution authorises such payment. When payment is made by way of commission not exceeding 1% or 3% mentioned above, no approval of Central Government need be taken -Circular No. 4/2011 [F. No. 14/6/2011-CL VII] dated 4-3-2011 of the M.C.A.

A whole time director or a managing director may be paid remuneration either by way of a monthly payment or at a specified percentage of the net profits of the company or partly by one way and partly by the other [section 309(3)]. However, except with the approval of the Central Government such remuneration shall not exceed five per cent of the net profits for one such director, and if there is more than one such director, ten per cent for all of them taken together. The Expert Advisory Committee of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India has expressed the opinion that in the case of a company which has more than one such director, the limit applicable is a composite ceiling of ten per cent for all such directors taken together, without a further limit of five per cent in respect of each director individually. The net profits of the company for the aforesaid purpose shall be computed in the manner laid down in sections 349 and 350, except that the remuneration of the directors shall not be deducted from the gross profits [section 198(1)].

Limits of Managerial Remuneration —at a glance

Total Managerial Remuneration Payable	11% of the net profits of the company calculated in accordance with the provisions of sections 349 and 350.
More than One Managing Director or Whole Time Director	Not exceeding 10% of the net profits of the company.

Only One Managing Director or Whole Time Director	Not exceeding 5% of the net profits of the company.
One or more Director(s), but no Managing Director or Whole Time Director	Not exceeding 3% of the net profits of the company.
One or more Director(s) and also a Managing Director or Whole Time Director	Not exceeding 1% of the net profits of the company.

Private companies- The provisions relating to managerial remuneration, as aforesaid shall not apply to a private company unless it is a subsidiary of a public company [section 198(1) and section 309(9)]. A private company has to take care of the matters of remuneration through provisions in its articles. In the absence of any such authority in the articles, the directors of a private company are not entitled to draw any remuneration - Radhey Shyam v. Official Liquidator [1969] 39 Comp. Cas. 340 (Raj.).

Managerial Remuneration vis-a-vis Schedule XIII - The Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988 introduced Schedule XIII u/ss. 269 & 310 to replace the administrative guidelines in respect of managerial remuneration issued by the Central Government. Accordingly, it is now open to a public company or a private company which is subsidiary of a public company, to appoint its managerial personnel, i.e., managing or whole time director and/or manager and fix their remuneration so long as the same is in accordance with the conditions laid down in Schedule XIII without seeking the prior approval of the Central Government.

Remuneration payable by companies having profits - Subject to the provisions of sections 198, 309 and 387, a company having profits in a financial year may pay any remuneration, by way of salary, dearness allowance, perquisites, commission and other allowances, which shall not exceed 5 per cent of its net profits for one such managerial person, and if there is more than one such managerial person, 10 per cent for all of them together.

A person who is a managerial person in more than one company shall be able to draw remuneration from one or more of those companies provided that the total remuneration drawn from the companies does not exceed the higher maximum limit admissible from any one of the companies of which he is a managerial person.

Remuneration payable by companies having no profits or inadequate profits - Where in any financial year during the currency of tenure of the managerial person, a company has no profits or its profits are inadequate, it may pay remuneration to a managerial person, by way of salary, dearness allowance, perquisites and any other allowance, not exceeding ceiling limit of ₹24,00,000 per annum or ₹2,00,000 per month calculated on the following scale:

Sl. No.	Where the effective capital of a company is -	Monthly remuneration payable shall not exceed
(i)	less than ₹1 crore	₹75,000
(ii)	₹1 crore or more but less than ₹5 crores	₹1,00,000
(iii)	₹5 crores or more but less than ₹25 crores	₹1,25,000
(iv)	₹25 crores or more but less than ₹50 crores	₹1,50,000
(v)	₹50 crores or more but less than ₹100 crores	₹1,75,000
(vi)	₹100 crores or more	₹2,00,000

However, to pay the remuneration to a managerial person as per the aforesaid ceiling limits, it has been made mandatory to seek approval by way of a resolution passed by the Remuneration Committee. Besides, the company should not have made any default in repayment of any of its debts (including public deposits) or debentures or interest payable thereon for a continuous period of thirty days in the preceding financial year before the date of appointment of such managerial person.

Vide its Notification dated 16-1-2002, the Central Government has allowed companies to pay remuneration to their managerial personnel up to double the amount of the aforesaid ceiling by observing the required procedure as stated above and passing a special resolution at the general meeting, the notice of which must be accompanied by a statement containing the specified particulars. The remuneration fixed by way of special resolution, as aforesaid shall be valid for a period not exceeding three years.

Thus, companies with an effective capital of ₹100 crores or more can now pay, upto ₹4,00,000 per month or ₹48,00,000 per annum to each of their managerial person. Likewise, companies falling under other slabs of effective capital can pay up to double the amount of the respective ceilings, by complying with the aforesaid requirements and the procedure.

Companies having negative effective capital can pay remuneration up to the revised ceiling [even more] by obtaining Central Government's prior approval.

Besides the aforesaid remuneration, a managerial personnel of a company having no profits or having inadequate profits shall also be eligible to the following perquisites:

- (a) Contribution to provident fund, superannuation fund or annuity fund to the extent these either singly or put together are not taxable under the Income-tax Act, 1961.
- (b) Gratuity payable at a rate not exceeding half a month salary for each completed year of service.
- (c) Encashment of leave at the end of the tenure.

Notification No. G.S.R. 70(E) dated 8-2-2011 specifies that prior approval of the Central Government will be required only for listed companies or their subsidiaries.

Companies in Special Economic Zones (SEZs) - Companies in SEZs have been allowed to pay remuneration to their managerial personnel upto ₹2,40,00,000 (Two Crore Forty Lakhs) per annum or ₹20,00,000 (20 lakhs) per month in respect of companies in Special Economic Zones as notified by Department of Commerce from time to time:

Provided that these companies have not raised any money by public issue of shares or debentures in India:

Provided further that such companies have not made any default in India in repayment of any of its debts (including public deposits) or debentures or interest payable thereon for a continuous period of thirty days in any financial year.

In addition to the aforesaid perquisites, an expatriate managerial person (including a non-resident Indian) shall also be eligible to the following perquisites:

- (i) Children educational allowance: In case of children studying in or outside India, an allowance limited to a maximum of ₹5,000 per month per child or actual expenses incurred, whichever is less. Such allowance is admissible up to a maximum of two children.
- (ii) Holiday passage for children studying outside India/family staying abroad: Return holiday passage once in a year by economy class or once in two years by first class to children and to the members of the family from the place of their study or stay abroad to India if they are not residing in India with the managerial person.
- (iii) Leave travel concession : Return passage for self and family in accordance with the rules specified by the company where it is proposed that the leave be ' spent in home country instead of anywhere in India.

Part III of Schedule XIII provides that the remuneration payable to a managerial personnel, as aforesaid, shall be subject to approval by a resolution of the shareholders in general meeting.

Government companies exempted - The restrictions with regard to managerial remuneration contemplated under sections 198 and 309 (including Schedule XIII) do not apply to Government companies [GSR 235, dated 31-1-1978].

Meaning of effective capital - The expression "effective capital", for the purposes of Schedule XIII, means the aggregate of the paid up share capital (excluding share application money or advances against share); amount, if any, for the time being standing to the credit of securities premium account; reserves and surplus (excluding revaluation reserve); long term loans and deposits repayable after one year (excluding working capital loans, overdraft, interest due on loans unless funded, bank guarantee, etc., and other short term arrangements) as reduced by the aggregate of any investments (except in the case of investments by an investment company whose principal business is acquisition of shares, stock, debentures or other securities); accumulated losses and preliminary expenses not written off.

Time when effective capital shall be calculated - Explanation II to Part II of Schedule XIII provides that where the appointment of the managerial person is made in the year in which company has been incorporated, the effective capital shall be calculated as on the date of such appointment. In any other case, the effective capital shall be calculated as on the last date of the financial year preceding the financial year in which the appointment of the managerial person is made.

Reimbursement of Medical Expenses - The Department of Company Affairs vide its Circular No. 2/10/99/6L-VH dated 28-10-1999 has clarified that in case of reimbursement of medical expenses incurred beyond the ceiling mentioned in the total managerial package, the approval shall be granted only in exceptional and deserving cases. Therefore, all proposals for reimbursement on specialised medical treatment abroad must be accompanied by certificate issued and signed by Director General of Health Services of the concerned State Government/Union Territory. The requirement may, however, be waived on the satisfaction of the Central Government in genuine and deserving cases of medical emergency as a special case.

Such proposals may be considered on merits on the basis of the circumstances of the case, financial position of the company, period of association of the concerned managerial personnel with the company, amount of total managerial remuneration and medical reimbursement paid to him in the past and other relevant factors.

Payment of remuneration higher than the ceilings under Schedule XIII - Where a company intends to pay to its managerial person remuneration higher than the X, ceilings of Schedule XIII, it has to seek the approval of the Department of Company Affairs. The Department of Company Affairs, vide its Circular No. 12/7/2000-CL-VII, dated 27-12-2000, has detailed out the steps to be followed and information to be provided by companies which seek the permission of the Department to pay higher remuneration than that permitted under the Companies Act.

The application for the above purpose should be in e-Form 25A (for appointment/re-appointment and remuneration payable to managing/whole-time director(s) or manager(s) and (for increase in the remuneration of the managing/whole-time director or manager). The application shall be accompanied by the prescribed fee.

Further, the application should be accompanied by a detailed note on the following aspects justifying the proposed increase in remuneration:

- (a) reasons for inadequacy of profits;
- (b) steps taken to improve the performance of the company;
- (c) brief financial performance of the company with regard to effective capital, net worth, turnover, profit/loss, dividend declared;
- (d) nature of industry;
- (e) exports and foreign exchange earned;

- (f) general performance of the industry in the relevant sector;
- (g) foreign investment and foreign collaboration;
- (k) future expansion/diversification/upgradation plans;
- (i) details of the personnel whose remuneration is sought to be increased;
- (j) requirement of his personal skill for the challenges ahead;
- (k) past remuneration of the concerned person;
- (l) creativeness and innovation of the concerned person;
- (m) recognition/awards obtained by the concerned person or the company.

Again, through its circular dated 10-11-2000 the Department of Company Affairs has notified that if for any justifiable reasons, it is proposed to pay remuneration in excess of Schedule XIII of the Companies Act, it should be timely resolved in the Board meeting. The Board resolution should clearly justify the increase giving sustainable adequate reasons for payment of remuneration in excess of the amount indicated in the Schedule.

The Circular has further advised companies to make application for Government approval well in time and no payment of remuneration in excess of the limit under Schedule XIII should be made till the Government order is received.

In this connection, the Department has directed auditors of the companies, who audit their accounts, to ensure that remuneration to the managerial personnel is not paid in excess of the limit under Schedule XIII without necessary approvals. The company secretary has been asked to play a constructive role in ensuring that the matters relating to managerial remuneration are dealt with in the company within the stipulated time frame.

1.7.5.Compensation for loss of office - Clause (a) of sub-section (7) of section 284 provides that removal of a director would not deprive the person of any compensation or damage for the termination of appointment as a director or for an appointment terminating with that as director. However, section 318 does not provide for payment of compensation for loss of office or any other payment for loss of office or place of profit except the loss of office held by the director in the capacity of managing director, whole time director or manager. Further, the managing or whole time director or manager would not be entitled to any compensation:

- (a) where the director resigns his office in view of the reconstruction of the company, or of its amalgamation with any other body corporate or bodies corporate, and is appointed as the managing director, manager or other officer of the reconstructed company or of the body corporate resulting from the amalgamation;
- (b) where the director resigns his office otherwise than on the reconstruction of the company or its amalgamation as aforesaid;
- (c) where the office of the director is vacated by virtue of section 203, or any of the clauses (a) to (l) of sub-section (1) of section 283;
- (d) where the company is being wound up, whether by or subject to the supervision of the Court or voluntarily, provided the winding up was due to the negligence or default of the director;
- (e) if it can be shown that he had been guilty of fraud or breach of trust in relation to, or gross negligence in or, gross mismanagement, in the conduct of the affairs of the company or any subsidiary or holding company thereof;
- (f) also, no compensation shall be payable if it can be shown that while he was a director he had instigated or taken part directly or indirectly in bringing about the termination of his office;
- (g) further, in order to be entitled to compensation, it must be shown that winding up of the company did not commence within twelve months of his removal.

Amount of compensation - Sub-section (4) of section 318 puts a ceiling on the amount of compensation payable to a director eligible for compensation for loss of office. The sub-section provides that any payment made to a managing or other director in pursuance of sub-section (1) shall not exceed the remuneration which he would have earned if he had been in office for the unexpired residue of his term or for three years, whichever is shorter.

The amount payable shall be calculated on the basis of the average remuneration actually earned by him during the period of three years immediately preceding the date on which he ceased to hold the office. But, where he held the office for a lesser period than three years, the amount shall be calculated with reference to the period he actually worked.

Payment to director, for loss of office in connection with transfer of undertaking or property [Section 319] - In case of transfer of the whole or any part of any undertaking or property of the company, section 319(1) prohibits every director of a company to receive any payment by way of compensation for loss of office or as consideration for retirement from office. The compensation/consideration cannot be received—

- (a) from such company, or
- (b) from the transferee of such undertaking or property or from any other person.

However, the aforesaid payment may be received if—

- (a) the same had been disclosed to the members of the company; and
- (b) the proposal had been approved by the company in general meeting.

Any amount received by a director in contravention of the aforesaid provisions shall be deemed to have been received by him in trust for the company.

Payment to director for loss of office in connection with transfer of shares [Section 320] - The acquisition of a company may take place either through purchase of an undertaking (as contemplated under section 319) or through purchase of shares. Section 320 prohibits receipt, by any director, of any compensation for loss of office or consideration for retirement from office in connection with the transfer to any person of all or any shares in a company. The compensation/consideration cannot be received either from the company or the transferees of shares or from any other person without disclosure of the same to the shareholders.

The aforesaid transfer of shares may result from—

- (i) an offer made to the general body of shareholders;
- (ii) an offer made by or on behalf of some other body corporate with a view to the company becoming a subsidiary of such body corporate or a subsidiary of its holding company;
- (iii) an offer made by or on behalf of an individual with a view to his obtaining the right to exercise, or control the exercise of, not less than one-third of the total voting power at any general meeting of the company; or
- (iv) any other offer which is conditional on acceptance to a given extent. A director who fails to disclose the particulars, with respect to the aforesaid payment, to the shareholders shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ₹2,500. Besides, any sum received by such director shall be deemed to have been received by him in trust for any persons who have sold their shares as a result of the offer made. The expenses incurred by him in distributing that sum amongst those persons shall be borne by him and not retained out of that sum.

However, if at a meeting called for the purpose of approving any payment, as aforesaid, a quorum is not present and, after the meeting has been adjourned to a later date, a quorum is again not present, the payment shall, for the purposes of that sub-section, be deemed to have been approved.

1.7.6. Waiver of Recovery of Remuneration

Section 309(5A) of the Companies Act, 1956 specifically states that in case a Director draws or receives, directly or indirectly, by way of remuneration any such sums in excess of the limits prescribed under this Section or without the prior approval of the Central Government, where it is so required, the Director concerned shall refund such sums to the Company and until such sum is refunded, hold such sums in trust for the Company. Sub-section 5B categorically states that the Company shall not waive the recovery of any sum due from a Director under Section 309(5A) unless permitted by the Central Government.

Any payment by way of remuneration in excess of the limits prescribed by the Section or without the approval of the Central Government has to be held by the recipient in trust for the Company and the Director concerned is liable to refund the same to the Company. The recovery of such sums cannot be waived unless permitted by the Central Government.

1.7.7. Loans to Directors, Disclosure of interest, Holding of Office or Place of Profit by a Director/ Relative.

Loans to Directors

Section 295 provides that, without obtaining prior approval of the Central Government, a company (hereinafter referred as lending company' for the purposes of section 295) cannot give, directly or indirectly, any loan to or give any guarantee or provide any security for any loan taken or given by:

- (a) any director of the lending company or of a company which is its holding company or any partner or relative of such director;
- (b) any firm in which any such director or relative is a partner;
- (c) any private company of which any such director is a director or member;
- (d) any body corporate at a general meeting of which not less than twenty-five per cent of the total voting power may be exercised or controlled by any such director, or by two or more such directors together; or
- (e) any body corporate, the Board of directors, managing director or manager whereof is accustomed to act in accordance with the directions or instructions of the Board, or of any director or directors of the lending company.

Exemptions - Above restrictions, however, do not apply to any loan made, guarantee given or security provided by:

- (i) a private company (unless it is a subsidiary of a public company);
- (ii) a banking company;
- (iii) a holding company in respect of any loan given by it to its subsidiary or any guarantee given or security provided by a holding company in respect of any loan given to its subsidiary;
- (iv) leasing or hire purchase transaction, as the same is not a loan; and
- (v) loans and advances to a trust in which one or more directors are trustees.

There is also no prohibition against a banking company lending money to concerns of which a director of the bank is also a director - Re Bank of Commerce Ltd, [1947] C.W.N. 662.

Department of Company Affairs, has, through a notification, limited company loans, etc. to its directors and their relatives to 25 times the gross salary of the director in the last six months and pegged the interest rate to more than 4 per cent of RBI's Bank rate.

Please note that the restrictions of section 295 cover not only transactions directly relating to loans, etc., but they equally apply to indirect lendings, etc. The emphasis underlying the expression "directly or indirectly" used under section 295(1) has been reinforced by the provisions of section 296 which declares that even a book debt would be covered by the restrictions contained in section 295 if it can be shown that, from its very inception, the book debt was in the nature of a loan or advance.

Can a deposit be treated as a loan - Whether a deposit shall be treated as a loan or not will depend upon the nature of the transaction and the facts gathered from the terms and conditions attached to the transaction. The essential requirement of a loan is the advance of money upon the understanding that it shall be returned, and it may or may not carry interest - Dr. Freddie Ardesir Mehta v. Union of India [1991] 70 Comp. Cas. 210 (Bom.).

Penalty- Every person, including the director or any person to whom the loan is made, who is a party to any contravention of section 295 shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ₹50,000 or with simple imprisonment which may extend to 6 months [section 295(4)]. However, where any such loan, or any loan in connection with which any such guarantee or security has been given or provided by the lending company, has been repaid in full, no punishment by way of imprisonment shall be imposed. Further, where the loan has been repaid in part, the maximum punishment which may be imposed under section 295(4) by way of imprisonment shall be proportionately reduced [Proviso to section 295(4)]. Again, all persons who are knowingly parties to any contravention of section 295 shall be jointly and severally liable to make good the amount which the company paid on account of the loan, guarantee or security [section 295(5)].

Disclosure of Interest of a Director

To disclose interest [Sections 299-300]- In respect of contracts with a director, section 299 casts an obligation on a director to disclose the nature of his concern or interest (direct or indirect), if any, at a meeting of the Board of directors. The said section provides that in case of a proposed contract or arrangement, the required disclosure shall be made at the meeting of the Board at which the question of entering into the contract or arrangement is first taken into consideration. In the case of any other contract or arrangement, the disclosure shall be made at the first meeting of the Board held after the director becomes interested in the contract or arrangement.

For the aforesaid purpose, a general notice given to the board by a director, to the effect that he is a director or a member of a specified body corporate or is a member of a specified firm and is to be regarded as concerned or interested in any contract or arrangement which may, after the date of the notice, be entered into with that body corporate or firm, shall be deemed to be a sufficient disclosure of concern or interest in relation to any contract or arrangement so made [Sec. 299(3)(a)].

Any such general notice shall, however, expire at the end of the financial year in which it is given, but may be renewed for further period of one financial year at a time, by a fresh notice given in the last month of the financial year in which it would otherwise expire [Sec. 299(3)(b)].

However, if a disclosure at the beginning of each financial year has been made, that is deemed to be sufficient disclosure in terms of section 299 [ICI v. Parasmurthy Synthetics Ltd. [1998] 17 SCL 51 (Delhi)].

No such general notice, and no renewal thereof, shall be of effect unless either it is given at a meeting of the Board, or the director concerned takes reasonable steps to secure that it is brought up and read at the first meeting of the Board after it is given.

To disclose receipt from transfer of property [Section 319] - Any money received by the directors from the transferee in connection with the transfer of the company's property or undertaking must be disclosed to the members of the company and approved by the company in general meeting. Otherwise, the amount shall be held by the directors in trust for the company. This money may be in the nature of compensation for loss of office but in essence may be on account of transfer of control of the company. But, if it is bona fide payment of damages of the breach of contract, then it is protected by section 321(3). Even no director other than the managing director or whole time director can receive any such payment from the company itself.

To disclose receipt of compensation from transferee of shares [Section 320] -If the loss of office results from the transfer (under certain conditions) of all or any of the shares of the company, its directors would not receive any compensation from the transferee unless the same has been approved by the company in general meeting before the transfer takes place. If the approval is not sought or the proposal is not approved, any money received by the directors shall be held in trust for the shareholders who have sold their shares.

Section 320 also provides that in pursuance of any agreement relating to any of the above transfers, if the director receives any payment from the transferee within one year before or within two years after the transfer, it shall be accounted for to the company unless the director proves that it is not by way of compensation for loss of office.

Section 321 further provides that if the price paid to a retiring director for his shares in the company is in excess of the price paid to other shareholders or any other valuable consideration has been given to him, it shall also be regarded as compensation and should be disclosed to the shareholders. No director can receive any such payment from the company itself.

Effect of Failure to Disclose Interest

1. Fine-As per sub-section (4) to section 299, every director who fails to comply with the aforesaid requirements as to disclosure of concern or interest shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ₹50,000.
2. Exception - Nothing in section 299 will apply to a contract or arrangement entered into or to be entered into between two companies (may be more than two also) where any of the directors of one company or two or more companies together holds or hold not more than 2% of the paid-up capital of the other company.
3. Interested Director not to participate or vote in Board's proceedings - Sec. 300(1) provides that no director of a company shall, as a director, take part in the discussion of, or vote on, any contract or arrangement entered into, or to be entered into, by or on behalf of the company, if he is any way, whether directly or indirectly, concerned or interested in the contract or arrangement.

Besides, his presence shall not count for the purpose of forming a quorum at the time of any such discussion or vote. In case he does vote, his vote shall be void.

The aforesaid bar on an interested director to participate or vote at a meeting shall not apply to:

- (a) a private company which is neither a subsidiary nor a holding company of a public company;
- (b) a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company, in respect of any contract or arrangement entered into or to be entered into, by the private company with the holding company thereof;
- (c) any contract of indemnity against any loss which the director, or any one or more of them, may suffer by reason of becoming or being sureties or a surety for the company; and
- (d) any contract or arrangement entered into or to be entered into with a public company, or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company in which the interest of the director aforesaid consists solely —
 - (i) in his being a director of such company and the holder of not more than shares of such number or value therein as is requisite to qualify him for appointment as a director thereof, he having been nominated as such director by the company referred to in sub-section (1), or
 - (ii) in his being a member holding not more than 2 per cent of its paid- up share capital;
- (e) a public company, or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company in respect of which a notification is issued under sub-section (3) to the extent specified in the notification. Sub-section (3) empowers the Central Government to fully or partially relieve the company from the prohibitions contained in sub-section (1) in public interest (i.e., desirability of promoting or establishing any trade, industry or business).

4. Cessation of office of Directorship - According to sec. 283(1)(i), an office of a director shall fall vacant in case he acts in contravention of sec. 299.

It may, however, be noted that the Companies Act does not debar a company from entering into a contract in which a director is interested. It only requires that such interest be disclosed.

Where the whole body of directors is aware of the facts, a formal disclosure is not necessary – Venkatachalapati v. Guntur Mills AIR 1929 Mad. 353.

Also see Ravi Raj Gupta v. Hans Raj Gupta & Co. (P.) Ltd, [C.S. (O.S.) No. 1944 of 2003, dated 17-2-2009 (Delhi)]. This case also has held that a shareholder simpliciter has no locus standi to question management decision.

Office or place of profit [Section 314]

Section 314 imposes certain restrictions on the holding of office or place of profit in a company by the directors and their associates. Following is the summary of restrictions so provided:

1. No director of a company, shall hold any office or place of profit (carrying any remuneration) under the company, or its subsidiary except with the consent of the company by a special resolution. It shall, however, be sufficient if the special resolution is passed at the first general meeting held after such appointment. [Proviso to sub-section(1)].

Sub-section (3) of section 314 provides that a director shall be deemed to hold an office or place of profit under the company if the director holding an office obtains from the company anything by way of remuneration over and above the remuneration to which he is entitled as such director. Such remuneration may be by way of salary, fees, commission, perquisites, the right to occupy free of rent any premises as a place of residence or otherwise

2. Except by passing a special resolution any of the following persons shall not hold any office or place of profit carrying a total monthly remuneration of such sum as may be prescribed [presently, Rupees ten thousand per month, with effect from 1-3-1994, Notification No. GSR 286(E), dated 3-3-1994]:
 - (i) Partner or relative of a director;
 - (ii) Firm in which a director or a relative of such director is a partner;
 - (iii) Private company of which a director of the company is a director or member; and
 - (iv) Director, or manager of a private company, in which a director of the company is a director or member.

Consent of the company accorded by way of special resolution is not required to hold the office of managing director or manager or banker or debenture trustee of the company or any of its subsidiaries for a director of the company or any of the persons mentioned in (2) above.

Special resolution may be passed at first general meeting held after the appointment. Where, however, the aforesaid appointment in point (i) & (ii) above is made without the knowledge of the concerned director, the consent of the company may be obtained either at the first general meeting after the appointment or within three months from the date of the appointment, whichever is later [Second proviso to subsection (1)(b)].

3. According to sub-section (1B):

- (i) No partner or relative of a director or manager;
- (ii) No firm in which such director or manager, or relative of either is a partner;

- (iii) No private company of which such a director or manager, or relative of either is a director or member; shall hold an office or place of profit in the company carrying a total monthly remuneration of not less than such sum as may be prescribed [presently, exceeding Rupees two lakh fifty thousand (₹2,50,000) per month, with effect from 2-5-2011, Notification No. GSR 357(E), dated 2-5-2011].

The Delhi High Court in Ravindra Kumar Sanghal v. Auto Lamps Ltd, [1984] 55 Comp. Cas. 742 had held that the expression 'monthly' remuneration excludes all payments what are not paid monthly, like bonus, leave encashment, etc.

The aforesaid appointment may, however, be made with the prior consent of the company by passing a special resolution and the approval of the Central Government.

Restriction on appointment of firm or body corporate to office or place of profit under a company (Section 204) - No company can appoint or employ any firm or body corporate to or in any office or place of profit under the company for a term exceeding five years at a time.

However, the aforesaid restriction does not apply to:

- (i) the initial appointment or employment (it may, with the approval of the Central Government be for a term upto 10 years);
- (ii) re-appointment upto 5 years, each time (provided that any such re-appointment, re-employment shall not be sanctioned earlier than 2 years from the date on which it is to come into force);
- (iii) appointment as a technician or a consultant.

Approval of the Central Government in case of Appointment of Relatives, etc. of Directors - No appointment for an office or place of profit in a company shall take effect unless approved by the Central Government on an application, in respect of—

- (a) Partner or relative of a Director or Manager; or
- (b) Firm in which such Director or Manager, or relative of either is a partner; or
- (c) Private company of which such Director or Manager or relative of either is a Director or Member, which carries a monthly remuneration exceeding ₹50,000 p.m. Source: Notification No. GSR 89(E), dated 5-2-2003, issued by Department of Company Affairs'.

Procedure of examination of applications - The application under rule 3 shall be examined with respect to the following, in addition to all other requirements under the Companies Act, 1956:

- (1) An undertaking from the appointee that he/she will be in the exclusive employment of the company and will not hold a place of profit in any other company.
- (2) The monetary value of all allowances and perquisites and of total remuneration package (monthly/annually) proposed to be paid to the appointee and details of the services that will be rendered by him to the company.
- (3) Shareholding pattern particularly the shareholding of the directors along with his/her/their relatives, the public holding, institutional holding (each institution separately).
- (4) The educational qualification/experience, pay scale, allowances and other benefits of similarly placed executives in case of the appointment of a relative, then, an undertaking from the Director/Company Secretary of the company that the similarly placed employees are getting the comparable salary shall also be enclosed along with the application.
- (5) List/particulars of the employees who are in receipt of remuneration of ₹50,000 or more per month.
- (6) The total number of relatives of all the Directors either appointed as Managing/whole time Director;

Manager or in any other position in the company; the total remuneration paid to each relative and the total remuneration paid to them altogether as a percentage of profits as calculated for the purpose of section 198 of the Companies Act, 1956.

- (7) The selection and appointment of a relative of a Director for holding office or place of profit in a private company shall be approved by adopting the same procedure applicable to non-relatives. However, in the case of public companies, the selection of a relative of Director for holding place of office or profit in the company shall have to be also approved by a Selection Committee.

Explanation: - For the purpose of sub-rule (7) of rule 4, the expression "Selection Committee" means a Committee, the majority of which shall consist of independent Directors and an expert in the respective field from outside the company.

Remuneration to mean monthly remuneration - While interpreting the scope of the term 'remuneration' for the aforesaid purpose, the emphasis should be on the 'monthly remuneration' and not on what a person gets for a whole year - R.K. Sangal v. Auto Lamps Ltd. [1984] 55 Comp. Cas. 742 (Delhi).

Section 314(2A) casts a duty on every person or entity proposed to be appointed to an office or place of profit covered by section 314, to declare in writing whether he or it is or is not connected with a director of the company in any of the ways mentioned in section 314(1).

Obligation to refund any remuneration received or the monetary amount of any perquisite or advantage enjoyed attaches to every person or entity appointed to a place or office of profit not complying with the procedure contained in section 314(1B) i.e. without prior consent of the company and the prior approval of the Central Government [section 314(2B)].

While a new appointment requires consent of the company by a special resolution and approval of the Central Government, in the case of an already existing appointment, the consent of the company by an ordinary resolution coupled with the consent of the Central Government will be sufficient.

But no special resolution is required for the removal of a director from an office of profit. In the case of a public company, or a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company, such a director may be removed by an ordinary resolution under section 284.

Where the articles of a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company provide that a director shall be deemed to vacate office if he violates section 314, the Board of directors may treat him as having vacated office under section 283(1) read with section 283(3).

Penalties for contravention [Section 314(2B)&(2C)]- If any director or his associate holds an office or place of profit in contravention of the aforesaid provisions, then:

- (i) he or it shall be deemed to have vacated such office or place of profit as such on and from the date next following the date of the general meeting;
- (ii) he or it shall be liable to refund to the company any remuneration received or the monetary equivalent of the perquisites or advantage enjoyed by him.

The company cannot waive the recovery of any sum refundable to it under section 314(2) unless permitted to do so by the Central Government.

Meaning of 'office or place of profit'[Section 314(3)] - Any office or place shall be deemed to be an office or place of profit under the company:

- (a) In case the office or place is held by a director, if the director holding it obtains from the company anything by way of remuneration over and above the remuneration to which he is entitled as such director, whether as salary, fees, commission, perquisites, the right to occupy free of rent any premises as a place of residence, or otherwise;
- (b) In case the office is held by an individual other than a director, or by any firm, private company or other body corporate holding it obtains from the company anything by way of remuneration whether as salary, fees, commission, perquisites, the right to occupy free of rent any premises as a place of residence or otherwise.

The Supreme Court of India in Satrucharla Chandrasekhar Raju v. Vyrichula Pradeep Kumar Dev - AIR 1992 SC 1959 has described the term 'office of profit' as a position to which certain duties are attached. It involves two elements: (i) that there should be such an office, and (ii) it should carry some remuneration.

The words 'office or place of profit' occurring in section 314(1)(b) include selling and buying agents receiving commission and/or salary – CIT v. Principal Officer C/o Arkay Wires (P.) Ltd. [2005] 58 SCL 97 (All).

Exemptions:

1. The prohibition under section 314(1B) is not applicable to the remuneration or compensation given to the concerned persons for providing services of a professional nature rendered to the company in their professional capacity such as a chartered accountant, advocate, engineer or doctor. However, if the professional person(s) renders services even though of a professional nature as a retainer, the remuneration/compensation so received would be hit by the restrictive provisions of section 314(1B).
2. The aforesaid restrictions do not apply where a relative of a director or a firm in which such relative is a partner holds any office or place of profit under the company or a subsidiary thereof having been appointed to such office or place before such director became a director of this company [vide Section 314(1A)].
3. The restrictions, as aforesaid, do not apply to a person who, being the holder of any office or place of profit in the company, is appointed by the Central Government, under section 408, as a director of the company [Sec. 314(4)].
4. Holding and Subsidiary Companies - The section only prohibits a director of a company holding an office or place of profit under the company or its subsidiary. It does not prohibit a director of a subsidiary company holding an office or place of profit in its holding company.

Where a director of a holding company acts also as a director of its subsidiary, any remuneration, even sitting fees, which he gets from the subsidiary, will have to be paid over to the holding company, unless a special resolution according consent as provided in sub-section (1) is passed.

5. Whether section 314 is attracted where relative is an independent director of the company and is a partner of the firm of chartered accountants who are being appointed/reappointed as statutory auditor of the company and such partner not signing the audit report nor participating in the audit function? - Apparently the case does not fall within disqualifications for an auditor mentioned in section 226 of the Act. The director in question does not himself hold an office/ place of profit under the company. The firm being considered for the office of statutory auditor is not partner/relative of the director concerned and the statutory auditor will not be receiving remuneration on a month to month basis. Accordingly, it seems that the provisions of section 314 would be inapplicable. This view is based on the decisions in A.R. Sudarsanam v. Madras Purasawalkam Hindu Janopakara Saswatha Nidhi Ltd. [1985] 57 Comp. Cas. 776 (Mad.) and Ravinder Kumar Sanghal v. Auto Lamps Ltd. [1984] 55 Comp. Cas. 742 (Delhi).

1.7.8. Interested Director

A director who is interested in a transaction of the company must disclose his interest to the Board. Section 297, in this regard provides that a director of the company or his relative, a firm in which such a director or relative is a partner, any other partner in such a firm, or a private company of which the director is a member or director, shall not enter into any contract with the company—

- (a) for the sale, purchase or supply of any goods, materials or services; or
- (b) for underwriting the subscription of any shares in, or debentures of the company.

However, section 297 permits the aforesaid contracts with the consent of the Board of directors by a resolution passed at a meeting of the Board. But, where the paid-up share capital of the company is rupees one crore or more, previous approval of the Central Government shall also be necessary.

Exceptions - In the following cases, the aforesaid approvals shall not be necessary:

1. The purchase or sale of goods and materials from the company, or to the company, for cash at prevailing market prices.
2. Any contract for sale, purchase or supply of any goods, materials and services in which either the company or the director, relative, firm, partner or private company, as the case may be, regularly trades or does business. However, the value of the goods/services should not exceed ₹5,000 in the aggregate in any year.
3. Any transaction with or by a banking or insurance company in the ordinary course of its business.
4. In circumstances of urgent necessity. However, the consent of the Board must be obtained at a meeting within three months of the date on which the contract was entered into.

It may be observed that underwriting contract does not come within the exceptions provided. Where a case of urgent necessity arises in a company having paid-up share capital of ₹1 crore or more, even though the Board's consent may be taken within next three months, the prior consent of the Central Government (i.e., Regional Director in this case), as it appears, is a must. Any contract coming under the scope of section 297, may as well be hit by sections 269, 294AA and 314 of the Act. However, as in the case of section 314, the Department of Company Affairs, Government of India, is of the view that a contract for services of professional nature is out of the scope of section 297. According to some Authorities on Company Law, this view of the Department is not correct.

It may further be noted that a Government company, having paid-up capital of ₹1 crore or more does not require the Central Government's approval when entering into a contract with another Government company (G.S.R. 233 dated 31-1-1978).

Allotment of shares to close relatives of Directors without disclosure of interest - Whether violation of section 300- The Kerala High Court in Mukkattukara Catholic Ltd, v. M.V. Thomas [1995] 4 Comp. L.J. [Chartered Secretary : February 1996] held that section 300 does not cover a case of registration of transfer of shares where the company only performs its statutory function. The operation of section 300, the court held, is made limited to contracts or arrangements made by or on behalf of the company. The court further observed that under section 110 of the Companies Act, an application for registration of transfer of shares or other interest of a member of a company may be made. The company, by virtue of section 111, may refuse to register the transfer or transmission. However, in exercising power under section 111 no element of contract or arrangement within the meaning of section 300 is involved with respect to which there can be an "interested director", in the sense in which the expression could be understood under the Act.

Effect of Refusal of Consent by the Board [Section 297(5)] - If consent is not accorded to any contract under this section anything done in pursuance of the contract shall be voidable at the option of the Board.

Penalty - No specific penalty has been provided in section 297 for any breach thereof. As such the provisions of section 629A will apply. The monetary penalty specified in section 629A is, however, compoundable under section 621A – Otto Burlington Mail Orders (P.) Ltd., In re [1998] 18 SCL 17.

Disclosure of Interest- Please see discussion under 1.7.7.

1.8 BOARD MEETINGS AND PROCEDURES

1.8.1 BOARD MEETINGS, MINUTES & REGISTERS

BOARD MEETINGS

Provisions of the Companies Act relating to Board meetings. [Sec. 285]

1. Board shall meet at least once in every 3 months and atleast 4 meetings should be held every year. For this purpose, "year" means calendar year.
2. A meeting of the Board duly called but could not be held for want of a quorum, would not be deemed to be contravention relating to frequency of Board meetings [Sec.288(2)].
3. Exemption: Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, exempt any class of Companies from this requirement or modify the application of this requirement. [For example, Sec.25 Companies shall hold atleast one meeting within every 6 calendar months.

Calling for a Board Meeting

1. The Act does not contain any provisions as to who can convene/ call for a Board meeting.

SS-1, in this regard provides that every company should have a chairman who would be the chairman for meetings of the Board. Further, it provides that it would be the duty of the Chairman to see that the meeting is duly convened and constituted in accordance with the Act or any other applicable guidelines, rules and regulations before it proceeds to transact business.

2. Regulation 73:

- (a) Table A provides that the Board of Directors may meet for the despatch of business, adjourn and otherwise' regulate its meetings, as it thinks fit.
- (b) A Director may, and the Manager or Secretary on the requisition of a Director shall, at any time summon a meeting of the Board. So, the Secretary cannot convene a meeting unless authorised by a Director and is duty bound to convene a meeting when requisitioned by a Director.

Provisions relating to Notice of Board Meeting. [Sec.286]

1. Form: There is no particular form of Notice calling a meeting of the Board of Directors. [Sunder Lal Jain vs Sundeep Paper Mills (P) Ltd 60 CC 77]
2. Mode:
 - (a) Notice of every Meeting should be given in writing.
 - (b) Notice sent by facsimile will be adequate notice. [Ferruccio Sias vs Jai Manga Ram Mukhi 93 CC 750]
 - (c) Telephonic invitation / oral invitation cannot amount to Notice within the meaning of Sec.286. [R. Khemka vs Deccan Enterprises (P) Ltd 16 SCL 1]
3. Addresses:
 - (a) Notice should be given to -
 - ❖ Every Director for the time being in India, and
 - ❖ Directors outside India, at his usual address in India.
 - (b) Interested Director: Sec.286 requires that notice must be given to every Director. Therefore, notice must be given to a Director even if he is precluded from voting on a proposed business.

(c) Alternate/Original Director: Where the Company has appointed an Alternate Director, notice of the meeting should be given to both the Original Director as well as the Alternate Director.

(d) Non-compliance: Every Officer in default shall be punishable with a fine upto ₹1,000.

4. Authority: Notice should be under the authority of the Company. The ADA usually designate an Officer or Director who shall have the power to call Meetings of the Board.

5. Length: Sec.286 does not provide for any specific length of Notice (i.e. certain number of days prior to) for a Board Meeting. Generally, ADA do not provide for any specific length of Notice, since it must be possible for the Company, to call an emergency meeting, in case of a crisis.

6. Definite: Notice must be a definite note. A conditional or contingent Notice is not valid. [Alexander vs Simpson]

7. Notice to Directors abroad: The following decisions are relevant in this regard –

A haste in holding a Board Meeting by giving just 2 days notice when the majority of the Directors were NRI's was an oppressive act. (Kshounish Chowdry vs Kero Rajendra monolithic Ltd.)

If notice is sent to a Director who mostly stays outside India, at his usual address in India, the notice shall not serve any purpose, as it would not permit him to make arrangements to attend the notified Board Meeting. Therefore, such a notice is inadequate. Such conduct would show lack of probity and fair play on part of the Directors. Hence, the meeting was held to be null and void. (Dr. Kamal Kumar Datta vs Ruby General Hospital Ltd.)

Where the Company has a Foreign Collaborator with a considerable stake, it is desirable and in the fitness of things that there should be a requirement of 1 month notice, or date of next meeting should be fixed at the preceding meeting. (Boiron vs SBL Ltd.)

8. Adjourned Meeting:

(a) Article 53 of Schedule I to the Act, where a Meeting is adjourned for 30 days or more, a fresh notice of the adjourned meeting has to be served.

(b) Notice of adjournment of a meeting need not be given unless the AOA otherwise provide. Notice of Adjourned Meeting is not required if time and place of adjourned Meeting is announced at the original meeting. [Promod Kumar Mittal vs Southern Steel Ltd 50 CC 555]

9. Agenda:

(a) Law does not require an agenda for a Board Meeting and any business whatsoever can be transacted at the Board Meeting. The Board can transact business even without a formal agenda.

(b) Where agenda is issued, the Board is not obliged to transact only that business for which the agenda is issued. [Suresh Chandra Marwaha vs Lauls (P) Ltd 48 CC 110]

(c) Even if there is no specific agenda, under the miscellaneous items 'with the permission of the Chairman' any other business may be transacted. [Kashinath Tapuriah vs Incab Industries Ltd 6 SCL 201]

(d) The purpose of sending Notice to Director is to inform him about the date, time and place of meeting. Omission to forward the agenda does not invalidate the meeting, unless AOA provides so.

10. Place and Time: The notice must state the date, time and place of the meeting. Unlike the provisions of the Act regarding annual meetings, there is no provision in the Act specifying that Board meetings must be held at the registered office of the company or during business hours and on a day which is not a public holiday. Thus, Board meetings may be held at any place and outside business hours according to the convenience of the directors.

Power of Board to ratify acts subsequently:

Where notice is not given as required but all Directors attend the meeting and do not object to the absence of notice or where the absentee Directors do not complain of want of notice, the proceedings at the meeting will not be invalid, especially if they are ratified at a subsequent meeting at which the Absentee Directors are present.

It is open to a regularly constituted meeting of the Board of Directors to ratify that action which though unauthorized is done on behalf of the Company. Ratification generally relates back to the date of the act ratified. (Parameshwari Prasad Gupta vs Union of India)

Provisions relating to Place, Time and Agenda for conducting Board Meeting

1. Place: Board Meeting need not be held only at the "Registered Office". It can be held at any convenient place, different from the Registered Office also. Also, Directors can hold a Board Meeting in a foreign country, if circumstances justify it.

2. Time: Sec. 166 requires that AGM shall be held during business hours, and on a day that is not a Public Holiday. There is no similar provision for Board Meetings, and hence Board Meetings may also be held on Public Holidays or after business hours. So, Board Meeting can also be held on a Public holiday, unless AOA provides otherwise.
3. Agenda: Law does not require an agenda for a Board Meeting, and any business whatsoever can be transacted at the Board Meeting. The Board can transact business even without a formal agenda.

Quorum for holding the Board Meeting [Sec.287]

1. General: Quorum for a Board Meeting shall be -

- (a) 1/3rd of the total strength of the Board, or
- (b) 2 Directors

whichever is higher.

Note:

- Total Strength = Total Strength of the Board of Directors of a Company
Less: Number of Directors whose places remain vacant
- Interested Directors are not counted for the purposes of forming a quorum at the time of discussion or vote on any matter.
- Any fractions shall be rounded off to nearest 1.

2. Interested Directors: Where the number of Interested Directors exceeds or is equal to 2/3rd of the total strength, then the quorum shall be -

- (a) Number of Non-Interested Directors present at the meeting, or
- (b) 2 Directors

whichever is higher.

Note: In calculation of quorum, an Interested Director should be excluded only at the time of discussion or vote on any matter before the meeting in which he is interested. He can be counted for the purposes of quorum with respect to any other matter in which he is not interested.

Where all or more than 2/3rd of the Directors are interested, the remedy in such cases is to increase the strength of the Board by appointing disinterested Directors or appoint Additional Directors if so authorised by the AOA, who are not interested in the contract. If this is not found practicable, it will be desirable to place the proposed contract before the General Meeting for consent.

3. Sec. 25 Companies: Quorum for Board Meeting shall be either 8 members or 1/4 of its total strength whichever is less. However the quorum shall not be less than 2 members in any case.
4. Committee Meetings: The presence of all the members of any Committee constituted by the Board is necessary to form the Quorum for meetings of such Committee, unless otherwise stipulated by the Board while constituting the Committee. [SSI-of ICSI]
5. Time of Quorum: In case of Board Meeting, quorum should be present not only at the commencement, but throughout the meeting for every item of business.
6. AOA limits: Sec.287 indicates only the minimum number of Directors necessary to constitute a proper quorum. It is open to the Company, by its AOA, to indicate a higher, but not a lower number, or proportion as constituting a valid quorum. [Amrit Kaur Puri vs Kapurthala Flour Oil & General Mills Co P Ltd 56 CC 194]
7. Presumption: A quorum is presumed to be present, unless - (a) the presumption is questioned at the meeting, or (b) the records disclose that a quorum was, in fact, not present.
8. Number of Directors below quorum:
 - (a) Where the number of Directors is reduced below the minimum as per AOA, business may still be transacted, if a quorum exists and is present.
 - (b) Where the number of Directors is reduced below quorum requirement, Directors cannot act unless the number is first made by the Board itself or through a General Meeting,
 - (c) Where out of 3 Directors required to-form a quorum, two had resigned, the single remaining Director has the following options -
 - He could get Members to call a meeting u/s 169, or
 - He could himself call an EGM under the AOA, or
 - He could move Tribunal to call a General Meeting u/s 186. [Sorabjee vs Sind Punjab Co.]
9. Protection to 3rd Parties: Absence of quorum in a Board Meeting will not affect contracts entered into with third parties, who are not acquainted with any defect in the constitution of the Board.
10. Majority Rule:
 - (a) Quorum constitutes the minimum number competent to transact and vote on any business. Decisions in Board Meetings are by the Majority Rule.
 - (b) A resolution passed at a valid Meeting is binding on the whole Board. All Directors are duty-bound to co-operate in the implementation of the resolution, even if some of the Directors did not participate in the deliberations or voted against the resolution.

Procedure to be followed, when a Board Meeting is adjourned for want of quorum [Sec.286]

In the absence of quorum within 15 minutes of the meeting, the Meeting shall be adjourned as under -

1. General: Automatically, to the same day, at the same time and place in the next week. If it happens to be a public holiday to the next succeeding day which is not a public holiday,
2. Provision in AOA: When there is provision in the AOA, the day prescribed in the AOA even if it happens to be a public holiday.

Position of an Interested Director in a Board Meeting [Sec.300]

1. Position of Interested Director:

- (a) A Director should not participate in the discussion or voting on any contract in which he is interested or concerned, either directly or indirectly,
- (b) If he votes on the resolution in connection with the interested contract or arrangement, his vote shall be void.
- (c) His presence shall not be counted for the purposes of quorum at the time of the discussion and voting.

2. Consequences of non-compliance: A Director who knowingly contravenes the provisions of Sec.300 shall be liable to pay a fine upto ₹ 50,000.

Cases where Interested Director can be counted for the purposes of quorum at a Board Meeting [Sec.300(2)]

The provisions relating to exclusion of Interested Director is not applicable to -

- 1. Private Company
- 2. Private Company which is a Subsidiary of a Public Company, in respect of contracts with Holding Company.
- 3. Any contract of indemnity against any loss which the Directors may suffer due to becoming a Surety for the Company.
- 4. In case of a Public Company or a Private Company which is a Subsidiary of the Public Company any contract entered into by the Company in which the interest of the Director consists solely of the holding the qualification shares required or he is a member holding not more than 2% of its paid up share capital.
- 5. When a notification has been issued by Central Government, having regard to the desirability of establishing or promoting any industry, business or trade and the public interest, that the provisions do not apply or apply subject to modifications.

Note: Sec.300 is not applicable to a Private Company. Therefore even Interested Directors can constitute a valid quorum for a Board Meeting of a Private Company, In other words, the quorum for a Board meeting of a Private Company need not be a 'disinterested quorum'.

Passing of resolution by circulation [Sec.289]

The Board/ Committee thereof, may pass any resolution by circulation except those resolutions which are required by the Act or the AOA to be passed only at a Board Meeting. The requirements are as under -

- 1. Minimum Directors in India: The number of Directors present in India must not be less than the quorum fixed for a meeting of the Board of Directors.
- 2. Circulation of Draft Resolution: The draft of the resolution along with all the necessary papers must be circulated to -
 - (a) All the members of the Board or the Committee then in India, and
 - (b) All the other members at their usual address in India.
- 3. Approval: The resolution should be approved by -
 - (a) All the Directors who are then in India, and are entitled to vote on the resolution, OR
 - (b) A majority of all the Directors whether in India or outside India who are entitled to vote on the resolution.
- 4. Date: The date on which the last of the Directors out of the number of the Directors who are required to approve the resolution, shall be taken to be the date on which the circular resolution will be deemed to have been passed.

5. Minutes: Where a resolution is passed by Circulation, to prove its authenticity, the Company -
- (a) may maintain a separate Minutes Book for recording resolutions passed by Circulation, or
 - (b) may paste the Circular resolution in the Minute Book and "note" the same in the next Board Meeting.

. Matters which require sanction of Board Meetings and not by Circulation.

Sec.	Matters
262	Filling of Casual Vacancy in the Board.
292	Power to (a) Make calls on Shareholders; (b) Issue Debentures; (c) Borrow Moneys otherwise than on Debentures; (d) Invest the Company's funds, and (e) Make Loans.
297	Sanction for certain contracts in which particular Directors are interested.
299	Disclosure to the Board of a Director's Interest in a transaction of the Company.
308	Disclosure to the Board of a Directors' Shareholding.
316 & 386	Appointment of a person as Managing Director/manager of more than one Company.
372A	Sanction for Inter-Corporate Loan, Investments or giving of guarantees or providing security.

e.g.-A member wants to inspect the Register of Directors' Shareholdings on a day other than the date on which the AGM of the Company is held. As a Secretary of a Public Company, how will you deal with the above situation?

Member is entitled to inspect the Register of Directors' Shareholdings in the following manner-

Person entitled to inspect	Time for inspection
(a) Any Member or Debentureholder	14 days before the date of AGM and 3 days after its conclusion. Note: In computing the period of 14 days and 3 days, Saturday, Sunday and public holidays should not be considered.
(b) Any person having the right to attend the AGM.	During the continuance of the AGM. [Note: Register shall be produced at the commencement of every AGM]

If a Member wants to inspect the Register beyond the period stipulated above, it is not necessary for the Company to make available the Register for inspection. [Sec.307(5)]

1.1.2. Powers of the Board

GENERAL POWERS

Various Powers of the Board of Directors

1. Exercisable at Board Meeting	Certain powers can be exercised only at the Board Meeting. These include making call on shares, authorizing buy back, issuing debentures, etc.
2. With Consent of General Meeting	❖ These are powers which the Board of Directors can exercise only with the consent of General Meeting. ❖ These affect substantially the very existence of the Company and affect its operations. ❖ These include disposing undertakings of the Company, remission of debt due by Director, investment, borrowal, etc.
3. Others -General Powers	❖ These include all other powers which the Company is authorized to do. ❖ These powers are exercisable by the Board as the custodian to the interest of the Company and its Shareholders. ❖ These include powers of management and administration, institute a suit, etc. ❖ These powers may be exercised either - (a) at Board Meetings, or (b) by Circular Resolutions, or (c) by delegating to Committees or others.

Distinction between the following categories of powers and activities is also relevant -

1. Powers and activities in respect of which the Directors have complete discretion.
2. Activities where approval of the Shareholders is required, but the third parties would be protected if the Board acts without the consent of the Company.
3. Power which only the Shareholders can exercise. At times, the Company can exercise these powers only subject to the approval of the Central Government.

Powers that are exercisable by the Board of Directors [Sec. 291]

1. Primary power: The Board is empowered to exercise all powers and do all acts and things as the Company is authorised to do,

2. Restrictions;

- (a) Powers of General Meeting: The Board shall not exercise such powers as are required to be exercised by the Company in its General Meeting under -
- the Companies Act, or any other Act, or
 - MOA and AOA of the Company, or
 - otherwise (say when the General Meeting reserves the right to appoint Additional Directors).
- (b) Consistency: The powers exercised by the Board should be in conformity with the provisions of - (i) the Companies Act, (ii) any other Act, (iii) Memorandum or Articles, or (iv) regulations made by the Company in its General Meeting.

Note: Regulations subsequently made by the Company in its General Meeting cannot invalidate any prior act of the Board which was otherwise valid.

3. Powers of Shareholders to Impose Restrictions:

- (a) Power: Shareholders are empowered to impose restrictions on the exercise of any power by the Board of Directors.
- (b) Prospective Restriction and not retrospective: No such restriction shall invalidate any act done by the Board before such restriction was placed on their powers. Regulations made by the Company in a General Meeting shall not invalidate any prior act of the Board which was otherwise valid.

Company in a General Meeting cannot override the Board's power of carrying on the business, by prescribing a regulation, or passing a resolution, taking away the powers which have been conferred upon the Board by the AOA or the Act. [Automatic Self Cleaning, etc. vs Cunningham]

4. Power to Initiate Suit:

- (a) Board's Power: Board is also empowered to initiate legal proceedings. Shareholders cannot fault the decision of the Board to institute legal proceedings.
- (b) No power for Individual Directors: Director, MD or WTD have no implied authority to institute legal proceedings on behalf of the Company, as such.
- (c) Exceptions: A Director may have such a power in any of the following ways –
 - ❖ Board should have authorized the Director vide a resolution passed in a properly convened-meeting,
 - ❖ Power is conferred upon the Director by the AOA of the Company,
 - ❖ Director concerned holds a Power of Attorney authorizing him to institute a suit.

5. Powers of Ratification:

Ratification by Board	(a) (b)	Board can ratify all acts done by others, which the Board could have done itself. It cannot ratify anything which the Company in the General Meeting alone could have done.
Ratification by Shareholders	(a) (b)	Where Board has done certain acts and exercised certain powers which are reserved for the Shareholders by the AOA, then the Shareholders may ratify such acts. If the Board's act is ultravires MOA or contrary to law, the act cannot be ratified.

Agreements to restrain the Directors from exercising their management powers in the interest of the Company in accordance with the Articles of the Company do not bind the Company even if the Directors in their capacity as Shareholders have made themselves a party to the agreement. (Rolta India Ltd vs Venire Industries Ltd 100 CC 19)

Conditions incidental to the exercise of general powers by the Board

1. Restraining Powers of Board:

- (a) Shareholders: Shareholders are empowered to exercise all the powers of the Board in the following cases-
 - ❖ Board has been acting malafide,
 - ❖ Board is incompetent to Act.
 - ❖ There is a deadlock in the Board.
- (b) Injunction by Member: Member of the Company can apply to the Court for obtaining an injunction to restrain the Board from acting beyond its powers.

2. Decisions of the Board:

- (a) Decision by Majority: Generally, any question arising in any Board Meeting should be decided by a majority of votes.
- (b) Unanimous Decision: In case of Public Limited Company, the following powers can be exercised by the Board only by passing a unanimous resolution at a Board Meeting-

- ❖ Appointment of MD/Manager where the Person is already a MD/Manager of any other Company. [Sec.316 and 386]
- ❖ Make any inter-corporate loan or investment, or give any security or guarantee to any other Body Corporate. [Sec.372A]

3. Delegation of Powers: Powers of the Board can be delegated by the Board to the MD or any other Office or Employee of the Company. However, the Board should be authorized by the Company's ADA to do so.

II. POWERS EXERCISABLE AT BOARD MEETINGS

Powers that can be exercised by the Board only at its meeting [Sec.292]

1. Sec.292 Powers: The Board of Directors shall exercise the following powers on behalf of the Company, only by passing resolutions in a properly convened Board Meeting -

- (a) Power to make calls,
- (b) Power to authorise buy-back of Shares,
- (c) Power to issue Debentures,
- (d) Power to borrow moneys otherwise than by Debentures,
- (e) Power to invest the funds of the Company, and
- (f) Power to make loans.

Note:

- In respect of OD/ CC/ other credit facilities with Bankers, the arrangement/ obtaining of such credit facilities is relevant, and not the actual day-to-day operation thereof,
- For Sec. 25 Companies, the last 3 powers may be decided by circulation also.

2. Delegation of powers: By passing a resolution at a Board Meeting, the Board may delegate the following powers -

Power delegated	Resolutions must specify	Posers may be delegated to
To borrow moneys otherwise than on Debentures	Total amount outstanding at any one time up to which the moneys may be borrowed by the delegate.	(a) Committee of Directors, (b) Managing Director, (c) Manger, (d) Any other Principal Officer of the Company, or (e) Principal Officer of the Branch Office, if any.
To invest funds of the Company	❖ To amount up to which the funds may be invested, and ❖ Nature of Investments.
To make Loans	❖ Total amount up to which Loans may be made, ❖ Purpose for which Loans may be made, ❖ Maximum Amount of Loans which may be made for each purpose in individual cases.

3. For a Banking Company -

- (a) "Borrowings" does not include acceptance of deposits of money from public in the ordinary course of its business repayable on demand and withdrawable by cheque, draft or otherwise.
- (b) Making Loans excludes placing of moneys on deposits with other Banking Companies, on such conditions prescribe by the Board.

- (c) Borrowings exclude "Borrowing" by one Banking Company from - (i) other Banking Companies, (ii) RBI, (iii) SBI, (iv) any other Bank(s) established under a Statute.

4. Restriction on Powers:

- (a) Restriction by Shareholders: Company in General Meeting can impose restrictions and conditions on the exercise of any of the above powers by the Board.
- (b) Restriction by Board: While delegating any of the powers as mentioned in Point 2 above, the Board can impose such restrictions and conditions on exercise of powers as it deems fit.

Provisions in case of Borrowings by Board of Directors in excess of its powers

In case of Borrowings by the Board of Directors in excess of its powers, the following points are applicable -

- 1. Repayment: The Company can repay such loan on its own volition, in the normal course of business. There is nothing to prevent the Company from repaying any such loan, if it wishes to do so.
- 2. Tracing of Loan:
 - (a) If the whole or any part of such loan can be traced as existing in the Company's hands or as specific investments or in specific shape, the Lender can recover the same by obtaining a tracing order from the Court.
 - (b) Where the moneys received from him still remain in the hands of the company, the Lender has a right to trace them. He can also restrain the Company by injunction from spending them.
 - (c) However, the moneys paid by the Company to third party Creditors in discharge of their debts, out of the ultra vires borrowings, cannot be traced. Tracing applies only where the moneys can still be identified as a separate and distinct fund.
- 3. Subrogation: If the borrowed- moneys have been used to pay legitimate debts of the Company, the Lender may claim a right of subrogation, i.e. by standing in the shoes of the Creditor(s) paid off with his moneys. He can sue the Company to the extent his moneys have been so used.
- 4. Increase in Assets: Even though the moneys advanced by the Lender cannot be traced, if it can be shown that the Company has benefited thereby, either by an increase in its assets or in any other manner, the Lender can claim repayment of his moneys from out of such increased assets, or other benefits.
- 5. Breach of Warranty of Authority:
 - (a) In cases of ultra-vires borrowings, the Directors themselves may also be held personally liable for breach of implied warranty of authority.
 - (b) The Lender may recover damages from the Directors for breach of warranty of authority except where the Lender could have discovered from the Company's documents filed with the ROC that the loan was ultra-vires.
- 6. Guarantee by Directors is valid: Where the Directors gave a guarantee to the Lender that they would pay him should the Company fail to do so, they were held liable in terms of their guarantees although the loan was ultra-vires. This is based on the principle that a Company is bound by all transactions formulated by its Directors, so long as other party is acting in good faith'

Powers of the Board that requires approval of Shareholders at the General Meeting [Sec.293]

- 1. Applicability: Board of Directors of a Public Company or its Subsidiary (including Sec. 25 Company).
- 2. Powers to be exercised only with consent of General Meeting: The following powers can be exercised by the Board only with the consent of Shareholders in a General Meeting -

Power

- (a) Sell, lease or dispose off the whole or substantially the whole of the undertaking(s) of the Company.
- (b) Remit or give time for repayment of a debt due by a Director.
- (c) Invest otherwise than in Trust Securities, the amount of compensation received from compulsory acquisition of -
 - Any undertaking(s) of the Company,
 - Any premises or properties used for any undertaking(s) and without which it cannot be carried on or can be carried on only with difficulty or can be carried on only after a considerable time.
- (d) Borrow money, if the money already borrowed other than Temporary Loans, together with the amount to be borrowed exceeds the aggregate of the Paid Up Capital and Free Reserves of the Company,
- (e) Contributions to Charitable and other Funds not directly related to the business of the Company or welfare of the employees of the Company, if the aggregate of contributions made during the Financial Year exceeds the higher of the following:
 - ❖ ₹ 50,000, or
 - ❖ 5% of the Average Net Profits determined u/s 349 & 350 during the immediately preceding 3 Financial Years.

3. Prior approval:

- (a) The powers are exercisable by the Board only with the prior consent of the General Meeting. The Board cannot exercise the powers in the hope that the General Meeting will ratify their actions.
- (b) However, Shareholders have the powers to ratify the act of the Board of Directors if it is not beyond the powers of the Company as laid down in its MOA.

4. Specifications in Resolutions:

Power accorded to BOD as per resolution	Contents of Resolution
(a) To sell or lease or otherwise dispose of the whole or substantially whole of the undertaking(s).	Conditions regarding the use, disposal or investment of the sale proceeds which may result from the transaction.
(b) To borrow money exceeding the Paid Up Capital & Free Reserves of the Company.	Total amount upto which money may be borrowed by the Board of Directors.
(c) To make contributions to Funds.	Total amount which may be contributed to Charitable and any other Funds during the Financial Year.

5. Special Considerations:

Power	Special Considerations / Points
(a) Sale/Lease/ Disposal of Company's undertaking(s)	❖ Selling or leasing of any property of the Company, where the ordinary business of the Company comprises of selling or leasing does not require approval of the General Meeting. ❖ Title of a Buyer / other person who buys or takes a lease of the undertaking, is not affected if - (i) he takes it in good faith, and (ii) after exercising due care and caution.

(b) Remission of Debt due by Director	Renewal or continuance of an advance made by Banking Company to its Director, in the ordinary course of business, does not require approval in a General Meeting.
(c) Investments of Compensation Amount	Restriction is imposed only on investments otherwise than in Trust Securities. So, the Company may invest in Trust Securities, without approval in General Meeting,
(d) Borrowing in excess of aggregate of Paid Up Capital and Free Reserves	❖ Temporary Loan include loans repayable on demand or within 6 months from the date of the loan as, e.g. (i) Short-Term Loans (including short term loans of a seasonal character), (ii) Cash Credit Arrangements, (iii) Discounting of Bills. ❖ Temporary Loans does not include loans raised for the purposes of financing capital expenditure. ❖ Acceptance of deposits from the customers does not amount to Borrowings made by Banking Company. ❖ Validity of Debt: Debt incurred by the Company in excess of the limit imposed u/s 292 shall not be valid, unless the Lender proves that he has advanced the loan - (i) in- good faith, and (ii) without knowledge of the fact that the limit has been exceeded.

Borrowing of money by the Board of Directors of Sec.25 Company

1. If a Sec. 25 Company has no Paid-Up Capital or Free Reserves, it means that the amount of such Capital or Free Reserves is arithmetically zero. Therefore, the Board of Directors cannot borrow at all, and any borrowing requires the approval of the members in the General Meeting,
2. However, such Company can apply to Central Government to issue an order u/s 25 exempting that Company(ies) from the provisions of Sec.293. [F. No. 38/2/68-CL-III]

FURTHER RESOLVED that the Audit Committee shall conduct discussion with the Auditors periodically about the internal control systems, the scope of audit including the observation of Auditors.

FURTHER RESOLVED that the Audit Committee shall review the quarterly and annual Financial Statements and submit the same to the Board with its recommendations, if any.

1.1.4. Duties And Liabilities of Directors.

Duties of Directors of a Company.

1. To acquire and maintain a sufficient knowledge and understanding of the Company's business to enable them to properly discharge their duties as Directors.
2. To attend all such Board Meetings as he is reasonably able to. [A Director is not bound to attend all Board and Committee Meetings, and he is not bound to give continuous attention to the affairs of the Company.]
3. To exercise all the powers vested on them in good faith and in fiduciary capacity, since they are Trustees of the Company.
4. Not to divulge confidential information/ insider information -
 - (a) Prohibited: Directors are Trustees of the Company and not of any Shareholder. He has access to insider information, which he should not disclose to any shareholder, who upon such information may buy or sell the shares of the Company.
 - (b) Exception: Director may owe a fiduciary duty to shareholders in case where they are negotiating terms of sale of issued shares of the Company i.e. where the Directors approach the shareholders and not vice versa for sale of shares.
5. To exhibit as much skill and care as may be reasonably expected from a person of his knowledge and experience in the performance of his duties.
6. To act honestly. A Director is liable to the Company for any of his underhand dealings irrespective of whether or not the Company suffers on account of such underhand dealings.

Examples: Allotment of Shares to Minor, Non-Disclosure of his interest in any transaction, fraudulent misrepresentation to Co-Directors etc. are all dishonest acts.
7. Though the Director is not duty bound to detect the frauds of Officers of the Company, he should enquire into slightest of suspicions that may rise. Failure to make the enquiry will render him guilty of dereliction of duty and be liable for damage emerging from such dereliction.

8. To ensure that the Company's moneys are properly invested, unless the AOA warrant the delegation of this duty to others.
9. To ensure accurate compilation and updation of records and registers of the Company like Statutory Registers, Financial Records, etc.
10. Not to act in a manner prejudicial to public interest or oppressive to any Members. If they so act, proceedings will be against them u/s 397, Directors' Liability towards Shareholders.

The liability of Directors towards Shareholders can be summarized as under: -

1. Negligence:

Liabe	Not Liabe
Directors are liable to Shareholders for negligence if they, while acting within their powers, fail to exercise as much reasonable skill and diligence as is expected from persons of their knowledge and experience in the management of the Company.	• Directors are not liable for errors of judgement which might result in loss to the Company, if they acted bonafide for the benefit of the Company and with such a care as may be reasonably expected of them. • The burden of proving bad faith lies on the person who challenges the act of the Directors.

2. Misfeasance and Breach of Trust:

Misfeasance	Directors are liable for any breach of duty in the conduct of the Company's affairs, which causes Misfeasance loss to the Company, e.g. allotment of Shares to a Minor, giving fraudulent preference to a Creditor, etc.
Breach of Trust	Breach of Trust encompasses misapplication of the funds of the Company. Example: Payment of Dividend out of Capital.

3. Ultra-Vires acts:

Meaning	Ultra Vires acts are those which are done by a person which are in excess of the powers conferred on him. If Directors do any act which is beyond their authority as defined by the AOA, it is called ultra vires Directors.
Ratification	If such acts are not beyond the powers of the Company as laid down by its MOA, the Company). Such Shareholders may ratify such ultra vires acts (which are intra vires the ratification will make these acts valid and binding on the Company.

4. Acts of Co-Directors: Generally Directors are not responsible for the acts and defaults of Co-Director, unless he has expressly or impliedly authorized the same. However, Directors are jointly and severally liable for a breach of trust. [Cargil vs Bower]

Directors' Liability towards Third Parties.

The liability of Directors towards Third Parties can be summarized as under –

1. Contracts on behalf of Company:

Not Liabe	Liabe
Generally, Directors are not personally liable in respect of contracts entered into by them on Company's behalf, since they act as agents of the Company.	• They are personally liable if they act, without the authority of the Company, on the ground of breach of warranty of authority. • They may also be liable, if they have expressly or impliedly undertaken to be personally responsible for their act.

2. Frauds and Tortuous Acts:

Not Liable	Liable
A Director would not be liable for the fraud of his Co-Director, unless it has been authorized by him, or he has participated therein.	Directors are personally liable - (a) if they commit or authorise a tortuous act, even if are acting as agents of the Company. (b) for commitment or authorization of fraud, e.g. issue of a fraudulent prospectus.

3. Statutory Liabilities: A brief list of liabilities imposed on Directors by the Companies Act are as under -

- (a) Mis-statement in Prospectus u/s 62 to prospective subscribers,
- (b) Irregular Allotment u/s 71
- (c) Failure to return application moneys where minimum subscription has not been raised within the prescribed period, u/s 69 or u/s 73.

Provisions of the Companies Act relating to unlimited liability of the Directors. [Sec.322 & 323]

Generally, in a Company with limited liability, the liability of Directors is limited to the amount remaining unpaid on their Shares. However, if the MOA permits the Company to have Directors with unlimited liability, then their liability is unlimited. A Limited Company may also alter its MOA by special resolution so as to make the liability of its directors unlimited. [Sec.322 and 323]

1. Condition in MOA:

(a) Clause in MOA: In a limited Company, the MOA may provide for unlimited liability of the Directors or Manager.

(b) Alteration of MOA:

- ❖ Where MOA does not contain provide for unlimited liability, the Company may, if authorised by its AOA, pass a special resolution altering the MOA so as to render unlimited liability of any Director or Manager.
- ❖ On passing of the special resolution, the provisions thereof shall be as valid as if they had been originally contained in the MOA.
- ❖ The alteration of MOA making the liability unlimited shall not apply to the Director who was holding office before the date of alteration, until the expiry of his then term, unless he has given his consent to his liability becoming unlimited.

2. Statement of Unlimited Liability: In a Limited Company in which the liability of a Director or Manager is unlimited, the - (a) Directors, (b) Manager, and (c) Member who proposes a person for appointment to the office of Director/Manager, shall add to that proposal, a statement that the liability of the person holding that will be unlimited.

3. Notice of Unlimited Liability: A written notice of his unlimited liability should be given to the Director or Manager, before his acceptance of office, by-(a) Promoters, or (b) Directors, (c) Manager, or (d) Officers of the Company.

4. Non-compliance: Persons who fail to comply with Points 2 and 3 above shall be -

- (a) punishable with a fine which may extend to ₹ 10,000.
- (b) liable for any damages sustained by the person due to default.

Note: However, the liability of the person appointed shall not be affected by the default.

Rights and liabilities of Directors for their ultra vires acts.

- 1. Classification: Ultra vires acts of Directors may be classified as -
 - (a) Those which are beyond their authority but within the Company's powers (i.e. intra vires the Company), and
 - (b) Acts which are beyond their authority as well as the Company's.
- 2. Ratification of acts ultra vires Directors but intra vires Company:
 - (a) Directors are agents of the Company, and hence cannot do anything, which the Company itself cannot do under its MOA.
 - (b) Where they make a contract within the powers of the Company (i.e. intra vires the MOA) but ultra vires the powers conferred on them, then the Company may ratify the contract in General Meeting and be bound by it. [Grant vs United Kingdom Switchback Railway]
 - (c) If the Company does not ratify such contract then the Company will not be bound by the contract. Consequently, Directors will remain liable to the other party to the contract for the breach of an implied warranty of their authority. [Weeks vs Proper, Starkey vs Bank of England]
- 3. Acts ultra vires Directors and Company, e.g. payment of interest out of capital:
 - (a) Payment of interest out of Capital is ultra vires act, since funds of a Company can be applied in carrying out its permitted objects. Therefore, Directors can be compelled to repay the money to the Company even after it goes into liquidation. [Sharpe]
 - (b) Directors so compelled to refund the money to the Company could claim to be indemnified by the Payees who received the money from the Directors with the knowledge that the payment to them was ultra vires. This is because Payees would be Constructive Trustees of the money. [Russel vs Wakefield Water Co.]

1.1.5. Powers related to- Political Contributions, Sole Selling agent, Loans to Directors, Interested Directors, Office or Place of Profit.

Powers related to Political Contribution [Sec.293A]

Sole Selling Agents [Sec. 294A, 294AA]

Meaning of Sole Selling Agent (SSA).

1. A SSA is a person (Individual or Firm or Body Corporate), appointed by a Company, with exclusive rights to sell specified product(s) of the Company in specified area(s), to the exclusion of the Company itself or other parties.
2. In case of appointment of SSA, the Company is the Principal and SSA is the Agent. SSA has all rights and duties as per Contract Act. For e.g., he can exercise lien on good incase his commission is not paid to him.
3. SSA does not "purchase" goods from the Company. It only deals in those goods, under the principle of Agency.
4. SSA is not an Employee or Officer of the Company.
5. A mere Distributor of Company's products cannot become a SSA, unless such Distributor is given exclusive rights to sell the Company's goods.
6. The relationship between the Company and Appointee is relevant, and not the name by which SSA is called. If the tenor of the agreement is that of appointing a Sole Distributor for an area, such Distributor is a SSA, even if the agreement uses the words "principal-to-principal" basis. [Shalagram Jhajharia National Company Ltd 35 CC 706]
7. SSA is an "Office or Place or Profit". Hence Sec, 314 will be applicable to such appointments.

Authority /formalities for appointment of Sole Selling Agents and the grounds on which approval of Central Government is required for appoint of SSA.

Appointment of SSA is subject to the following formalities –

Case	Paid up Capital of Company	SSA's Interest in Company	Formalities for SSAs appointment
			Board Resolution	Shareholders' Ap- proval	Central Govt. Approval	Sec.
1	Less than ₹ 50 Lakhs	No Substantial Inter- est	Yes	Ordinary Resolu- tion	Not required	294(2)
2	₹ 50 Lakhs or more	No Substantial Inter- est	Yes	Special Resolution	Required	294AA(3)
3	Less than ₹ 50 Lakhs	Substantial Interest	Yes	Ordinary Resolu- tion	Previous ap- proval required	294AA(2)
4	₹ 50 Lakhs or more	Substantial Interest	Yes	Special Resolution	Previous ap- proval required	294AA(2) & 294AA(3)

Course of action to be taken by a Company Secretary in case SSA does not have substantial interest

1. Call a meeting of the Board of Directors and determine the name of the SSAs to be appointed. If the Paid Up Share Capital of the Company is less than ₹ 50 Lakhs and the Appointee does not have a substantial interest in the Company, the Board may resolve to appoint him as SSA subject to the approval of the General Meeting.

2. Fix the date for the General Meeting at the Board Meeting, where the SSA is appointed.
3. In case the Appointee either has a substantial interest in the Company, or the Paid-Up Share Capital of the Company is ₹ 50 Lakhs or more, application for the approval of Central Government should be made in Form I of the Companies (Appointment of Sole Agents) Rules, 1975.
4. See that the terms and conditions of appointment/re-appointment do not contain the tenure exceeding 5 years at a time.
5. Issue notices for holding the General Meeting. Where the Paid-Up Share Capital of the Company is ₹ 50 Lakhs or more, a special resolution should be passed, otherwise an ordinary resolution shall be sufficient.
6. Forward 3 copies of the notices and a copy of the proceedings of the General Meeting to the Stock Exchanges with which the Shares of the Company are listed (in case of Listed Companies only).
7. If the proposed SSA is to be appointed in a foreign country, obtain the prior permission of RBI (wherever applicable).

“Substantial Interest” in the context of SSA u/s 294AA

In the context of SSA, the SSA will have “Substantial Interest” in the Company -

If SSA is	Beneficial Interest is held by	Subject matter of interest
Individual	Individual or any of his relatives, whether singly or taken together.	Shares of the Company, the aggregate paid-up amount thereon exceeds the least of the following - ❖ ₹ 5,00,000, or ❖ 5% of the Paid-Up Share Capital of the Company.
Firm	One or more Partner(s) of the Firm or any relative of such Partner, whether singly or taken together.
Body Corporate	Body Corporate or one or more of its Director(s) or their relatives, whether singly or taken together.

Example:

If the Paid-Up Capital of a Company is-	SSA will have substantial interest if Shareholding exceeds
₹ 60 Lakhs	₹ 3 Lakhs (i.e. 3 Lakhs or 5 Lakhs, whichever is less)
₹ 120 Lakhs	₹ 5 Lakhs (i.e. 6 Lakhs or 5 Lakhs, whichever is less)

Board Resolution for appointing SSA is always conditional. Explain.

1. Appointment of SSA is valid only if the agreement contains a clause that “the appointment shall cease to be valid if it is not approved by the Company in the First General Meeting held after the date of appointment”.
2. If there is no such clause, the agreement is void ab initio. The Company / Shareholders cannot approve any agreement, which is void from the start. [Arante Manufacturing Corporation vs. Bright Bolts (P) Ltd 37 CC 758],
3. Such clause is not required where the appointment is made by the Company (directly) in a General Meeting.

Need for obtaining Central Government approval when, after appointment of SSA- (a) Paid Up Capital of the Company is increased, or (b) SSA acquires substantial interest in the Company.

From the Table given in Authority/formalities for appointment of Sole Selling Agents above, it can be observed that -

- (a) Central Government approval is required only if Paid Up Capital is ₹ 50 Lakhs or more.

(b) Prior approval of Central Government is required only if SSA has substantial interest.

If subsequent to appointment of SSA	For remaining duration of current tenure	For re-appointment
(a) Paid Up Capital increased to ₹ 50 Lakhs or more.	Central Government not required. [C.No.1/78 date 7-3-78]	Sec. 294AA (3) will apply, Special Resolution & Central Government approval is required;
(b) SSA acquires substantial interest in the Company,	Central Government not required. [C.No.11/77 date 3-11-77]	Sec. 294AA (2) will apply, prior approval of Central Government is required.
(c) Both(a)'&(b)	Central Government not required. [As per Circulars stated above]	Prior approval of Central Government & Special Resolution is required for re-appointment.

Agreement with SSA is valid only if Shareholders' approval is obtained. Explain.

Shareholder's Resolution [Sec. 294(2) & (2A)] and Validity of acts by SSA

Situation	Conditional Clause	Validity of acts done by SSA
(a) Shareholders' approval obtained	Available in SSA agreement	Subject to other formalities (Central Government approval is required) acts of SSA are valid.
(b) Shareholders' approval not obtained	Available in SSA agreement	Agreement will cease to be valid from the date of the General Meeting. All acts of SSA done upto the time of non-approval would be valid.
(c) Whether Shareholders' approval obtained or not	Not available in SSA agreement	Agreement is void ab initio. Validity of acts done by SSA is based on principles of the Contract Act.

Term of office of SSA

- SSA can be appointed for a maximum term of 5 years at a time.
- SSA can be re-appointed, or its time extended for further periods not exceeding 5 years on each occasion.

ALSO RESOLVED that the Secretary of the Company be authorised to submit the application to the Central Government and comply with the necessary formalities in this regard.

Powers of the Central Government in connection with SSAs

A. No SSA for certain goods [Sec. 294AA]: The Central Government may, by Notification in Official Gazette, declare that SSA shall not be appointed by a Company for the sale of goods for specified period, if the Central Government is of the opinion that -

- Demand for goods of that category is substantially in excess of the production or supply of such goods.

2. Services of SSA will not be necessary to create a market for such goods.

B. Inquiry into existing appointments:

Particulars	Where Company has a SSA in any area	Where Company has more than one Selling Agent (SA) in any Area(s)
1. Central Govt. may require the Company to furnish information regarding terms and appointment of SSA/SA	To determine whether or not such terms and conditions are prejudicial to the interest of the Company.	To determine whether any of those Selling Agents should be declared as SSA of such area(s).
2. Scope of Central Government Order	To make such variations in those terms and conditions so as to make them no longer prejudicial to the interest of the Company.	To declare that Selling Agent be the SSA for that area, even though one or more selling Agents may be operating that area. To make suitable variations in those terms and conditions that are prejudicial to the interests of the Company.
3. Effect of Central Government order	From the date specified in the order, the appointment of SSA shall be regulated by the terms and conditions as varied by Central Government.	From the date specified in the order, the appointment of the Selling Agent declared as SSA, shall be regulated by the terms and conditions as varied by Central Government. (Note: Agreements with other Selling Agents are not affected.)

Note: In both cases –

- Investigation: If the Company refuses or neglects to furnish the information, the Central Government may appoint a suitable person to investigate and report on the terms and conditions of appointment of SSA/ all Selling Agents.
- Duty of the Company: It shall be the duty of the Company -
 - To produce to the Investigator, all books and papers of or relating to the Company which are in its custody or power.
 - To give all reasonable assistance in connection with the investigation, which the Company is reasonably able to give.
- Non-compliance: If a Company refuses or neglects to furnish information or to produce any books and papers or to give any assistance to the Investigator, the Company and every Officer in default shall be punishable with fine upto ₹ 50,000 and with a further fine of not less than ₹ 500 for every day after the first day during which the refusal or neglect continues.

C. Granting approval to appointment of SSA: For appointment of SSAs –

- Central Government approval is required, if Paid Up Capital is ₹ 50 Lakhs or more.
- Prior approval of Central Government is required, if SSA has substantial interest.

Payment of compensation for loss of office [Sec. 294A]

1. Maximum Compensation:

- Maximum Compensation for loss of office payable by a. Company to its SSA shall be the remuneration which he would have earned if he had been in office for - (i) the unexpired residue of his term, or (ii) 3 years, whichever is shorter.

- (b) The remuneration shall be calculated on the basis of the average remuneration actually earned by him during a period of 3 years immediately preceding the date on which his office ceased or was terminated, or where he held his office for a lesser period than 3 years during such, period.

2. No Compensation: A Company shall not pay or be liable to pay any compensation for the loss of office to the SSA in the following cases -

Office or Place of Profit [Sec. 314]

Meaning of Office or Place of Profit

1. Office or Place of Profit (herein referred to as OPP): Any Office or Place shall be deemed to be an OPP under the Company where the person holding the office receives -

Person holding the Office		Remuneration
(a)	Director	Receives from the Company, any remuneration in addition to the remuneration he is entitled to receive as Director.
(b)	• An Individual other than a Director, or • Any Firm, or • Private Company, or • Other Body Corporate.	Receives from the Company any remuneration.

2. Remuneration: Remuneration includes any payment by way of - (a) Salary, (b) Fees, (c) Commission, (d) Perquisites, (e) Right to occupy free of rent any premises as a place of residence, or (f) otherwise.

ISSUES IN “OFFICE OR PLACE OF PROFIT”

1. Agents: OPP includes Selling / Buying Agents. Hence, Sole Selling Agency is an OPP. OPP need not held necessary be an employment “in the Company”. Sec.314 uses the words “under the Company”.-Sec.314
2. Remuneration: To be considered as OPP, the person should be in receipt of some remuneration. If the MD of a Company is also Director of another Co, which has been appointed as Selling Agent of the Company, and nothing has been received by him apart from his remuneration as MD, he cannot be said to holding an OPP. [But otherwise, sole selling agency is an OPP.]-Firestore Tyre & Rubber Co. vs Synthetic & Chemicals Ltd 41CC
3. Professional Services:
 - Professional Services rendered on a case-to-case basis, do not, per se, attract the provisions of Sec.314.
 - If Professional Services (Advocate, CA, CS, etc.) are on regular retainer basis, binding them to render services as and when called upon by the Company, Sec.314 will apply.

If a Director receives any remuneration for professional services as Solicitor, Technician, etc, Sec.314 will be attracted.-Department Clarification
4. Technical Advisor: Appointment of a Director as a “Technical Advisor” should also be covered u/s 314. If a person does not possess any technical qualifications, merely calling him a “Technical Advisor” will not make him one. -Department Clarification
5. MD / WTD: Office of MD / WTD is not considered an OPP if the following conditions are satisfied -

- (a) Appointment is made u/s 269 either with the approval of Central Government, or as per Schedule XIII.
- (b) Remuneration drawn by them is within Schedule XIII limits.

Note: The above principles apply even if a relative of a Director or MD is appointed as MD/WTD.-C. No. 4 / 76 dated 11.02.1976

- 6. Manager & Secretary: If the Director of a Company functions as Manager and Secretary, and draws remuneration thereof, then, he in fact, is a MD, and holds OPP in the capacity of Secretary.

Sec.314 does not apply if a Director holds office as MD. But, Sec.198, 269, 309, etc. will be attracted.-L.No,8/16(I)-61-PR dated 09,05.61

- 7. Statutory Auditor: In view of Professional Ethics, where a Partner or Relative of a CA is a Director in the Company who has substantial interest, the CA should not audit the Financial Statements of such Company.-Clause 4 Part I - Second Schedule – CA Act

Restrictions with respect to appointment to an “OPP”. [Sec. 314]

Sec. 314 regulates the appointment to an “Office or Place of Profit” restrictions are given below under the Company. The salient features of the restrictions are given below-

Particulars	Sec.314(1) [Shareholders' approval only]	Sec.314(1B) [Shareholders' & CG approval]
1. Restriction applies to	(a) Director of a Company, (b) Following persons if the total monthly remuneration is not less than ₹10,000 - (i) Partner of the Director, (ii) Relative of the Director, (iii) Firm in which the Director is a Partner, (iv) Firm in which, the Relative of a Director is a Partner, (v) Private Company in which the Director is a Director or Member, (vi) Director or Manager of a Private Company in which the Director is a Director or Member.	Following appointments to OPP, if the monthly remuneration is not less than ₹ 50,000 (w.e.f 06.04.2011 not less than ₹ 2,50,000 - Refer Notification below). (a) Partner of a Director or Manager, (b) Relative of a Director or Manager, (c) Firm in which Director or Manager is a Partner, (d) Firm in which the Relative of the Director or Manager is a Partner, (e) Private Company in which - (i) a Director, or (ii) Manager, or (iii) relative of either, is a Director or Member.
2. Monetary Limits [See Note 1]	(a) Directors: No limit, (b) Other Persons as above: ₹10,000 or more, p.m.	All persons as above: ₹ 50,000 or more p.m. (w.e.f 06.04.2011 ₹ 2,50,000 p.m.- Refer Notification below)
3. Restrictions relevant for Director or Manager	Only for Directors, his relatives, etc. Restriction does not extend to Managers.	Restriction applies to both Directors and Manager, and their relatives, etc.
4. Exceptions to restriction [See Note 2]	The following positions are not covered by the restriction - ❖ Managing Director of the Company, ❖ Manager of the Company, ❖ Banker of the Company, ❖ Trustee for Debentureholders of the Company.	These exceptions are not available here. Appointment of specified persons (as in 1 above), to these positions will also attract the provisions of Sec.314(1B)

5. Co. to which restriction applies [See Note 3]	Such OPP cannot be held – (a) under the Company, or (b) under any Subsidiary of the Company.	Such OPP cannot be held “in the Company”. [There is no restriction to hold such OPP in the Subsidiary.]
6. Shareholders' approval	By Special Resolution.	By Special Resolution.
7. Nature of Shareholders' approval	Subsequent consent in the first General Meeting held after the holding of OPP is sufficient. [See Notes 4 & 5].	Prior consent is required.
8. Central Govt. approval	Not required.	Required if the remuneration exceeds the monetary limits specified in (1) above. Application for approval should be made in e-Form 24B.

Notes:

1. Monthly Remuneration:

Bonus, Leave Encashment, Medical Reimbursement, etc. are not included in computing the prescribed monthly remuneration, as they are not a part of the monthly income. The term “monthly” connotes anything taking place once a month. [Ravindra Kumar Singhal vs. Auto Lamps Ltd 55 CC 742]

2. Other Exceptions: Both Sec. 314(1) and Sec. 314(1B) shall not apply to -

- (a) Director appointed by Central Government u/s 408. [Note: Nominee Director of Central Government is not hit by restriction u/s 314. However, Nominee Director of other Lending / Financial Institution cannot hold any OPP except as per Sec.314.]
- (b) Where - (i) a Relative of a Director, or (ii) a Firm in which such Relative is a Partner has been appointed to the OPP, before such Director becomes Director of the Company.

3. Subsidiary / Holding Company:

- (a) Restriction will not apply if the remuneration received from the Subsidiary in respect of such OPP (held in the Subsidiary) is paid over to the Subsidiary or its Holding Company.
- (b) OPP can be held in the Holding Company, since restriction applies only to a Subsidiary.

4. Appointment without Directors' knowledge:

If - (a) a Relative of a Director, or (b) a Firm in which such Relative is a Partner is appointed to the OPP without the knowledge of the Director, the consent of the Company may be obtained in the

- First General Meeting held after the holding of OPP, or Whichever is later.
- Within 3 months from the date of the appointment 4

5. Timescale in Special Resolution:

- (a) Sec. 314(1) shall apply to every subsequent appointment on a higher remuneration not covered by the Special Resolution passed earlier, unless the appointment on a time scale has already been approved by the Special Resolution.
- (b) So, where any person covered by Sec. 314(1) is promoted, and is proposed to be paid a higher remuneration, it will require a fresh Special Resolution, unless the higher remuneration was approved in the earlier Special Resolution.

6. Declaration by Appointee:

- (a) Content: Every person proposed to be appointed to any OPP shall declare in writing, whether he / it is or is not connected with a Director of the Company in any of the ways referred above.
- (b) Time: Such declaration may be made either before or at the time of such appointment.

7. Appointment of a Relative of a Director [Rule 7 of Director's Relatives (Office or Place of Profit) Rules, 2003]:

- (a) The selection and appointment of a relative of a Director holding OPP in the Company shall be approved by adopting the same procedure applicable to non-relatives.
- (b) In the case of listed public companies, the selection of Director for holding OPP in the Company shall have to be also approved by a Selection Committee.
- (c) "Selection Committee" means a committee, the majority of which shall consist of Independent Directors and an Expert in the respective field from outside the Company. In case of Unlisted Companies, Independent Directors are not necessary but outside experts should be there in the Selection Committee. In the case of Private Companies, Independent Directors and outside Experts are not necessary.

Director's Relatives (Office or Place of Profit) Amendment Rules, 2011: (Gist of amendment)

- Limit increased from ₹ 50,000 p.m. to ₹ 2,50,000 p.m. [in sec 314(1B)]
- Outside expert to form part of selection committee in case of unlisted companies u/r 7.

Note: The limit of ₹ 10,000 p.m. in section 314(1) remains the same.

Notification No. 17/75/2011-C.L.V dated 6-4-2011

Effects of holding an OPP in contravention of Sec.314

Particulars	If Shareholders' consent is not obtained [Sec.314(1)]	Prior consent of Shareholders, and CG approval is not obtained [Sec.314(1B)]
1. Validity of appointment	Appointment is basically valid. Acts done by the appointee till date of vacating his office, are valid.	Appointment is void ab initio. All acts of the appointee are invalid.
2. Vacation of office	The person shall be deemed to have vacated the office on and from the date next following the date of the General Meeting of the Company, or the date of the expiry of the 3 months period.	There is no need for "vacation of office", as such appointment was not valid at all, in the first place.
3. Liability to refund	The person concerned shall be liable to refund - • any remuneration received, or • the monetary equivalent of any perquisite or advantage enjoyed. Note: The Company shall not waive the recovery of any sum refundable, unless is permitted to do so by the Central Government.

Less than ₹ 1 Crore	Consent of Board of Directors
₹ 1 Crore or more	Consent of BOD + Previous Approval of Central Government. Note: e-Form 24A should be filed for obtaining previous approval of Central Government. (Note: Power of CG Delegated to Regional Director - Refer notification below)

LNo.3/2/75 09.07.1975	dt	Subsequent increase in Paid Up Capital: If the contracts are entered by the Company when the Paid Up Capital was less than ₹ 1 Crore and if the Paid Up Capital is increased to ₹ 1 Crore or more, approval of the Central Government would not be required for existing contracts, but would be required when the contracts are modified or renewed.

Procedure for obtaining consent of Board of Directors for a contract u/s 297. Consequences if Board Consent is not obtained

A. PROCEDURE FOR BOARD CONSENT

1. Resolution: The consent of the Board shall be accorded by a resolution passed in a properly convened Board Meeting. [Note: No circular resolution, and no delegation to MD].
2. Time Period: The Board should accord its consent before the contract is entered onto, or within 3 months of the date on which it was entered into.
3. Specific consent: Consent u/s 297 is not a general consent for all contracts with the involved parties, but a consent referable to such particular or specific contract.

B. Failure to obtain Consent

1. Where consent is not accorded by the Board, the actions shall be voidable at the option of the Board.
2. When prior approval of the Central Government is not obtained, the contract is void.

List of Contracts and transactions which do not require Board Consent, even if covered u/s 297. Exceptions to the applicability of Sec.297.

Sec.297 stipulations as to Board Consent/Prior Approval of Central Government, does not apply to-

1. Contracts for purchase or sale of goods and materials made for cash, at prevailing market prices. [Note: A Cheque will be treated as equivalent of cash payment for the purposes of Sec. 297. [Letter No. 8/2/ 75 / CL - V dt. 06.06.1975].

2. Where the aggregate value of the contract(s) do not exceed ₹ 5,000 in any year during the period of contract, in respect of purchase or sale of goods and materials or services in which the Company or the interested persons regularly trades or does business.
3. In case of a Banking Company or Insurance Company, any transaction in the ordinary course of its business.
4. Contracts may be entered into without Board's consent, in circumstances of urgent necessity, if the Board's consent is obtained subsequently within 3 months of the date of the contract. If this consent is not given within 3 months, but is given at a later date, even then it will be good, so long as the contract has not been avoided by the Board.

Note: Special Issues & Department Clarifications

- Sec.297 is not applicable if the contract is entered into, with -
 - (a) A Public Company in which a Director is a Member or Director. (Restriction is only for Private Company not Public Company.)
 - (b) A Private Company in which a Relative / Partner of the Director is a Member or Director. (Restriction applies only when the Director himself is a Member or Director of such Private Company.)
 - (c) A Body Corporate or Co-operative Society, in which a Director or Relative is a Member or Director.
- The words "Goods and Materials" includes Capital Goods but not immovable property- So, a proposal for taking on rental premises for office of the Company is not covered by Sec.297 since this section does not apply to transactions in immovable properties.

Disclosure of interest by an interested Director in the contracts entered into by the Company [Sec.299]

1. Basic Principle of Disclosure of Interest:

Sec.297, 299 & 300 are founded on the principle that a Director is precluded from dealing on behalf of the Company as himself and from entering into engagements in which he has a personal interest conflicting with the interest of those with whom he is bound by fiduciary duty. If a Director makes a contract with the Company and does not disclose his interest, he will be committing breach of trust. [Yashovardhan Saboo Vs Groz Beckirt Saboo Ltd 83 CC 371]

2. Disclosure required: Any Director of a Company who is directly or indirectly concerned or interested, should disclose his concern or interest in respect of -

- (a) Contract or Arrangement entered into by or on behalf of the Company, or
- (b) Proposed Contract or Arrangement to be entered into by or on behalf of the Company.

Note:

- Sec.299 cannot be evaded by appointing an Alternate Director, because an Alternate Director is affected by the interests of his Appointor, as well as his own interests.
- Sec.299 is applicable to Government Nominated Directors and other Nominee Directors. [L.No.8/19 (299) 63 -PR dt 20.09.1963].

Situations under which an interested Director is not required to make a disclosure of his interest

Exception to Disclosure Requirement [Sec.299(6)]: A Director is not required to disclose his interest in any contract or arrangement entered into between 2 Companies, if not more than 2% of the. Paid Up Share Capital in the other Company is held by -

1. any of the Directors of the Company, or
2. two or more of them together.

Nature of Directors' Interest requiring disclosure to the Board u/s 299.

1. Sec.299 applies to direct or indirect concern or interest of a Director in a contract or arrangement.
2. Sec.299 covers contracts / arrangements where a Director has personal interest conflicting with his duties towards the Company as its Director.
3. However, even where the Director himself has no personal interest in any contract / arrangement but any of his relative has, the Director would be deemed to be "indirectly interested" u/s 299.
4. Disclosure is required for any contract to which Sec.299 applies, regardless of amount, however petty transaction it is, e.g. purchase of books worth ₹ 23.25 from a Firm in which the Director had an interest, or sale of one tin of Ghee to a Director.

An illustrative list of transactions / contracts / interest which are required to be disclosed to the Board, in terms of Sec.299.

A. Matters requiring disclosure of interest "generally":

1. Director's Managerial Interest in the other Firm / Body Corporate.
2. Director's Shareholding / Proprietary Interest in the other Firm / Body Corporate.
3. Director's Relationship Interest.
4. Director's Relative's Managerial Interest in the other Firm / Body Corporate.
5. Directors' Relative's Shareholding / Proprietary Interest in the other Firm / Body Corporate.

B. Matters in respect of which disclosure is required "specifically":

1. Every contract which attracts Sec. 297(1).
2. Every contract which attract Sec. 297(1) but which do not require its compliance because of the exemptions u/s 297(2).
3. Any transaction in which any of the parties specified in Sec. 297(1) is a Contractee but which is not one of the two kinds of contracts mentioned in Sec.297(1), e.g. transactions relating to immovable property.
4. Transactions of any kind between two Public Companies, if a Director of one Company is a Director or Member of the other Company, provided that the Director alone or two or more of the Directors, together hold more than 2 % of the Paid Up Capital in the other Company.
5. Transactions of any kind between two Companies, Public or Private, if a Director's relative of one Company is a Director or Member of the other Company.
6. Dealings with the Company and Relative of the Director.
7. In a resolution to appoint one of the Director's relative as a Managing Director at a remuneration, there is a contract between the Company and the Director's relative.
8. Any appointment of a Director's relative under the Company or any Office or Place of Profit [Sec. 314],
9. Transaction of Loan, Guarantee and Securities between any of the parties specified in Sec.295(1) and the Company.

Manner in which an Interested Director is required to disclose his interest at a Board Meeting. [Sec.299(3)]

1. Meeting in which disclosure is to be made:

In case of -	Meeting in which disclosure is to be made	Remarks
Proposed Contract or Arrangement	Meeting at which the question of entering into the contract is first taken into consideration.	If Director was not interested at the date of that Meeting, disclosure shall be made in the First Meeting of the Board held, after he becomes interested or concerned.
Any other Contract or Arrangement	First Meeting of the Board held after the Director becomes interested or concerned in the contract or arrangement.	Note: This covers - - existing contracts / arrangements - contracts entered into before this person was appointed as Director, etc.

2. Disclosure to Board, at a Meeting:

- (a) Disclosure is to be made at a Board Meeting and not merely by circulation or otherwise.
- (b) Disclosure should be made to the Board, and not to any Committee or to the MD alone. However, if the matter is already known to the whole Board, formal disclosure is not required.

3. General Notice: The disclosure of interest can be made by giving a General Notice to the Board. Such a notice shall be deemed to be sufficient disclosure of interest in relation to any contract or arrangement. The essentials of a valid notice are as under -

- (a) Form: For the purpose of Sec.299, a general notice should be given in Form No. 24AA to the Board of Directors.
- (b) Meeting: (i) The General Notice should be given at the Board Meeting, or (ii) the Director concerned takes reasonable steps to secure that the notice is brought up and read at the first Board Meeting after it is given.
- (c) Contents: The Notice shall disclose the nature of concern or interest. It shall specify that the Director is –
 - ❖ a Director or Member of a Specified Body Corporate, or Member of a Specified Firm, and
 - ❖ to be regarded as concerned or interested in any contract or arrangement that the Company proposes to enter into with that Body Corporate or Firm, after the date of the notice.
- (d) Full Disclosure: The Director concerned must make full disclosure of his interest including its extent and the amount of his profit or reward.

Note:

- The expression "Body Corporate" includes Private Companies, Public Companies, Corporations and Foreign Companies.
- The word "Firm" includes Partnership Firms and other Unincorporated Organizations, such as, Sole Proprietary Concern, Hindu Undivided Family, Association of Persons, etc.

4. Validity of Notice:

- (a) The General Notice is valid till the end of the Financial Year in which it is given.
- (b) Renewal of notice: Renewal of notice can be made for a further period of 1 financial year at a time, by giving a fresh notice in the last month of the financial year in which it would expire.

Company News & Notes dated 01.07.1963

If the Director has given a general notice u/s 299(3) he will not be liable for prosecution provided the general notice covers the relevant contract in question.

NOTE:

- Sec. 299(3) regarding general notice only specifies the method as to how to comply with matters specified in 299(1) & (2).
- General Notice u/s 299(3) requires merely specifying the names of Bodies Corporate of which the Director is a Member or Director and of Firms of which he is a Member. However, Sec.299(1) requires disclosure of the nature of concern or interest in the contracts and arrangement.
- Sec. 299(3) is not a mandatory provision. So, a Director may not specify in General Notice the names of such Bodies Corporate or Firms, and may, instead, opt for specific disclosure in case of each contract. Thus, violation of 299(3) is not punishable.

Consequences of non-disclosure of interest by a Director

The consequences of non-compliance with Sec.299 requirements are -

1. Vacation of Office [Sec. 283]: The office of the Director shall become vacant if he fails to disclose his interest u/s. 299, [This is automatic and cannot be ordered otherwise by the Court],
2. Voidable Contract: Non-compliance with Sec.299 does not avoid or invalidate the contract but will it make it voidable at the option of the Company.
3. Penalty: Every Director who fails to comply with the disclosure requirements shall be liable to -
 - (a) Fine upto ₹ 50,000 u/s 299(4),
 - (b) Fine upto ₹ 5,000 per day u/s 283(2A),
 - (c) Refund to the Company all remuneration received as Director after the date of cessation of his Directorship.

CASE LAW: Failure to make the required disclosure renders the Director liable to punishment and gives an option to the Company to avoid the contract, but does not make the contract illegal, void or unenforceable. [Amritsar Rayon & Silk Mills Ltd Vs Amirchand Saidik]

1.9 INSPECTION AND INVESTIGATION

INSPECTION

Inspection of books of account, etc., of companies

Section 209A(1) provides that the books of account and other books and papers of every company shall be open to inspection during business hours—

- (i) by the Registrar; or
- (ii) by such officer of Government as may be authorised by- the Central Government in this behalf.
- (iii) by such officers of the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) as may be authorised by it.

Such inspection may be made without giving any previous notice to the company or any officer thereof. The inspection by the SEBI shall be made in respect of matters covered under sections referred to in section 55A.

It is not necessary for the Registrar or the Central Government /SEBI to disclose to the company reasons for conducting inspection nor is it necessary to come to any conclusion regarding existence of certain circumstances as is necessary before ordering investigation into the affairs of a company under section 237(b) of the Act.

Inspection is a useful instrument and the preliminary step for finding out materials and facts which would justify initiation of investigation under section 235 or 237. It is noticed from the Annual Reports of the Department of Company Affairs that the books of account and other records of the companies are inspected selectively by officers of the Directorate of Inspection authorised for this purpose under this section. Inspection, inter alia, covers the companies with paid up capital exceeding certain paid-up capital level, companies incurring losses and companies in respect of which complaints are received. The material brought out in the inspection reports is made use of for taking actions under important provisions of the Act including, inter alia, appointment of Government directors under section 408, ordering investigations into the affairs of the companies under sections 235 and 237-247, and consideration of application seeking approval for the appointment of managerial personnel in companies. In certain cases, prosecutions are also launched on the basis of the finding contained in the inspection reports. Besides, cases involving non-compliance of certain provisions of the Act, including inadequate maintenance of statutory records noticed during such inspections, are also taken up with the companies for necessary remedial action. Information of interest to other Government Departments/agencies as brought out in the inspection reports is also communicated to them for suitable and appropriate action.

Documents to be inspected

Under section 209A(1)(i), the Registrar or the inspecting officer is authorized to inspect books of account, such as ledger, cash book, journal and vouchers, and 'other books and papers', which has been defined in section 2(8) to include deeds, writings and documents.

The scope of inspection was brought out in C.V. Karupunni v. Joint Director, Inspection, Company Law Board [1986] 59 Comp. Cas. 814. The Kerala High Court in this case, held that the principle of ejusdem generis has to be applied in deciding the question as to the type of books and documents the inspecting officers are entitled to inspect. In other words, the documents and papers referred to in section 209A(1) which the inspecting officers are entitled to inspect must be those which have the character of books of account. Books and papers as per section 2(8) include vouchers, deeds, writings and documents. Applying the principle of ejusdem generis, the inspecting officer can inspect vouchers, deeds and documents relevant to entries in books of account. However, in the guise of carrying out an inspection of books of account and other books and papers, the inspecting authorities cannot make a roving enquiry into all the affairs of the company. The scope of inspection of books of account and other books and papers under section 209A has its limits and has to be distinguished from the investigation under section 237.

It may be observed that this decision is not in harmony with the definition of the expression "books and papers" as given in section 2(8) of the Act.

Department's views

The views of the Department on the subjects are as under:

- (a) The inspecting officer has a right to examine the books and records of any firm in which the company concerned is a partner (Letter No. 7/9/74-CL: II, dated 24-1-1976).
- (b) The inspecting officer has a right to examine the books and records of any joint venture in which the company concerned has an interest (Circular No. 25/75, dated 19-11-1975).

Place and time of inspection

The place at which inspection may be carried out need not be the registered office of the company. The books of account have to be kept either at the registered office of the company or at some other place, after an intimation to the Registrar. The books of account can be inspected at such other place also. Besides, clause (iii) of subsection (5) permits inspection at any place. Thus, the authorised officer or the Registrar was held entitled to demand inspection of the books of account even in his office – Indra Prakash Karnani v. ROC [1985] 57 Comp. Cas. 62 (Cal).

Duties of directors, officers, employees of the company to assist in inspection

Sub-section (2) of section 209A casts a duty on every director, other officer or employee of the company to produce to the person making inspection of such books of account and other books and papers of the company in his custody or control and to furnish him with any statement, information or explanations relating to the affairs of the company as the said person may require of him within such time and at such place as he may specify.

Further, it shall also be the duty of every director, other officer or employee of the company to give to the person making inspection under this section all assistance in connection with the inspection which the company may reasonably be expected to give [Section 209A(3)].

Powers of the inspector

- 1. Power to make copies - A person making the inspection under this section may, during the course of inspection make or cause to be made copies of books of account and other books and papers.
- 2. Power to place identification marks - The inspector may, during the course of inspection place or cause to be placed any marks of identification thereon in token of the inspection having being made.
- 3. Powers of civil courts - Sub-section (5) of section 209A provides that notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force or any contract to the contrary, any person making an inspection under section 209A shall have the same powers as are vested in a civil court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 while trying a suit, in respect of the following matters, namely:
 - (i) the discovery and production of books of account and other documents, at such place and such time as may be specified by such person;
 - (ii) summoning and enforcing the attendance of persons and examining them on oath;
 - (iii) inspection of any books, registers and other documents of the company at any place.
- 4. Powers of Registrar - Any officer authorised to make an inspection under section 209A shall have all the powers that a Registrar has under the Companies Act in relation to the making of enquiries [Section 209A(7)].

Penalty for default - If default is made in complying with the provisions of section 209A, every officer of the company who is in default shall be punishable with fine which shall not be less than fifty thousand rupees, and also with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year [Section 209A(8)]. It may be noted that the company cannot be made liable for committing the default - Indra Prakash Karnani v. ROC (supra).

It may further be noted that the offence under this section is not compoundable by the Regional Director or the Company Law Board under section 621 A. However, the offence under this section is not a continuing one and is deemed to be committed on a particular date. Limitation begins to run on that date. A prosecution launched more than one year after the date of the offence is barred by limitation - State v. S. Seshamal Pandia [1986] 60 Comp. Cas. 889 (Mad.).

Supply of report

Where an inspection of the books of account and other books and papers of the company has been made under section 209A, sub-section (6) requires that the person making the inspection shall make a report to the Central Government. The Central Government is not required to forward a copy of the inspection report to the company, unlike an investigation report under section 241. However, in case of prosecution arising out of the inspection report, the complainant may rely on the report and make available the relevant extracts thereof to the accused.

Inspection by Reserve Bank

In case of all the non-banking companies, the Reserve Bank has also a right of inspection of their books and papers under section 45N of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, sub-section (1) of which provides as follows :—

“The bank may, at any time, cause an inspection to be made by one or more of its officers or employees or other persons (hereafter in this section referred to as the inspecting authority)—

- (i) of any non-banking institution, including a financial institution, for the purpose of verifying the correctness or completeness of any statement, information or particulars furnished to the bank or for the purpose of obtaining any information or particulars which the non-banking institution has failed to furnish on being called upon to do so; or
- (ii) of any non-banking institution being a financial institution, if the bank considers it necessary or expedient to inspect that institution.”

INVESTIGATION

Investigation

Sections 235 to 251 contain provisions relating to investigation into the affairs of companies. Section 235 has been recast by the Amendment Act of 1988. The section gives right to members of a company to make an application to the CLB for conducting investigation into the affairs of a company. While the power to appoint inspectors and to conduct investigation and to act on the report of investigation remains with the Central Government, the CLB has been empowered to consider such application and cause an investigation to be made by the Central Government. Action on the report of the inspector also vests in the Central Government. The provision for appointment of an inspector by the Central Government on a report of the Registrar under section 234(6)/(7) exists, independent of CLB.

Investigation- Scope & Eligibility

- 1. On the report of Registrar- Section 235(1) empowers the Central Government to order investigation into the affairs of a company on the report of the Registrar.

Section 235 of the Act provides as follows:

Where a report has been made by the Registrar under section 234(6) or under section 234(7) read with sub-section (6), the Central Government may appoint one or more competent persons as inspectors to investigate the affairs of a company and to report thereon in such manner as the Central Government may direct.

It may be noted that section 234(6) empowers the Registrar to report in writing to the Central Government if the information or explanation called for by him under section 234(1) is not furnished in time, or if, on perusal of such information or explanation or on examination of the books and papers produced before him, he is of the opinion that the state of affairs of the company is unsatisfactory. Under section 234(7), the Registrar can report to the Central Government if a contributory or creditor, etc., makes a representation to him that the business of the company is being carried on in fraud of creditors, etc., or otherwise for fraudulent or unlawful purpose.

It is not necessary that the sole object of the operations complained of, should be fraudulent or unlawful. It is sufficient if one of the objects is fraudulent or unlawful.

Where a company is consistently violating provisions of the Act, and is yet carrying on substantial business, the Registrar is competent to take steps for investigation of the affairs of the company - Standards Brand Ltd., In re [1980] 50 Comp. Cas.75 (Cal.).

- 2. Shareholders - Section 235(2) of the Act, empowers the CLB to consider an application from a specified number of shareholders and to declare that an investigation be conducted into the affairs of the company. Upon such declaration by the CLB, the Central Government shall appoint one or more competent persons to investigate the affairs of the company and to report thereon in such manner as the Central Government may direct. The shareholders competent to make an application to CLB are:

- (i) in case of a company having share capital not less than 200 members or members holding not less than 1 /10th of the total voting power therein;
- (ii) in case of a company having no share capital not less than 1/5th of the persons on the company's register of members.

Composite petition under sections 397,398 and 235 - While test of eligibility to make a valid petition for the purposes of sections 397 and 398 can be fulfilled by obtaining consent of other shareholders, the same will not be acceptable for the purpose of section 235 as petition under section 235(2) cannot be sustained by 'consent' of other shareholders - Haranadh v. Shri Laxmi Durga Paper Products (I) Ltd. [2005] 62 SCL 279 (CLB).

The application by members should be supported by such evidence as the CLB may require for the purpose of showing that the applicants have good reason for requiring the investigation [Section 236]. The Central Government may, before appointing an inspector, require the applicant to give security, for such amount not exceeding one-thousand rupees as it may think fit, for payment of the costs of the investigation.

The CLB, after hearing the parties, may declare that the affairs of the company ought to be investigated and on such declaration, the Central Government shall appoint one or more inspectors to investigate the affairs of the company in such manner as directed by the Central Government.

3. The company, by passing special resolution [Section 237(a)(i)].

4. The Court, by order [Section 237(a)(ii)]- The Central Government shall appoint one or more competent persons as inspectors to investigate the affairs of a company and to report thereon in such manner as the Central Government may direct, if the Court, by order, declares that the affairs of the company ought to be investigated by an inspector appointed by the Central Government. For passing an order for investigation, it is not necessary that a proceeding be pending before the court; even a petition simpliciter can be entertained - Delhi Flour Mills Co. Ltd., In re [1975] 45 Comp. Cas. 33.

It has been contended in several cases that the power and discretion of the Government were uncontrolled and the court could direct an investigation whenever it suspected that all was not well with the company, and it was not necessary for the petitioner to prove his allegations before the court for, he could prove them before the Inspectors. However, in Mrs. U.A. Sumathy v. Digvijay Chit Fund (P.) Ltd. [1983] 53 Comp. Cas. 493 (Ker.), the High Court observed:

"No doubt, clause (a)(ii) of section 237 does not lay down what circumstances are to be proved before the Court and on what materials, the Court could act but that does not mean that mere allegations are sufficient. A Court can act only on the materials placed before it and those materials should at least be such as to satisfy the Court that a deeper probe into the company's affairs is desirable in the interest of the company itself." [Also see A.P. Civil Supplies Corpn. Ltd v. Delta Oils and Fats Ltd. [2007] 73 SCL 242 (AP)].

It may be noted that company court itself is not vested with any powers of investigation under section 237. All that it can do is to consider the plea of the petitioners as to whether it is a fit case to direct the Central Government to do so. [Unet India Ltd, v. I.C. Rao [1998] 93 Comp. Cas. 41 (AP)].

In Safia Usman v. Union of India [1999]22SCL372(Ker.), it has been held that before invoking High Court's discretionary jurisdiction, CLB, the statutory body created specifically for the purpose under section 237, must first be approached. The Court further held that the High Court can only issue a declaration with reference to affairs of a company and cannot direct Central Government to conduct investigation.

- 5. Investigation by the Central Government - Section 237(b) provides that the Central Government may appoint inspectors if, in the opinion of the CLB, there are circumstances suggesting:
- (i) that the business of the company is being conducted with intent to defraud its creditors, members or any other persons, or otherwise for a fraudulent or unlawful purpose, or in a manner oppressive of any of its members, or that the company was formed for any fraudulent or unlawful purpose; or
 - (ii) that the persons concerned in the formation of the company or the management of its affairs have in connection therewith been guilty of fraud, misfeasance or other misconduct towards the company or any of its members; or
 - (iii) that the members of the company have not been given all the information with respect to its affairs which they might reasonably expect, including information relating to the calculation of the commission payable to a managing or other director or the manager of the company.

Thus, under section 237(b) although the power to appoint inspectors to conduct investigation and to act on the reports of the investigation rests with the Central Government, it can do so only if CLB expresses its opinion as regards existence of circumstances calling for investigation.

It is important to note that the above three grounds limit the justification for ordering investigation under section 237(6), and it cannot go on a fishing expedition to find evidence - Barium Chemicals Ltd. v. Company Law Board [1966] 36 Comp. Cas. 639 (SC).

Economic working of a company cannot be a matter for investigation. There must be allegation of illegal acts or malpractices, malfeasance, etc., to sustain an order of investigation - Delhi Flour Mills Company Ltd. (supra). Contravention of the provisions of the other laws for the time being in force, is, of course, within the scope of clause (b) of section 237 - New Central Jute Mills Company Ltd. v. Deputy Secretary, Ministry of Finance [1966] 36 Comp. Cas. 512

The power to form an opinion regarding investigation under section 237(b) is an exclusive jurisdiction conferred on the CLB and as such no other forum including District consumer forum or authority including the Central Government can exercise this power. The fact that the petitioner was an insignificant shareholder shall have no bearing. [Chandrika Prasad Sinha v. Bata India Ltd, [1996] 9 SCL 108 (CLB).]

Investigation is to be ordered if a prima facie opinion is formed by the CLB that the business of the company is being/has been conducted with intent to defraud creditors, members or any other persons or the conduct of company is oppressive to any of its members or there is misfeasance or misconduct on the part of the management in carrying on the affairs of the company [Incab Industries Ltd., In re [1996] 10 SCL 390 (CLB)]. The Bombay High Court in Panther Fincap & Management Services Ltd. v. Union of India [2007] 74 SCL 202 has held that when a company is found to be engaged in any business authorised by its memorandum, even though its dominant business might remain stalled by various orders of the Government, nevertheless, the company has to be treated as running its business and the requirement if section 237(b)(i) will be satisfied :

In Charanjit Singh Ghuman v. Dr. Reddy's Laboratories Ltd. [1997] 30 SCL 111 the issue was whether a shareholder can ask for order for investigation of company's affairs in other cases, say, for violation of the legal provisions in regard to issue of duplicate share certificate. The court, based on facts and circumstances of the case, held that although violations have taken place of the requirements of sections 108(1), 113(2), 84(3), 111, 206A and Companies (Issue of Shares Certificates) Rules, 1960, the company had taken sufficient precautions so that the interest of the petitioner is not affected and as such ingredients of section 237(b)(i) are not attracted.

To order investigation, requirements of section 237(b) must be complied with. On a single instance of alleged oppression, extraordinary powers could not be invoked. In N.M. Pimpalkar v. Shree Narkeshari Prakashan Ltd. [1998] 17 SCL 259 (CLB-New Delhi), investigation was sought for an allegation that one R, who was appointed as managing director for one year in AGM, was relieved of his post within 2 months on obtaining resignation under pressure exerted by the chairman, but the petitioner had not been able even prima facie to prove how a fraud or oppression of members had been committed based on the instances cited by him which is a requirement under section 237(b) and on the other hand, the company proved that resignation was voluntary and further R, though a shareholder, did not join petitioners, investigation could not be ordered.

In a petition under section 237, the company and its managing director or other directors are necessary parties and in the absence of impleading such parties in petition, relief cannot be granted - Safia Usman v. Union of India (supra).

The CLB in Union of India v. Sunair Hotels Ltd. [2007] 81 SCL 283 has held that the scope of section 237(6) is wide enough to include past acts alleged to be fraudulent. The CLB has the onerous duty to form an opinion as regards intent to defraud before ordering an investigation on the ground of fraudulent conduct of business. Also, see Union of India v. Shonkh Technologies International Ltd. [2007] 78 SCL 41 (CLB).

Guidelines for ordering investigation into company's affairs

In exercising the discretionary powers under this section, the Central Government, while examining each case on its merits, applies certain tests which are calculated to ensure that a substantial and worthwhile basis exists, warranting investigation. Where the allegations are more of a recriminatory nature arising out of factional fights between two or more predominant groups of shareholders, the Government will not ordinarily lend itself to be a party to such disputes. In other cases, based on the relevant provisions of the company law or any law in force, the following objectives may generally form the prerequisite for ordering of an investigation:

- Where an inspector can bring to light any major contravention of company law or any other law on the basis of which necessary corrective or remedial measures can be applied.
- Where the application of such measures alone will be enough to lend succour to the aggrieved parties, where necessary, or to set right the affairs of companies so as to bring them in conformity with the accepted principles and standards of good and efficient management.
- Where the allegations bring out clearly or, by implication, a charge of irregular accounting, the truth of which can be established only by the analysis of the books by a qualified chartered accountant.

Complaint for violation by SEBI- Whether a bar to investigation – A complaint by SEBI for violation of the provisions of the SEBI Act by itself is not a bar to investigation into the company's affairs when substantial reason exists for investigation - Sonkh Technologies Ltd. v. Union of India [2009] 89 SCL 335 (Delhi). Again, in Rasoi Ltd. v. Jaideep Halwasiya [2009] 89 SCL 317 (Kol), it was held that where violation of SEBI Take Over Code is alleged and also a petition under section 111A for rectification of the membership register is pending, application for relief under section 250(1) cannot be entertained unless circumstances suggest that investigation under section 247(1 A) is called for. In a petition under section 397/398 an allegation of diversion of fund by the company was found supported by audit report. The CLB ordered investigation under section 237(6) while continuing with the petition [2009] 89 SCL 80 (CLB) Securities Ltd. v. Kowa Spinning Ltd.

Fraud on creditors and on the court - The Allahabad High Court in United Western Bank Ltd. v. Khaitan Hostombe Spinel Ltd. [2009] 91 SCL 221 ordered the Official Liquidator of the company in respect of which winding up petition was filed to inform the Central Government to order investigation of the company under sections 235-237 as the court found that the directors of the company did not file the Statement of Affairs of the company and had left the country misleading the court and the creditors by a fake scheme of merger which was approved by the appropriate Court, so as to get the company wound up without payment to the creditor.

Firm, body corporate or association not to be appointed as inspector

Section 238 disallows the appointment of a firm, body corporate or other association as an inspector under section 235 or 237. Thus, only an individual or individuals may be appointed as an inspector(s). However, section 238 disallows appointment of persons other than individuals as inspectors only for the purposes of section 235 or 237. Thus, an inspector appointed under, say, section 247 (for determining ownership of a company) may be a firm or body corporate or an association. A firm of chartered accountants or of company secretaries may, therefore, be appointed under section 247.

Powers of inspectors

An inspector or inspectors appointed under section 235 or 237 to investigate the affairs of a company shall have the following powers :

- 1. Power to carry investigation into affairs of related companies (Section 239) -Section 239 states that if the inspector considers it necessary to investigate even the affairs of another company under the same management or in the same group, he may do so. Under this section, an inspector is empowered to investigate the affairs of the following persons and/or bodies corporate and report on their affairs also, if he thinks that such an investigation is relevant to the affairs of the company under investigation:
 - (a) any other body corporate which is, or has at any relevant time been the company's subsidiary or holding company or a subsidiary of its holding company or a holding company of its subsidiary;
 - (b) any other body corporate which is or has at any relevant time been managed by any person as managing director or as manager, who is, or was, at the relevant time either the managing director or the manager of the company under investigation;
 - (c) anybody corporate which is, or has, at any relevant time been, managed by the company or whose Board of directors comprises nominees of the company or is accustomed to act in accordance with the directions or instructions of—
 - (i) the company, or
 - (ii) any of the directors of the company, or
 - (iii) any company, any of whose directorships is held by the employees or nominees of those having the control and management of the first-mentioned company;
 - (d) any person who is, or has been at any relevant time, the company's managing director or manager.

The inspector is required to obtain the prior approval of the Central Government before undertaking any investigation into the affairs of the company or the persons mentioned in (c) and (d) above. Before granting its approval, the Central Government is required to give such persons, or body corporate, a reasonable opportunity to show cause as to why such approval should not be accorded.

Duties of inspectors are not judicial or quasi-judicial in nature; there are no litigants before him, nor is he bound by any procedure; nor is his report binding on Government - Coimbatore Spinning & Weaving Co. Ltd, v. M.S. Srinivasan [1959] 29 Comp. Cas. 97 (Mad.).

Inspector is not debarred from taking help of other persons in conducting enquiry, but he should himself consider all materials thus collected, while preparing his report - Titagarh Paper Mills Co. Ltd v. Union of India [1986] 59 Comp. Cas. (Cal); New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd. v. Deputy Secretary(supra).

- 2. Power to compel production of documents -Section 240 deals with the powers of the inspector as also the duties of officers, employees and agents of any company or related body corporate under investigation in connection with the actual work of investigation. All officers, employees and agents of the company or related body corporate, as the case may be, are required to co-operate not only in producing all books and papers but also ensuring that they are not destroyed, mutilated or secreted away. This duty or power also extends to furnishing information which the inspector may require. It may be noted that officers, in the first instance, include also trustees for debenture holders. Besides, 'officers' also include past officers. Similarly, employees and agents include both present and past employees and agents.

Under clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 240, the officers, employees and agents of the company or body corporate, as the case may be, would be asked to produce the books and papers not only to the inspector but also to any person authorised by him in this behalf. However, the inspector must obtain the previous approval of the Central Government before he authorises any other person to act on his behalf.

- 3. Power to examine on oath - The inspector may examine on oath past and present officers of the company and other employees and agents and for this purpose require their personal attendance. Where an inspector finds that a person whom he has no power to examine on oath, ought to be so examined, he may apply to the Central Government for necessary orders. Notes of any such examination are to be taken in writing and signed by the person examined and may be used in evidence against him.

Penalty [Section 240(3)] - If any person fails without reasonable cause or refuses—

- (i) to produce to an inspector or any person authorised by him in this behalf any book or paper required by him; or
- (ii) to furnish any information which it is his duty to furnish; or
- (iii) to appear before the inspector personally or to answer any question; or
- (iv) to sign the notes of any examination;

he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months or with fine which may extend to twenty thousand rupees. In addition, he shall be fined ₹2,000 for every day after the first during which the failure or refusal continues.

- 4. Power to take down notes of examination in writing- Under sub-section (5) of section 239, an inspector is empowered to take down, in writing, the notes of examination of any person in relation to investigation. This sub-section also permits the notes of examination, when reduced to writing, to be signed by the person examined after the notes have been read over to him. Thereafter, these notes may be used as evidence against him.
- 5. Power of seizure of documents - Section 240A of the Act provides that where an inspector has reasonable grounds to believe that relevant books or papers may be destroyed/falsified/altered or secreted, he may make an application to a Magistrate and obtain an order for seizure of such books and papers. The order may authorise him to enter the place, where such books and papers are kept, to search the place and seize them. At the conclusion of the investigation, he must return these books and papers. Before returning the books, the inspector can place identification marks on them or any parts thereof.

Report of the Inspector

Under section 241 of the Act, the inspector has to prepare and submit a report to the Central Government. The inspector may, in his discretion, make interim report. But if he is so directed by the Government, he is required to make and submit such interim reports as may be required.

The Central Government:

- (a) shall forward a copy of any report (other than an interim report) made by the inspectors to the company at its registered office and also to anybody corporate dealt with in the report by virtue of section 239;
- (b) may furnish a copy thereof to a member of the company, anybody corporate dealt with in the company's report or a creditor of the company on request and on payment of the prescribed fee;

- (c) shall, where the inspectors are appointed in pursuance of the provisions of sub-section (2) of section 235 at the request of the members of the company, furnish a copy of the report to applicants for investigation at their request;
- (d) shall, where the inspectors are appointed under section 237 in pursuance of an order of the Court furnish a copy of the report to the Court;
- (e) shall, where the inspectors are appointed in pursuance of the provisions of sub-section (2) of section 235, furnish a copy of the report to the CLB;
- (f) may also cause the report to be published.

Follow up action by the Central Government on the investigation report of the inspector

On receipt of the report of the inspector appointed to investigate the affairs of the company, the Central Government may take one or more of the following actions:

- (i) Prosecution for criminal offence - If the report reveals that any person has, in relation to the company or in relation to any other body corporate whose affairs have been investigated by virtue of section 239, been guilty of any offence for which he is criminally liable, the Central Government, after taking such legal advice as it thinks fit, prosecute such person along with officers. In such a case it shall be the duty of all officers and other employees and agents of the company to render to the Central Government all assistance in connection with the prosecution which they are reasonably able to give [Section 242].

It should be noted that the provisions of section 242 of the Act do not bar the cognizance of offence, if punishable under the Indian Penal Code. Further, section 242 does not contemplate a hearing to the company before launching prosecution - Titagarh Paper Mills Co. Ltd. v. Union of India (supra).

- (ii) Winding up of the company - If the report reveals that—

- (a) the affairs of the company are being conducted with intent to defraud its creditors, members or other persons or for a fraudulent or unlawful purpose or in a manner oppressive of any of its members; or
- (b) the persons concerned with the formation of the company or of the management of its affairs have been guilty of fraud or misconduct, the Central Government, unless the company is already being wound up, may cause taking of the following action, by a person authorised by the Central Government, namely :—

- (i) present a petition to the court for winding up of the company or the body corporate on the ground that it is just and equitable to do so; or
- (ii) make an application for order under section 397 or section 398 of the Act for grant of relief against oppression or mismanagement of the company; or
- (iii) make a petition for winding up as well as make application for relief under section 397 or section 398 of the Act [Section 243].

- (iii) Recovery of damages - Section 244 provides that where from the inspector's report it appears that a fraud or misappropriation of property has been committed and the company is, therefore, entitled to bring an action for damages for misconduct or for the recovery of any property which has been misapplied or wrongfully retained, the Central Government may itself in public interest bring proceedings for that purpose in the name of the company. In such proceedings the report shall be admissible as evidence of the opinion of the inspection in relation to any matter contained in the report.

The Central Government should indemnify the company against any cost or expenses incurred by it or in connection with any proceedings brought by it.

Expenses of investigation

According to section 245, the expenses of investigation are to be defrayed in the first instance by the Central Government. But the Central Government is entitled to be reimbursed: (i) by any person, who has been convicted on a prosecution instituted in pursuance of the report or required to pay damages as a result of the report; (ii) the company in whose name proceedings are brought. The company is bound to reimburse the Central Government to the extent of the amount or value of any sums or property recovered by it as a result of the proceedings; (iii) similarly, cost can be recovered from any managerial personnel dealt with by the report; and (iv) reimbursement may also be claimed at the discretion of the Central Government, from the applicants where inspector was appointed in pursuance of section 235(2) (i.e., on an application by the members).

Protection of employees during investigation

Section 635B of the Act protects against dismissal, discharge, removal, etc., of the employees of the company under investigation, who make disclosure during the course of investigation. The section provides that if during the course of investigation under sections 235, 237, 239 and 247 the company proposes to discharge any employee from service or punish him by way of dismissal, removal or reduction in rank, then the company must send to the CLB a previous intimation in writing of the action proposed to be taken against the employee. If the CLB has any objection to the action proposed to be taken, it must send a notice thereof to the employer. The CLB is not bound to hear the company or any other person before issuing the notice -Ashoka Marketing Ltd. v. Company Law Board [1968] 38 Comp. Cas. 519 (Cal.). If the company does not receive any notice of objection from the CLB within thirty days of sending of the previous intimation of the action proposed against the employee, then the company may proceed to take the proposed action against the employee.

If the company is dissatisfied with the objection raised by the CLB, it may, within thirty days of the receipt of the notice of the objection, prefer an appeal to the Court in the prescribed manner and on payment of the prescribed fee.

The decision of the court on such appeal shall be final and binding on the CLB and on the company.

The aforesaid provisions of section 635B are without prejudice to the provisions of any law for the time being in force.

Investigation of ownership of a company [Section 247]

It may sometimes become necessary in public interest for the Central Government to know the persons who are financially interested in a company and who control the policy or materially influence it. For this reason, section 247 provides that where the Central Government is satisfied that there is good reason to do so, it may appoint one or more inspectors to investigate and report on the membership of the company and other matters relating to it, for the purpose of determining the true persons:

- (i) who are or have been financially interested in the success or failure, whether real or apparent of the company; or
- (ii) who are or have been able to control or materially influence the policy of the company.

A new sub-section (1A) has been added after sub-section (1) of section 247 as detailed above, by the Amendment Act, 1988. According to the new subsection, the Central Government shall appoint one or more inspectors under sub-section (1), if the CLB, in the course of any proceedings before it, declares by an order that the affairs of the company ought to be investigated, as regards the membership of the company and other matters relating to the company, for the purpose of determining the true persons:

- (a) who are or have been financially interested in the success or failure, whether real or apparent, of the company, or
- (b) who are or have been able to control or materially influence the policy of the company.

In Bakhtawar Construction Co. (P.) Ltd. v. Blossom Breweries Ltd. [1997] 24 CLA 211 (CLB), it was alleged that the names of shareholders given by the company were fictitious, non-existent or benami and that the Registrars for Shares & Securities had not complied with the provisions of law in processing the applications for shares, their allotment and transfers where applicable and urged that an investigation under section 247(1A) would help to find out the relevant facts about the true owners of the shares. The CLB dismissed the petition on the ground that it had been instituted purely on unfounded apprehensions and suspicions. The power of investigation under section 247(1A) could be invoked bona fide in public interest only.

The provisions of sections 239, 240 and 241 apply mutatis mutandis to the investigation under this section in relation to all persons whom the inspector has reasonable cause to believe to be financially interested in the success or failure of the company or who have been able to control or materially influence the policy of the company.

On completion of his investigation, the inspector is required to submit his report to the Central Government, but the Central Government is under no obligation to supply copies of the inspector's report to the company or companies or any other person, if it is of the opinion that there is good reason for not divulging the contents of the report or any part thereof. However, a copy of such report to the extent there is no good reason to hold back shall be kept by the Registrar.

Publication of Inspector's Report

As regards publication of the inspector's report the CLB has expressed the following opinion:

"It has now been decided by the Company Law Board that in important cases where the reports of investigation into the affairs of ownership of companies by inspectors appointed for the purpose are likely to be of interest to the general public, such reports will be published. The criterion for selection would be the size, the extent of public interest and participation, the nature of industry engaged in, the extent of consumer and creditor's interest and the relationship, if any, with other companies fulfilling these requirements"—Company News and Notes, dated 17-8-1964, page 10.

However, a report made under section 239 should not be disclosed to the public before its acceptance by the Central Government - Swadeshi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Swadeshi Polytex [1982]52 Comp. Cas. 483 (All.).

Imposition of restrictions upon shares and debentures and prohibition of transfer of shares or debentures in certain cases [Section 250]

Section 250 contains one of the important provisions of the Act dealing with corporate takeovers. Corporate takeovers cannot take place without acquisition of the controlling block of shares of a company. That is why provisions have been made empowering the CLB to impose restrictions with regard to shares and debentures issued or to be issued as also with regard to transfer of these instruments, which has either taken place or is likely to take place. The first set of restrictions is dealt with in sub-sections (1) and (2) while the second set of restrictions is dealt with in sub-sections (3) and (4). The objective being the same, namely, to prevent an undesirable take-over, there is an unavoidable element of overlapping in the provisions dealing with both sets of restrictions".

Under sub-section (1) a reference may be made by the Central Government to the CLB in connection with any investigation under sections 247, 248 or 249 to find out the relevant facts about any shares/debentures. A complaint may also be made by any person in this behalf to the CLB. Where it appears to the CLB that there is good reason to find out the relevant facts about any shares/debentures (whether issued or to be issued) and it is of the opinion that such facts cannot be found out unless the restrictions specified below are imposed, it may, by order, direct that the shares/ debentures shall be subject to these restrictions. Such restrictions shall be for a period not exceeding three years as may be specified in the order.

Section 250 does not confer upon CLB a power to grant any interim relief during pendency of a proceeding. CLB has no inherent powers nor can it assume that said power is vested in CLB implicitly.

Thus, till the CLB comes to a conclusion that there are good reasons to find out the relevant facts to which conclusion the CLB can come only after going through the merits of the case, there is no scope for any power vested in CLB to impose the restrictions' as provided under section 250(2). [Bakhtawar Construction Co. (P.) Ltd. v. Blossom Breweries Ltd. (supra)]

Restrictions

Restrictions in relation to shares - Restrictions that may be imposed under sub-section (2) are:

- (i) where those shares are to be issued, they shall not be issued.
- (ii) no voting right shall be exercisable in respect of those shares.
- (iii) no rights issue shall be made in respect of those shares.
- (iv) except in a liquidation, no payment shall be made to any sums due from the company on those shares, whether in respect of dividend, capital or otherwise.

Any issue or any transfer of those shares, if made, shall be void.

Further, where shares in any company are issued in contravention of any of the above restrictions, the company and the every officer of the company who is in default, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to rupees fifty thousand [Section 250(10)].

A prosecution under section 250 shall not be instituted except by, or with the consent of, the Central Government.

Change in the composition of the Board of directors - Where a transfer of shares in a company has taken place and as a result thereof a change in the composition of the Board of directors of the company is likely to take place and the CLB is of the opinion that any such change would be prejudicial to the public interest, it may, by order, direct that

- (a) the voting rights in respect of those shares shall be frozen for such period as not exceeding three years, as may be specified in the order;
- (b) no resolution passed or action taken to effect a change in the composition of the Board of directors before the date of the order shall have effect unless confirmed by the CLB.

Sub-section (3) can be invoked, and only if, the following three links in a chain exist. What is more important is that the first link in the chain should give rise to the second and second to the third. That is, there must exist a causal relationship in the chain. These links are :

- (i) there must be a transfer of shares;
- (ii) the transfer of shares should be likely to result in a change in the composition of Board of directors; and
- (iii) such change would be prejudicial to the public interest.

It is clear, therefore, that unless the contemplated chain relationship is established, the provisions of sub-section (3) cannot be applied. It will also be seen from these provisions that the stimulation for the reaction has to start from transfer of shares. Thus, transfer of shares is a sine qua non for setting the machinery of sub-section (3) in motion - In re, Shawallas Company Ltd., CLB Order, dated 31-10-1985.

Sub-section (4) guards against the likely change in the composition of Board of directors as a result of transfer of shares likely to take place and the CLB is of the opinion that such consequent change in the composition of the Board of directors shall be prejudicial to public interest. The CLB*, on forming such an opinion, may, by order, direct that any transfer of shares in the company during the specified period (not exceeding three years) shall be void.

Sub-section (5) empowers the CLB at any time to vary or rescind any order made by it. Any order made by the CLB, in this regard, shall be served on the company within fourteen days of the making of the order. Any person who exercises or purports to exercise any right to shares issued or to be issued or votes or appoints proxy where he is the holder of shares or transfers any shares, which are subject to CLB's order under sub-sections (2), (3) and (4) of section 250, he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term that may extend to six months or with fine up to ₹fifty-thousand or with both. A failure by any holder of shares which are subject to restrictions as above to give notice to a person who otherwise may act on the rights in those shares without having knowledge of the restrictions is also exposed to same punishment.

Application of section 250 in relation to debentures -The provisions of section 250 apply in relation to debentures as they apply in relation to shares [Section 250(12)].

Voluntary winding up of a company, etc., not to stop investigation proceeding [Section 250A] - An investigation may be initiated notwithstanding that an application has been made for an order for prevention of oppression or mismanagement or that the company has passed a special resolution for voluntary winding up. Also, no investigation shall be stopped or suspended by reason only of the fact that an application for prevention of oppression or mismanagement has been made or a special resolution for winding up has been passed.

Saving for legal advisors and bankers [Section 251]

A legal advisor need not disclose to the CLB or to the Central Government or to the Registrar or to an inspector appointed by the Central Government, a privileged communication made to him except as respects the name and address of his client. Again, a banker of the company shall not disclose any information as to the affairs of his customers other than the company or its associates under investigation.

Non-disclosure of information in certain cases [Section 635AA]

Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, the Registrar, any officer of the Government or any other person shall not be compelled to disclose to any Court, Tribunal or other authority when he got any information which—

- (a) had led the Central Government to direct a special audit under section 233A or to order an investigation under sections 235, 237 or 247; or
- (b) is or has been material or relevant in connection with such special audit or investigation.

Difference between Inspection and Investigation

1. Inspection of books of account and other books and papers of the company is authorised under section 209A of the Companies Act, while investigation can be ordered under section 235 or 237 or 239 or 247 of the Act.
2. Inspection of books of account and other books and papers is not an investigation though it may lead to investigation in case anything wrong or objectionable is found during inspection. Its object is to ensure that there is nothing objectionable in the books of account and other books and papers. Investigation into the affairs of the company is wider in scope. It includes investigation of all the business affairs, profit and loss, assets including goodwill, contracts and transactions, investment and other property interests and control of subsidiary, holding and other related companies too.
3. Inspection can be done either by the Registrar or by an officer authorised by the Central Government or by SEBI. But, investigation can be conducted by competent persons only, appointed as inspectors (investigators) by the Central Government. Inspectors may be appointed by the Government from amongst the officers of the Government or persons from outside the Government.
4. Under section 209A, to inspect books of account and other books and papers the inspecting authority need not assign any reason. Further, no prior notice of inspection to the company is necessary. The object of inspection is to keep a watch over the companies to ensure that the statutory books and papers are maintained and the business of the company is being managed at proper level of efficiency. Investigation, on the other hand, may be ordered by the Central Government under section 235(1) on the report of the Registrar, though it must be ordered by the Central Government under section 235(2) if a declaration to this effect is made by the CLB on a petition by specified number of members of the company. Under section 237(a), the Central Government is bound to order investigation into the affairs of the company if the company by special resolution or the Court by order declares that the affairs of the company ought to be investigated. Clause (b) of section 237, however, gives discretionary power to the Central Government to order investigation, if in the opinion of the CLB there are circumstances suggesting that the affairs of the company are being conducted : (i) with a view to defrauding members or other persons or for fraudulent or unlawful purpose or in a manner oppressive of any members or the company was formed for any fraudulent or unlawful purposes; or (ii) the managerial personnel or persons involved in the formation of the company are guilty of fraud, misfeasance or other misconduct towards the company or any of its members; or (iii) the members have not been given all the information about the affairs of the company including information on calculation of commission payable to a managing or other director. Investigation of ownership of the company may also be ordered by the Central Government under section 247. The Supreme Court in Barium Chemicals Ltd, v. Company Law Board (supra) held that unless the circumstances under section 237 (b) exist it cannot order investigation. Inspection can be ordered without disclosing any grounds as there is no such provision under the Act.

5. During inspection, the inspecting officer can ask for copies of books of account and other papers whereas during investigation the inspectors have powers for the seizure of the books and documents which they consider necessary for the purpose. Both the inspecting officer and the inspectors have powers to examine the persons concerned on oath.
6. An inspecting officer can inspect only that company for which he is so authorised by the Central Government. But an inspector has the power to investigate the affairs of the holding company, or the subsidiary of the company being investigated and the affairs of the managing director or the manager of the company without the approval of the Central Government and the affairs of the connected companies with the approval of the Central Government [Section 239].
7. Further, no company or member can ask for a copy of inspection report made under section 209A, while it is obligatory on the part of the Central Government to forward a copy of investigation report to the company concerned and on request and on payment of prescribed fee to any member or creditor of such company.
8. The expenses of inspection are borne entirely by the Government and are not recoverable. In the case of investigation, the expenses, in the first instance, are borne by the Central Government but may be reimbursed partly or fully by the applicants in the case of investigation under section 235 in accordance with any direction of the Central Government in this regard [Section 245]. Besides, the Central Government under section 236 has the right to ask for a security deposit not exceeding ₹1,000 from applicants under section 235(2). In respect of investigation under section 237 the cost of investigation can be recovered in certain circumstances.
9. While inspection under section 209A and investigation under sections 235, 237 and 239 can be done only by individuals, investigation under section 247 can also be carried out by firms etc.

1.10. PREVENTION OF OPPRESSION AND MISMANAGEMENT

The management of a Company is based on the majority rule, but at the same time the interests of the minority can't be completely overlooked. While talking of majority and minority, we are not talking of numerical majority or minority but of majority or minority voting strength. The reason for this distinction is that a small group of shareholders may hold the majority shareholding whereas the majority of shareholders may, among them, hold a very small percentage of share capital. Once they acquire control, the majority can, for all practical purposes, do whatever they want with the Company with practically no control or supervision, because even if they are questioned on their acts in the general meeting, they always come out winners because of their greater voting strength. So, the modern Companies Acts contain a large number of provisions for the protection of the interests of minorities in companies. Section 397 to 409 of the Companies Act, 1956 contain the specific provisions which empowers (i) Company Law Board and (ii) the Central Government to deal with such situations preventing oppression and mismanagement in the company.

Meaning of Oppression: As per section 397 of the Act, where the affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to public interest or in a manner oppressive to any member or members, may be termed as oppression. The members complaining may apply to the CLB for appropriate relief subject to section 399.

Meaning of Mismanagement: As per section 398 of the Act, Mis-management is said to be done if:

- the affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of the company or;
- a material change (not being a change brought about by, or in the interests of, any creditors including debenture holders, or any class of shareholders, of the company) has taken place in the management of control of the company, whether by an alteration in its Board of directors, or if its managing agent or secretaries and treasurers, or in the constitution or control of the firm or body corporate acting as its managing agent or secretaries and treasurers, or in the ownership of the company's shares, or if it has no share capital, in its membership, or in any other manner whatsoever, and that by reason of such change, it is likely that the affairs of the company will be conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of the company.

1.10.1. Majority Rule but Minority Protection

Rule of majority

The principle of rule by majority has been made applicable to the management of the affairs of companies. The members pass resolutions on various subjects either by simple majority or by three-fourth majority. Once a resolution is passed by the requisite majority then it is binding on all the members of the company. As a resultant corollary, the court will not ordinarily intervene to protect the minority interest affected by the resolution, as on becoming a member, each person impliedly consents to submit to the will of the majority of the members. Thus, if wrong is done to the company, it is the company which is the legal entity having its own personality, and that can only institute a suit against the wrongdoer; and shareholders (members) individually do not have a right to do so.

The aforesaid rule was laid down in the leading case of Foss v. Harbottle.

According to Palmer "the rule in Foss v. Harbottle" is a phrase used to refer to two distinct, but linked, propositions of law. The first (proposition, which is that the court will not ordinarily intervene in the case of an internal irregularity if the matter is one which the company can ratify or condone by its own internal procedure. The second is that where it is alleged that a wrong has been done to a company, prima facie, the only proper plaintiff is the company itself.

Briefly, the facts in Foss v. Harbottle were as follows:

An action was brought by two shareholders, 'F' and T, of a company, on behalf of themselves and all other shareholders against the directors and solicitor of the company, alleging that by concerted and illegal transactions they had caused the company's property to be lost. It was alleged that the directors were acting in concert and effecting various fraudulent and illegal transactions whereby the property of the company was misapplied and wasted. It was prayed that the defendant might be decreed to make good to the company the losses. The question was as to the maintainability of the suit.

The Court held that the action could not be brought by the minority shareholders. The wrong done to the company was one which could be ratified by the majority of members. The company was the proper plaintiff for wrongs done to the company, and the company can act only through its majority shareholders. The majority of the members should be left to decide whether to commence proceedings against the directors.

The pre-eminently procedural character of 'the rule in Foss v. Harbottle' was clearly expressed in the following restatement of the rule by Jenkins, L.J. in Edwards v. Halliwell:

"The rule in Foss v. Harbottle, as I understand it, comes to no more than this. First, the proper plaintiff in an action in respect of a wrong alleged to be done to a company or association of persons is prima facie the company or the association of persons itself. Secondly, where the alleged wrong is a transaction which might be made binding on the company or association and on all its members by a simple majority of the members, no individual member of the company is allowed to maintain an action in respect of that matter for the simple reason that, if a mere majority of the members of the company or association is in favour of what has been done, then cadit quaestio (cannot be questioned)."

Similarly, in Rajahmundry Electric Supply Co. v. Nageshwara Rao AIR. 1956 SC 213, the Supreme Court observed that:

"The Courts will not, in general, intervene at the instance of shareholders in matters of internal administration, and will not interfere with the management of the company by its directors so long as they are acting within the powers conferred on them under articles of the company. Moreover, if the directors are supported by the majority shareholders in what they do, the minority shareholders can, in general, do nothing about it."

Application of Foss v. Harbottle Rule- How far relevant in India- The Delhi High Court in ICICI v. Parasrampuriah Synthetic Ltd, SCL July 5, 1998 has held that a mechanical and automatic application of Foss v. Harbottle Rule to the Indian situations, Indian conditions and Indian corporate realities would be improper and misleading. The principle, in the countries of its origin, owes its genesis to the established factual foundation of shareholder power centering around private individual enterprise and involving a large number of small shareholders, is vastly different than the ground realities in our country. Here the modern Indian corporate entity is not the multiple contribution of small individual investors but a predominantly and indeed overwhelmingly state-supported funding structure at all stages by receiving substantial funding up to 80% or more from financial institutions which are entirely state-controlled or represent substantial interest and, thus, their shareholding may be small but it is these financial institutions which provide entire funds for the continuous existence and corporate activities. If the Foss v. Harbottle Rule is applied mechanically, it would amount to giving weightage to that majority of the shareholding having notionally holding more percentage of shares, than to the financial institutions which may own a small percentage of shares though contributed 80% or more in terms of the finances to such companies. It is these financial institutions which have really provided the finance for the company's existence and, therefore, to exclude them or to render them voiceless on an application of the principles of Foss v. Harbottle Rule would be unjust and unfair.

Personal rights of members

It should, however, be noted that the aforesaid 'principle of Foss v. Harbottle' only applies where a corporate right of a member is infringed. The rule does not apply where an individual right of a member is denied.

The individual rights of a member arise in part from the contract between the company and himself which is implied on his becoming a member, and in part from the general law. Under the contract implied from his membership, he is entitled to have his name and shareholding entered on the register of members and to prevent unauthorised additions or alterations to the entry, to vote at meetings of members, to receive dividends which have been duly declared or which have become due under the articles, to exercise pre-emption rights over other members' shares which are conferred by the articles, and to have his capital returned in the proper order of priority in the winding up of the company or on a duly authorised reduction of capital. Under the general law he is entitled to restrain the company from doing acts which are ultra vires; to have a reasonable opportunity to speak at meetings of members and to move amendments to resolutions proposed at such meetings, to transfer his shares, not to have his financial obligations to the company increased without his consent, and to exercise very many rights conferred on him by the Companies Act, 1956, such as his right to inspect various documents and registers kept by the company, to have a share certificate issued to him in respect of his shares, and to appoint a proxy to vote on his behalf at meetings of members.

The dividing line between personal and corporate rights is very hard to draw, and perhaps the most that can be said is that the court will be inclined to treat a provision in the memorandum or articles as conferring a personal right to a member only if he has a special interest in its observance distinct from the general interest which every member has in the company adhering to the terms of its constitution. A consequence of the distinction between personal and corporate rights is that a member cannot bring a personal action for the loss he has suffered by the diminution in the value of his shares resulting from breaches by the defendants of provisions of the company's memorandum or articles which do not confer personal rights on members, or from breaches of fiduciary duties owed by the defendants to the company; even if the member can prove a conspiracy between the defendants to commit the breaches complained of the diminution in the value of his shares is merely a reflection of the loss suffered by the company, and the proper remedy therefore is for the company to sue the defendants or, in appropriate circumstances for a derivative action to be brought.

Exceptions to 'the rule in Foss v. Harbottle'

In the following cases the rule in Foss v. Harbottle does not apply, i.e., the minority shareholders may bring an action to protect their interest:

Ultra vires and illegal acts - The rule in Foss v. Harbottle 'does not apply where the act complained of is ultra vires the company, since not even a unanimous vote of the shareholders can ratify such an act. In such cases it appears that the plaintiff shareholder can bring either a personal action, basing himself upon the company's breach of its memorandum, or a derivative action, basing himself upon the wrong done to the company by those who have caused it to act ultra vires.

If the action is designed to prevent a threatened ultra vires act, the plaintiff may bring either a personal or a representative action against the company, and the directors may be joined as co-defendants so that an injunction may be made against them too but if the plaintiff member seeks an order that the company shall recover compensation for an ultra vires act which has already been committed, or shall recover property disposed of by an ultra vires transaction, the action must be a derivative one.

Breach of fiduciary duties - A derivative action may be brought against directors and promoters who have been guilty of a breach of their fiduciary duties to the company, if they are able to prevent the company from suing them in its own name because they control a majority of the votes at a general meeting, or because they are otherwise able to prevent a general meeting from resolving that the Company shall sue them. Thus, derivative actions have been permitted against directors who were in control of the company for misappropriating the company's property or misapplying it in breach of the Companies Act, to compel such directors to account to the company for profits made by appropriating for themselves a business opportunity which the company would otherwise have enjoyed, or to deprive the members who controlled the company of their power to control it in the future, and to compel such directors to make a call on their own shares equal to a call which they had made on the shares of the other members. Likewise, derivative actions have been permitted against promoters who were in control of the company to rescind contracts made between them and the company when they had been guilty of misrepresentations or had failed to disclose a secret profit which they obtained from the transaction, and in those cases the court ordered the promoters to repay to the company all money received by them under the contracts.

In Satya Charan Lal v. Rameshwar Pd. Bajoria [1950] S.C.R. 394, it was observed that when a director is in breach of fiduciary duty, every shareholder may be regarded as an authorised organ to bring the action.

Fraud or oppression against minority- Where the majority of a company's members use their power to defraud or oppress the minority, their conduct is liable to be impeached even by a single shareholder - Edward v. Halliwell [1950] 2 All ER 1064.

The fraud or oppression need not amount to a tort at common law, but it must involve an unconscionable use of the majority's power resulting, or likely to result, either in financial loss or in unfair or discriminatory treatment of the minority, and it must certainly be more serious than the failure of the majority to act in the interest of the company as a whole, which will induce the court to annul a resolution altering the company's memorandum or articles.

In the words of Lord Davey, in Burland v. Earle [1902] A.C. 83, fraud embraces all cases where the wrongdoers "are endeavouring, directly or indirectly, to appropriate to themselves money, property or advantages which belong to the company or in which the other shareholders are entitled to participate".

The leading example of the kind of fraud or oppression of this kind is found in Menier v. Hooper's Telegraph Works Ltd. In that case a company was formed to lay down a transatlantic telegraph cable which was to be made by Hooper's Telegraph Works Ltd. The majority shareholder 'Hooper' found that it could make a greater profit by selling the cable to another company which wished to lay it down on the same route, but which would not buy unless it had the necessary Government concessions for the undertaking. The first company had obtained such concessions, and so Hooper induced the trustee in whom they were vested to transfer them to the second company, which they bought the cable from Hooper. To prevent the first company from suing to recover the concessions, Hooper procured the passing of a resolution that the first company should be wound up voluntarily, and that a liquidator should be appointed whom Hooper could trust not to pursue the company's claim against Hooper and the trustee. Menier, a minority shareholder of the first company, brought a derivative action against Hooper to compel it (Hooper & Co.) to account to the company for the profits it derived from the improper arrangements it had made. It was held that Hooper's machinations amounted to an oppressive expropriation of the minority shareholders, and that a derivative action would therefore lie against it. Sir W.M. James, L.J., said:

"The defendants, who have a majority of shares in the company, have made an arrangement by which they have dealt with matters affecting the whole company, the interest in which belongs to the minority as well as to the majority. They have dealt with them in consideration of their obtaining for themselves certain advantages. . . . The minority of the shareholders say in effect that the majority has divided the assets of the company, more or less, between themselves, to the exclusion of the minority. I think it would be a shocking thing if that could be done, because, if so, the majority might divide the whole assets of the company, and pass a resolution that everything must be given to them, and that the minority should have nothing to do with it. Assuming the case to be as alleged in the bill, then the majority have put something into their pockets at the expense of the minority. If so, it appears to me that the minority have a right to have their share of the benefits ascertained for them in the best way in which the court can do it, and given to them."

Inadequate Notice of a resolution passed at a meeting of members - It has been held in many cases that if an insufficiently informative notice is given of a resolution to be proposed at a general meeting, any member who does not attend the meeting, or who votes against the resolution, may bring a representative action to restrain the company and its directors from carrying out the resolution.

Qualified majority- Where the Act or the articles require a qualified (or special) majority for passing of a resolution, 'the rule in Foss v. Harbottle cannot be invoked to override these requirements. If this were not so, provisions requiring qualified majorities would be valueless because a bare majority could always confirm a special resolution passed irregularly. The action brought by a shareholder to complain of an irregularity in the passing of a special resolution would seem to be a personal one.

Where the personal rights of an individual member have been infringed- As already noted, the principle of majority rule is applicable only to the corporate membership rights of a member. Infringement of a member's individual rights like right to vote, right to receive dividends, etc., entitles him to proceed in his own name.

Statutory exceptions - The Companies Act, 1956, vide certain specific provisions, extends protection to the minority shareholders by conferring certain rights on them:

- (i) Variation of class rights [Section 106] - Where the share capital of a company is divided into different classes of shares, the rights attached to the shares of any class can be varied as provided in the memorandum or articles of the company with the consent of the 3/4th majority of the shareholders of that class. Where this is done and the rights are varied by the requisite majority vote, the holders of not less than ten per cent of the issued shares of that class who had not assented to the variation may apply to the "court for cancellation of the variation under section 107 of the Act.
- (ii) Scheme of reconstruction and amalgamation - Section 394 which provides for schemes of reconstruction also gives protection to minorities. Proviso to section 394(1) provides that no compromise or arrangement in connection with a scheme for the amalgamation of a company which is being wound up shall be sanctioned by the Court unless the Court has received a report from the CLB or the Registrar that the affairs of the company have not been conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of its members or to public interest.
- (iii) Oppression and mismanagement - The principle of majority rule does not apply to cases where sections 397 and 398 are applicable for prevention of oppression and mismanagement. A member, who complains that the affairs of the company are being conducted, in a manner oppressive to some of the members including himself, or against public interest, he may apply to the "court by petition under section 397 of the Act. In O.P. Guptas. Shiv General Finance (P.) Ltd. [1977] 47 Comp. Cas. 297, the Delhi High Court held that a member's right to move the Court under section 397 was a statutory right, and cannot, be affected by an arbitration clause in the articles of association of a company.
- (iv) Rights of dissentient shareholders under take-over bids [Section 395]- When an offer for the purchase of all the shares is received and the offer is accepted by the holders of 90 per cent of the shares, the party making the offer may, on the same terms acquire the remaining shares also. But a notice is to be given to the dissenting shareholders who have a right to apply to the court praying that their shares should not be allowed to be acquired on the terms of the scheme. On hearing the parties concerned, the Court makes an order, as it may think fit.

1.1.2. Prevention of Oppression and Mismanagement

In addition to the protection afforded to the minority by the exceptions to the Rule of the supremacy of majority, the Companies Act contains special provisions for prevention of oppression and mismanagement. The aim of such provisions, contained in Chapter VI of Part VI (Sections 397 to 409) of the Companies Act, 1956, is to safeguard the interest of investors, including minority shareholders in companies and also to protect the public interest.

PREVENTION OF OPPRESSION

In addition to the protection afforded to the minority by the exceptions to the Rule of the supremacy of majority, the Companies Act contains special provisions for prevention of oppression and mismanagement. The aim of such provisions, contained in Chapter VI of Part VI (Sections 397 to 409) of the Companies Act, 1956, is to safeguard the interest of investors, including minority shareholders in companies and also to protect the public interest.

Application to Company Law Board (CLB)- The first remedy in the hands of oppressed minority is to move the CLB. Whenever the affairs of a company are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to public interest or in a manner oppressive to any member or members, an application can be made to the CLB under section 397. Alternatively, an application can be made under section 397 when facts would justify that an winding up order on the ground of “just and equitable” is maintainable but the winding up would unfairly prejudice the applying member(s). Requirements of section 399 of the Act need to be satisfied in making the application.

Who can apply [Section 399]- The requisite number of members who must sign the application is given in section 399. The requirement varies with the fact as to whether the company has a share capital or not and is discussed below:—

1. In case of a company having a share capital, the application must be signed by: (i) at least one hundred members, or (ii) by at least 1/10th of the total number of its members, whichever is less.

In the alternative, a valid application may be made by any member(s) holding not less than 1/10th of the issued share capital of the company.

The application to be valid, the applicant or applicants must have paid all calls and other sums due on their shares. Joint holders of shares shall be counted as one member. The CLB in Kishan Khariwal v. Ganganagar Industries Ltd. [2004] 50 SCL 567 has held that if a person's shareholding which was 10% or more gets below 10% by issue of further shares, such person can maintain the petition provided he has challenged further issue in his petition.

2. In case of a company not having share capital, application will be valid if signed by at least 1/5th of the total number of members of the company.

Central Government's Power - Primarily section 399 allows the right to make application to the CLB on two criteria - numerical strength of the members or shareholding strength of the members. Overriding these two, sub-section (4) of section 399 enables the Central Government to authorise any member(s) to make the application to the CLB notwithstanding that such member(s) does not fulfill any of the criteria. This, the Central Government may do, if it is of the opinion that circumstances exist which make it just and equitable so to do and authorise any member or members of the company to apply to the CLB [Section 399(4)].

Sub-section (4) is intended to waive the minimum requirements of section 399(1) and, normally, it is the nature of the allegations made, rather than the number or proportion of members who make an application to it, that is considered by the Central Government while granting permission. The Central Government has to satisfy itself that the member or members concerned would have had the right to apply to the CLB but for the statutory requirements specified in sub-section (1).

Secondly, it should be satisfied that prima facie the matters complained of fall within the purview of section 397 or 398. Thus, the scope of the inquiry postulated by subsection (4) is two-fold. First, to ascertain whether indeed, prima facie, any case is made out of oppression or mismanagement so as to affect public interest prejudicially, as postulated by section 397 or 398. Secondly, whether the applicant or applicants are indeed members who should in the circumstances be allowed to move the CLB not for their personal gain but in the interest of the company and the general body of shareholders and the public. Also see Universal Music India Ltd. v. Union of India [2008] 87 SCL 51 (Delhi).

Consent for Application - Where any members of a company are entitled to make an application by virtue of sub-section (1), any one or more of them having obtained the consent in writing of the rest, may make the application on behalf and for the benefit of all of them [Section 399(3)].

The question now arises is how to take consent in writing from other members who are not the applicants as such on the body of the application but nevertheless consented that the application is to be made. In this context, it is reiterated that the consent has to be in writing and the cumulative number or share holding strength of the consent givers and the applicant(s) meets the minimum required by the provisions and such minimum is not vitiated by any one or more members being defaulters to the company in regard to the calls made on the share capital or other dues on the share capital e.g., the concerned share(s) being in lien for certain transaction, in terms of the Articles of Association. In reckoning the minimum, the joint holders of shares will be counted as one.

The applicant(s) under section 397/398, in the context of sub-section (3) of section 399 are representative applicants in the eye of law and obtaining the consent in writing from other members is a condition precedent to make the application.

Section 399(3) has made it abundantly clear that when the representative application is to be made, the application should be not only for the applicant(s) but also should be for and on behalf of the consent givers and for their benefit as well. Consent in writing as stipulated in section 399(3) is consent to the filing of a particular petition with particular allegations and for a particular relief under section(s) 397 and/or 398.

Parameters to be applied for deciding validity of consent in writing –

- (1) Member(s) giving consent should have applied his mind to the issue before consenting in writing and should have known what relief has been claimed in the petition. There cannot be a blanket consent divorced from issues, grounds and relief.
- (2) Members who desire to file a petition under section 397/398 will have to file the petition in their own names and they have to file an affidavit verifying the petition and also have to indicate that they hold the prescribed number of shares and that all calls made have been paid. Sub-section (3) is an exceptional provision, according to which, with the consent of other members, a member or members can file a petition. In cases where they have the consent of other shareholders which would make the petition maintainable, unless their consent in writing are enclosed with the petition, it would not be possible to determine whether, on the date of filing the petition, the requirements of section 399 are fulfilled. Therefore, obtaining the consent in writing is a condition precedent to the making of the application. [Makhan Lai Jain v. Amrit Banaspati Co. Ltd, [1953] 23 Comp. Cas. 100 (All.)].
- (3) It should be noted that consent obtained subsequent to making of the application is ineffective. It is, however, not necessary that the consenting members should have the petition before them before they give their consent. It is enough if they have considered the question of petition being moved under section(s) 397 and/or 398, as the consent envisaged in section 399(3) is not consent to the petition as such but a consent to certain action being taken, namely, an application under section 397/398. [Rai Bahadur Satish Ch. Chowdhary v. Bengal Luxmi Cotton Mills Ltd. [1965] 1 Comp. Law Journal 35 (Cal.)].
- (4) Mere consent to an application under section 397 and/or 398 being filed is not enough. If consent is given on the basis of one set of facts and the application is made on another, the application cannot be said to be in pursuance to the consent. [V.K. Mathur v. K.C. Sharma [1987] 61 Comp. Cas. 143 (Delhi)].
- (5) A mere consent to represent them for the proposed action against the management for gross mismanagement of the company's affairs and oppression of members is not sufficient. [Kilpest (P.) Ltd. v. Shekhar Mehra [1987] 62 Comp. Cas. 717 (MP)].
- (6) A petition with defective consent is liable to be dismissed as not being in accordance with legal requirements [P.S. Nanawati v. Jaipur Metals & Electricals Ltd. [1990] 69 Comp. Cas. 769 (Raj.)]. The question of validity of signatures appended in a schedule to the petition was examined by the CLB in S.S. Laxminarayanan v. Mather Platt (India) Ltd. [1997] 26 CLA 245. In this case two applicants submitted the petition alleging oppression and mismanagement. Along with the petition they submitted a schedule containing signatures of 146 members signifying their consent to the petition. The CLB held that the schedule containing the signatures of the share holders who were purported to have given their consent did not meet the requirement of section 399(3). Mere, signature unaccompanied by affirmation of the consent is not enough.
- (7) In Kuttanad Rubber Co. Ltd. v. K.T. Ittiyavirah [1997] 88 Comp. Cas. 438 (Ker.), in a petition under section 397 of the Act, the company raised an objection that the petition did not satisfy the statutory requirement of section 397 in that for any member to be entitled to make an application he should hold a minimum of 1/10th of the shares; it was not enough that the requirement of 1/ 10th share holding was satisfied by the shares held by the petitioners as well as shareholders who had given their consent.

The Kerala High Court dismissed the plea of the company. In terms of sub-section (3) of section 399, when a petition was moved with the consent in writing of some of the shareholders, such a petition was on behalf of and for the benefit of all of them, namely, the petitioners and the consenting shareholders.

- (8) It has been held by the Supreme Court in Rajahmundry Electric Corporation v. A. Nageshwara Rao AIR 1956 SC 213 that if some of the consenting members have, subsequent to the presentation of the application, withdrawn their consent, it would not affect the right of the applicant to proceed with the application. The Punjab High Court went a little further in Jagdish Chandra Mehra v. New India Embroidery Mills [1964] 1 Comp. LJ 291 by holding that where a petition has been properly presented, it does not cease to be maintainable merely because three of the applicants have transferred their shares and ceased to be shareholders of the company. The validity of the petition must be judged on the facts as they were at the time of its presentation. Neither the right of the applicant to proceed with the application, nor the jurisdiction of the CLB to dispose it of on its own merits, can be affected by events happening subsequent, to the presentation. In Gees Marine Products (P) Ltd. [2005] 63 SCL 82 (CLB), it has been held that if original petitioners do not want to continue the proceedings, the CLB may allow substitution of the names of petitioners, on the basis of the merits of the petition. The Madras High Court in L. Rama Subbu v. Madura College Board[2007] 73 SCL 146 has held that a consent giver cannot be held bound to his past action contrary to the consent, if there arises a new Conviction or understanding relating to the subject matter.

Trust as Petitioner/consent giver- The legal position is that all trustees should be Parties to the proceedings and they cannot delegate or give consent to one of them to initiate proceedings. Consent could be given only in respect of matters which one could do by himself. Trustees cannot authorise one of them to launch a proceeding in the name of a trust and therefore the consent given by the trustees is something which they cannot give on their individual rights and as such any petition made on the basis of consent given to one or more trustees is not maintainable [Duli Chand v. Mahavir Prasad Trilok Chand Charitable Trust AIR 1984 Delhi 145].

In Sir J.P. Srivastava & Sons (Rampur)(R)Ltd. v. Gwalior Sugar Co. Ltd.[1999]2I SCL 142, the Principal Bench of the CLB has held that a petitioner describing herself as a petitioner on her behalf and on behalf of a trust is not acceptable. It was observed that as long as the petitioners held requisite number of shares, wrong or incorrect mention of the number of shares held was immaterial. However, if one acts on behalf of the other, then, it should be either by virtue of a power of attorney or any other written authority given by such persons.

In a related reference the Supreme Court has settled the issue of maintainability of petition under sections 397 and 398 by & trust by deciding that the trust can be a party to the petition and the same was maintainable as the appellants along with the trust held more than 10% of the share capital including 1029 preferential shares - J.P. Srivastava & Sons (Rampur) Pvt. Ltd. v. H.K. Srivastava - SLP(C) Nos. 10235-36 of 2005 dated 3-9-2008.

Deletion of shareholders' names- Deleting shareholders' names from the Register of members after a petition under section 397/398 has been filed - Whether valid - In a petition under sections 397 and 398 filed against the company, the petitioner company alleged that three petitioners in the petition did not have the requisite share qualifications to initiate the proceedings in that the Board of directors had rectified the register of members by deleting their names on the ground that the stamps on the reverse of the share transfer deeds had not been cancelled and that therefore, registration of the shares in their names was illegal and improper. Since these three petitioners were no longer the shareholders of the company they did not have the qualifications to proceed with the main proceedings. (Vide Sayedabad Tea Co. Ltd. v. Samarendra Math Ghattak [1995] 83 Comp. Cas. 504). The contention urged on behalf of the shareholders was that when the main petition was filed they had the requisite share qualification and that it was only after the initiation of the main proceedings almost four years after it was filed that the directors themselves had chosen to delete their names from the register. The directors, it was claimed, had no authority to rectify the share register without giving any notice to them and without taking recourse to the provisions of section 155 of the Act. In support of their case they had relied upon the decision of the Madras High Court in Damodara Reddi v. Indian National Agencies Ltd. [1945] 15 Comp. Cas. 148, which held that the register of members of a company was a public document and there was no provision in the Act which permitted the directors or any officer to make any alteration to the register by removing the names of certain members on the ground that they had been improperly added to the register, and that the remedy of the company was to apply to the court for the rectification of the register and not to take upon itself the power to alter such register. The Calcutta High Court held that the company could have refused to register the shares on the ground that the stamps had not been cancelled. Once having not done so, it was not open to the company suo moto to deregister that without taking recourse to law. It was held in Rajahmundry Electric Supply Corporation Ltd. v. A. Nageswara Rao (supra) that the validity of a petition must be judged on the facts as they were at the time of its presentation and where a petition was valid when it was presented, it could not cease to be maintainable by reason of events subsequent to its presentation. Withdrawal of consent by some of the members subsequent to the presentation of the application would not affect either the right of the applicant to proceed with the application or the jurisdiction of the court to dispose of the application on merits.

Indirect supersession of the board not allowed

In a very comprehensive decision, the Principal Bench, CLB (New Delhi) in the Shaw Wallace case cited earlier, has held :

- (i) petition under sections 397 and 398 can be pursued by the petitioners concurrently with a petition under section 408;
- (ii) motive for the petition is a relevant consideration when relief sought is examined and ulterior motive, if established, would be a ground for refusal to grant the relief, notwithstanding merit of the case;
- (iii) prayer for supersession of the entire Board is not sustainable when allegations are against only two directors;
- (iv) acts of the directors/company leading to a situation of financial crisis are prejudicial to the interests of the shareholders and the company; however, if a charge against a director for misuse of fiduciary position or for fraud/ misfeasance could not be established, he would not be removed from the Board merely on suspicion.

In this case, the CLB ordered for restructuring of the Board as against supersession and held that if majority in the Board becomes, as a result of the petition, Government appointees, it would amount to indirect supersession and accordingly, ordered restricted number of appointments by the Government and the financial institutions so that they do not constitute majority in the Board. Presence of eminent persons in the Board of a company, ipso facto, cannot stop appointment of Central Government nominees under section 408 of the Act, where mismanagement has taken place. However, such number should be reasonable - Union of India v. Eveready Industries India Ltd. [2005] 62 SCL 34 (CLB).

Besides members, the following may also apply for relief under section 397:

- (i) Under section 401, the Central Government, or any person authorised by the Central Government, has a right to file a petition.
- (ii) Under section 243, any person authorised by the Central Government under the circumstances mentioned in that section can also file a petition.
- (iii) A legal representative of a deceased member, on whom title to the shares devolves by operation of law. Even though not registered as a member he is entitled to present a petition under section 397 - World Wide Agencies (P.) Ltd. v. Margaret T. Desor [1989] 2 CLA 345 and affirmed on appeal by the Supreme Court [1990] 3 CLA 248 and Kalitara Glass Moulding (P) Ltd., In re [1992] 8 CLA 98 (CLB). Also see Rajkumar Devraj v. Jai Mahal Hotels (P.) Ltd. [2007] 73 SCL 328 (CLB).

- (iv) Trustees of a shareholder/member may also make a petition. The Calcutta High Court, in Power Tools & Appliances Co. Ltd. v. Jaladhar Chakraborty [1992] 8 CLA 50, held that refusal of one of the four trustees (of a public-charitable trust) who held bulk of the shares of the company to participate in the proceedings did not render the petition filed by the other three trustees infructuous. In this context, the High Court cited the following passage from Halsbury's Laws of England:

"In trusts of a public or charitable nature a majority of the trustees may as a rule bind the minority, but in a private trust where there is more than one trustee the concurrence of all is, in general, necessary in a transaction affecting the trust property and a majority cannot bind the minority."

- (v) Shareholder in management - As per the CLB there is no bar to any shareholder in management in making petition under section 397/398 - K.N. Bhargava v. Track Parts of India Ltd. [2000] 23 SCL 320. However, the application has to be in the capacity of a shareholder alone and not a mixed one as shareholder and lessee of a property leased to the company concerned. M. Gopalan v. Narmada Consumer Stores (P) Ltd. [2004] 51 SCL 89 (CLB - N. Delhi). However, the CLB in Dinesh Sharma v. Vardaan Agrotech (P) Ltd. [2007] 73 SCL 338, has held that when a promoter, holding shares as also the managing directorship, is irregularly removed from directorship, it is a case of oppression. This decision also held that reduction of petitioner's shareholding by irregular allotment of further shares, below 10% is also an act of oppression.

Who cannot apply- The following cannot apply for relief under section 397:

- (i) a member/(s) whose calls are in arrears [Section 399(1)(a)].
- (ii) a holder of a letter of allotment of a partly paid share
- (iii) a holder of a share warrant
- (iv) a holder of a share certificate to bearer
- (v) a transferee of shares who has not lodged the shares for transfer to the company.
- (vi) Shareholders of a holding company cannot file petition against a subsidiary of the holding company. Herbertson Ltd. v. Kishore Rajaram Chhabria [1999] 21 SCL 99 (CLB). Also the Board of Directors of the holding company, where the directors did not hold shares in the subsidiary cannot make petition under section 397/398. BDA Ltd. v. Kishore Rajaram Chhabria [1999] 22 SCL 284 (CLB).

Notice of application to be given to Central Government- Section 400 requires the CLB to give notice of every application made to it under section 397 or 398 to the Central Government. The CLB has to take into consideration any representation made by the Central Government in connection with a particular application.

Relief against oppression - Members of a company who complain that the affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to public interest or in a manner oppressive to any member or members including any one or more of themselves may apply to the CLB for an order under section 397. If, on such application, the CLB is of opinion—

- (a) that the company's affairs are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to public interest or in a manner oppressive to any member or members; and
- (b) that to wind up the company would unfairly prejudice such member or members, but that otherwise the facts would justify the making of a winding-up order on the ground that it was just and equitable that the company should be wound up; the CLB may, with a view to bringing to an end the matters complained of, make such order as it thinks fit. [Vide section 397(2)] While mere non-payment of dividend does not constitute oppression, the CLB, if it is of opinion that the conditions stated in section 397(2) exist, it can pass appropriate order to bring to end matters complained of and it is not necessary to quote the exact provisions of section 397(2) in the application - Indowind Energy Ltd. v. ICICI Bank Ltd. [2010] 103 SCL 513 (CLB -Chennai).

Conditions for relief under section 397- In K.P. Chackochan v. Federal Bank [1989] 66 Comp. Cas. 953 (Ker.), it was observed that in order to grant relief under section 397, a petitioner must show three things:

1. The affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner oppressive to some part of the members/shareholders including the petitioners. It is to be noted here that the section does not require that the oppressed members should be the minority. 'Shareholders with a minority beneficial interest may, by having control over voting, be able to oppress those with majority beneficial interest.'
2. The facts pleaded justify the making of a winding-up order on the 'just and equitable' ground. In case, winding up of the company is not justified, the Supreme Court in Kilpest (P.) Ltd, v. Shekhar Mehra [1996] 10 SCL 233 held that the petition for oppression and mismanagement shall not be maintainable.
3. To wind up the company would unfairly prejudice the oppressed members.

Interestingly, the CLB in Dipak G. Mehta v. Shree Anupar Chemicals (India) P. Ltd. [1999] 21 SCL 107, has held that dismissal of a winding up petition on deadlock in management will not be a ground of non-maintainability of petition under section 397 where oppression is proved.

However, if facts fall short of a case upon which the company should be wound up on just and equitable ground and no ingredient of oppression is otherwise present, relief under section 397 cannot be granted - Hanuman Prasad Bagri v. Bagress Cereals (P.) Ltd. (supra).

Meaning of oppression

As per Sec.397 of the Act, where the affairs of the Company are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to public interest or in a manner oppressive to any member or members, may be termed as oppression. The members complaining may apply to the Company Law Board for appropriate relief subject to section 399.

The meaning of the term "oppression" as explained by Lord Cooper in the Scottish case of Elder v. Elder & Watson Ltd., was cited with approval by Wanchoo, J. (afterwards CJ) of the Supreme Court of India in Shanti Prasad Jain v. Kalinga Tubes. "The essence of the matter seems' to be that the conduct complained of should, at the lowest, involve a visible departure from the standards of their dealing, and a violation of the conditions of fair play on which every shareholder who entrusts his money to the company is entitled to rely." The complaining shareholder must be under a burden which is unjust or harsh or tyrannical. 'Legitimate expectation' in the capacity of shareholder can also constitute a basis to construe act or acts as oppressive [vide Elgindata Ltd., In re [1991] BCLC 959 Ch. D. and Chatterjee Petrochemical (Mauritius) Co. v. Haldia Petrochemicals Ltd. [2008] 143 Comp. Cas. 726.

The complaining member must show that he is suffering from oppression in his capacity as member and not in any other capacity. "Oppression involves at least an element of lack of probity or fair dealing to a member in the matter of his property right as a shareholder" - Kalinga Tubes Ltd. v. Shanti Prasad Jain [1964] 1 Comp. LJ 117. In Lundi Bros. Ltd., Re [1952] 2 All ER 692, a minority shareholder of a private company was removed from his position as a working director. As an ordinary shareholder he would have gained nothing as the company had never paid any dividend, director's remuneration being the only return on investment. Yet he could not complain of it because he had suffered as a director and not as a member. Thus, to constitute oppression, persons concerned with the management of the company's affairs must in connection therewith be guilty of fraud, misfeasance or misconduct towards the members. It does not include mere domestic disputes between directors and members or lack of confidence between one section of members and another section in the matter of policy or administration. Much less it covers mere private animosity between members and directors.”¹ This statement has been cited with approval in Kalinga Tubes Ltd v. Shanti Prasad Jain, where Misra, J. of the Orissa High Court dismissed a petition under the section and his decision was affirmed by the Supreme Court in Shanti Prasad Jain v. Kalinga Tubes Ltd.

Oppression to be of continuing nature - The facts alleged must reveal an oppression of continuing nature. In Col. Kuldip Singh Dhillon v. Paragaon Utility Financiers (P.) Ltd. [1988] 64 Comp. Cas. 19 (Punjab & Har.), the Punjab and Haryana High Court observed that there must be continuous acts on the part of majority shareholders, continuing up to the date of the petition, showing that the affairs of the company were being conducted in a manner oppressive to some part of the members. In this case, the acts complained of related to 1978-79. Later, when one of the complainants was appointed as the managing director, they kept quiet and subsequently filed the petition in 1982. It was held that the petition was not maintainable as it could not be said that there were continuous acts of the majority shareholders which had been oppressive to the petitioners. Also see Anil Kumar v. Vee Kay Oils (P) Ltd. [2007] 74 SCL 60 (CLB).

However, in Surinder Singh Bindra v. Hindusthan Fasteners Ltd. AIR 1990 Delhi 32, it was held that past acts shall be relevant if they constitute continuing whole with the present facts or if the single past act complained of is capable of unleashing a continuing oppression. In R. Khemka v. Deccan Enterprises (P) Ltd., the A. P. High Court held that continuity of burdensome, harsh and wrongful conduct of one party against another is necessary to bring such conduct within the ambit of the word “oppression”—[1999] 19 SCL 290. However, the CLB in Dipak G. Mehta v. Shrae Anupar Chemicals (I) (P) Ltd. (supra) has held that even though the act of oppression are not continuous but are successive, yet the petition is maintainable on just and equitable ground. However, as held in P. Ramkumar v. T.V. Chandran [1994] 1 Comp. L.J. 469 (Ker.) the Court cannot take cognizance of events occurring after filing of the petition.

Minor acts of mismanagement, however, are not to be regarded as oppression. As far as possible, shareholders should try to resolve their differences by mutual readjustment. Moreover, the Courts will not allow these special remedies to become a vexatious source of litigation. In Lalita Rajya Lakshmi v. Indian Motor Co. the petitioner alleged that the board of directors were guilty of certain acts detrimental to the minority shareholders. The allegations were mainly on improper management. It was held that even if each of these allegations were proved to the satisfaction of the Court, there would have been no oppression.

Acts held as oppressive - Looking to the various judicial pronouncements, some of the acts amounting to oppression may be summarised as under:

- 1. Not calling a general meeting, and keeping shareholders in dark – Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd., In re [1961] 31 Comp. Cas. 193 (Cal.). In this case, the shareholders were left completely in the dark, because no annual general meeting was called, with no information regarding the manner in which the affairs of the company were being conducted, while those men who purported to act as directors dealt with the company’s money in any fashion they liked and prejudicial to the interest of the company. It was held that these acts of the respondent who had the majority backing no doubt amounted to oppression by them of the minority shareholders and also, oppression in the conduct of the affairs of the company and these were to the detriment of both the company and its members.
- 2. Non-maintenance of ‘statutory records and not conducting affairs of the company in accordance with the Companies Act - Bhajirao G. Ghatke v. Bombay Docking Co. (P.) Ltd, [1984] 56 Comp. Cas. 428 (Bom.).
- 3. Depriving a member of the right to dividend - Mohan Lai Chandu Mal v. Punjab Company Ltd. [1962] 32 Comp. Cas. 937 (Punjab.)-The Court in this case held that if the non-voting members were being dominated and had to submit to excessive use of authority, such a conduct amounted to unjust hardship. "To take away the right of partaking of dividends earned by their contribution is not merely oppressive but even confiscatory". Therefore, such a case calls for an interference by the CLB under section 397.

4. Transfer of shares held by a company to some shareholders otherwise than by making an offer to all - In Col Kuldip Singh Dhillon v. Paragaon Utility Financiers (P.) Ltd. (supra) at a board meeting, the shares held by the company were transferred to some of the directors although it had earlier been resolved that they would be offered to all the shareholders. It was held that before deciding to whom the shares should be sold, an offer of sale should have been made to all the shareholders; shares should have been transferred to one who made the highest offer.
5. Allotment of shares by directors in a manner by which an existing majority of shareholders is reduced to a minority - Gluko Series (P) Ltd., In re [1987] 61 Comp. Cas. 227 (Cal), Anand Kumar Saigal v. Manu Properties (P) Ltd. [2001] 32 SCL 367 (CLB); State Bank of India v. Business Development Consultants (P) Ltd, [2005] 61 SCL 226 (CLB).
6. Continuous refusal by company to register shares with an ulterior motive of retaining control over affairs of the company - Kumar Exporters (P) Ltd. v. Naini Oxygen and Acetylene Gas Ltd. [1986] 60 Comp. Cas. 984 (All). Though refusal once by the company may not be oppressive, but a continuous refusal by the company to register the shares with an ulterior motive of retaining the control over the affairs of the company may be a case where the CLB is obliged to interfere and grant relief under section 397. Refusal to register transfer of shares held by a company, on its merger with another company, in favour of that other company without sufficient cause is oppression - 'e' First Technologies (P) Ltd. v. Hyperworld Cybertech Ltd. [2005] 60 SCL 9 (CLB).
7. Failure to distribute the amount of compensation received on nationalisation of business of company among members, where required to be so distributed Hindusthan Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd., In re [1961] 31 Comp. Cas. 193 (Cal.). In this case, the insurance business of the company was nationalised in 1956 and a compensation of Rupees thirty-five lakhs was received by it. The directors did not call any annual general meeting thereafter. In January 1959, the Board resolved to call a general meeting and pass a resolution to continue the company and carry on other businesses authorised by the Memorandum with the compensation money received by the company. Section 39 of the Life Insurance Corporation Act envisaged distribution of compensation to shareholders and dissolution of the company. The question was whether the conduct of directors was oppressive. Held that, the resolution and the persistent conduct of the respondent in the affairs of the company since 19-1-1956 clearly would be that they never intended to distribute the compensation money amongst the shareholders, who were entitled thereto, but to hold it in their hands and at their disposal and benefit by the strength of their majority or controlling voting power. This conduct of the respondent was no doubt oppressive to the company and to the applicant's minority shareholding in the company.
8. Countermanding decisions of Board by a director who controls majority voting power, and not allowing Board to perform its functions - H.R. Harmer Ltd., In re [1959] 29 Comp. Cas. 305 (CA).
9. Where directors of a private company pass a resolution in which they are interested without disclosing nature of their interest - Col. Kuldip Singh Dhillon v. Paragaon Utility Financiers (P) Ltd. (supra).
10. If a sale of its assets is made by a company to some of its directors and simultaneously loan is made to purchasers to finance this sale - Col Kuldip Singh Dhillon v. Paragaon Utility Financiers (P) Ltd (supra). The company whose own financial position was not sound, sold some of its assets to some of its directors and the purchasers adjusted the purchase price partly against the amount due to them from the company, and partly against a loan made to them by the company, it was held that the latter part of the transaction was oppressive to other shareholders.

11. Refusal to register transmission under will - Gajarabai Patny v. Patny Transport (P) Ltd. [1966] 36 Comp. Cas. 745 (AP). Refusal to register shares bequeathed under the will while registering other shares bequeathed under the same will may be construed as oppression since it involves violation of the conditions of fair play.
12. Issue of further shares benefiting a section of the shareholders - Issue of further shares may form the subject-matter of a petition under this section if it can be proved that the idea of issuing further shares was to benefit one group to the detriment of the other - Piercy v. Mill(s) & Co. [1920] 1 Ch. 77; also see Mrs. Rashmi Seth v. Chemon (India) (P) Ltd. [1992] 9 CLA 83 (CLB).
13. Registration of transfers in violation of articles - Where the company registered transfers without fulfilling the requirement of the articles relating to transfer of shares which resulted in weakening the minority and strengthening the local group functioning in league with the nominees of a foreign group, it was held that there was oppression - Bhubaneshwar Singh v. Kanthal India Ltd. [1986] 59 Comp. Cas. 46 (Cal.).
14. Diversion of business opportunity - The diversion of a business opportunity from one company to another company controlled by a director of the former and who was a majority shareholder of that company was held to be oppressive because it deprived the minority twenty-five per cent of the profits which was attributable to that opportunity - London School of Electronics Ltd., In re [1985] BCLC 273."
15. Acts of directors/company leading to financial crisis of the company are prejudicial to the interests of shareholders and the company, (vide Shaw Wallace Employees' Federation case)
16. Sending notices to a shareholder to a place where he did not reside - Shivnath Rai Bajaj v. NAFABS India (P) Ltd. [2002] 35 SCL 448 (CLB). This case also held that an NRI shareholder has the locus standi to file the petition against oppression.
17. Irregular appointment of director on the strength of irregular allotment of shares is an act of oppression - Radhe Shyam Tulsian v. Panchmukhi Investments Ltd. [2002] 35 SCL 849 (CLB). Also see Micromerities Engineers (P) Ltd. v. S. Munusamy [2005] 58 SCL 301 (Mad.)

Acts held as not oppressive - The following acts have been held as not oppressive:

1. An unwise, inefficient or careless conduct of a director - Needle Industries (India) Ltd. v. Needle Industries Newey (India) Holding Ltd, [1981] 51 Comp. Cas. 743 (SC) - The Supreme Court in this case ruled that "on a true construction of section 397, an unwise, inefficient or careless conduct of a director in the performance of his duties cannot give rise to a claim for relief under that section. The person complaining of oppression must show that he has been constrained to submit to a conduct which lacks in probity, conduct which is unfair to him and which causes prejudice to him in the exercise of his legal and proprietary rights as a shareholder.
2. Non-holding of the meeting of the directors - It may affect the rights of the petitioner as a director but his rights as a minority shareholder would not be affected - Chander Krishan Gupta v. Pannalal Girdhari Lai (P) Ltd. [1984] 55 Comp. Cas. 702 (Delhi).
3. Not declaring dividends when company is making losses - Chander Krishan Gupta v. Pannalal Girdhari Lai (P) Ltd. (supra) - Delhi High Court in this case observed that if the company makes profit and the management for ulterior reasons and motives, primarily with a view to deprive the shareholders of any share of the profits, does not declare dividend, then it may possibly be argued that non-declaration of dividend may amount to an act of oppression. But where the company has been making losses, the question of the company declaring dividends cannot arise.

If the company continues to run in losses and its substratum is wiped off, it may be a good ground for winding-up the company but the non-declaration of dividend, under such circumstances, when the company is not making profit, cannot be a ground for invoking section 397.

4. Mere filing of a suit for recovery of money from an ex-director - Chenna Basappa Kothambari v. Multi Plast Industries (Karnataka) (P.) Ltd. [1985] 57 Comp. Cas. 541 (Kar.) - In this case 'M' was a private limited company in which twenty-five per cent shares were held by the petitioner, 'C', and the remaining shares were held by another group and their friends. After the petitioner gave up his directorship in the company, a suit was filed for recovery of rupees eighty thousand from him. The petitioner filed a petition contending that there was oppression and it was just and equitable to wind up the company.

Held that mere filing of a suit against him could not be said to be any oppression to him.
5. Denial of inspection of books to a shareholder - Maharani Lalita Rajya Lakshmi v. Indian Motor Company (Hazaribagh) Ltd. (supra).
6. Lack of details in notice of a meeting - Maharani Lalita Rajya Lakshmi's case (supra) - In case notice of a meeting is not accompanied by an 'explanatory statement', where necessary under section 173(2), it cannot ipso facto be considered as an act of oppression in conducting the affairs of the company within the meaning of section 397. Breach of section 173(2) can at best make the meeting called invalid.
7. Non-maintenance of records - Chander Krishan Gupta v. Pannalal Girdhari Lai (P) Ltd. (supra) - Delhi High Court, in this case, observed as follows :

"The non-maintenance of records cannot amount to acts of oppression being committed on the minority shareholders. If proper records of the company are not maintained, it may mean that the management is not working properly. The wrongful act, if committed, of not maintaining the statutory records at the registered office may attract evil consequences to the directors of the company and may also, in certain circumstances, amount to an act of mismanagement but under no circumstances can it be regarded as an act of oppression."
8. Drawing of remuneration by a director to which he is not legally entitled- If a director of a company draws remuneration to which he was not legally entitled or in excess of the remuneration to which he was legally entitled, this might no doubt cause misfeasance proceedings or proceedings for some other kind of relief, but it would not by itself amount to oppression. Nor would the fact that the director was a majority shareholder in the company make any difference, unless he had used his majority voting powers to procure or retain or to stifle proceedings by the company or other shareholders in relation to it - Jermyn Street Turkish Baths Ltd., In re [1971] 41 Comp. Cas. 999 (CA).
9. Negligence and inefficiency in managing the affairs of a company- Minor acts of mismanagement, e.g., where passengers travelling without ticket on a company's buses were not checked or where the petrol consumption by a transport company was excessive, the Calcutta High Court refused to grant relief under section 397. Negligence and inefficiency, even assuming that these are proved, do not amount to oppression or mismanagement as contemplated by the Act - Mohta Bros. v. Calcutta Landing and Shipping Co. Ltd [1970] 40 Comp. Cas. 119 (Cal.).
10. Where a resolution is passed by the members in a general meeting suspending operation of section 81 (Rights issue) – Shanti Prasad Jain v. Kalinga Tubes Ltd. [1965] 35 Comp. Cas. 35(supra).
11. Increasing the voting rights of the shares held by the management - Where there is nothing against the present management and where it can be said that it would be beneficial to maintain the present management, any attempt to increase the voting rights of the shares held by the present management cannot be construed as an act of oppression - Rights & Issues Investment Trust Ltd. v. Style Shoes Ltd. [1964] 3 All ER 628.
12. By prejudicial conduct against the company's interest and also on grounds of waiver, estoppel and acquiescence, the petitioner had disentitled itself from being granted any equitable relief - VLS Finance Ltd. v. Sunair Hotels Ltd. [2001] 33 SCL 475 (CLB).

13. In a case where allegation of minority oppressing majority was brought before it, CLB ruled that mere expression of desire to gain control over the company by the minority is not an act of oppression – Ultrafilter (India) Pvt. Ltd. v. Ultrafilter GmbH[2002] 38 SCL 573.
14. A preference shareholder cannot allege oppression in matters of allotment of equity shares - Hillcrest Realty Sdn. Bhd. v. Hotel Queen Road (P) Ltd. Supra.
15. Where the grievances of petitioners flow from share purchase agreement between them and respondents no application lie before CLB - M. Trimme Gowda v. SPR Sugars (P) Ltd. [2008] 81 SCL 30 (CLB).

Meaning of public interest

The concept of public interest was specifically brought in by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1963. The idea was to enable the Court (now the CLB) to pass an order under section 397 on 'just and equitable ground', even on the basis of an application by one or two members of the company, not holding the requisite number and value of shares. This is possible if the Central Government under section 399(4) allows a member or members to make an application under section 397 despite the lack of shareholding strength.

The expression 'public interest' is not capable of precise description. It has been held to be an elusive abstraction meaning general social welfare or regard for social good and predicating interest of the general public in matters where a regard for the social good is of the first moment. In the words of Frankfurter, J. of the United States Supreme Court, "the idea of public interest is a vague, impalpable, but all controlling consideration". A thing is said to be in public interest where it is or can be made to appear to be contributive to the general welfare rather than to the special privilege of a class, group or individual - N.R. Murty v. Industrial Development Corporation of Orissa Ltd. [1977] 47 Comp. Cas. 389 (Ori).

The Supreme Court in State of Bihar v. Kameshwar Singh AIR 1952 SC 252 has observed that the expression 'public interest' is not capable of a precise definition and has no rigid meaning and is elastic and takes its colours from the statute in which it occurs, the concept varying with the time and state of society and its needs.

Thus, what is public interest today may not be so considered a decade later. It cannot be considered in value but must be decided on the facts and circumstances of each case

Petition to contain all material facts

Petition under section 397 must plead all material facts necessary for granting the relief prayed for. If the facts transpiring on the date of the petition and alleged in the petition are not sufficient to make out a case, facts arising subsequent to the filing of the petition cannot be relied upon. Also, subsequent affidavits are not enough - Shanti Prasad Jain v. Kalinga Tubes Ltd. [1964] 1 Comp. LJ 117. The validity of the petition will be judged on the facts alleged therein and existing at the time of its presentation. Thus, where the petitioners were not even able to prove that they were members nor could show any facts which constituted their oppression, the petition was dismissed as being without substance – T.J. Thomas v. Rev. C.S. Joseph [1988] 1 Comp. LJ 22 (Ker.).

Further, lack of essential allegation in a petition cannot be made good by leading evidence - Re. Bengal Luxmi Cotton Mills Ltd. [1965] 1 Comp. LJ 35.

Besides, the application under section 397 must specifically state the nature of the relief or reliefs sought. It must contain enough to leave no doubt as to what the applicant wants the CLB to do and should not merely seek a general relief that the CLB (now Tribunal - yet to take effect) may deem just and expedient". The Madras High Court in a comprehensive judgment in the case of S. Seetharaman v. Stick Fast Chemicals (P.) Ltd. [1998] 18 SCL 399 has confirmed all the points made in this Paragraph. Also, the judgment held that relief against reallocation of shares cannot be sought under sections 397 and 398 (as the Companies Act then provided recourse to section 155), and continuous act of oppression must be present to establish oppression under section 397. Further, it held that the mere fact that a substantial shareholder is excluded from management does not amount to oppression. Also cases like denial of right of inspection or declaration of dividend at a lesser rate, etc., do not constitute oppression as separate reliefs are available.

True scope of section 397

In Shanti Prasad Jain v. Kalinga Tubes Ltd. (supra), the Supreme Court considered four important English cases and quoted the following summary given in Meyer's case which lays down certain important considerations to be kept in view in determining the scope of section 397.

- The oppression of which a petitioner complains must relate to the manner in which the affairs of the company concerned are being conducted; and the conduct complained of must be such as to oppress a minority of the members (including the petitioners) qua shareholders.
- It follows that the oppression complained of must be shown to be brought about by a majority of members exercising as shareholders' predominant voting power in the conduct of the company's affairs.
- Although the facts relied on by the petitioner may appear to furnish grounds for making of a winding up order under the 'just and equitable' rules, those facts must be relevant to disclose also that the making of a winding up order would unfairly prejudice the minority members qua shareholders.
- Although the word 'oppressive' is not defined, it is possible, by way of illustration, to figure a situation in which majority shareholders, by an abuse of their predominant voting power, are 'treating the company and its affairs as if they were their own property' to the prejudice of the minority shareholders and in which just and equitable grounds would exist for the making of a winding up order but in which the 'alternative' remedy provided by this section by way of an appropriate order might well be open to the minority shareholders with a view to bringing to an end the oppressive conduct of the majority.
- The power conferred on the court to grant a remedy in an appropriate case appears to envisage a reasonably wide discretion vested in the court in relation to the order sought by a complainant as the appropriate equitable alternative to a winding up order.
- In proceedings under section 397, it is not legality or illegality of action complained of is of primary importance but whether the act(s) is oppressive is of paramount importance - K.N. Bhargava v. Track Parts of India Ltd, (supra). It is also permissible in petition under sections 397 and 398 to bring further facts and grounds before the final hearing of the petition provided such facts/grounds disclose additional cause of action and the same is arguable – Jer Rutton Kavasmaneck v. Gharda Chemicals Ltd, [2000] 23 SCL 71 (Bom.).

Oppression of majority

It may be noted that remedies against oppression or mismanagement are available not only to the minorities but, in an appropriate case, if the Court is satisfied about the acts of oppression or mismanagement, relief can be granted even if the application is made by a majority, who have been rendered completely ineffective by the wrongful acts of a minority group. In Sindhri Iron Foundry (P) Ltd., Re. [1964] 34 Comp. Cas. 510 (Cal), the High Court observed that sections 397 and 398 nowhere prescribe that the application under the two sections can be made only by a minority group. Nor do they prescribe that a majority group can under no circumstances come to Court for redress, whatever may be the nature and extent of the oppressive acts of the rival group and whatever may be the extent of the injury suffered by the company as a result of the activities of such a group. Justice Mitra further observed that if the Court finds that the company's interest is being seriously prejudiced by the activities of one or the other group of shareholders, that two different registered offices at two different addresses have been set up, that two rival boards are holding meetings, that the company's business, property and assets have passed into the hands of unauthorised persons who have taken wrongful possession and who claim to be shareholders and directors, that the bank accounts of the company have been practically frozen, there is no reason why the Court should not make appropriate orders to put an end to such matters.

Mere expression of the desire by minority to gain control over the company has been held as not an act of oppression - Ultrafilter (India) Pvt. Ltd. v. Ultrafilter GmbH case (supra). But when majority is denied his legitimate right and is wrongfully reduced to minority, it was held to be an act of oppression and the Calcutta High Court set aside illegal allotment of shares - Bhagirath Agarwal v. Tara Properties (P.) Ltd. [2002] 39 SCL 943. Also see Kobian (P.) Ltd. v. Kobian India (P) Ltd. [2005] 59 SCL 608 (CLB).

Limitation

In Hungerford Investment Trust Ltd. v. Turner Morrison & Co. Ltd. ILR [1972] 1 Cal. 286, it was held that Article 137 of Limitation Act, 1963, applies to application under sections 397 and 398 and accordingly a petitioner cannot rely upon events (acts of oppression) more than three years prior to the date of the filing of the petition. However, certain authors on the subject hold a different view. Ramaiya, for instance, argues that the Schedule to Limitation Act, 1963 applies to suits and application before a Court and not before a quasi-judicial authority like CLB. Further, it is argued that if the oppression is of a continuing nature, bar of limitation cannot come in the way of admitting the petition.

Sections 397 to 408 confer certain powers on the court (now CLB*) and the Central Government to deal with oppression of the minority or with mismanagement of the affairs of a company in a manner prejudicial to the interests of the company and its members. The provisions of these sections are intended to avoid recourse to the extreme step of winding up a company and at the same time protect the minority shareholders from acts of oppression and mismanagement. Under these sections, the oppressed members of the company may, subject to the conditions laid down in section 399, move the court (now CLB) for the protection of their rights and interests. The court (now CLB) thus approached by the parties is required, in turn, to give notice under section 400 of every such application to the Central Government to make representation to it, if any, for its consideration before it passes the final order in the case.

Instances: A study of the applications made to the courts in respect of which notices were received by the Department revealed common types of mismanagement and oppression against which courts were moved. These were as follows :

- (a) fraudulent transactions;
- (b) grossly inefficient management in disregard of the best interests of companies;
- (c) misappropriation of funds of the company;
- (d) illegality in the conduct of board meetings and general meetings;
- (e) absence of the proper legal authority on the part of directors to carry on the management of companies.

Nature of reliefs - While making these allegations, the parties sought the following general types of reliefs from the courts :

- (a) a direction by the court for the proper conduct of the affairs of the company;
- (b) removal of the existing directors or some of them from the management of the company;
- (c) declaration that the removal of the petitioner(s) from the management of the company was invalid, and that his/their appointments or rights were to remain unaffected;
- (d) appointment of an administrator or receiver during the interim period till final judgment of the court (now CLB);

- (e) revision of the company's accounts and recovery of funds alleged to have been misappropriated by the existing management; and
- (f) an order that the affairs of the company should be investigated - Taxmann's Circulars & Clarifications, 1992 edn., pp. 422-423.

PREVENTION OF MISMANAGEMENT

Application to CLB for relief in cases of mismanagement - Section 398 provides for relief in cases of mismanagement. The section provides that the requisite number of members (as laid down in section 399) of a company may apply to the CLB for appropriate relief on the ground of mismanagement of the company. Similar to the case of oppression, the legal representative of the deceased shareholder acquires right to approach competent court for relief against mismanagement of the company - Arjun Tukaram Shetaonkar v. Smt. Urmila Vaikunta Desai [2001] 34 SCL 227 (Bom.).

Relief by the CLB - The CLB may give relief if it is of opinion—

- (a) that the affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to the public interest or in a manner prejudicial to interests of the company; or
- (b) that by reason of a material change in the management or control of the company, the affairs of the company are likely to be conducted in a manner prejudicial to the public interest or in a manner prejudicial to the interests of the company.

The change in management or control of the company may be due to an alteration in its Board of directors or Manager or in the ownership of the company's shares, or if it has no share capital, in its membership or in any other manner whatsoever. The material change in the management or control does not include a change brought about by, or in the interests of any creditors including debenture holders, or any class of shareholders, of the company.

It would, however, not be correct to say that jurisdiction of CLB is very wide and serious dispute regarding title to shares cannot necessarily be decided by the CLB. Such dispute may be decided by appropriate Civil Court. CLB was held to be not a Civil Court - Gordon Woodroffe & Co. Ltd., U.K. v. Gordon Woodroffe Ltd. [1999] 20 SCL 429 (Mad.). Where principal issues of dispute between shareholders and the company are already before the High Court, the CLB loses its jurisdiction in matters of sections 397 and 398 - Indowind Energy Ltd. v. ICICI Bank Ltd. (supra).

Instance of mismanagement - A very clear illustration of mismanagement contemplated under section 398 appears in Rajahmundry Electric Corporation v. A. Nageshwara Rao (supra)

A petition was brought against a company by certain shareholders on the ground of mismanagement by directors. The court found that the vice-chairman grossly mismanaged the affairs of the company and had drawn considerable amounts for his personal purposes, that large amounts were owing to the Government for charges for supply of electricity, that machinery was in a state of disrepair, that the directorate had become greatly attenuated and "a powerful local junta was ruling the roost" and, that the shareholders outside the group of the chairman were powerless to set matters right. This was held to be sufficient evidence of mismanagement. The Court, accordingly, appointed two administrators for the management of the company for a period of six months vesting in them all the powers of the directorate.

It may be noted that expression "the affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interest of the company" in section 398 will also take within its ambit the non-conduct of the affairs of the company where such non-conduct results in prejudice being caused to the company. In Chander Krishan Gupta v. Pannalal Girdhari Lal (P) Ltd. (supra), the Delhi High Court observed that "section 398 has two facets. The first is that positive acts are done by the management which result in prejudice being caused to the company. Secondly, section 398 may be attracted even where no action at all is taken by the management and such non-action results in prejudice being caused to the company.....non-conduct may arise for a variety of reasons including serious disputes among the Board of directors of the company which results in a complete deadlock or stalemate."

In the case cited above, for quite some time the company had been incurring losses. The directors of the company were carrying on other personal businesses. The disputes amongst the directors of the company had resulted in the records of the company not being available. The management of the company had miserably failed in protecting the company's records and this failure resulted in prejudice being caused to the company. Moreover, the constant fight amongst the directors, who were also the shareholders of the company, had an adverse effect on the conduct of the company's business with the result that the company started incurring losses. Held that, it was a fit case where appropriate orders under section 398 should be passed. In Central Government v. Pentamedia Graphics Ltd., the CLB held that violation of statutory provisions constitutes mismanagement and offences being compounded do not stand in the way of invoking CLB jurisdiction under section 408 of the Act-[2006] 70 SCL 13.

Conditions precedent for obtaining relief - Section 398 can be invoked in either of the two circumstances:

1. that the affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner which is—
 - (a) prejudicial to public interest; or
 - (b) prejudicial to the interest of the company.
- OR
2. it is likely that the affairs of the company will be conducted in a manner—
 - (a) prejudicial to public interest; or
 - (b) prejudicial to the interest of the company.

due to a material change that has taken place in the management or control of the company. Such change may take place due to alteration in the company's Board of directors or Manager or in ownership of its shares or membership or in any other manner whatsoever. (Such change not being a change brought about or in the interests of any creditors including debentureholders or any class of shareholders of the company).

In Suresh Kumar Sanghi v. Supreme Motors Ltd. [1988] 54 Comp. Cas. 235 (Delhi), the Delhi High Court observed that "relief under section 398 can be obtained only if (i) the affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to public interest, (ii) if the affairs are being conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interest of the company, or (iii) if there is material change which has taken place in the management or control of the company in the manner set out in the said section, and that by reason of such change it is likely that the affairs of the company will be conducted in a manner prejudicial to public interest or in a manner prejudicial to the interest of the company." It was further observed that section 398 comes into play only when there is actual mismanagement or apprehension of mismanagement of the affairs of the company.

Who can make the petition (Section 399) - A petition under section 398, like under section 397, may be made—

- (a) In case of a company having share capital –
 - (i) by not less than 100 members or not less than ten percent of the total number of members, whichever is less;
 - or
 - (ii) by any member or members holding not less than ten per cent of the issued share capital of the company.
- (b) In case of a company having no share capital- by not less than twenty per cent of the total number of members;

The Central Government may, however, authorise any member or members of the company to apply even though he/they is/are not otherwise entitled to do so because of deficiency in the number or proportion of members who can make the application.

Matters Before BIFR - When a matter is already before BIFR, a petition under section 398(1)(b) to disturb the present management is to be dismissed. The order held that when there is a material change in control of a company holding substantial proportion of shares in another company, then such a change with reference to other company, has to be treated as a material change within the ambit of the words "in any other manner, whatsoever", appearing in section 398(1)(b) - Gordon Woodroffe & Co. Ltd. (U.K.) v. Gordon Woodroffe Ltd. [1998] 17 SCL 343 (CLB - New Delhi). However, the CLB in Paharpur Cooling Towers Ltd. v. Swadeshi Polytex Ltd. [2002] 38 SCL 142 allowed the petitioner (happened to hold second largest chunk of shares in the subject company) to revive the company provided a settlement was reached with workers of the company. Simultaneously, petitioner was allowed to purchase shares of the company from NTC.

Petition Undisposed for a long time - Karnataka High Court in Devraj Dhanram v. Firebricks & Potteries (P) Ltd. [1999] 22 SCL 263 allowed a new petition to be presented in place of the old one remaining undisposed for almost 9 years with further material arising in the intervening period.

Cessation of Membership of Company after filing Petition u/s 397 and 398 - The petition get dismissed - Mohd. Badarudheen v. Navarathna Business Developers (P) Ltd. [2006] 71 SCL 215 (CLB). There was no substitution of the petitioner.

Acts held as mismanagement- The following acts have been held as amounting to mismanagement under section 398:

1. Where there is serious infighting between directors resulting in serious prejudice being caused to the company - Suresh Kumar Sanghi v. Supreme Motors Ltd, (supra). In a family centered company if shares are allotted to one group to the exclusion of the other and additional directors are appointed to control the Board, taking advantage of temporary absence of a director belonging to the other group - Ms. Pushpa Prabhudas Vora v. Vora Exclusive Tools (P) Ltd. [2000] 24 SCL 111 (CLB).
2. Where Board of directors is not legal and the illegality is being continued, it will amount to mismanagement, prejudicial to public interest - Sishu Ranjan Dutta v. Bholanath Paper House Ltd. [1988] 53 Comp. Cas. 888 (Cal).
3. Gross neglect of interest of the company by sale of its only assets and total inattention thereafter to the affairs of the company - M. Moorthy v. Drivers and Conductors Bus Service (P) Ltd. [1991] 71 Comp. Cas. 136 (Mad.).
4. Diversion of funds of the company for the benefit of majority group - Bhaskar Stoneware Pipes (P) Ltd. v. Rajindernath Bhaskar [1988] 63 Comp. Cas. 184 (Delhi); diversion of public money for unknown/unwanted purposes affecting grossly financial state of the company - (held gross act of mismanagement) KRS Mani v. Anugraha-Jewellers Ltd. (supra).
5. Where bank account was operated by unauthorised persons - Col Kuldip Singh Dhillon v. Paragaon Utility Financiers (P.) Ltd. [1988] 64 Comp. Cas. 19 (Punj. & Har.). In this case, a certified copy of a resolution had been sent to the bank authorising certain persons to operate the account. No such resolution was found recorded in the minutes book; rather the resolutions passed on the particular date and recorded in the minutes book were different.
6. Advance of loans without execution of a document which is not repaid and even interest is not realised - Col Kuldip Singh Dhillon's case (supra).
7. Where directors take no serious action to recover amounts embezzled - Co/. Kuldip Singh Dhillon's case (supra).

8. Continuation in office after expiry of term and infighting among directors. -Where the managing directors of a company continued in office after their terms had expired, without a meeting being held to re-appoint them prior to making a fresh application to the Central Government under section 269, the continuation in office under these conditions was held to be mismanagement within the purview of this section - Sishu Ranjan Dutta v. Bhola Math Paper House Ltd. (supra). So also infighting among the directors resulting in serious prejudice to the company constitutes mismanagement under section 398 -Suresh Kumar Sanghiv. Supreme Motors Ltd, (supra).
9. Sale of assets at low price and without compliance with the Act. - One of the estates of a tea and rubber plantation company was sold by the directors at a low price to another tea plantation company without complying with the requirements of section 293(1) which demands approval by shareholders and without giving adequate notice under section 173 and relevant information, giving delivery of possession before general body meeting and accepting consideration in installment. It was held that all these acts constituted mismanagement of affairs and the sale was set aside.

The Board of directors and the purchasers were held liable for the company's losses and were required to submit an account of the income of the estate from the date of delivery of possession to the date of its actual return to the company - Malayalam Plantation (India) Ltd., Re [1991] 5 Corpt. LA 361 (Ker.).
10. Collusive sale of assets by lending institutions. - Where the assets of the borrower company were disposed of by the lending institution to the brother-in-law of the managing director in a collusive sale and the member-directors of the company were not able to pay out the buyer to recover back the assets, the CLB ordered the managing director to take steps to put the company on winding up or to have its name struck off the register. In the meantime the lending institution was instructed not to seek any recovery from the company and to release the directors from their personal guarantees - Mittal Dal Mills Ltd., Re[1992] 8 Corpt. LA 104 (CLB).
11. Violation of statutory provisions and those of articles. - Transferring shares without first offering them to the existing members in accordance with their rights under the articles, holding meetings without sending notice to members; issue of shares for a consideration other than cash not represented by corresponding assets and burdening the company with additional rental by shifting the company's office - Akbarali A. Kalvert v. Konkan Chemicals (P) Ltd. [1994] 3 Comp. LJ 102 : [1994] 15 Corpt. LA 170 (CLB).
12. Erosion of company's substratum. - Where neither the duly constituted Board of directors nor the petitioner who was allowed a trial to run the company was able to make any headway towards improving the lot of the company and there were also many irregularities in the conduct of affairs which had eroded the substratum of the company, the CLB asked the Central Government to consider taking appropriate action under section 433/439 in case the newly constituted Board of directors also failed in reviving the company within a reasonable time - AIR Asiatic Ltd., Re [1994] 3 Comp. LJ 294 : [1994] 15 Corpt. LA 189 (CLB) and Thomas George v. KCG Verghese [1994] 3 Comp. LJ 294: [1994] 15 Corpt. LA 189 (CLB).
13. Violation of memorandum. - Violation of the conditions of the company's memorandum by those who are in charge of company's management - S.M. Ramakrishna Rao v. Bangalore Race Club Ltd. [1970] 40 Comp. Cas. 674 (Mys.).
14. Non-existence of names of petitioners in the register of members on the face of existence of valid share certificates, communication in the matter of the AGM to the petitioners and other supporting facts—Banford Investment Ltd. v. Magadh Spun Pipe Ltd. [1998] 17 SCL 166 (CLB).
15. When the respondent managing director does not comply with the terms of consent order and does not appear at hearings, he would be deemed to have abandoned his interest in the company and the petitioner will be entitled to manage and control the company - Mrs. Pooja Joshi v. Century Gases & Petro Chemicals Ltd. [2004] 50 SCL 556 (CLB - N. Delhi)

16. When controlling group in a company takes away the company's significant business by incorporating another company without the knowledge of the other group or of the company, amounts to mismanagement of the company concerned- Vaishnav Shorilal Puri v. Kishore Kundanlal Sippy [2004] 53SCL 469 (Bom.).
17. When the managing director of a closely held company transferred his shares to his son and no evidence could be produced that the transfer was in accordance with the Articles, the transfer is ordered to be cancelled as it amounted to oppression and mismanagement - S. Rehana Rao v. Balaji Fabricators (P) Ltd. [2004] 55 SCL 400 (CLB).

Acts held as not mismanagement

1. Building up of reserves, or non-declaration of dividend especially when it does not result in devaluation of shares - V.J. Thomas Vettom v. Kuttanad Rubber Co. Ltd. [1984] 56 Comp. Cas. 284 (Ker.).
2. Merely because company incurs loss, it cannot be said that it is mismanaged - Chennabasappa Kothambari v. Multiplast Industries (Karnataka) (P.) Ltd. [1985] 57 Comp. Cas. 541 (Kar.).
3. Removal of Secretary by majority decision of Board of directors unless it is shown that the removal has prejudicially affected the interest of the company or the public interest - Dr. V. Sebastian v. City Hospital (P) Ltd. (supra).
4. The mere keeping of the moneys of the company in a Term Deposit is not bad business practice or in any case such mismanagement as would warrant interference under section 398 of the Act.

The single act of letting out the premises of the company is not sufficient to attract this section.

Allegations that properties of the company have been let out at low rents without any proof as to what higher rents were available as also an unsubstantiated allegation that premium amounts were misappropriated were held to be not sufficient in invoking the provisions regarding mismanagement - Jaladhar Chakraborty v. Power Tools and Appliances Co. Ltd.* [1994] 79 Comp. Cas. 505 (Cal).

5. Arrangement with creditors in company's bona fide interest. - Where the directors of a company in financial difficulties arrange with the company's creditors that the creditors may become shareholders and directors instead of remaining as creditors, was not an act of mismanagement or oppression so far as the existing shareholders are concerned but done bona fide in the best interests of the company - Suresh Chandra Marwaha v. Lauls (P) Ltd.* [1978] 48 Comp. Cas. 110 (DB) (P & H).
6. Removal of director and termination of works manager's services. - Termination of the services of a works manager who held only ten shares was not in itself an act of mismanagement - Modern Furnishers (Interior Designers) (P) Ltd., In re* [1985] 58 Comp. Cas. 858 (Cal). Removal of some of the directors from office which was found to be valid was held to be not a state of mismanagement of the company's affairs - Siddaramappa Bapurao Patil v. Ratna Cements (Yadwad) Ltd.* [1991] 70 Comp. Cas. 27 (Kar.).
7. Mismanagement cannot be alleged in pre-production stage—S. Seetharaman v. Stick Fast Chemicals (P) Ltd.* (supra).
8. Mere breach of fiduciary duty resulting in suffering of interest of company or public interest is not a ground for interference by CLB under section 398(1)(b) of the Act; there must be material change in management or control of company - Gordon Woodroffe & Co. Ltd. v. U.K. Gordon Woodroffe Ltd (supra).

Removal of existing directors and appointment of new directors cannot be challenged in a petition under section 398. It is only when the new directors misconduct the affairs of the company that it may be said that they had been working to the prejudice of the company - RaiSaheb Vishwamitra v. Amar

Nath Mehrotra 1983 Tax LR 2600 : [1986] 59 Comp. Cas. 854 (All).

Winding up order declined when basic complaint was of mismanagement - The petitioner sought winding up order as just and equitable under section 433(f) of the Act alleging mismanagement of the company as the company did not recover sale proceeds of six flats. The Court declined to pass the order as specific remedy against mismanagement is available under section 398 of the Act. The petitioner has to establish circumstances justifying winding up of the company and show that no alternative remedy is available to him. Petitioner cannot just come to the Court without first exercising his rights as shareholder in the given circumstances - Kiritbhai R. Patel v. Lavma Constructions & Finance Ltd. [1999] 20 SCL 158 (Guj.).

Private agreement for investment and sections 397 and 398 of the Act - The CLB, in Allianz Securities Ltd. v. Regal Industries Ltd. [2000] 25 SCL 349 has held that disputes arising out of private agreements for investment in shares have to be agitated in civil suit and the same cannot be dealt with in petition under sections 397 and 398 of the Act.

Wrong and imprudent decisions in management - It is one of the settled principles in deciding on petition under sections 397 and 398 that wrong/imprudent decision alone cannot constitute oppression or mismanagement unless the same is motivated one or in breach of fiduciary responsibilities - Ramaiya Electronics Ltd. v. Gujarat Trans Receivers Ltd. [2002] 35 SCL 704 (CLB). The Madras High Court in KRS Mani v. Anugraha Jewellers Ltd. (supra) has pronounced that courts should recognise corporate democracy of a company in managing its affairs and should not restrict powers of the Board of directors of the company and should not interfere in day-to-day affairs of the company. This pronouncement, it appears, is not intended for a situation where management of affairs of a company is palpably wrong.

Oppression and mismanagement and family centered companies - A review of cases on oppression and mismanagement reveal that a sizeable proportion of such cases arise in family centred companies and often involve private disputes among the family members bringing complexities in the concerned company's affairs. Some of the points that the Courts and CLB in various decisions ruled are as under:

1. Family arrangement of equality in shares not being a part of articles of association cannot bind the company.
2. Any attempt to block company from complying with directions of the Courts on the basis of shareholding strength is contrary to company's interest.
3. Raising resources by further issue of shares by the group in management is not oppressive to the other group so long the issue is in bona fide need of the company and articles do not prohibit such course of action.
4. Where articles provide that shares in the company are to be allotted equally/ proportionately and that no new member could be inducted without approval of majority of members, equity demands, that in making allotments requirement of articles should be followed and any allotment of shares to outsiders without offering the proportionate shares to those who are entitled thereto is oppression.

[Vide V.B. Gopalakris Jinan v. New Theatres (P) Ltd. [2001] 30 SCL 197 (CLB)]

Also see Mrs. Najma M. Saiyed v. Mehboob Productions (P) Ltd. [2005] 62 SCL 468 (CLB). In this case issue was development of the business property of the family held company. Decision of Board of directors to mobilise funds for the benefit of the company was not held oppressive. In fact, the CLB was of the view that the petitioner had oblique motive.

5. Sale of properties owned jointly by two factions of a family and sold by one of the factions, where leave of court was necessary to effect the sale was held to be an act of oppression, when no leave of court was taken - Bajrang Prasad Man v. Raigarh Jute & Textile Mills Ltd. [2001] 32 SCL 583 (Cal.)

6. Board of directors, acting in fiduciary capacity, had no right to register irregular transmission of shares. Articles of Association provided for transmission only to holder of succession certificate and there was no evidence to show that the Board in effecting the transmission had regard to the relevant provision of the Articles. The registration of shares of the deceased in favour of one who did not hold the succession certificate was held as an act of oppression and therefore set aside - A.J. Coelho v. South India Tea and Coffee Estates Ltd. [2001] 33 SCL 503 (CLB).
7. In a family based company in the nature of quasi-partnership, admission of new members should be with the consent of existing members. Though a number of irregular and improper acts were allegedly committed by respondents to reduce the shareholding of the petitioners from 50% to less than 10% on record and to remove them from management of the company, the CLB ordered that the petitioners should sell their shares to the respondents/company on receipt of fair value in view of the fact that bringing back the parity in shareholding and management would bring deadlock in the company. This order was to safeguard the interest of the company- S. Ajit Singh v. DSS Enterprises (P) Ltd. [2001] 34 SCL 547.
8. Directors of a company cannot use their fiduciary powers over the shares of the company for destroying an existing majority. They cannot gain total control of the company by use of improper means. The right to refuse transmission of shares cannot be invoked against the legal heir/successor of the deceased shareholder - Smt. Shanta Devi Pratap Singh Gaekwad v. Sangramsinh P. Gaekwad [2002] 37 SCL 339 (Guj.).
9. A party to a decision can never allege mismanagement - A family/private agreement between shareholders in the instant case, as a reference point before CLB, has become redundant in view of the agreement between parties to implement the family settlement - Prakash Math v. Ashoka Mfg. Co. (P) Ltd. [2002] 38 SCL 747 (CLB).
10. In a partnership in the guise of a company (a family company), removing a director by dubious means and methods from directorship, siphoning of funds, not serving notice etc. constitute oppression. The CLB allowed compensation for loss of office as a director to the petitioner and directed the company and the respondents to purchase the shares of the petitioner at fair value - V. Natarajan v. Nilesh Industrial Products (P) Ltd. [2003] 41 SCL 237 (CLB).
11. Petitioner complaining that a majority group in the family company has been reduced to minority has to establish that all the family members involved have recognized creation and existence of groups in the company. However, any disturbance in shareholding of members disproportionately is an act of oppression - Mrs. Shyamali Day v. Homco Engg. Works (P) Ltd. [2003] 41 SCL 223 (CLB); also Dilip Kumar Chandra v. Chandra & Sons (P) Ltd. [2003] 45 SCL 408 (CLB - Delhi).
12. The CLB, in Brij Mohan Bansal v. Bansal Gems (P) Ltd. [2002] 38 SCL 1 has held that in the absence of cogent evidence from petitioner to support his contention, it is impossible to accept that concerned documents were fabricated/manipulated to oust him from management. Also, it was found unbelievable that petitioner could remain silent for over three years without raising the matter with the respondent.
13. Transfer of shares by certain members of the family in the family owned private limited company in full compliance of the requirements of the Articles of Association is not an act of oppression; also alternative use of land for earning revenue when normal business of the company has been closed is not an act of mismanagement – Devaraj Dhanram v. Firebricks & Potteries (P) Ltd [2002] 38 SCL 13 (CLB - Chennai).
14. Lack of mutual confidence between petitioner and respondent was taken into consideration by the CLB which gave option to the petitioner to take over the company after paying to the respondents their investments in share capital and share application money in the company and all other dues to them even though the petitioner might have got relief through order of the CLB to end oppression/mismanagement - Arun Kejriwal v. A.R. Corrugated Containers (P) Ltd [2002] 38 SCL 52; in Chandrakant Kantilal Shah v. National Refinery (P) Ltd [2004] 51 SCL 387. The CLB, having regard to unreconcilable state of relations between warring groups in the family company directed sale of shares of the minority group to the majority.

15. When Chartered Accountants failed to find out from records of the company, the correct contribution towards shares of the company made by the petitioner, the CLB took into consideration the total "project cost and total resources recorded for the same and attributed the difference to be the unrecorded contribution of the petitioner and ordered issue of shares to the petitioner, representing the difference - S. Swamiyappan v. Andipalayam Common Effluent Treatment Plant (P) Ltd. [2002] 38 SCL 58.

In a petition for oppression and mismanagement a right must exist against a third party respondent - The Allahabad High Court in Banaras Bank v. Bhagwan Das AIR 1947 All. 18 had laid down two tests to decide whether a certain person is a necessary party. These tests are—

- (i) there must be a right to relief against such party in respect of the matter in complaint, and
- (ii) it should not be possible to pass an effective decree in the absence of such a party.

Interested third party in proceedings u/ss 397 and 398 - When prima facie any third party is found to be involved in carrying out oppression and mismanagement in the affairs of a company and named in the petition as respondent, his prayer for deleting his name as respondent cannot be granted - Das Lagerwey Wind Turbines Ltd., In re [2004] 55 SCL 378 (CLB).

Affairs of a Company include Affairs of its Subsidiary(ies) in Appropriate Cases - Sections 397 and 398 of the Act focus on "affairs of the company" in the context of oppression and mismanagement - where the respondent, primarily being a family based company, is also a dominant member of the family group companies, the expression "affairs of the company" as above would include affairs of its subsidiaries and the chain of subsidiaries where a clear nexus of operational control can be discerned on the respondent; this will be specially so, if further the true character of the shareholding in the various companies in the group is of partnership and the group working is as one single economic unit. If facts and circumstances of a case so warrant, after going into the allegations, the affairs of the subsidiary(ies) would get merged in the affairs of the respondent company. From the above, it should not be construed that without going into the allegation and ascertaining the facts, the subsidiaries can be taken out of the scope of the expression "affairs of the company" or be included in it. Therefore, it is necessary, when the plaint connects up the affairs of the holding company and the subsidiary, the CLB has to go into the grievances and consider the evidence and their relevance to subsidiary. If they are relevant, the affairs of the subsidiary come within the scope of affairs of the holding company - Shankar Sundaram v. Amalgamations Ltd. [2002] 38 SCL 777 (Mad.), Life Insurance Corporation of India v. Hari Das Mitndhra [1966] 36 Comp. Cas. 371 (All.), Bajrang Prasad Jalan v. Mahabir Prasad Man AIR 1999 Cal, 156; Debonair-Agencies Ltd. - Company Petition No. 494 of 1989 before the Calcutta High Court. However, the affairs of an independent firm do not come within purview of the expression "affairs of a company" - Sanjeev Joy v. Pereira & Rochi (P) Ltd. [2002] 39 SCL 176 (CLB). This case also relates to a family based company. As the CLB found affairs of a subsidiary was independent of the holding company, the petition of the petitioner to include the subsidiary also in his original petition under sections 397 and 398 against the holding company was turned down - P. Govindarajan v. Tiruppur Transports (P) Ltd. [2004] 55 SCL 453.

Waiver, Estoppel or Acquiescence by a Shareholder Holding 10% or more of Shares in the company - The Madras High Court upheld the rejection of the appeal questioning maintainability of a petition filed against the appellant company on preliminary consideration as according to the appellant company, the respondent was a party to the relevant decisions now being questioned. The Court held that as the basic requisite for making the petition has been met, the petitioner cannot be disentitled from claiming reliefs on merit - Amalgamations Ltd. v. Shankar Sundaram [2002] 38 SCL 803 (Mad.).

Interim Prayer - According to CLB the normal principles to be applied for grant of interim relief are - (i) there exists a serious dispute in question to be tried, (ii) court's interference is necessary to protect the parties from injury and (iii) a prima facie case has been established and the balance of convenience is in favour of the petitioner for interim relief.

AMALGAMATION OF TRANSFEROR COMPANY AFTER FILING OF PETITION UNDER SECTIONS 397 AND 398

- The transferee company would step into the shoes of transferor company when the High Court order sanctioning the scheme of amalgamation specifically stated that all legal proceedings pending by or against transferor company should be continued by or against transferee company. This decision also held that maintainability of petition under sections 397 and 398 was to be seen when it was presented and substitution of transferor by transferee was to be allowed when petition was made prior to amalgamation RFB Latex Ltd. v. Union of India [2005] 63 SCL 539 (Delhi)

Effect of 'Arbitration clause' in the Articles/Separate Agreement

Merely because there is an article in the Articles of Association of a company to the effect that any dispute between the company on the one hand and its members on the other will be referred to arbitration, the CLB will not stay a petition under section 397 or 398 for relief against oppression or mismanagement in the affairs of the company. The provisions of sections 397 and 398 give exclusive jurisdiction to the CLB and the matters dealt with thereby cannot be referred to arbitration - O.P. Gupta v. Shiv General Finance (Pvt.) Ltd. [1977] 47 Cmp. Cas. 297 (Delhi). However, when a dispute arises out of an agreement to settle the dispute by arbitration and no further development has taken place to novate the agreement on arbitration and in the circumstances of the case it is not improper or incapable of being arbitrated, the matter has to go for arbitration, specially in view of mandatory nature of section 45 of Arbitration and Conciliation Act - Naveen Kedia v. Chennai Power Generation Ltd. [1998] 17 SCL 327 (CLB). The distinguishing point may be the specific agreement as against a general clause in the Articles of Association.

When an agreement for arbitration of dispute subsists and the party has already submitted his statement in response to the proceeding under section 397/398, on the substance of the dispute, he is debarred from invoking the arbitration agreement - Suresh Kumar Jain v. Hindustan Ferro Industries Ltd. [1998] 17 SCL 444 (CLB). Also see VLS Finance Ltd. v. Sunair Hotels Ltd. [2000] 28 SCL 253 (CLB).

The CLB, however, has made a significant distinction between matters to be arbitrated and those that cannot be arbitrated while an arbitration agreement subsists between the parties. According to CLB, matters covered in the petition under section 397/398 when relate to or arise from or is in connection with the arbitration agreement, the same have to be referred to the arbitrator provided arbitration agreement is not null and void or inoperative or incapable of being performed. If all the ingredients of section 8 of the Arbitration Act, 1996 are satisfied, even matters covered by sections 397 and 398 can be referred for arbitration - Vijay Kumar Chopra v. Hind Samachar Ltd. [2001] 30 SCL 80 CLB. Where the company itself is not a party to the arbitration agreement [i.e., the agreement is between the individual members (promoters)], then matters related to company affairs finding place in the petition under section 397/398 cannot be referred to arbitrator - Bhadresh Kantilal Shah v. Aia Magotteaux International [2000] 24 SCL 270. Also see Premier Automobiles Ltd. v. Fiat India (P) Ltd. [2004] 56 SCL 59 (CLB). However, where the subject-matter of the dispute is such that it can be adjudicated under section 397/98 without reference to arbitration agreement the matter cannot be referred for arbitration even though the same is covered by arbitration agreement - Sporting Pas time India Ltd. v. Kasturi & Sons Ltd. [2006] 70 SCL 391 (CLB).

Jurisdiction of Civil Court in matters of oppression and mismanagement when a petition for oppression and mismanagement is pending before the CLB- The Punjab & Haryana High Court ruled that the Civil Court has no jurisdiction in the above circumstances as its jurisdiction is implicitly barred because the Companies Act itself has provided a complete machinery for redressal of grievances involving oppression and mismanagement - Anil Gupta v. J.K. Gupta [2002] 38 SCL 112. In this case majority shareholding group filed the petition alleging oppression and mismanagement against the minority group.

However, the CLB cannot pass any order on the same issue on which an order of the Civil Court was in force - Dr. V.J.S. Vohra v. Mrs. Hardavm Johl [2002] 37 SCL 784 (CLB).

Civil proceedings filed before filing petition with CLB- Proceedings before CLB have to be stayed till disposal of civil suit – Guljarilal Kanoria v. Loptchu Tea Co. Ltd. [2000] 24 SCL 101 (CLB).

Appeals against the orders of the CLB and variation of the order of CLB

Section 10F allows appeal to a High Court against any order of the CLB under any provision of the Companies Act, ordinarily within 60 days from the date of the communication of the decision or order of the CLB. However, the appeal is restricted only on question of law arising out of the decision or the order. Allahabad High Court, in Scientific Instruments Co. Ltd. v. Rajendra Prasad Gupta [1999] 19 SCL 451 has held that when the CLB finding on matters of sections 397 and 398 was based on no evidence or on surmise, conjecture and assumption, then the reference under section 10F assumes the presence of question of law. The Court set aside the CLB order and directed hearing of the petition on merits including maintainability of petition afresh, on basis of documentary evidence and materials placed by parties. Any person, not being a direct party, may prefer appeal against CLB's order under section 402, if he is affected by the order – IDBI Ltd. v. CLB [2007] 80 SCL 138 (Delhi). [Section 10FQ introduced by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 as consequence of replacing the 'CLB' by the Tribunal' provides for appeal against the order of the Tribunal. Any person aggrieved by the order or decision of the Tribunal may prefer an appeal to the 'National Company Law Appellate Tribunal' (NCLAT) ordinarily within forty-five days of the date of receipt by him of the copy of the order or decision. The appeal is to be made in such form and accompanied by such fee as may be prescribed. However, no appeal can be made in respect of an order or decision of the Tribunal made with consent of the parties. If the NCLAT is satisfied as to the circumstances, it may allow an appellant to file the appeal even after expiry of aforesaid forty-five days. An appeal against the order of the NCLAT shall have to be made to the Supreme Court of India.]

Variation of the order of the CLB passed earlier - In a case where the CLB earlier ordered for appointment of four directors by the Central Government under sections 402 and 408 of the Act, in the Board of a company presumably with a view to create a sense of confidence among creditors, shareholders and public in the working of the company, on a direction by the Supreme Court, an application was subsequently moved before the CLB to vary that order. The CLB, being satisfied that considerable improvement has taken place in the working and affairs of the company, ruled that its earlier order is not required to be implemented. It was observed that the provisions of sections 398 and 408 are curative and/or preventive in nature and not punitive. Therefore, when the very basis for issuance of the earlier order is no more present, it will not be proper to stick to the earlier order. - All India Shaw Wallace Employees Federation v. Shaw Wallace & Co. Ltd. [2002] 40 SCL 393 (CLB).

Difference between winding up proceedings and proceedings under sections 397 and 398

Sections 397 and 398 are intended to avoid winding up of a company, if possible, and keep it going while at the same time relieving the minority shareholders from acts of oppression and mismanagement or preventing its affairs from being conducted in a manner prejudicial to public interest. Relief, under sections 397 and 398, is perhaps, in fact, a better alternative to the winding up.

Thus, by the introduction of sections 397 and 398, a shareholder aggrieved by oppression and mismanagement has two alternative remedies. Before that, he had only one remedy, viz., to apply for the winding up under the 'just and equitable' clause of section 433(f).

Between a winding up petition under section 433(f) (i.e., when it is 'just and equitable') and a petition under sections 397 and 398, there are following distinguishable features:

Petition under sections 397 and 398	Petition for winding up under section 433(f)
1. Petition under sections 397 and 398 is to be made to the CLB. 2. Notice to Central Government is necessary under section 400. 3. Share qualification is required for an application vide section 399 unless otherwise allowed by the Central Government. As an alternative, a minimum number of members have been specified for a company having share capital. In respect of a company not having share capital a minimum proportion of membership as valid applicants has been specified. 4. Under section 401, the Central Government may itself apply or it can cause the application to be made by a person authorised by it. 5. Nature of relief is much wider, vide section 402. 6. Remedy is of preventive nature and thus helps the continuity of company.	1. Petition for winding up is to be made to the Court. 2. No such notice is necessary. 3. No minimum share qualification is required. 4. The Central Government cannot apply but the Registrar of Companies can apply under section 439(5). Contributory or any other person can also apply. Even the company itself can apply. 5. Nature of relief is narrower, vide section 433. 6. Winding up results in civil death of the company.

Powers of the CLB [Section 402]

Whereas sections 397 and 398 confer general powers on the CLB to pass necessary orders" to end oppression and mismanagement, section 402 empowers it to grant certain specific reliefs. The reliefs contemplated under section 402 are :

- (a) The regulation of the conduct of company's affairs in future [Section 402(a)] - In M.R. Harmer Ltd. In re [1958] 3 All EQ 689 (CA), a father held a majority of votes in the company. By virtue of a weighted shareholding he exercised his control irregularly without regard to the wishes of the Board. The Court ordered that he should be employed as consultant only, and that he should not further interfere in the affairs of the company except in accordance with the decision of the Board. Again, in Bennet Coleman and Co. v. Union of India [1977] 47 Comp. Cas. 92 (Bom.), the Bombay High Court ordered for the incorporation of a new regulation in the articles providing for retirement of the shareholders' directors every year. Further, it held that the regulation was valid even if it was contrary to the provisions of section 255. In Richardson and Cruddas Ltd., In re [1959] 29 Comp. Cas. 549, the Calcutta High Court ordered for the appointment of a Board of advisers to assist the special officer already appointed in managing the business of the company, subject to the terms and conditions laid down in the order.

It may be noted that the CLB's power under section 402 in regulating the management of the company can be exercised even during the pendency of petition under section 397/398 - B.R. Kundra v. Motion Pictures Association [1978] 48 Comp. Cas. 564 (Delhi).

However, under section 402 directions only for administration and management of affairs of company can be given; questions relating to debts due to third parties are outside its scope - T.P. Sokkalal Ram Sait Factory (P) Ltd., In re [1978] 48 Comp. Cas. 503 (Mad.).

It may be noted that a committee of management appointed by Court (now CLB) is not board of directors, nor even a special officer or receiver, and its powers are not subject to those limitations which apply to board, special officer and receiver- Pramod Kumar Mittal v. Andhra Steel Corp. Ltd, [1985] 58 Comp. Cas. 772 (Cal).

- (b) Purchase of the shares or interest of any members of the company by other members thereof or by the company [Section 402(b)] - In Suresh Kumar Sanghi v. Supreme Motors Ltd. (supra), the Delhi High Court granted the group in actual control the opportunity to purchase the shares of the other group at a price to be fixed by a judge. Also see Bajrang Prasad Jalan v. Raigarh Jute & Textile Mills Ltd, (supra); Suresh Arora v. Grevlon Textile Mills (P) Ltd, [2007] 80 SCL 228 (CLB) and H.S.D.C. Radharamanam v. M.S.D. Chandra Sekara Raja[2007] 80 SCL 254 (Mad.). In this case, though oppression was not proved but to remove the deadlock in the management, the father was asked to sell his shares to his son at an independently obtained value. In this case, father and son were the only shareholders and directors.

Valuation of shares - The overwhelming requirement in valuing shares is that the price should be fair. What is fair will depend upon the facts of the particular case - Bird Precision Bellows Ltd. (supra). There is no general rule as to the date by reference to which the valuation of shares should be made. Date of valuation of shares may be the date of the petition, or a date prior to the petition or the date of the order. Generally, it is the date of the petition that is favoured because it is the date on which the members chose to complain about oppression or mismanagement - Cumana Ltd., In re [1986] BCLC 430 (CA). In appropriate cases, however, fairness may sometimes require that the shares be valued at a date earlier than the petition - O.C. Transport Services Ltd., In re [1984] BCLC 251; Re, a Company [1983] 1 WLR 927 and London School of Electronics Ltd., In re [1986] Ch. 211. Nourse, J., thought that, prima facie, an interest in a going concern ought to be valued at the date of the order for purchase.

Valuation of shares can be directed to be done both on assets basis and on maintainable profits basis so as to enable the court to decide at what price the shares should be offered to the purchasing group. As to what should be the value of the shares to be so offered is to be decided after the receipt of the report of the valuers - Omni India (P) Ltd. v. Balbir Singh [1989] 2 Comp. LJ 216 (Delhi); Rakhra Sports (P) Ltd. v. Khairatilal Rakhra [1993] 10 CLA 96 (Kar.) (DB).

- (c) Reduction of share capital [Section 402(c)]-The order of the CLB relating to purchase of its own shares by the company as per section 402(c) may also provide for the consequent reduction of its share capital. However, before granting such reduction, it is not necessary to give notice of the consequent reduction of share capital to the creditors of the company. No such requirement is laid down by the Act. The procedure prescribed for reduction of share capital (including resolution of the shareholders confirming the reduction of capital) in sections 100 to 104 need not be followed in respect of a reduction of share capital effected pursuant to the order under this section - Cosmosteels (P) Ltd. v. Jairani Das AIR 1978 SC 375. Nevertheless, before giving directions for purchase of shares of members by the company, the court should keep in view all the relevant facts and circumstances, including the interests of the creditors. Even if the petition is being disposed of on a compromise between the parties, the court should certainly satisfy itself that the direction proposed to be given by it pursuant to the consent terms would not adversely affect or jeopardise the interests of the creditors - Cosmos tee ls' case (supra).
- (d) Termination, setting aside or modification of any agreement between the company and the managing director/director/manager [Section 402(d)] -CLB may, in its order, direct the termination, setting aside or modification of any agreement, howsoever arrived at, between the company on the one hand, and any of the following persons, on the other, namely :
- (i) Managing director,
 - (ii) Any other director, and
 - (iii) the Manager,

upon such terms and conditions as may, in the opinion of the CLB, be just and equitable in all the circumstances of the case.

In Shoe Specialities Ltd. v. Standard Distilleries & Breweries (P) Ltd & Others, it was held that when a case of oppression is made out, it is within the powers of CLB to end the matter and make such orders as it thinks fit. While considering to end the matters complained of and when given the power to make any such order as it thinks fit to rectify the same, the CLB is empowered to remove the Board of directors so that the affairs of the company could be set right.

- (e) Termination, setting aside or modification of any agreement between the company and any third person [Section 402(e)]-Again, CLB may, in its order, direct the termination, setting aside or modification of any agreement between the company and any third person provided due notice to the party concerned has been given and his consent obtained for the modification.
- (f) Setting aside of any transfer, delivery of goods, payment, execution or other act relating to property [Section 402(f)] - The CLB may, in its order, direct the setting aside of any transfer, delivery of goods, payment, execution or other act relating to property made or done by or against the company within three months before the date of the application under section 397 or 398, which would if made or done by or against an individual, be deemed in his insolvency to be a fraudulent preference.

The period of three months should be a clear period of three months between the date of transfer and that of application - Roshan Lal Aggarwal v. Sheoram [1980] 50 Comp. Cas. 243 (Pal.).

- (g) Any other matter [Section 402(g)] - Under clause (g), the CLB' is conferred with the residual powers of granting relief in respect of any other matter for which, in its opinion, it is just and equitable that provision should be made.

Thus, the CLB has power to make the order in regard to convening and holding of meetings, filing of proxies or nominations or in regard to any other matter for the purpose of conducting the affairs of a company, which might be contrary to the provisions of the articles of the company or of the Act, e.g., order for reduction of capital - where otherwise procedure in sections 100-104 need not be followed—Debi Jhora Tea Co. Ltd. v. Barendra Krishna Bhowmick [1980] 50 Comp. Cas. 771 (Cal.) (DB).

The residuary provision of clause (g) has, however, to be construed in the light of the object with which this section has been enacted, namely, to give directions regarding internal management of the company. This section, therefore, cannot be utilised for agitating disputes about liabilities like debts due to third parties or for staying tax - liability of the company - T.P. Sokkalal Ram Salt Factory (P) Ltd., In re (supra).

In Prakash Timbers (P) Ltd. v. Shushma Shingla [1996] 1 Comp. L.J. 133 (All.), the issue was whether the CLB, in proceedings under sections 397 and 398 of the Act, has powers to order transfer of property when a transfer of property can only be done by execution of a proper deed of conveyance and registering the same. It was held that sections 397 and 398 read with section 402 empower the CLB* to make such orders as it thinks fit with a view to bring to an end the matters complained of.

Whether the provisions of the Evidence Act and Code of Civil Procedure are applicable to proceedings under sections 397 and 398 - In Rajinder Kumar Malhotra v. Harbanslal Malhotra & Sons Ltd (CP 57 of 1992 decided on 18-1-1996), the issue involved was whether the provisions of the Evidence Act and Code of Civil Procedure are applicable to proceedings under sections 397 and 398 of the Act before the CLB and whether recording of oral evidence and cross-examinations can be pressed for.

As a general principle, the Supreme Court has laid down that the Evidence Act had no application to enquiries conducted by Tribunals, even though they might be judicial in character. The Tribunals should observe rules of natural justice (AIR 1957 SC 882); (1995) 4 SCC 132.

As per section 10E of the Companies Act, the CLB shall be guided by the principles of natural justice and shall act in its discretion. Section 10E(5) has provided for procedure to be followed by the CLB. Section 10E(6) of the Act empowers the CLB to regulate its own procedure through Regulations. However, absence of any provision in the Regulations would not make any difference so long as the procedure meets the test of natural justice; also Regulations cannot override the provisions of the law.

Interim Order by the CLB [Section 403] - Under section 403, the CLB may, pending the making by it of a final order under section 397 or 398, make any interim order which it thinks fit for regulating the conduct of the company's affairs upon such terms and conditions as appear to it to be just and equitable. The CLB may pass such an order on the application of any party to the proceedings.

As already noted, the CLB has powers to enable the regulation of the company during the pendency of a petition under section 397 or 398 in order to protect the interest of the company during the hearing of the petition and to prevent a complete deadlock in the running of the company - B.R. Kundra v. Motion Pictures Association (supra). Where there is complete lack of confidence between the warring groups resulting in the company's plant and machinery lying idle, interim order may be passed to permit the working of the company but without causing any hardship to either of the groups and without entailing further financial liability on either of the groups - Anil Kumar v. Bedla Flour Mills & Allied Indus tries (P) Ltd. 1978 Tax LR1663 (Raj.).

Similarly, the CLB allowed further issue of shares by the respondent, when proceedings under section 397 were on, as the same was decided by the Board in the interest of the company and petitioner was not excluded from the issue - Girish Gupta v. Tirupati Roller Flour Mills (P) Ltd [2007] 79 SCL 282.

An applicant for an interim relief must satisfy the CLB that he would be entitled to a similar or a greater relief if he succeeds in the action. If, on the other hand, the relief cannot be granted in the action itself or in the main petition, an interim relief which is always granted by the CLB in aid of the relief in the action itself should be refused - Bengal Luxmi Cotton Mills Ltd., In re (supra).

The Delhi High Court in R.F. Wood & Co. Ltd., In re [2002] 39 SCL 378 has stated that the relief sought under section 402 of the Act has to flow from the petition under sections 397 and 398 of the Act.

An interim order made upon the consent of all parties concerned cannot be revoked, recalled or cancelled when it has been acted upon by the parties concerned - Parvesh Kumar Basil v. Special Officer, New Standard Coal Co. Pvt. Ltd., In re [1964] 2 Comp. LJ184(Cal.).

Interlocutory order - An interlocutory order passed by CLB is open to final adjustment if nature of proceedings and the order do not appear as impediment - Tara Properties Ltd. v. Bhagirathi Agarwala [2004] 52 SCL 158 (Cal.)

Effect of alteration of Memorandum of association or Articles of association of company by order under section 397/398 [Section 404] - Where an order under section 397 or 398 results in an alteration in the Memorandum or Articles, the company shall not have power to make, without the leave of the CLB, any alteration whatsoever which is inconsistent with the order of the CLB. The alteration made in the Memorandum or the Articles shall within thirty days be filed by the company with the ROC who shall register the same. The order of the CLB will have the same effect as is obtained by following the required procedure for alteration of the Memorandum or the Articles.

If default is made in communicating the alteration to the ROC, the company, and every officer of the company who is in default, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty thousand rupees.

Provision for getting impleaded as a respondent (section 405) - The managing director, any other director or the manager of the company or any other person who has not been included as a respondent in the application under section 397 or 398, may apply to the CLB for such inclusion and if the CLB is satisfied, then such applicant will be added as a respondent in the proceeding. As per the decision of Bombay High Court in Ravi Kiran Agarwal v. Moolchand Shah [2010J.97 SCL 182], the expression 'any other person' in section 405 is not restricted to categories of persons specified in section 402 where relief sought under sections 397 and 398 is liable to affect interest of a third party, an order of impleadment is warranted.

Consequences of termination or modification of certain agreements [Section 407] -Where an order made under section 397 or 398 terminates, sets aside or modifies an agreement between the company and the managing director/director/manager or any other person [as referred to in clause (d) or (e) of section 402], no compensation shall be payable for loss of office or in any other respect resulting therefrom. Further, a person i.e. a managing director or a director or a manager, whose agreement or office has been terminated by the order of the CLB shall not act for the company for five years thereafter without the leave of the CLB. Any person who knowingly acts as a managing director, or other director, or manager in contravention of this provision and every other director of the company who is knowingly a party to this contravention, shall be punishable with imprisonment up to one year, or with fine up to rupees fifty thousand, or with both.

Powers of the CLB' to prevent change in Board of directors [Section 409] - If the managing director or any director or manager of a company complains to the CLB that as a result of a change in the ownership of shares, a change in the Board of directors is likely to take place and such change would prejudicially affect the affairs of the company, the CLB, may, after being satisfied after such inquiry as it thinks fit, order that no such change in the Board of directors can be made, without its prior approval. The CLB may make an interim order to the effect before making or completing the inquiry. This power of the CLB is an overriding power, and its order, if any, is binding even though may be contrary to any other provision of this Act, memorandum of association, articles of association or any agreement or any decision of the general meeting or of the Board.

CLB in Ashok Kumar Oswal v. Vardhman Polytext Ltd. [2002] 38 SCL 223 has interpreted the provisions of section 409 as—

- (i) shares in question must be in existence and held by someone - future issue of shares or fresh issue of shares is not within the scope of section 409;
- (ii) change of ownership of shares took place or is taking place only by transfer or transmission;
- (iii) 'a change in Board' means appointment/removal of one or more directors in the Board but does not include any change in designation/power of the existing members of the Board; and
- (iv) legality or otherwise of appointments to the Board is not within the scope of enquiry of the CLB.

Estoppel- After making a petition under sections 397 and 398, the parties arrived at a settlement and the same was placed before the CLB, which in turn, passed a consent order embodying facts and terms of settlement. Eventually, valuation of shares made by a valuer was rejected by both the parties and at that stage the respondent raised question on maintainability of the petition and the same was rejected as with the passing of the consent order the parties have been estopped from contending otherwise than the terms of settlement even though no finality was then there on the valuation of shares - K.K. Framji v. Consulting Engg. Services (P) Ltd. [2002] 38 SCL 1118 (CLB).

Does CLB possess power to review its own order ? - Though CLB has no such power, but it can review its order in case findings and reliefs were based on fabricated/ forged documents - Smt. Pushpa Katoch v. Mann Maharani Hotels Ltd. [2001] 34 SCL 398 (CLB) also see Balaji Fabricators (P) Ltd. v. S. Rehana Rao [2006] 66 SCL 57 (CLB). [Section 10FN introduced by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 gives the power to review its order to the Tribunal, when it starts functioning.] - Events likely to come immediately after the final hearing and within knowledge of the respondent cannot be allowed to upset the order issued by CLB - Ashok K. Oswal v. Panchsheel Textiles (P) Ltd, [2002] 38 SCL 241.

General theme of the power of CLB - CLB is endowed with a number of specific and non-specific powers including the power to use discretion. It has been held in Cachar Native Jt. Stock Co. Ltd, v. Smt. Namita Gupta that an authority vested with discretion by law is to exercise such discretion based on records - [2004] 52 SCL 170 (Gau.). In this case allegation of false voting in EOGM was proved on the basis of records.

Private company exempted - Section 409 does not apply to a private company.

Powers of the Central Government to prevent oppression and mismanagement -Section 408 empowers the CLB to direct the appointment of directors by the Central Government on the Board of a company to safeguard the interests of the company or its shareholders or the public interest.

In a petition for fraud and mismanagement, the Central Government sought the authorisation to appoint majority of directors in the Board of the subject company. The CLB found that five directors of the company have resigned and the managing director is absconding and as such no Board was functioning and allowed the Central Government to appoint five directors on Board of the company - Secretary to the Government of India v. Leaf in India Ltd. [2003] 38 SCL 121.

Some more cases on oppression and mismanagement : -

1. Where validity of petitioner's status as wife of the deceased shareholder is under challenge in a civil suit, the company's insistence on receiving of succession certificate for effecting transmission of shares of the deceased, is not oppressive. Claim for rent etc. receivable by the petitioner arising out of contractual rights and obligations between the petitioner and the company does not fall within the ambit of sections 397 and 398 - Smt. Prameela Ravindran v. Vital Instruments (P) Ltd. [2003] 45 SCL 46 (CLB - Chennai).
2. The management of the company has passed on to a group and the group holding 16.5% shares in the company, being the group formerly managing the affairs of the company, accuses the present management of mismanagement on various counts while facing charges of mismanagement by the present management group. This matter cannot be adjudicated under section 397/ 398 of the Act. However, the former management group has to be relieved from the liability of personal guarantee given for the company as it is now not in the management and has also a substantially lesser stake in the shares of the company - M.K. Dhir v. Givo Ltd. [2003] 45 SCL 55 (CLB - New Delhi).
3. Sale of property agreement entered into by the company before petition under section 397/398 was filed and partly remaining to be executed has to be allowed as the sale is prima facie not below market price - Vijayawada Share. Brokers Ltd. v. D. Ramkishore [2003] 45 SCL 1 (CLB - Chennai).
4. When the Articles provided for consensus on important matters amongst almost equal shareholding blocks and one block unilaterally decides on an issue on which despite earlier discussions with other block, consensus was not reached, such block cannot complain of oppression or deadlock. The other block also cannot succeed in its charge of mismanagement against the former block as minutes revealed that the company's loss was due to bad market condition and not mismanagement. In view of lack of trust for each other, it would be appropriate that either block goes out of the company. Since ordering either to go out would be unfair in view of valuable contributions made by both the groups to the company in the past, preferred course was to order both the blocks to value the shares of the company and the block arriving at a higher value being asked to buy the shares held by the other block at that value - Tenneco Mauritius Ltd v. Bangalore Union Services Ltd. [2003] 45 SCL 205 (CLB - Chennai).
5. Petitioners alleged oppression and mismanagement by the respondents on account, of non-convening of meetings of the Board and the members, removal of petitioners from directorship, illegal allotment of shares and induction of persons in the Board of directors, siphoning of the company's funds and encumbering company's properties without any benefit to the company and all these were denied by the respondents. It was held that mere production of certificate of posting of notices of the meetings in the absence of any other corroborative evidence shows an effort on the part of respondents to marginalise the petitioners. Therefore, induction of directors could not be held valid. Also, as the respondents could not produce any documentary proof of having brought funds for the allotment of shares made or having utilised any such fund for the company, the allotment of shares made in exclusion of petitioners was oppressive. The order directed for allotment of shares to the petitioners as per their entitlements - M. M. Subrahmanyam v. Gulf Olefines (P) Ltd. [2003] 45 SCL 240 (CLB - Chennai). Also see M.M. Subrahmanyam v. Prasanna Investments (P) Ltd. [2003] 47 SCL 161 (CLB - Chennai).
6. With a view not to destabilise the control of the plaintiff and defendant on the company and not to upset existing MOU between them and to prevent any third party gaining control over the company the court allowed the purchase of the block of shares (offered to a single party by UPSIDC), by the plaintiff on condition that 50% of the consideration payable would be on account of the defendant as aforesaid, who was running short of cash, so that their inter se relation is maintained - K.K. Modi v. K.N. Modi [2003] 45 SCL 509 (Delhi).

7. The rule against interference by court with internal management of a company is not applicable in cases of infringement of individual membership rights. Since there was no evidence of notice of the meeting being sent to the plaintiffs and the plaintiffs did not attend the meeting, the meeting should be deemed as not having been held and accordingly all the decisions purportedly passed thereat should be treated as null and void - Dr. Dilip Makhija v. Arun Mittal [2003] 47 SCL 241 (Delhi).
8. In Maharashtra Power Development Corpn. Ltd. v. Dhabol Power Company the Bombay High Court, held - (i) if effects of a single act is burdensome, wrongful and oppressive and of continuing impact, which deprives a member of his membership rights and privileges for all times to come, then a petition under section 397 is maintainable, (ii) a petition by shareholder(s) who are not minority shareholders, while the alleged oppressors are also not majority shareholders is also maintainable, (iii) a shareholder in the status of a shareholder is not entitled to be served with notice for the Board meeting, (iv) since Reg. 75 of Table A formed part of the articles of the company, two continuing directors could validly hold Board meeting for co-option/appointment of one more director to constitute valid quorum for Board meeting to be held in future, (v) in the absence of nomination to the Board by financial institutions, shareholders can appoint directors by majority vote, (vi) the mere fact that the holding company of the appellant would be loser in a different capacity and some other members would be beneficiaries in their concurrent capacity of creditors, cannot bar the Board from proceeding with the arbitration proceedings started by the respondent against such holding company, (vii) exercise of contractual rights against Government cannot be considered as against public interest, (viii) the fact that an arbitration proceeding against the Government or its instrumentality is also not against public interest merely for the fact that an adverse award by the arbitrator may lead to payment from public exchequer. This decision further held that where there was no lack of probity or fair dealing and no violation of proprietary rights of appellants as a shareholder and also the shareholder could not establish that it is just and equitable to wind up the respondent, the petition under section 397 lacks the essential elements required to maintain the petition. The Court added an Obiter Dicta-Even after appointment of a provisional liquidator, the Board of directors has a power to make a reference to BIFR and also the power to propose a scheme of arrangement under sections 391-394 to rehabilitate the company [2003] 48 SCL180. On appeal, a Division Bench of the High Court upheld the judgment and more specially dealt with interpretation of Reg. 75 of Table A and found no violation thereof. Also it clearly stated that at the time of petition filing with CLB, the petitioner was only a shareholder and it had no director on the Board, therefore there was no question of serving it with notice of Board meeting. No case of oppression on shareholders was also established [2004] 52 SCL 224.
9. Non-issue of further shares, to petitioner-applicants, offered by the respondent company, taking a plea that a joint application by several shareholders is not in conformity with provisions of section 41(2) of the Act, was held as an act of oppression as provision of section 41 (2) is inapplicable to issue of shares subsequent to first allotment of shares by the company - Vijay Kumar Narang v. Prakash Coach Builders (P) Ltd. [2004] 56 SCL 274 (CLB).
10. Clandestine issue of further shares by the company to reduce the shareholding proportion of petitioner, not acknowledging the petitioner as shareholder and denial of right to the petitioner to nominate directors on the Board of the company were held as acts of oppression. The change of name of the petitioner, though intimated to the company, was not recorded to render the new name of the petitioner under which the petition was made, as a non-shareholder to deprive it of the right to redressal of oppression. The CLB ordered that petitioner could exercise all the rights that the entity could exercise as shareholder in its previous name - Pearson Education Inc. v. Prentice Hall of India (P) Ltd. [2004] 56 SCL 365.

11. A petition under section 397 or 398 or 408 must stand on its own footing and it should be complete with all the required details. Except any development arising subsequent to the petition, no other matters/fact can be entertained in deciding on the petition. Commercial misjudgment cannot be treated as oppression/mismanagement. Similarly, fluctuation in share price in the stock market without any evidence of manipulation cannot be so treated - Central Government v. Kopran Ltd. [2004] 56 SCL 428 (CLB).
12. CLB in Gian Gupta v. Siel Ltd. [2004] 56 SCL 560 has held that a petition written in English for which consent support signature of some of the consent givers was in Hindi, is not maintainable as the consents of those who signed in Hindi have to be ignored as it is to be presumed that they did not understand the writings in the Petition. When signatures in Hindi are ignored the number of petitioners along with consent givers fell below 100 and the aggregate shareholding also did not reach 10% of the subscribed share capital.
13. Allegation of non-compliance of the provisions of the Articles of Association that amount to oppression or mismanagement can only be considered by the CLB notwithstanding existence of an Arbitration Agreement between parties, the terms whereof were incorporated in the Articles. - Gerlesheim GMBH v. Goyal M. Gases (P) Ltd. [2004] 56 SCL 593 (CLB).
14. When equal participation in day-to-day management of a domestic company exists among the petitioner and the respondent, there cannot arise a case of oppression. What can be there is only deadlock in management and relief can be by letting either party buying off the shares of the other - MSD Chandrasekhar Raja v. Shree Bhaarithi Cotton Mills (P) Ltd. [2005] 57 SCL 72 (CLB).
15. On the issue of substitution of one of the original petitioners by another shareholder, it was held that proceeding under section 397/398 is a representative proceeding and can continue even if one of the original petitioners withdraw, provided the petition is on merit. Substitution of one of the original petitioners by another shareholder is permissible even without the support of any enabling provision like section 405 of the Act - Renuka A. Kattar v. Gees Marine Products (P) Ltd. [2005] 57 SCL 68 (CLB). This decision has two distinct parts:
 - (i) continuity of the proceedings if petition was valid at the time of making, with or without any withdrawal - substitution syndrome. If the petition can stand on merit, it survives even if one of the petitioners go out;
 - (ii) there can be a substitution of petitioner, provided the substituting person is otherwise eligible to be a petitioner under section 399 of the Act.
16. A company which originally started with three directors, removed one of such directors after another one voluntarily resigned. The directors remaining after resignation mentioned above, had equal shareholdings and they were the only shareholders. Held, it was a case of oppression as in a two directors -two members company no board meeting or AGM can be held without participation of both and it was established that no notice of board meeting was sent to the director who was removed - Rohit Churaniani v. Disha Research & Marketing Services (P) Ltd. [2005] 57 SCL 353 (CLB).
17. When letter of resignation from directorship is duly signed by the concerned person and it could not be shown that the signature is not that of the person concerned, then the position that the director has resigned is acceptable, it is necessary for the company to inform the concerned Bench of the CLB when AGM is held during the pendency of the proceedings before CLB. Sending notice of the AGM through UPC when notice was to be sent through Registered A.D. post is not in order - Ms. Hardeep Kaur v. Thinlac Enterprises (P) Ltd. [2005] 57 SCL 459 (CLB).
18. Not an oppression - Non-declaration of dividend or giving interest-free loan to sister concerns by itself do not constitute oppression as these are management decisions - Shankarlal Gilada v. Kapricon Sleepers Works (P) Ltd. [2005] 63 SCL 609 (CLB).

19. CLB in Girdhar Gopal Dalmia v. Bateli Tea Co. Ltd, (supra) has held that (i) mere incurring of losses and/or existence of huge liabilities do not necessarily mean mismanagement; it may, at most reflect in efficient management (ii) actions taken by the group in control of a company to prevent diversion of funds, even if same are in violation of the provisions of the Act, cannot be held to be mismanagement/oppression and (iii) but attempt to stripping of one group of directors of their powers enjoyed by them for a long period is definitely an act of oppression.
20. The CLB held the manipulative issue of shares by the respondent, on whom the petitioner reposed great faith, as an act of oppression. The properties of the company were entirely given by the petitioner, who had to live abroad after setting up the company along with the respondent - Dr. Mrs. Usha Chopra v. Chopra Hospital (P) Ltd. [2005] 63 SCL 625.

On appeal, the Delhi High Court upheld the CLB decision as the CLB's decision was based on facts then submitted by parties and on Principle of Preponderance of possibility. There is no ground for interference by the court [2007] 79 SCL 299. Also, the court held that in a situation of fiduciary relationship, the burden of proving that actions by the party enjoying confidence is devoid of fraud and manipulation, rests on that party.

1.11 REVIVAL AND REHABILITATION OF SICK INDUSTRIAL COMPANIES

Definitions (Section 2)

Sick industrial company [Section 2(46AA)]

'Sick industrial company' means an industrial company which has

- (i) the accumulated losses in any financial year equal to 50% or more of its average net worth during 4 years immediately preceding such financial year; or
- (ii) failed to repay its debts within any 3 consecutive quarters on demand made in writing for its repayment by a creditor or creditors of such company.

Industrial company [Section 2(19AA)]

'Industrial company' means a company which owns one or more industrial undertakings.

Industrial undertaking [Section 2(19AB)]

'Industrial undertaking' means any undertaking, pertaining to any industry carried on in one or more factories or units by any company, as defined in clause (aa) of section 3 of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951 but does not include a small-scale industrial undertaking as defined in clause (j) of that section.

Net worth [Section 2(29A)]

'Net worth' means the sum total of the paid-up capital and free reserves after deducting the provisions or expenses as may be prescribed.

Explanation. For the purposes of this clause, "free reserves" means all reserves created out of the profits and share premium account but does not include reserves created out of revaluation of assets, write back of depreciation provisions and amalgamation.

Operating agency [Section 2(31AA)]

'Operating agency' means any group of experts consisting of persons having special knowledge of business or industry in which the sick industrial company is engaged and includes public financial institutions, State level institution, scheduled bank or any other person as may be specified as the operating agency by the Tribunal.

Procedure for Revival and Rehabilitation

Reference to Tribunal (Section 424A)

1. Reference by the Board to Tribunal when a company becomes sick [Section 424A(1)]

Where an industrial company, has become a sick industrial company, the Board of directors of such company shall make a reference to the Tribunal and prepare a scheme of its revival and rehabilitation and submit the same to the Tribunal along with an application containing such particulars as may be prescribed for determination of the measures which may be adopted with respect to such company.

Non-applicability to Government companies [First Proviso to Section 424A(1)]. Nothing contained in this sub-section shall apply to a Government company.

Applicability to Government companies in certain cases [Second Proviso to Section 424A(1)]. However, a Government company may, with the prior approval of the Central Government or a State Government, as the case may be, make a reference to the Tribunal in accordance with the provisions of this sub-section and thereafter all the provisions of this Act shall apply to such Government company.

2. Application to be accompanied by a certificate from Auditor [Section 424A(2)]

The application under sub-section (1) shall be accompanied by a certificate from an auditor from a panel of auditors prepared by the Tribunal indicating –

- (a) the reasons of the net worth of such company being 50% or less than 50%; or
- (b) the default in repayment of its debt making such company a sick industrial company, as the case may be.

3. Reference to Tribunal by CG, SG, RBI etc. [Section 424A(3)]

Without prejudice to the provisions of sub-section (1), the Central Government or the Reserve Bank or a State Government or a public financial institution or a State level institution or a scheduled bank may, if it has sufficient reasons to believe that any industrial company has become, for the purposes of this Act, a sick industrial company, make a reference in respect of such company to the Tribunal for determination of the measures which may be adopted with respect to such company.

Conditions for making reference [Proviso to Section 424A(3)]. A reference shall not be made under this sub-section in respect of any industrial company by –

- (a) the Government of any State unless all or any of the industrial undertakings belonging to such company are situated in such State;
- (b) a public financial institution or a State level institution or a scheduled bank unless it has, by reason of any financial assistance or obligation rendered by it, or undertaken by it, with respect to such company, an interest in such company.

4. Time limit for making reference to Tribunal [Section 424A (4)]

A reference under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall be made to the Tribunal within a period of 180 days from the date on which the Board of directors of the company or the Central Government or the Reserve Bank of India or a State Government or a public financial institution or a State level institution or a scheduled bank, as the case may be, come to know, of the relevant facts giving rise to causes of such reference or within 60 days of final adoption of accounts, whichever is earlier.

5. Order of Tribunal [Section 424A (5)]

The Tribunal may, on receipt of a reference under sub-section (1), pass an order as to whether a company in respect of which a reference has been made has become a sick industrial company and such order shall be final.

Inquiry into working of sick industrial companies (Section 424B)

1. Inquiry by the Tribunal as to whether an industrial company has become sick [Section 424B(1)]

The Tribunal may make such inquiry as it may deem fit for determining whether any industrial company has become a sick industrial company -

- (a) upon receipt of a reference with respect to such company under section 424A; or
- (b) upon information received with respect to such company or upon its own knowledge as to the financial condition of the company.

2. Order by Tribunal to operating agency to inquire into the scheme for revival [Section 424B (2)]

The Tribunal may, if it deems necessary or expedient so to do for the expeditious disposal of an inquiry under sub-section (1), require by order any operating agency to enquire into the scheme for revival and make a report with respect to such matters as may be specified in the order.

3. Time limit for completion of inquiry by operating agency [Section 424B(3)]

The operating agency shall complete its inquiry as expeditiously as possible and submit its report to the Tribunal within 21 days from the date of such order.

Extension of period by the Tribunal [Proviso to Section 424B(3)]. The Tribunal may extend the said period to 40 days for reasons to be recorded in writing for such extension.

4. Time limit for conclusion of inquiry by the Tribunal [Section 424B (4)]

The Tribunal shall conclude its inquiry as expeditiously as possible and pass final orders in the proceedings within 60 days from the commencement of the inquiry.

Extension of period [Proviso to Section 424B(4)]. The Tribunal may extend the said period to 90 days for reasons to be recorded in writing for such extension.

Meaning of 'commencement of inquiry' [Explanation to Section 424B(4)]. For the purposes of this sub-section, an inquiry shall be deemed to have commenced upon the receipt by the Tribunal of any reference or information or upon its own knowledge reduced to writing by the Tribunal.

5. Appointment of special director(s) on the Board [Section 424B (5)]

Where the Tribunal deems it fit to make an inquiry or to cause an inquiry to be made into any industrial company under sub-section (1) or, as the case may be, under sub-section (2), it may appoint one or more persons who possess knowledge, experience and expertise in management and control of the affairs of any other company to be a special director or special directors on the board of such industrial company on such terms and conditions as may be prescribed for safeguarding its financial and other interests or in the public interest.

6. Special director(s) to submit report to the Tribunal [Section 424B(6)]

The special director or special directors appointed under sub-section (5) shall submit a report to the Tribunal within 60 days from the date of appointment of such director or directors, about the state of affairs of the company in respect of which reference has been made under sub-section (1) and such special director or directors shall have all the powers of a director of a company under this Act, necessary for discharge of his or their duties.

7. Issue of directions by the Tribunal to the special director(s) [Section 424B(7)]

The Tribunal may issue such directions to a special director appointed under sub-section (5) as it may deem necessary or expedient for proper discharge of his duties.

8. Overriding effect of the appointment of special director(s) [Section 424B(8)]

The appointment of a special director referred to in sub-section (5) shall be valid and effective notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any other provision of this Act or in any other law for the time being in force or in the memorandum and articles of association or any other instrument relating to the industrial company, and any provision regarding share qualification, age limit, number of directorships, removal from office of directors and such like conditions contained in any such law or instrument aforesaid, shall not apply to any special director or directors appointed by the Tribunal.

9. Provisions applicable to special director(s) [Section 424B(9)]

Any special director appointed under sub-section (5), shall -

- (a) hold office during the pleasure of the Tribunal and may be removed or substituted by any person by order of the Tribunal;
- (b) not incur any obligation or liability by reason only of his being a director or for anything done or omitted to be done in good faith in the discharge of his duties as a director or anything in relation thereto;
- (c) not be liable to retirement by rotation and shall not be taken into account for computing the number of directors liable to such retirement;
- (d) not be liable to be prosecuted under any law for anything done or omitted to be done in good faith in the discharge of his duties in relation to the sick industrial company.

Powers of Tribunal to make suitable order on completion of inquiry (Section 424C)

1. Decision by Tribunal [Section 424C(1)]

If after making an inquiry under section 424B, the Tribunal is satisfied that a company has become a sick industrial company, the Tribunal shall, after considering all the relevant facts and circumstances of the case, decide, as soon as may be, by an order in writing, whether it is practicable for the company to make its net worth exceed the accumulated losses or make the repayment of its debts referred to in clause (b) of sub-section (2) of section 424A within a reasonable time.

2. Time given by Tribunal to the company [Section 424C(2)]

If the Tribunal decides under sub-section (1) that it is practicable for a sick industrial company to make its net worth exceed the accumulated losses or pay its debt referred to in that sub-section within a reasonable time, the Tribunal shall, by order in writing and subject to such restrictions or conditions as may be specified in the order, give such time to the company as it may deem fit to make its net worth exceed the accumulated losses or make repayment of the debts.

3. Direction by Tribunal to operating agency to prepare a scheme [Section 424C(3)]

If the Tribunal decides under sub-section (1) that it is not practicable for a sick industrial company to make its net worth exceed the accumulated losses or make the repayment of its debts referred to in clause (b) of sub-section (2) of section 424A, within a reasonable time and that it is necessary or expedient in the public interest to adopt all or any of the measures specified in section 424D in relation to the said company it may, as soon as may be, by order in writing, direct any operating agency-specified in the order to prepare, having regard to such guidelines as may be specified in the order, a scheme providing for such measures in relation to such company.

4. Review of order and passing of fresh order by Tribunal [Section 424C(4)]

The Tribunal may, -

- (a) if any of the restrictions or conditions specified in an order made under sub-section (2) are not complied with by the company concerned, or if the company fails to revive in pursuance of the said order, review such order on a reference in that behalf from any agency referred to in sub-section (3) of section 424A or on its own motion and pass a fresh order in respect of such company under subsection (3);

- (b) if the operating agency specified in an order made under sub-section (3) makes a submission in that behalf, review such order and modify the order in such manner as it may deem appropriate.

Preparation and sanction of schemes (Section 424D)

1. Time limit for preparation of scheme by the operating agency [Section 424D(1)]

Where an order is made under sub-section (3) of section 424C in relation to any sick industrial company, the operating agency specified in the order shall prepare as expeditiously as possible and ordinarily within a period of 60 days from the date of such order, having regard to the guidelines framed by the Reserve Bank of India in this behalf, a scheme with respect to such company providing for any one or more of the following measures, namely:

- (a) the financial reconstruction of such industrial company;
- (b) the proper management of such industrial company by change in, or takeover of, the management of such industrial company;
- (c) the amalgamation of-
 - (i) such industrial company with any other company; or
 - (ii) any other company with such industrial company (hereafter in this section, in the case of sub-clause (i), the other company, and in the case of sub-clause (ii), such industrial company, referred to as "transferee-company");
- (d) the sale or lease of a part or whole of any industrial undertaking of such industrial company;
- (e) the rationalisation of managerial personnel, supervisory staff and workmen in accordance with law;
- (f) such other preventive ameliorative and remedial measures as may be appropriate;
- (g) repayment of debt;
- (h) such incidental, consequential or supplemental measures as may be necessary or expedient in connection with or for the purposes of the measures specified in clauses (a) to (g).

However, the Tribunal may extend the said period of 60 days to 90 days for reasons to be recorded in writing for such extension.

2. Measures covered by the scheme [Section 424D(2)]

The scheme referred to in sub-section (i) may provide for any one or more of the following, namely:

- (a) the constitution, name and registered office, the capital, assets, powers, rights, interests, authorities and privileges, duties and obligations of the sick industrial company or, as the case may be, of the transferee company;
- (b) the transfer to the transferee company of the business, properties, assets and liabilities of the sick industrial company on such terms and conditions as may be specified in the scheme;
- (c) any change in the Board of directors, or the appointment of a new Board of directors, of the sick industrial company and the authority by whom, the manner in which and the other terms and conditions on which, such change or appointment shall be made and in the case of appointment of a new Board of directors or of any director, the period for which such appointment shall be made;

- (d) the alteration of the memorandum or articles of association of the sick industrial company or, as the case may be, of the transferee company for the purpose of altering the capital structure thereof, or for such other purposes as may be necessary to give effect to the reconstruction or amalgamation;
- (e) the continuation by or against the sick industrial company or, as the case may be, the transferee company of any action or other legal proceeding pending against the sick industrial company immediately before the date of the order made under sub-section (3) of section 424C;
- (f) the reduction of the interest or rights which the shareholders have in the sick industrial company to such extent as the Tribunal considers necessary in the interests of the reconstruction, revival or rehabilitation or repayment of debts of such sick industrial company or for the maintenance of the business of such industrial company;
- (g) the allotment to the shareholders of the sick industrial company, of shares in such company or, as the case may be, in the transferee company and where any shareholder claims payment in cash and not allotment of shares, or where it is not possible to allot shares to any shareholder, the payment of cash to those shareholders in full satisfaction of their claims -
 - (i) in respect of their interest in shares in the sick industrial company before its reconstruction or amalgamation; or
 - (ii) where such interest has been reduced under clause (f) in respect of their interest in shares as so reduced; .
- (h) any other terms and conditions for the reconstruction or amalgamation of the sick industrial company;
- (i) sale of the industrial undertaking of the sick industrial company free from all encumbrances and all liabilities of the company or other such encumbrances and liabilities as may be specified, to any person, including a co-operative society formed by the employees of such undertaking and fixing of reserve price for such sale;
- (j) lease of the industrial undertaking of the sick industrial company to any person, including a co-operative society formed by the employees of such undertaking;
- (k) method of sale of assets of the industrial undertaking of the sick industrial company such as by public auction or by inviting tenders or in any other manner as may be specified and for the manner of publicity therefor;
- (l) issue of the shares in the sick industrial company at the face value or at the intrinsic value which may be at discount value or such other value as may be specified to any industrial company or any person including the executives and employees of such sick industrial company;
- (m) such incidental, consequential and supplemental matters as may be necessary to secure that the reconstruction or amalgamation or other measures mentioned in the scheme are fully and effectively carried out.

3. Examination of the scheme by the Tribunal and forwarding of scheme to concerned parties [Section 424D(3)]

- (a) The scheme prepared by the operating agency shall be examined by the Tribunal and a copy of the scheme with modification, if any, made by the Tribunal shall be sent, in draft, to the sick industrial company and the operating agency and in the case of amalgamation, also to any other company concerned, and the Tribunal may publish or cause to be published the draft scheme in brief in such daily newspapers as the Tribunal may consider necessary, for suggestions and objections, if any, within such period as the Tribunal may specify.
- (b) The complete draft scheme shall be kept at the place where registered office of the company is situated or at such places as mentioned in the advertisement.

- (c) The Tribunal may make such modifications, if any, in the draft scheme as it may consider necessary in the light of the suggestions and objections received from the sick industrial company and the operating agency and also from the transferee company and any other company concerned in the amalgamation and from any shareholder or any creditors or employees of such companies.

If the scheme relates to amalgamation, the said scheme shall be laid before the company other than the sick industrial company in the general meeting for the approval of the scheme by its shareholders and no such scheme shall be proceeded with unless it has been approved, with or without modification, by a special resolution passed by the shareholders of the transferee company.

4. Sanctioning of the scheme by the Tribunal [Section 424D(4)]

The scheme may thereafter be sanctioned, within 60 days by the Tribunal (hereinafter referred to as the sanctioned scheme) and shall come into force on such date as the Tribunal may specify in this behalf. However, the Tribunal may extend the said period of 60 days to 90 days for reasons to be recorded in writing for such extension. Different dates may be specified for different provisions of the scheme.

5. Powers of Tribunal to review and modify the scheme and order for preparation of fresh scheme [Section 424D(5)]

The Tribunal may, on the recommendations of the operating agency or otherwise, review any sanctioned scheme and make such modifications as it may deem fit or may by order in writing direct any operating agency specified in the order, having regard to such guidelines including the guidelines framed by the Reserve Bank of India in this behalf in order to prepare a fresh scheme providing for such measures as the operating agency may consider necessary.

6. Provisions applicable to the fresh scheme [Section 424D(6)]

When a fresh scheme is prepared under sub-section (5), the provisions of sub-sections (3) and (4) shall apply in relation thereto as they apply to in relation to a scheme prepared under sub-section (1).

7. Transfer of property and liabilities as per the sanctioned scheme [Section 424D(7)]

Where a sanctioned scheme provides for the transfer of any property or liability of the sick industrial company in favour of any other company or person or where such scheme provides for the transfer of any property or liability of any other company or person in favour of the sick industrial company, then, by virtue of, and to the extent provided in, the scheme, on and from the date of coming into operation of the sanctioned scheme or any provision thereof, the property shall be transferred to, and vest in, and the liability shall become the liability of, such other company or person or, as the case may be, the sick industrial company.

8. Sanctioned scheme to be conclusive evidence [Section 424D(8)]

The sanction accorded by the Tribunal under sub-section (4) shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this scheme relating to the reconstruction or amalgamation, or any other measure specified therein have been complied with and a copy of the sanctioned scheme certified in writing by an officer of the Tribunal to be a true copy thereof, shall, in all legal proceedings (whether in appeal or otherwise), be admitted as evidence.

9. Filing of sanctioned scheme with the Registrar [Section 424D(9)]

A copy of the sanctioned scheme referred to in sub-section (8) shall be filed with the Registrar within the prescribed time by the company in respect of which such scheme relates.

10. Binding effect of the sanctioned scheme [Section 424D(10)]

On and from the date of the coming into operation of the sanctioned scheme or any provision thereof, the scheme or such provision shall be binding on the sick industrial company and the transferee company or, as the case may be, the other company and also on the shareholders, creditors and guarantors and employees of the said companies.

11. Preparation of scheme by the creditors of sick industrial company [Section 424D(11)]

The creditors of a sick industrial company may also prepare a scheme for revival or rehabilitation of such sick industrial company and submit the same to the Tribunal for its sanction. However, no scheme shall be submitted by the creditors to the Tribunal unless such scheme has been approved by at least 3/4th in value of creditors of the sick industrial company.

12. Provisions applicable to the scheme prepared by the creditors [Section 424D(12)]

All the provisions relating to the preparation of scheme by the operating agency and sanction of such scheme by the Tribunal shall, as far as may be, apply to the scheme referred to in sub-section (11).

13. Binding effect of scheme prepared by creditors and sanctioned by the Tribunal [Section 424D(13)]

The scheme referred to in sub-section (11) if sanctioned by the Tribunal shall be binding on all the creditors and on other concerned.

14. Removal of difficulties by the Tribunal [Section 424D(14)]

If any difficulty arises in giving effect to the provisions of the sanctioned scheme, the Tribunal may, on the recommendation of the operating agency or otherwise, by order, do anything, not inconsistent with such provisions, which appears to it to be necessary or expedient for the purpose of removing the difficulty.

15. Order of Tribunal to operating agency to implement the sanctioned scheme [Section 424D(15)]

The Tribunal may, if it deems necessary or expedient so to do, by order in writing, direct any operating agency specified in the order to implement a sanctioned scheme with such terms and conditions and in relation to the sick industrial company as may be specified in the order,

16. Manner of distribution of sale proceeds in case of transfer of v/hole of the undertaking [Section 424D(16)]

Where the whole of the undertaking of the sick industrial company is sold under a sanctioned scheme, the Tribunal may distribute the sale proceeds to the parties entitled thereto in accordance with the provisions of section 529A and other provisions of this Act.

17. Monitoring of implementation of scheme [Section 424D(17)]

The Tribunal may monitor periodically the implementation of the sanctioned scheme.

Rehabilitation by giving financial assistance (Section 424E)

1. Financial assistance by Government, banks, institutions and other authorities [Section 424E(1)]

Where the scheme relates to preventive, ameliorative, remedial and other measures with respect to the sick industrial company, the scheme may provide for financial assistance by way of loans, advances or guarantees or reliefs or concessions or sacrifices from the Central Government, a State Government, any scheduled bank or other bank, a public financial institution or State level institution or any institution or other authority (any Government, bank, institution or other authority required by a scheme to provide for such financial assistance being hereafter in this section referred to as the person required by the scheme to provide financial assistance) to the sick industrial company.

2. Circulation of the scheme for obtaining consent [Section 424E(2)]

Every scheme referred to in sub-section (1) shall be circulated to every person required by the scheme to provide financial assistance for his consent within a period of 60 days from the date of such circulation or within such further period, not exceeding 60 days, as may be allowed by the Tribunal, and if no consent is received within such period or further period, it shall be deemed that consent has been given.

3. Sanctioning of the scheme where consents obtained [Section 424E(3)]

Where in respect of any scheme the consent referred to in sub-section (2) is given by every person required by the scheme to provide financial assistance, the Tribunal may, as soon as may be, sanction the scheme and on and from the date of such sanction the scheme shall be binding on all concerned.

4. Designating a financial institution or bank for fixing responsibility for disbursements [Section 424E(4)]

On the sanction of the scheme under sub-section (3), the financial institutions and the banks required to provide financial assistance, shall designate by mutual agreement a financial institution and a bank from amongst themselves which shall be responsible to disburse financial assistance by way of loans or advances or guarantees or reliefs or concessions or sacrifices agreed to be provided or granted under the scheme on behalf of all financial institutions and banks concerned.

5. Designated financial institution or bank to proceed forthwith to release the financial assistance [Section 424E(5)]

The financial institution and the bank designated under sub-section (4) shall forthwith proceed to, release the financial assistance to the sick industrial company in fulfillment of the requirement in this regard.

6. Discretionary power of Tribunal where consents not obtained [Section 424E(6)]

Where in respect of any scheme consent under sub-section (2) is not given by any person required by the scheme to provide financial assistance, the Tribunal may adopt such other measures, including the winding up of the sick industrial company, as it may deem fit.

Arrangement for continuing operations, etc., during inquiry (Section 424F)

Application to Tribunal by the company or others concerned before completion of inquiry [Section 424F(1)]

At any time before completion of the inquiry under section 424B, the sick industrial company or the Central Government or the Reserve Bank of India or a State Government or a public financial institution or a State level institution or a scheduled bank or any other institution, bank or authority providing or intending to provide any financial assistance by way of loans or advances or guarantees or reliefs, or concessions to such industrial company may make an application to the Tribunal :-

- (a) agreeing to an arrangement for continuing the operations of the sick industrial company; or
- (b) suggesting a scheme for the financial reconstruction of the sick industrial company.

Orders of Tribunal [Section 424F(2)]

The Tribunal may, within 60 days of the receipt of the application under sub-section (1), pass such orders thereon as it may deem fit.

Winding up of sick industrial company (Section 424G)

1. Conditions for order of winding up of the sick industrial company [Section 424G(1)]

Where the Tribunal, after making inquiry under section 424B and after consideration of all the relevant facts and circumstances and after giving an opportunity of being heard to all concerned parties, is of the opinion that the sick industrial company is not likely to make its net worth exceed the accumulated losses within a reasonable time while meeting all its financial obligations and that the company as a result thereof is not likely to become viable in future and that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up, it may record its findings and order winding up of the company.

2. Appointment of any officer of the operating agency as the liquidator [Section 424G(2)]

For the purpose of winding up of the sick industrial company, the Tribunal may appoint any officer of the operating agency, if the operating agency gives its consent, as the liquidator of such industrial company and the officer so appointed shall for the purpose of the winding-up of such sick industrial company be deemed to be, and have all the powers of, the official liquidator under this Act.

3. Sale of assets by the Tribunal and distribution of sale proceeds [Section 424G(3)]

Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (2), the Tribunal may cause to be sold the assets of the sick industrial company in such manner as it may deem fit and pass orders for distribution in accordance with the provisions of section 529A, and other provisions of this Act.

4. Time limit for conclusion of winding up [Section 424G(4)]

Without prejudice to the other provisions contained in this Act, the winding up of a company shall, as far as may be concluded within 1 year from the date of the order made under sub-section (1).

Operating agency to prepare complete inventory, etc. (Section 424H)

As per section 424H, where for the proper discharge of the functions of the Tribunal under this Part, the circumstances so require, the Tribunal may, through any operating agency, cause to be prepared –

- (a) with respect to a company a complete inventory of -
 - (i) all assets and liabilities of whatever nature;
 - (ii) all books of account, registers, maps, plans, records, documents of title or ownership of property and all other documents of whatever nature relating thereto;
- (b) a list of shareholders and a list of creditors showing separately in the list of creditors, the secured creditors and unsecured creditors;
- (c) a valuation report in respect of the shares and assets in order to arrive at the reserve price for the sale of a part or whole of the industrial undertaking of the company or for fixation of the lease rent or share exchange ratio;
- (d) an estimate of reserve price, lease rent or share exchange ratio;
- (e) proforma accounts, where no up-to-date audited accounts are available.

Direction not to dispose of assets (Section 424I)

As per section 424I, the Tribunal may, if it is of opinion, that any direction is necessary in the interest of the sick industrial company or creditors or shareholders or in the public interest, by order, direct such company not to dispose of, except with the prior approval of the Tribunal, any of its assets during the period of inquiry under section 424B or during the period of preparation or consideration of the scheme under section 424C.

Power of Tribunal to call for periodic information (Section 424J)

As per section 424J, on receipt of reference under section 424A, the Tribunal may call for any periodic information from the company as to the steps taken by the company to make its net worth exceed the accumulated losses or to make repayment of its debts referred to in that section, as the case may be, and the company shall furnish such information.

Misfeasance proceedings (Section 424K)

1. Orders of Tribunal against any person liable for misfeasance, breach of trust etc. [Section 424K(1)]

If, in the course of scrutiny or implementation of any scheme or proposal, it appears to the Tribunal that any person who has taken part in the promotion, formation or management of the sick industrial company or its undertaking, including any past or present director, manager or officer or employee of the sick industrial company -

- (a) has misapplied or retained, or become liable or accountable for, any money or property of the sick industrial company; or
- (b) has been guilty of any misfeasance, malfeasance or non-feasance or breach of trust in relation to the sick industrial company.

The Tribunal may, by order, direct him to repay or restore the money or property or any part thereof, with or without interest, as it thinks just, or to contribute such sum to the assets of the sick industrial company or the other person, entitled thereto by way of compensation in respect of the misapplication, retainer, misfeasance or breach of trust as the Tribunal thinks just, and also report the matter to the Central Government for any other action which that Government may deem fit.

2. Order of Tribunal not to provide financial assistance to certain entities [Section 424K(2)]

If the Tribunal is satisfied on the basis of the information and evidence in its possession with respect to any person who is or was a director or an officer or other employee of the sick industrial company, that such person by himself or alongwith, others had diverted the funds or other property of such company for any purpose other than a bona fide purpose of the company or had managed the affairs of the company in a manner highly detrimental to the interests of the company, the Tribunal shall by order, direct the public financial institutions, scheduled banks and State level institutions not to provide, during a period of 10 years from the date of the order, any financial assistance to such person or any firm of which such person is a partner or any company or other body corporate of which such person is a director (by whatever name called).

3. Tribunal to give opportunity of being heard [Section 424K(3)]

No order shall be made by the Tribunal under this section against any person unless such person has been given an opportunity for making his submissions.

4. Provisions to be in addition to criminal liability [Section 424K(4)]

This section shall apply notwithstanding that the matter is one for which the person may be criminally liable.

Penalty for certain offences (Section 424L)

1. Period of imprisonment and amount of fine [Section 424L(1)]

Whoever violates provisions of this Part or any scheme, or any order, of the Tribunal or the Appellate Tribunal or makes a false statement or gives false evidence to the Tribunal or the Appellate Tribunal, and attempts to tamper the records of reference or appeal filed under this Act, shall be punishable with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to 3 years or shall be liable to fine not exceeding Rs. 10 lakh.

2. Cognizance of offences [Section 424L(2)]

No court shall take cognizance of any offence under sub-section (1) except on a complaint in writing of an officer of the Tribunal or the Appellate Tribunal or any officer of the Central Government authorised by it or any officer of an operating agency as may be authorised in this behalf by the Tribunal or the Appellate Tribunal, as the case may be.

Levy and collection of cess on turnover or gross receipts of companies (Sections 441A and 441B)

1. Rate of levy of cess [Section 441A (1)]

There shall be levied and collected, for the purposes of rehabilitation or revival or protection of assets of the sick industrial company, a levy by way of cess at such rate not less than 0.005% and not more than 0.1% on the value of annual turnover of every company or its annual gross receipt, whichever is more as the Central Government may, from time to time, specify by notification in the Official Gazette.

2. Time period for payment of cess [Section 441A(2)]

Every company shall pay to the Central Government the cess referred to in sub-section (1) within 3 months from the close of every financial year.

3. Furnishing of details relating to turnover, gross receipts and cess paid by the companies [Section 441A(3)]

Every company shall furnish, in such form as may be prescribed, to the Central Government and the Tribunal the details of its turnover and gross receipts with payment of cess under sub-section (1).

4. Cess to be paid in the manner prescribed by the Rules [Section 441A(4)]

The Central Government may, by rules made in this behalf, specify the manner in which the cess shall be paid under sub-section (2).

Note: Crediting proceeds of cess to Consolidated Fund of India (Section 441B)

The proceeds of the cess levied and collected under section 441A shall first be credited to the Consolidated Fund of India and the Central Government may if Parliament by appropriation made by law in this behalf so provides, pay to the Tribunal, from time to time, out of such proceeds (after deducting the cost of collection), such sums of money as it may think fit for being utilised for the purposes of the Fund.

Rehabilitation Fund (Sections 441C, 441D and 441E)

1. Purpose of the Fund [Section 441C(1)]

There shall be formed for the purposes of rehabilitation or revival or protection of assets of a sick industrial company, a Fund to be called the Rehabilitation and Revival Fund.

2. Credits to the Fund [Section 441C(2)]

There shall be credited to the Fund -

- (a) all amounts paid under section 441B;
- (b) any amount given as grants by the Central Government for the purposes of this Fund;
- (c) any amount given to the Fund from any other source;
- (d) any income from investment of the amount in the Fund;
- (e) amount refunded by the company under section 441G.

3. Utilisation of the Fund (Section 441D)

The Fund shall be applied by the Tribunal for the purpose of –

- (a) making interim payment of workmen's dues pending the revival or rehabilitation of the sick industrial company; or

- (b) payment of workmen's dues due to the workmen, referred to in sub-section (3) of section 529, of the sick industrial company; or
 - (c) protection of assets of sick industrial company; or
 - (d) revival or rehabilitation of sick industrial company,
- which in the opinion of the Tribunal are necessary or expedient for the said purposes.

Power to call for information (Section 441E)

The Central Government or Tribunal may require any company to furnish for the purposes of rehabilitation or revival or protection of assets of sick industrial companies, such statistical and other information in such form and within such period as may be prescribed.

Penalty for non-payment of Cess (Section 441F)

1. Manner of recovery of cess by the Tribunal [Section 441F(1)]

If any cess payable by a company under section 441A is not paid in accordance with the provisions of that section, it shall be deemed to be in arrears and the same shall be recovered by the Tribunal in such manner as may be prescribed.

2. Penalty for non-payment of Cess [Section 441F(2)]

The Tribunal may, after such inquiry as it deems fit, impose on the company, which is in arrears under sub-section (1), a penalty not exceeding 10 times the amount in arrears.

However, before imposing such penalty, such company shall be given a reasonable opportunity of being heard, and if, after such hearing, the Tribunal is satisfied that the default was for any good and sufficient reason, no penalty shall be imposed under this sub-section.

Refund of fund in certain cases (Section 441G)

1. Recovery of amount from the company after it is revived or rehabilitated [Section 441G(1)] Where the fund has been applied by the Tribunal for any of the purposes specified in clauses (a) to (d) of section 441D, such amount of fund shall be recovered from the company after its revival or rehabilitation or out of sale proceeds of its assets after discharging the statutory liabilities and payment of dues to creditors.

2. Manner of recovery of the amount [Section 441G(2)]

The amount referred to in sub-section (1) shall be recovered in the manner as the Tribunal may direct.

1.12. ISSUES RELATED TO WINDING UP AND DISSOLUTION

Meaning of winding up/liquidation

- Winding up or liquidation is the process of bringing to an end the life of a company. However, the company is not dissolved immediately at the commencement of winding up. Its corporate status and powers continue. Thus, winding up precedes dissolution.
- Winding up is a process by which the management of a company's affairs is taken out of its directors' hands, its assets are realised by a liquidator, and its debts are paid out of the proceeds of realisation and any balance remaining is returned to its members. At the end of the winding up, the company will have no assets or liabilities, and will therefore be simply a formal step for it to be dissolved, that is, for its legal personality as a corporation to be brought to an end.

Dissolution

Dissolution means bringing to an end the legal personality of a company. A company is created by law (i.e., incorporation of a company) and similarly the life of a company can be ended only by due process of law (i.e., dissolution). The dissolution of a company may be achieved by any of the following processes:

- (a) A scheme of reconstruction of a company or amalgamation of two or more companies requires the approval of Court. The Court while sanctioning the scheme may also provide for the dissolution, without winding up of the company (Section 394).
- (b) The registrar, after following the prescribed procedure, may strike off the name of a defunct company (i.e., a company which is not carrying on any business) from the register of companies (Section 560).
- (c) Through winding up process.

Insolvency and winding up - a comparison

- Only an individual can be adjudged an insolvent. A company cannot be adjudged an insolvent even if it is unable to pay its debts (However, it is common to use the expression 'insolvent company' where a company is unable to pay its debts).
- A person can be adjudged an insolvent only when he is unable to pay his debts or liabilities. A company may be wound up even if it is financially sound, e.g. voluntary winding up.
- In insolvency proceedings, the assets of a person are vested with official assignee/ receiver. In winding up, the property remains vested in the company, but the administration is taken over by the liquidator.
- After completion of insolvency proceedings, the insolvent is discharged from all his debts and he becomes a legal person. However, after completion of winding up, the company is dissolved.

Winding up and dissolution - a comparison

- Winding up always precedes dissolution.
- In winding up, the assets are realised and the liabilities are paid, but the corporate status of the company continues. Dissolution brings an end to the company's existence as a legal entity.
- The liquidator can be appointed either by the Court (i.e., in winding up by the Court) or members (i.e., in members' voluntary winding up). However, the order of dissolution can be passed by the Court only.
- The liquidator can represent the company in winding up proceedings. Once the order of dissolution is passed, the liquidator cannot represent the company.
- Creditors can prove their debts in the winding up proceedings but not after an order of dissolution has been made.
- Any person may proceed against a company which is being wound up. But, no proceedings can be started against a company which has been dissolved (unless the order of dissolution is set aside by the Court).
- Winding up proceedings may be started without the intervention of the Court. However, an order of Court is essential for dissolution of the company.

Modes of winding up (Section 425)

A company registered under the Companies Act, 1956 may be wound up in any of the following modes:

1. Compulsory winding up
2. Voluntary winding up

- (a) Members' voluntary winding up
- (b) Creditors' voluntary winding up

3. Winding up subject to supervision of Court*

*Provisions relating to Winding up subject to supervision of Court has been omitted by the Companies (Second amendment Act) 2002- yet to take effect.

Compulsory winding up

Grounds for compulsory winding up (Section 433)

Winding up of a company under an order of the Court is known as compulsory winding up. As per section 433, the Court may order the winding up of a company, if a petition is filed with the Court. Section 433 of the Act reads as under:

A company may be wound up by the Court :-

- (a) if the company has, by special resolution, resolved that the company be wound up by the Court;
- (b) if default is made in delivering the statutory report to the registrar or in holding the statutory meeting;
- (c) if the company does not commence its business within a year from its incorporation, or suspends its business for a whole year;
- (d) if the number of members is reduced, in the case of a public company, below seven, and in the case of a private company, below two;
- (e) if the company is unable to pay its debts;
- (f) if the Court is of opinion that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up;
- (g) if the company has made a default in filing with the Registrar its balance sheet and profit and loss account or annual return for any five consecutive financial years;
- (h) if the company has acted against the interests of the sovereignty and integrity of India, the security of the State, friendly relations with foreign States, public order, decency or morality;
- (i) if the Tribunal is of the opinion that the Company should be wound up under the circumstances specified in section 424G:

Provided that the Tribunal shall make an order for winding up of a company under clause (h) on application made by the Central Government or a State Government.

Note: Clauses (g), (h) and (i) have been added to section 433 by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 - yet to get effect; hence the word 'Tribunal' in (i) above stand for the word 'Court' in unamended section.

Ground No. a. Special resolution passed by the company

The members of the company may, by passing a special resolution, resolve that the company be wound up by the Court. Winding up under this clause is not common because whenever the members wish to wind up the company, they prefer voluntary winding up which is cheaper and speedier than the compulsory winding up. Also, under members' voluntary winding up, the liquidator is appointed by the members and therefore the control over the winding up proceedings rests with the members, and the interference of the Court is the least.

Ground No. b. Default in filing statutory report or holding statutory meeting

As per section 165, every public company having share capital shall hold a statutory meeting and file a statutory report with the registrar. If the company fails to comply with section 165, the Court may order the winding up of the company.

- An application on this ground can be made only on the expiration of 14 days from the last day on which statutory meeting ought to have been held.
- The Court may instead of making a winding up order, direct that the statutory report shall be delivered or that the statutory meeting shall be held. The Court may order the costs to be paid by any persons who are responsible for the default [Section 443(3)].

Ground No. c. Non-commencement of business or suspension of business

If a company does not commence business within 1 year from its incorporation or suspends its business for 1 year, the Court may order the company to be wound up. Petition on this ground may be made by the Registrar, the company, the contributory or the creditor.

- Where a company having many businesses, discontinues one of them, it cannot be said to have suspended its business. For invoking section 433(c), it must be shown that the entire business of the company has been suspended [Paramjit Lal Badhwar v Prem Spg. & Wvg. Mills Ltd. (1986) 60 Comp Cas 420].
- If the delay for non-commencement of business is sufficiently explained and it is shown that the company intends to carry on its business, an order for winding up will not be made [Malabar Iron and Steel Works Ltd. v ROC (1963) 33 Comp Cas 886 (Ker)]. But where no satisfactory explanation is given, although the company has assets and no debts, an order for winding up will be made [Re, Tumacacori Mining Co. (1874) 143 Ch. 417].
- Where suspension of business is alleged, the Court will decide whether the company has abandoned the object for which it was established. If the majority of the shareholders do not want it, winding up order will not be made [Re, Middlesbrough Assembly Rooms Co. (1880) 14 Ch. D. 104].

Ground No.d. Reduction in number of members below minimum

If the numbers of members fall below the statutory minimum, i.e., seven in case of a public company and two in case of a private company, the company may be ordered to be wound up.

Ground No.e. Company unable to pay its debts

If the company is unable to pay its debts, the Court may order the company to be wound up.

As per section 434, a company shall be deemed to be unable to pay its debts in the following circumstances:

- 1. Neglect to pay a debt exceeding ₹ 500 [₹ 1 lakh – Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect]. Where the company neglects to pay or compound or secure the debt exceeding ₹ 500 within 3 weeks from the date of demand by any of its creditors.
 - The creditor must make the demand by serving a notice, by registered post or otherwise.
 - The notice must be served at the registered office of the company.
 - The notice must be signed by the creditor or his agent or legal adviser duly authorized in this behalf.
 - It is immaterial whether the amount is payable to the creditor originally or some other creditor has assigned the debt in the favour of such creditor.
- 2. Failure to satisfy Court decree etc. When the company fails to satisfy a Court decree in favour of a creditor, whether in whole or in part.
 - Unsatisfied execution of a decree, however small, will constitute inability to pay debts.
 - Inability to satisfy a decree of a foreign Court shall also constitute inability to pay debts.

3. Satisfaction of the Court. When it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court* that the company is unable to pay its debts.

- The Court* shall also take into account the contingent and prospective liabilities of the company.
- The expression 'unable to pay its debts' is to be taken in the commercial sense of being unable to meet the current demands though the company may be otherwise solvent [Tripura Administration v Tripura State bank Ltd. AIR 1959]. The test is whether the Court is satisfied that the existing and probable assets would be insufficient to meet the existing liabilities [Re, European Life Assurance Society (1869) LR Eq.122].

Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect.

Observations made under section 434.

- (a) Where in spite of repeated demands by a creditor, the company neglects to pay the debt, it is prima facie evidence of its inability to pay [Re, Gold Hill Mine's (1883) 23 Ch. D 210].
- (b) Where a debt is bona fide disputed by the company and the Court is satisfied with the company's defence, there is no 'neglect to pay' and therefore a winding up order will not be made [Piara Singh (S) v S.H.R Properties Pvt. Ltd. (1993) 10 CLA 83]. Bona fide dispute implies the existence of a substantial ground for the dispute raised. In other words, where there is scope for honest differences of opinion and disputes in respect of the claim made, the Court will not entertain a winding up petition [Bhabesh Chandra Guha Roy v Bissesarlal Sharma, 1973 Tax LR 2331 (Cal)]. The Court may, however, at its discretion direct the company to furnish security.
- (c) The Court may, in its discretion, refuse to pass a winding up order and may grant some time to the company to satisfy the debt [Re, Ansew Drums Co. Ltd. (1968) 38 Comp Cas 287 (Bom)].

Ground No.f. Just and equitable to wind up the company

When the Court* is of the opinion that it is just and equitable that the company be wound up, it may order the winding up of the company.

- Winding up on this ground is in the nature of a remedy of the last resort and is allowed when other remedies are not efficacious enough to protect the general interests of the company and its claimants.
- The petitioner must convince the Court* that -
 - (a) there are just and equitable grounds for winding up the company; and
 - (b) there is no alternative remedy open to him [Re, Atul Drug House Ltd. (1971) 41 Comp Cas 352].
- Where a petition is presented on the ground that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up, the Court* has the discretion to dismiss it, if –
 - an alternate remedy is available; or
 - the petitioner is acting unreasonably in asking for a winding up order [Section 443(2)].
- The Court* shall take into account not only the interests of the shareholders and creditors but also public interest and interest of employees.
- The words 'just and equitable' are not to be read ejusdem generis with the grounds mentioned under section 433(a) to (e) [Davis & Co. Ltd. v Brunswick (Australia) Ltd. AIR 1936 PC 114].

Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect.

Examples on just and equitable ground. The Court may order the winding up of a company in the following cases:

1. Loss of substratum. The substratum of the company may be said to have gone where the main purpose for which the company was formed becomes impossible, i.e., permanently impracticable. No general rule can be laid down as to the nature of circumstances in which it can be said that the substratum of the company has gone, and each case has to be decided on its own facts. Winding up order was passed in the following cases:
 - Where it was established that the company was incorporated for a particular purpose which could no longer be achieved.
 - Where it was impossible to carry on the business of the company except at a loss, i.e., there was no reasonable hope of trading at a profit.

[Seth Mohan Lal v. Grain Chambers Ltd., AIR 1968 S.C..772]

2. Deadlock in management. If there is total deadlock and there is no other practical remedy, the Court would have little option but to order the winding up. [Re. Yenidje Tobacco (1916) 2 Ch. 426]
3. Fraudulent or illegal business. Where the company was formed to carry on a fraudulent or illegal business or the business of the company becomes illegal by change in law.
4. Company is a bubble. Where the company is a mere bubble and does not carry on any business and does not have any property. [Re London and County Coal Co.(1867) L.R. 3 Eq.365]
5. Recommendation by BIFR. Where the Board for Industrial and Financial Reconstruction (BIFR) recommends the winding up of a company.

Commencement of compulsory winding up (Section 441)

- (a) In case of a winding up by the Court, the winding up shall be deemed to have commenced at the time of presentation of the petition for the winding up. Thus, where a petition is made to the Court and the Court orders the winding up, the order relates back to the date of the presentation of the petition. If no order for winding up is made and the winding up petition is dismissed, the date of presentation of petition has no relevance.
- (b) Where a company is being wound up voluntarily, an application may be made to the Court seeking an order of compulsory winding up. After considering the application, the Court may order the compulsory winding up if it is satisfied that the voluntary winding up cannot be continued with due regard to the interests of the creditors or contributories or both (Section 440). In this case, the winding up shall be deemed to have commenced when the resolution for voluntary winding up was passed.

Note: The power of the Court to order winding up is discretionary

The use of the word 'may' in the opening part of section 433 implies that the circumstances mentioned under section 433(a) to (f) give to the Court a discretionary power to order the winding up of a company, i.e., the Court is not under an obligation to order the winding up of a company even if the conditions mentioned under any of the clauses of section 433 are fulfilled. The Court may not order the winding up if it is opposed to the interest of the company or public interest.

Winding up by the Court - A discretionary power

The Court has discretionary powers to order winding up under section 433(a) to (f). The Court may not order the winding up if it is opposed to the interest of the company or public interest. In Tata Iron and Steel Co. v. Micro Forge (India) Ltd. 2000 CLC 1669, a petition was filed against the company about which the Court found that its profitability, turnover, reserves, surpluses and soundness were beyond question. The petition was quashed by the Court. The Court also prepared chronicles of the point that emerged from the case law developments, which are reproduced hereunder:

1. The remedy under section 433 is not a matter of right. Merely because one of the circumstances enumerated in section 433 exist, the Court is not bound to order winding up of the company. Inability to pay debts in all cases, ipso facto, could not be construed as an appropriate case for winding up.
2. Even if the debt is proved and even if the inability to pay the debt is also- shown, it is not a launching pad, in all cases, for successful winding up order. Inability may arise for variety of reasons and the Court is obliged to consider whether inability is the outcome of any deliberate or designed action or temporary shock of economy and market. In a given case, it may happen that a party may become unable to pay its debts for a while, but that by itself is not a criterion for exercise of the power, ipso facto.
3. It is necessary for the Court to consider the financial status, strength and substratum of the company, in the overall context. If there is temporary cash crisis despite high sales and heavy turnover, it would not be proper to wind up the company for mere inability of the company to pay its debts. The Court is also obliged to consider that it would be in the interest of justice to give the company some time to come out of the momentary financial crisis or any other temporary difficulty as winding up is a measure of last resort. . .
4. If the company is an ongoing concern having regular business and employment of employees, the Court cannot remain oblivious to this aspect. The effect of winding up would be of putting an end to the business or an industry or an entrepreneurship and, in turn, resulting in loss of employment to several employees and loss of production and effect on the larger interest of the society. The Court would take into consideration the entire status and position of the company in the market.
5. If the company has shown considerable growth in a reasonable span and is a growth oriented enterprise, even a case of temporary inability to pay debts would not be sufficient to wind up the company.
6. Though, ordinarily, an unpaid creditor may aspire for an order of winding up, the rule is not inflexible but a matter of discretion of the Court. Section 433 is also indicative of the fact that even if one or more grounds mentioned in section 433 exist, it is not obligatory for the Court to make an order of winding up. The Court has discretionary power. The Court must in each case exercise its discretion in deciding whether in the circumstances of the case, it would be in the interest of justice to wind up the company. It is a well known rule of prudence that even in a case where indebtedness to the petitioning person is undisputed, the Court does not pass an order for winding up where it is satisfied that it would not be in the larger interest of justice to wind up the company.
7. It is also well settled that a winding up order shall not be made on a creditors petition, if it would not benefit him or the company's creditors in general.
8. The element of public policy has to be taken into account before determining the winding up issue.
9. Winding up is the last thing the Court would do and not the first thing to do having regard to its impact and consequences. Winding up of a company would ensue -
 - (a) closing down of a company which is engaged in production or manufacture or which provides some services;
 - (b) it would throw oat or employment numerous persons and result in gross hardship to the members of families of the employees;
 - (c) loss of revenue to the State by way of collection of taxes which otherwise should have been collected, on account of customs, excise duties, sales tax, income-tax, etc.;
 - (d) scarcity of goods and diminishing of employment opportunities.

Therefore, it is not correct to say that the existence of any of the circumstances for compulsory winding up of the company as enumerated under section 433 binds the Court to order the winding up of the company.

Petition for compulsory winding up (Section 439)

Under section 439, the petition for winding up of a company may be presented by any of the following persons:

1. the company; or
2. any creditor or creditors, including any contingent or prospective creditor or creditors; or
3. a contributory or contributories; or
4. any combination of creditors, company or contributories acting jointly or separately; or
5. the Registrar; or
6. any person authorized by the Central Government, as per section 243 (in consequence of investigation under section 237 of the Act);
7. the official liquidator in a voluntary winding up. [Section 440].
8. in a case falling under clause (h) of section 433 by the Central Government or a State Government. (Would become applicable when Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 comes to effect.)

1. Company

The company may file a petition for its winding up, when the members of the company have so resolved by passing special resolution.

2. Creditors

A creditor can file a petition if the company is unable to pay its debts. The petition shall not be valid if the claim of the creditor has become time barred under the Limitation Act. The following persons shall also be deemed to be the creditors for this purpose;

(a) A prospective or contingent creditor.

However, a prospective or contingent creditor shall obtain the leave of the Court before making the petition. Such leave shall not be granted -

- unless, in the opinion of the Court, there is a prima facie case for winding up the company; and
- until such security for costs has been given as the Court thinks reasonable.

(b) A secured creditor.

(c) The holder of any debentures (including debenture stock), whether or not any trustee or trustees have been appointed.

(d) The trustee for the holders of debentures.

3. Contributory

The term contributory means every person liable to contribute to the assets of a company in the event of its being wound up and includes the holder of fully paid shares. A contributory may file a winding up petition in the following cases:

- (a) He can present the petition on the ground that the number of members has fallen below the statutory limit.
- (b) He can present the petition on any other ground if -

- he is an original allottee of shares; or
- he has held his shares for at least 6 months during the 18 months immediately preceding the commencement of winding up; or
- the shares have been devolved on him through the death of a member.

Rights of certain persons as a contributory:

Holder of forfeited shares. A holder of forfeited shares, being a contributory, has a right to apply for winding up of the company provided he has held the shares for 6 months during the 18 months preceding the commencement of winding up [Re, Mumtaz Bank Ltd. (1932) 2 Comp Cas 350].

Legal representative. The legal representative of a shareholder is a contributory for the purpose of filing a petition for winding up of the company [Re, Bayswater Trading Co. Ltd. (1970) 1 All ER 608].

Surviving shareholder in case of joint holders. In case of joint shareholders, the legal representatives of a joint holder cannot maintain a petition for winding up because this right falls upon the other joint holder [Ram Govind Misra v. Allahabad Theatres P. Ltd. (1989) 66 Comp Cas 358].

4. Joint petition.

Any combination of the company, the creditors and the contributories can present a petition for winding up.

5. The Registrar

The registrar may file the petition under any of the following grounds:

- (a) If a default is made in filing the statutory report or holding a statutory meeting.
- (b) If the company does not commence business within 1 year or suspends its business for 1 year.
- (c) If the numbers of members fall below the statutory minimum.
- (d) If the company is unable to pay its debts.
- (e) If the Court is of the opinion that it is just and equitable to wind up the company.
- (f) There has arisen a default contemplated under section 433(g) [in filing of Balance Sheet and Profit and Loss Account or Annual Return – yet to become applicable].

Restrictions on power of the registrar to make petition.

- (a) The registrar shall not make the petition unless he has obtained the previous approval of the Central Government. The Central Government shall not accord its approval, unless the company has first been afforded an opportunity of making a representation.
- (b) The registrar shall not make the, petition on the ground that the company is unable to pay its debts unless he is satisfied that the company is unable to pay its debts as disclosed from -
 - (i) the financial condition of company, as disclosed from the balance sheet of the company; or
 - (ii) the report of a special auditor appointed under section 233A; or
 - (iii) the report of an inspector appointed to investigate the affairs of the company under section 235 or 237.

6. The Central Government

Section 237(b) empowers the Central Government to order investigation into the affairs of a company if, in the opinion of the Company Law Board, any of the following circumstances exist:

- (a) That the business of the company is being conducted -
 - with intent to defraud its creditors, members or any other persons; or
 - for a fraudulent or unlawful purpose; or
 - in a manner oppressive of any of its members.
- (b) That the company was formed for any fraudulent or unlawful purpose.
- (c) That the persons concerned in the formation or management of the company have been guilty of fraud, misfeasance or other misconduct.

After considering the inspector's report, if the Central Government is satisfied that any of the above circumstances exist and it is expedient to wind up the company, it may cause a petition to be presented to the Court for winding up the company on just and equitable ground (Section 243). It is for the Court to decide whether to wind up the company or not, but the Court will give Special weight to the views of the Central Government.

7. Petition by Official Liquidator (Section 440)

- (1) Where a company is being wound up voluntarily, a petition for its winding up by the Court* may be presented by-
 - (a) any person authorised to do so under section 439; or
 - (b) the Official Liquidator.
- (2) The court* shall not make a winding up order on a petition presented to it under sub-section (1), unless it is satisfied that the voluntary winding up cannot be continued with due regard to the interests of the creditors or contributories or both.

[*Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect.]

Statement of affairs to be filed on winding up of a company [Sec.439A]

Section 439A (Yet to take effect) introduced by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 requires-

- (1) Every company shall file with the Tribunal a statement of its affairs along with the petition for winding up.
- (2) Where a company opposes a petition for its winding up, it shall file with the Tribunal a statement of its affairs.
- (3) The statement of affairs referred to in sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall be accompanied by-
 - (a) The last known addresses of all directors and company, secretary of such company;
 - (b) The details of location of assets of the company and their value;
 - (c) The details of all debtors and creditors with their complete addresses;
 - (d) The details of workmen and their employees and any amount outstanding to them;
 - (e) Such other details as the Tribunal may direct.

Jurisdiction of Court to order winding up (Section 10 and 435 to 438)*

The provisions relating to jurisdiction of the Court to wind up a company may be explained as follows:

1. Jurisdiction of Court

As per section 10, with respect to any matter relating to a company, the Court having jurisdiction means the High Court having jurisdiction in relation to a place at which the registered office of the company is situated. However, for the purpose of winding up of a company, such jurisdiction may be conferred on any District Court subordinate to that High Court in relation to companies having a paid up capital of less than ₹ 1 lakh. In other words, the Court having jurisdiction to wind up a company means -

- (a) the High Court having jurisdiction in relation to the place at which the registered office of the company is situated; or
- (b) any District Court subordinate to such High Court (However, the District Court shall not have any jurisdiction to wind up a company which has a paid up capital of ₹ 1 lakh or more).

2. Transfer of proceedings

- (a) Transfer of winding up proceedings to District Court. As per section 435, where a High Court makes an order for winding up a company, it may direct that all subsequent proceedings shall be held in -
 - (i) a District Court subordinate to that High Court; or
 - (ii) another High Court or District Court subordinate to that other High Court (after obtaining the consent of that other High Court).
- (b) Withdrawal and transfer of winding up from one District Court to another. As per section 436, during the continuance of winding up proceedings, the High Court may,
 - (i) withdraw the case and proceed with the winding up itself; or
 - (ii) transfer the case to any other District Court, whereupon the winding up shall proceed in that District Court.

3. Proceedings commenced in wrong Court

Where the proceedings for winding up of a company are started in a District Court, the High Court may direct that such District Court shall retain and continue with such proceedings, although it may not be the Court in which the proceedings ought to have been commenced (Section 437).

Note: 1.

- (a) Meaning of 'Court'. The High Court or the District Court as defined under section 10 is referred to as the 'Court' or the 'Company Court'.
- (b) Meaning of 'registered office'. For the purpose of section 10, 'registered office' means the place which has longest been the registered office of the company during the 6 months immediately preceding the presentation of the petition for winding up.

2. High Court may any time pass orders under sections 435,436 and 437

The High Court shall have jurisdiction to pass orders under sections 435,436 and 437 at any time and at any stage. Further, it may pass such orders whether or not an application in this behalf has been made by any of the parties to the proceedings (Section 438).

[*Section 435 to 438 Omitted by the Companies (Second amendment) act, 2002 (w.e.f. a date yet to be notified)]

Powers of the Court

Powers of the Court* in the winding up proceedings of the company can be classified as follows:

- (A) Powers of the Court* before making winding up order
- (B) Powers of the Court* after making winding up order

(A) Powers of the Court* before making winding up order

1. Stay of suits or proceedings (Section 442)

At any time after the presentation of a winding up petition and before a winding up order has been made, the company, or any creditor or contributory, may apply to the Court* for stay of suits or proceedings against the company. The application shall be made as follows:

- (a) Where any suit or proceeding is pending in the Supreme Court or in any High Court, application shall be made to the Supreme Court or the High Court, as the case may be.
- (b) Where any suit or proceeding is pending in any other Court, application shall be made to the Court having jurisdiction to wind up the company.

Discretion of the Court. The Court may stay or restrain the suit or proceedings against the company on such terms as it thinks fit.

[Note:Section 442 has been omitted Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002, but not yet notified.]

2. Powers of Court to decide the petition (Section 443)

On hearing a winding up petition, the Court may:

- (a) dismiss it, with or without costs;
- (b) adjourn the hearing conditionally or unconditionally;
- (c) make any interim order as it thinks fit;
- (d) make an order for winding up the company with or without costs; or
- (e) any other order that it thinks fit;

3. Power to order winding up even if the company has no assets (Section 443)

Where the circumstances justify the making of a winding up order, the Court shall not refuse to make a winding up order on the ground only that -

- (a) the company has no assets; or
- (b) no assets will be available after paying the mortgages.

As per Companies (Second amendment) Act, 2002, Section 443 shall be substituted by-

Section 443.Power of Tribunal on hearing petition-

(1) On hearing a winding up petition, the Tribunal may:

- (a) dismiss it, with or without costs;
- (b) adjourn the hearing conditionally or unconditionally;
- (c) make any interim order as it thinks fit;
- (d) make an order for winding up the company with or without costs; or any other order that it thinks fit;

Provided that the Tribunal shall not refuse to make a winding up order on the ground only that the assets of the company have been mortgaged to an amount equal to or in excess of those assets, or that the company has no assets,

(2) Where the petition is presented on the ground that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up, the Tribunal may refuse to make an order of winding up, if it is of the opinion that some other remedy is available to the petitioners and that they are acting unreasonably in seeking to have the company wound up instead of pursuing that other remedy.

- (3) Where the petition is presented on the ground of default in delivering the statutory report to the Registrar, or in holding the statutory meeting, the Tribunal may-
- (a) instead of making a winding up order, direct that the statutory report shall be delivered or that a meeting shall be held; and
 - (b) order the costs to be paid by any persons who, in the opinion of the Tribunal, are responsible for the default.

(B) Powers of the Court after making winding up order

After making a winding up order, the Court may exercise the following powers:

1. Power of Court to stay winding up (Section 466)

- (a) When can application be made? The application can be made to the Court at any time after a winding up order has been made. .
- (b) Who can make the application? The application may be made by the Official Liquidator or any creditor or contributory. The applicant shall contend that all proceedings in relation to the winding up ought to be stayed. .
- (c) Satisfaction of Court necessary. The Court may require the Official Liquidator to furnish to the Court a report with respect to any facts or matters which are in his opinion relevant to the application. After considering the report of the Official Liquidator, if the Court is satisfied that all proceedings in relation to the winding up ought to be stayed, the Court may make an order staying the proceedings, either altogether or for a limited time, on such terms and conditions as the Court thinks fit.

As per Companies (Second amendment) Act, 2002, Section 466 shall be substituted by-

466. Power of tribunal to stay winding up.-

- (1) The Tribunal may at any time after making a winding up order, on the application either of the Official Liquidator or of any creditor or contributory, and on proof to the satisfaction of the Tribunal that all proceedings in relation to the winding up ought to be stayed, make an order staying the proceedings, either altogether or for a limited time, on such terms and conditions as the Tribunal thinks fit.
- (2) On any application under this section, the Tribunal may, before making an order, require the Official Liquidator to furnish to the Tribunal a report with respect to any facts or matters which are in his opinion relevant to the application.
- (3) A copy of every order made under this section shall forthwith be forwarded by the company, or otherwise as may be prescribed, to the Registrar, who shall make a minute of the order in his books relating to the company.

2. Settlement of list of contributories and application of assets (Section 467)

- (a) After making a winding up order, the Court* shall settle a list of contributories. It shall distinguish between those who are contributories in their own right and those who are contributories as being representatives of, or liable for the others' debts.
- (b) Where it appears to the Court* that it will not be necessary to make calls or adjust the rights of contributories, it may dispense with the settlement of list of contributories.
- (c) The Court* shall have the power to rectify the register of members.
- (d) The Court* shall cause the assets of the company to be collected and applied in discharge of its liabilities.

3. Delivery of property to liquidator (Section 468)

The Court* may require any contributory, trustee, receiver, banker, agent, officer or other employee of the company, to pay, deliver, surrender or transfer to the liquidator, any money, property or books and papers in his custody or under his control to which the company is prima facie entitled.

4. Set off (Section 469)

Where, apart from his liability as a shareholder, any other money is due from a contributory to the company, the court* may order him to pay the same.

5. Power of Court to make calls (Section 470)

- (a) The Court may make calls on all or any of the contributories. The liquidator has no power to make calls without the leave of the Court.
- (b) No set off can be claimed against the calls made by the Court or the liquidator.
- (c) In making a call, the Court may take into consideration the probability that some of the contributories may partly or wholly, fail to pay the call. Therefore, the Court may make the calls for such amount as may leave a surplus after everything is paid.
- (d) The Court shall adjust the rights of the contributories among themselves and distribute any surplus among the persons entitled thereto (Section 475).

As per Companies (Second amendment) Act, 2002, Section 470 shall be substituted by-

470. Power of Tribunal to make calls-

- (1) The Tribunal may, at any time after making winding up order, and either before or after it has ascertained the sufficiency of the assets of the company,-
 - (a) make calls on all or any of the contributories for the time being on the list of the contributories, to the extent of their liability, for payment of any money which the Tribunal considers necessary to satisfy the debts and liabilities of the company, and the costs, charges and expenses of winding up, and for the adjustment of the rights of the contributories among themselves; and
 - (b) make an order for payment of any calls so made.
- (2) In making a call, the Tribunal may take into consideration the probability that some of the contributories may, partly or wholly, fail to pay the call.

6. Power to exclude creditors not proving in time (Section 474)

The Court* may fix a time within which the creditors shall prove their debts or claims. If within the time fixed by the Court*, a creditor does not prove his debt he will be excluded from the benefit of any distribution made before those debts or claims are proved.

7. Power to order costs (Section 476)

The Court* may, in the event of the assets being insufficient to satisfy the liabilities, make an order for the payment out of the assets, of the costs, charges and expenses incurred in the winding up, in such order of priority inter se as the Court* thinks just.

8. Power to summon persons suspected of having property of company, etc. (Section 477)

- (a) The Court* may summon -
 - any officer of the company; or
 - any person known or suspected to have in his possession any property or books or papers of the company; or

- any person known or suspected to be indebted to the company; or
 - any person whom the Court* deems capable of giving information concerning the promotion, formation, trade, dealings, property, books or papers, or affairs of the company.
- (b) The Court* may examine any officer or person so summoned on oath.
- (c) The Court* may require him to produce any books and papers in his custody relating to the company.
- (d) If, on his examination, he admits that he is indebted to the company, the Court* may order him to pay the amount. If he admits that some property of the company is in his possession, the Court* may order him to deliver the property.
- (e) If he fails to appear before the Court* without any valid reason, the Court* may cause him to be apprehended and brought before the Court* for examination.

9. Power to order public examination of promoters, directors, etc. (Section 478)

If the Official Liquidator states in his further report that any fraud has been committed in the promotion or formation of the company or in relation to the company, the Court* shall have the power to direct that any person charged with the fraud shall be publicly examined by the Court* under section 478.

10. Power to arrest absconding contributory (Section 479)

Where evidence is produced before the Court* that there is probable cause for believing that a contributory is about to leave India or abscond or conceal any of his property for the purpose of evading payment of calls or of avoiding examination respecting the affairs of the company, the Court* may cause the contributory to be arrested. The Court* may also order the seizure of his books and papers and movable property.

11. Dissolution of company (Section 481)

The Court* may make the order of dissolution in the following cases:

- (a) Where the affairs of a company have been completely wound up.
- (b) Where the Court* is of the opinion that the following two conditions have been satisfied:
- (i) the liquidator cannot proceed with the winding up of a company -
 - ✓ for want of funds and assets; or
 - ✓ for any reason whatsoever.
 - (ii) it is just and reasonable in the circumstances of the case that an order of dissolution of the company should be made.

12. Power of the Court* to declare the dissolution void (Section 559)

Where a company has been dissolved, it may be revived by the Court* by declaring the dissolution void. The effect of an order under section 559 is that it makes the dissolution void ab initio and all consequences resulting from the dissolution are avoided, including proceedings taken during the interval between the date of dissolution and the date of the order [Morris v. Harris 1927 AC 252].

[* Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect.]

Consequences of winding up order (Sections 444 to 447)

The consequences of a winding up order are as follows:

1. Communication of winding up Order (Section 444)

Where the Court makes an order for the winding up of a company, the Court shall forthwith cause intimation thereof to be sent to the Official Liquidator and the registrar. This will enable the Official Liquidator to take into his possession the books, accounts and assets of the company.

Substitution of Section 444 as per Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002, w.e.f.-yet to come in force.

444. Order for winding up to be communicated to Official Liquidator and Registrar.

Where the Tribunal makes an order for the winding up of the company, the Tribunal, shall within a period not exceeding two weeks from the date of passing of the order, cause intimation thereof to be sent to the Official Liquidator and the Registrar.

2. Copy of winding up order to be filed with Registrar (Section 445)

- (1) The petitioner and the company must also file with the Registrar within 30 days a certified copy of the order.
- (2) The Registrar should then make a minute of the order in his books relating to the company and notify in the Official Gazette that such an order has been made.
- (3) The order for winding up is deemed to be a notice of discharge to the officers and employees of the company except when the business of the company is continued for the beneficial winding up of the company.

3. Stay of suits or proceedings (Section 446)

- (1) When a winding up order has been made or the Official Liquidator has been appointed as provisional liquidator, no suit or other legal proceeding shall be commenced, or if pending at the date of the winding up order, shall be proceeded with, against the company, except by leave of the court* and subject to such terms as the court* may impose.
- (2) The court which is winding up the company shall, notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, have jurisdiction to entertain, or dispose of -
 - (a) any suit or proceeding by or against the company ;
 - (b) any claim made by or against the company (including claims by or against any of its branches in India) ;
 - (c) any application made under section 391 by or in respect of the company ;
 - (d) any question of priorities or any other question whatsoever, whether of law or fact, which may relate to or arise in course of the winding up of the company ;

whether such suit or proceeding has been instituted, or is instituted, or such claim or question has arisen or arises or such application has been made or is made before or after the order for the winding up of the company, or before or after the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1960.

 (3) Any suit or proceeding by or against the company which is pending in any Court other than that in which the winding up of the company is proceeding may, notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, be transferred to and disposed of by that Court.

- (4) Nothing in sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall apply to any proceeding pending in appeal before the Supreme Court or a high Court.

4. Effect of winding up order (Section 447)

An order for winding up a company shall operate in favour of all the creditors and of all the contributories of the company as if it had been made out on the joint petition of a creditor and of a contributory. Accordingly, where the directors received some money from a creditor by fraudulent trading, and the liquidator recovered such money, it was held that the money formed part of the general assets of the company; it did not become payable to the creditor [Re, W.C. Leitch Bros. (No. 2), (1993) 148 LT 108].

The Liquidator (Sections 448 to 453)

5. Official Liquidator to be liquidator (Section 449)

On a winding up order being made, the Official Liquidator shall become the liquidator of the company.

Appointment of Official Liquidator (Sec.448)

- (1) For the purposes of this Act, so far as it relates to the winding up of companies by the Court, -
 - (a) there shall be attached to each High Court, an Official Liquidator appointed by the Central Government, who shall be a whole-time officer, unless the Central Government considers that there will not be sufficient work for a whole-time officer in which case a part-time officer may be appointed ; and
 - (b) the Official Receiver attached to a District Court for insolvency purposes, or if there is no such Official Receiver, then, such person as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette appoint for the purpose, shall be the Official Liquidator attached to the District Court.
- (1A) The Central Government may appoint one or more Deputy or Assistant Official Liquidators to assist the Official Liquidator in the discharge of his functions.
- (2) All references to the "Official Liquidator" in this Act shall be construed as references to the Official Liquidator referred to in clause (a) or clause (b), as the case may be, of sub-section (1) and as including references to Deputy or Assistant Official Liquidators appointed under sub-section (1A).'

Section 448 substituted by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 (w.e.f. a date yet to be notified)

Sec. 448. Appointment of Official Liquidator

- (1) For the purposes of this Act, so far as it relates to the winding up of a company by the Tribunal, there shall be an Official Liquidator who -
 - (a) may be appointed from a panel of professional firms of chartered accountants, advocates, company secretaries, costs and works accountants or firms having a combination of these professions, which the Central Government shall constitute for the Tribunal ; or
 - (b) may be a body corporate consisting of such professionals as may be approved by the Central Government from time to time ; or
 - (c) may be a whole-time or a part-time officer appointed by the Central Government :

Provided that, before appointing the Official Liquidator, the Tribunal may give due regard to the views or opinion of the secured creditors and workmen.
- (2) The terms and conditions for the appointment of the Official Liquidator and the remuneration payable to him shall be -
 - (a) approved by the Tribunal for those appointed under clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1), subject to a maximum remuneration of five per cent of the value of debt recovered and realisation of sale of assets ;

(b) approved by the Central Government for those appointed under clause (c) of sub-section (1) in accordance with the rules made by it in this behalf.

(3) Where the Official Liquidator is an officer appointed by the Central Government under clause (c) of sub-section (1), the Central Government may also appoint, if considered necessary, one or more Deputy Official Liquidators or Assistant Official Liquidators to assist the Official Liquidator in the discharge of his functions, and the terms and conditions for the appointment of such Official Liquidators and the remuneration payable to them shall also be in accordance with the rules made by the Central Government.

(4) All references to the "Official Liquidator" in this Act shall be construed as reference to the Official Liquidator specified in sub-section (1), or to the Deputy Official Liquidator or Assistant Official Liquidator referred to in subsection (3), as the case may be.

(5) The amount of the remuneration payable shall -

(a) form part of the winding up order made by the Tribunal ;

(b) be treated as first charge on the realisation of the assets and be paid to the Official Liquidator or to the Central Government, as the case may be.

(6) The Official Liquidator shall conduct proceedings in the winding up of a company and perform such duties in reference thereto as the Tribunal may specify in this behalf :

Provided that the Tribunal may -

(a) transfer the work assigned from one Official Liquidator to another Official Liquidator for the reasons to be recorded in writing ;

(b) remove the Official Liquidator on sufficient cause being shown ;

(c) proceed against the Official Liquidator for professional misconduct.

Sec. 449. Official liquidator to be Liquidator

On a winding up order being made in respect of a company, the Official Liquidator shall, by virtue of his office, become the liquidator of the company.

The provisional liquidator (Section 450)

(a) Object of appointment. The provisional liquidator is appointed in special circumstances in order to protect the assets of the company pending the hearing or disposal of the winding up petition. As such, where there is a danger to the assets of the company, the Court may appoint a provisional liquidator in order to protect the interests of the creditors and safeguard the properties of the company.

(b) Official Liquidator to be provisional liquidator. After receiving the winding up petition and before the making of a winding up order, the Court may appoint the Official Liquidator as a provisional liquidator.

(c) Opportunity to make representations. Before appointing a provisional liquidator, the Court shall give notice to the company and give a reasonable opportunity to it to make its representations. However, the Court may dispense with the notice for any special reasons to be recorded in writing.

(d) Same powers as that of liquidator. The provisional liquidator shall have the same powers as that of a liquidator. However, the Court may limit and restrict his powers at the time of his appointment or thereafter.

- (e) Provisional liquidator to be liquidator. On a winding up order being made, the provisional liquidator shall automatically become the liquidator of the company.
- (f) Appointment of provisional liquidator is a drastic measure.- The Court will not take a drastic step like the appointment of a provisional liquidator unless the company is shown to be insolvent or unless the petition is presented by the company itself or the petition is unopposed [Virendra Singh v. Nandlal Bhandari & Sons Pvt. Ltd. (1979) 49 Comp Cas 532]. The appointment of a provisional liquidator will be made only when the Court is satisfied that such an order is absolutely necessary. Where the company opposes the appointment of a provisional liquidator, the Court will not appoint a provisional liquidator because the appointment would in effect put a stop to the business of the company, and if afterwards the Court refuses to make the winding up order, it would paralyze the affairs of the company.

General Provisions as to liquidator (Section 451)

- (1) The liquidator shall conduct the proceedings in winding up the company and perform such duties in reference thereto as the court* may impose.
- (2) Where the Official Liquidator becomes or acts as liquidator, there shall be paid to the Central Government such fees as may be prescribed, out of the assets of the company (when Tribunal starts functioning, fee will be payable to the Central Government only when an officer of the Central Government is appointed as the Official Liquidator)
- (3) The acts of a liquidator shall be valid, notwithstanding any defect that may afterwards be discovered in his appointment or qualification :

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to give validity to acts done by a liquidator after his appointment has been shown to be invalid.

*To be substituted by "Official Liquidator referred to in clause (c) of sub-section (1) of section 448" as per Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 (w.e.f. a date yet to be notified)]

Sec. 452. Style, etc., of Liquidator

A liquidator shall be described by the style of "The Official Liquidator" of the particular company in respect of which he acts, and not by his individual name.

Sec. 453. Receiver not to be Appointed of Assets with Liquidator

A receiver shall not be appointed of assets in the hands of a liquidator except by, or with the leave of, the court.*

[* Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect.]

Duties of the Liquidator

A liquidator is an agent employed for the purpose of winding up of the company. In some respects he is a trustee, but he is not a trustee for each individual creditor. His principal duties are to take possession of assets, to make out the requisite lists of contributories and of creditors, to have disputed cases adjudicated upon, to realise the assets subject to the control of the Court in certain matters and to apply the proceeds in payment of the company's debts and liabilities in due course of administration, and having done that, to divide the surplus amongst the contributories and to adjust their rights [Discount Bank of India Ltd. (in Liquidation) v Tirloki Nath, (1952) 54 Punj LR 335].

The duties of the liquidator in compulsory winding up are explained as follows:

1. Conduct of Minding up proceedings (Section 451)

The liquidator must conduct equitably and impartially all the proceedings in winding up the company according to the provisions of the law, and must perform such duties as the Court may impose.

2. Not to make secret profit

The liquidator occupies a fiduciary position and he must not make any secret profit [Silkstone and Haigh Moor Coal Co. v Edey (1900) 1 Ch. 167].

3. Preliminary report (Section 455)

(a) Time limit for submission. The Official Liquidator shall submit a preliminary report to the Court as soon as he receives the statement of affairs from the persons who were the directors of the company at the time of winding up. In any case, the preliminary report shall be submitted within 6 months of the winding up order. The time limit may be extended by the Court.

(b) Contents. The report shall contain the following particulars:

- (i) The amount of issued capital, subscribed capital and paid up capital.
- (ii) The estimated amount of assets giving separately the particulars of -
 - ❖ cash and negotiable securities;
 - ❖ debts due from contributories;
 - ❖ debts due to the company and securities, if any available in respect thereof;
 - ❖ movable and immovable properties belonging to the company; and
 - ❖ unpaid calls.
- (iii) The estimated amount of liabilities,
- (iv) If the company has failed, the causes of such failure.,-
- (v) Whether, in his opinion, further inquiry is desirables to any matter relating to the promotion, formation, or failure of the company, or the conduct of the business.

4. Further report (Section 455)

The Official Liquidator may make a further report to the Court. However, the Official Liquidator is not bound to submit such further report; it is discretionary.

(a) Contents. Such report may contain the following particulars:

- (i) Particulars regarding the promotion and formation of the company.
- (ii) Whether, in his opinion, any fraud has been committed by any person in the promotion or formation of the company,
- (iii) Whether, in his opinion, any fraud has been committed by any officer of the company since its formation.
- (iv) Any other matters which, in his opinion, it is desirable to bring to the notice of the Court.

(b) Public examination. If the Official Liquidator states in his further report that any fraud has been committed in the promotion or formation of the company or in relation to the company, the Court shall have the power to direct that any person charged with the fraud shall be publicly examined by the Court under section 478.

5. Custody of company's property (Sections 456)

Where a winding up order has been made, the liquidator shall take into his custody all the properties, effects and actionable claims to which the company is entitled. Following points must be noted in this regard:

- (a) Property of the company vests in company itself. The properties and effects of the company do not vest in the liquidator or in the Court. They remain the properties of the company. The Court has the custody of the same and the liquidator is the custodian thereof.
- (b) Taking possession of the properties of the company. For the purpose of taking into custody the properties of the company, the liquidator may request the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the District Magistrate for assistance and such assistance shall be provided. For this purpose, such steps may be taken and such force may be used as is necessary in the given circumstances.

6. Maintenance of books (Section 461)

- (1) The liquidator shall keep, in the manner prescribed, proper books in which he shall cause entries or minutes to be made of proceedings at meetings and of such other matters as may be prescribed.
- (2) Any creditor or contributory may, subject to the control of the court*, inspect any such books, personally or by his agent.

[* Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect.]

7. Presentation of accounts by the liquidator (Section 462)

The liquidator has to maintain an account of the proceedings of the winding up. Following points need consideration:

- (a) Submission to Court. So long as a liquidator is in office, he shall present to the Court an account of his receipts and payments, at least twice a year. He shall furnish the Court with such vouchers and information as the Court may require. The Court may require the production of any books or accounts kept by the liquidator.
- (b) Form of accounts. The account shall be in the prescribed form, shall be made in duplicate, and shall be verified by a declaration in the prescribed form.
- (c) Audit through Court. The Court shall cause the accounts to be audited in such manner as it thinks fit.
- (d) Filing of copies of audited accounts. One copy of the audited accounts shall be filed and kept by the Court. The second copy of the audited accounts shall be filed with the registrar.
- (e) Inspection. The copies filed with the Court and the registrar shall be open to the inspection of any creditor, contributory or any other interested person.
- (f) Copies to be sent to creditors and contributories. A printed copy of the audited accounts shall be sent by the liquidator to every creditor and to every contributory. Instead of the complete accounts, a summary of accounts may be sent. However, the Court may, in its discretion dispense with sending of accounts or summary thereof, e.g., where the assets of the company are not sufficient to meet all the liabilities.
- (g) Applicability to Government Company in liquidation. In case of a government company, the liquidator shall send a copy of the accounts to –
 - (i) the Central Government, if the Central Government is a member of the Government company; or
 - (ii) the State Government, if any State Government is a member of the Government company; or
 - (iii) the Central Government and any State Government, if both the Governments are members of the Government company.

8. Calling Meeting (Section 464)

Within 2 months from the date of the direction of the court, the liquidator must call a meeting of the creditors for determining the persons who are to be members of the Committee of Inspection, if such committee is to be appointed. Within 14 days of the meeting of the creditors the liquidator must call a meeting of the contributories to consider the decision of the creditors.

9. Money to be kept in bank account (Section 553)

He must keep all sums received by him, on behalf of the company into some scheduled bank, unless the court otherwise allows deposit in a non-scheduled bank.

The duties of the liquidator in voluntary winding up are explained as follows:

- a) To satisfy himself that the resolution appointing him was validly passed.
- b) To send a notice of his appointment to the Registrar. (Section 516)
- c) To take possession of company's assets and to see that they are intact.
- d) To prepare a list of debts and claims.
- e) To settle the list of contributories fixed for the purpose.
- f) To dispose of the assets of the company to the best advantage and collect, as far as practicable, all outstanding debts due to the company. Subject to preferential payments, the assets of the company shall be applied in satisfaction of its liabilities pari passu and, subject to such application, shall unless the Articles otherwise provide, be distributed among members according to their rights and interests in the company. (Section 511)
- g) To apply the proceeds of realization in the prescribed manner.
- h) To convene the general meetings of the company at the end of every year, during liquidation and present the annual accounts thereat. (Section 508)
- i) To file return at the end of the first year and then every six months during the continuation of the winding-up.
- j) At the end of winding-up, to call general meeting and lay before it the account of the winding-up and within one week of this meeting file a return with the Registrar (Section 509)

Powers of the liquidator (Section 457)

The powers of the Official Liquidator may be discussed as follows:

A. Powers exercisable with the sanction of the Court*

The liquidator can exercise the following powers with the sanction of the Court*:

- (a) to institute or defend any legal proceedings on behalf of the company;
- (b) to carry on the business of the company so far as may be necessary for the beneficial winding up of the company;
- (c) to sell the immovable and movable property and actionable claims of the company by public auction or private contract, with power to transfer the whole thereof to any person or body corporate; or to sell or to sell the same in parcels;
- (ca)* to sell whole of the undertaking as a going concern;
- (d) to raise money on the security of the assets of the company;
- (e) to do all such other things as may be necessary for winding up of the affairs of the company and distributing its assets;

- (f) to appoint an advocate, attorney or pleader entitled to appear before the court to assist him in the performance of his duties [Section 459];
- (g) to compromise calls, debts and other present or potential pecuniary liabilities with contributories or debtors and take any security in discharge of any such claim and give a complete discharge thereof [Section 546];
- (h) to pay any class of creditors in full [Section 546]

The court* may, by order, provide that the liquidator may exercise any of the above powers without the sanction or intervention of the court. However, it shall still be subject to control by the court [Section 458].

Applicable when Tribunal starts functioning.

*One or more chartered accountants or company secretaries or cost accountants or legal practitioners entitled to appear before the Tribunal under section 10GD of the Act when Tribunal starts functioning.

B. Powers exercisable without the sanction of the Court [Section 457(2)]

The liquidator does not require any sanction of the Court* for exercising any of the following powers:

- (i) To do all acts and to execute all documents on behalf of the company and use the company's seal.
- (ia) To inspect the records and returns of the company on the files of the registrar without payment of any fee.
- (ii) To prove, rank and claim in the insolvency of any contributory, and to receive dividends in the insolvency.
- (iii) To draw, accept, make and endorse any bill of exchange, hundi or promissory note on behalf of the company.
- (iv) To take out letters of administration to any deceased contributory, and to do any other act necessary for obtaining payment of any money due from a contributory or his estate.
- (v) To appoint an agent to do any business which he is unable to do himself.

The Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 has added sub-sections (2A) to (2G) to Section 457. The provisions are as under:

(2A) The liquidator shall -

- (a) appoint security guards to protect the property of the company taken into his custody and to make out an inventory of the assets in consultation with secured creditors after giving them notice ;
- (b) appoint, as the case may be, valuer, chartered surveyors or chartered accountant to assess the value the company's assets within fifteen days after taking into custody of property, assets referred to in sub-clause (a) and effects or actionable claims subject to such terms and conditions as may be specified by the Tribunal ;
- (c) give an advertisement, inviting bids for sale of the assets of the company, within fifteen days from the date of receiving valuation report from the valuer, chartered surveyors or chartered accountants referred to in clause (b), as the case may be.

(2B) The liquidator shall, immediately after the order for winding up or appointing the liquidator as provisional Liquidator is made, issue a notice requiring any of the persons mentioned in sub-section (2) of section 454, to submit and verify a statement of the affairs of the company and such notice shall be served by the liquidator.

(2C) The liquidator may apply to the Tribunal for an order directing any person who, in his opinion, is competent to furnish a statement of the affairs under sections 439A and 454 and such person shall for the said purpose be served a notice by the liquidator in the manner as may be prescribed.

(2D) The liquidator may, from time to time, call any person for recording any statement for the purpose of investigating the affairs of the company which is being wound up and it shall be the duty of every such person to attend to the liquidator at such time and place as the liquidator may appoint and give the liquidator all information which he may require and answer all such questions relating to winding up of company as may be put to him by the liquidator.

(2E) Every bidder shall, in response to advertisement referred to in clause (c) of sub-section (2A), deposit, his offer in the manner as may be prescribed, with liquidator or provisional liquidator, as the case may be, within forty-five days from the date of the advertisement and the liquidator or provisional liquidator shall permit inspection of property and assets in respect of which bids were invited :

Provided that such bid may be withdrawn within three days before the last day of closing of the bid :

Provided further that the inspection of property shall be open for not more than five days before closing of the bid.

(2F) The advertisement inviting bids shall contain the following details, namely :-

- (a) name, address of registered office of the company and its branch offices, factories and plants and the place where assets of the company are kept and available for sale ;
- (b) last date for submitting bids which shall not exceed ninety days from the date of advertisement ;
- (c) time during which the premises of the company shall remain open for inspection ;
- (d) the last date for withdrawing the bid ;
- (e) financial guarantee which shall not be less than one-half of the value of the bid;
- (f) validity period of the bids ;
- (g) place and date of opening of the bids in public ;
- (h) reserve price and earnest money to be deposited along with the bid;
- (i) any other terms and conditions of sale which may be prescribed.

(2G) The liquidator appointed shall -

- (a) maintain a separate bank account for each company under his charge for depositing the sale proceeds of the assets and recovery of debts of each company ;
- (b) maintain proper books of account in respect of all receipts and payments made by him in respect of each company and submit half yearly return of receipts and payments to the Tribunal.

Control of Court* over the powers of the liquidator

All the powers of the liquidator (whether exercisable with or without the sanction of the Court*) shall be exercised subject to the control of the Court*. Any creditor or contributory may apply to the Court* with respect to the exercise or proposed exercise of any of the powers of the liquidator.

[* Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect]

Power of liquidator to disclaim onerous property (Section 535)

The provisions of section 535 are explained as follows:

1. Meaning of onerous property

The word 'onerous' means burdensome or something involving heavy obligations. In the real sense, onerous property means a property which has ceased to be an asset and has become a liability. Some examples of onerous property are as follows:

- (a) Land of any tenure, burdened with onerous covenants.
- (b) Unprofitable contracts, properties which are not saleable because of obligations attached to it.
- (c) Partly paid shares of an unsuccessful company, e.g., where the company may be liable as a contributory.

2. Requirements of a valid disclaimer

- (a) Signed. The disclaimer shall be in writing and signed by the liquidator.
- (b) Sanction of the Court*. No disclaimer can be made except with the leave of the Court*. The Court* may impose certain terms and conditions while granting leave. The Court* may make such other order as it thinks just. The Court* has an absolute discretion to grant or refuse the permission to disclaim the onerous property.
- (c) Time limit for disclaimer. The liquidator may disclaim any onerous property within 12 months from the date of commencement of winding up. But, where any onerous property has not come to the knowledge of the liquidator within 1 month after the commencement of the winding up, the power of disclaiming the property may be exercised at any time within 12 months after he has become aware thereof. Also, the Court* has the power to extend such period.
- (d) Notice to the interested parties. Before granting the sanction, the Court* may require that notices be given to persons interested. The Court* may impose such terms as it thinks fit.
- (e) Notice to interested party within 28 days of his application. Where any party interested in a property makes an application to the liquidator requiring him to decide whether he will or will not disclaim the property concerned, the liquidator shall within 28 days of the receipt of such application, give notice to the applicant of his intention to disclaim the property. The period of 28 days may be extended by the Court*. If the liquidator fails to disclaim the contract within the said periods of 28 days or extended period, he shall be deemed to have accepted the contract.

3. Effect of disclaimer

- (a) On the Company. All the rights and liabilities of the company in respect of the property disclaimed shall cease to operate, i.e., the company shall be relieved of all its liabilities in respect of such property.
- (b) On the other person. Any person may apply to the Court* for damages for non-performance of the contract. The Court* may make an order rescinding the contract on such terms as to payment of damages for the non-performance of the contract as it thinks fit. If the Court* awards damages to such person, he shall be deemed to be a creditor of the company and may prove the amount of damages as a debt in the winding up.

Section 535 has been enacted with the object that the liquidator be given a power to prevent a loss to the company by getting rid of the onerous properties. The liquidator may disclaim any onerous property in spite of the fact that he had taken possession of the property or had exercised any right of ownership of the property.

Consequences where no document is filed by the liquidator

The High Court at Mumbai appointed the Official Liquidator as the liquidator of Imprudent Engineering Co. Ltd. Some of the creditors have brought to the notice of the liquidator that though the company is in liquidation for the past several years, nothing worthwhile has been done to speed up the winding up and no documents have been filed to indicate the progress of liquidation. Examine in this connection the nature and periodicity of returns required to be filed by the liquidator in terms of the provisions contained in the Companies Act.

The liquidator has to maintain an account of the proceedings of the winding up. As per section 462, the liquidator shall comply with the following provisions:

- (a) So long as the liquidator is in office, he shall present to the Court an account of his receipts and payments, at least twice a year. He shall furnish the Court with such vouchers and information as the Court may require. The Court may require the production of any books or accounts kept by the liquidator.
- (b) The Court shall cause the account to be audited in such manner as it thinks fit.
- (c) The account shall be in the prescribed form, shall be made in duplicate, and shall be verified by a declaration in the prescribed form. One copy of the account shall be kept by the Court and the other shall be filed with the registrar!
- (d) The copies filed with the Court and the registrar shall be open to the inspection of any creditor, contributory or any other interested person.
- (e) A printed copy of the audited accounts shall be sent by the liquidator to every creditor and to every contributory. Instead of the complete account, a summary of the account may be sent. However, the Court may dispense with sending of account or summary thereof, e.g., where the assets of the company are not sufficient to meet all the liabilities.
- (f) In case of a Government company, the liquidator shall send a copy of the accounts to the Central Government and/or the State Government, as the case may be.

As per section 551, the liquidator shall submit to the Court information relating to pending liquidation. The liquidator shall comply with the following provisions:

- (a) Where the winding up proceedings continue for more than 1 year, the liquidator shall file a statement with respect to the proceedings of winding up.
- (b) The statement shall be duly audited by a person who is qualified to act as an auditor of the company.
- (c) The statement shall be filed within 2 months of the end of the first year and thereafter until the winding up is concluded, at intervals of not exceeding 1 year.
- (d) The statement is to be filed with the Court. A copy shall also be filed with the registrar.

In the given case, no documents have been filed by the liquidator. Therefore, the liquidator has made a default in compliance with the provisions of sections 462 and 551. For default of section 551, the liquidator shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ₹ 5,000 per day during which the failure continues. Since no penalty has been provided for contravention of section 462, the residuary penalty section 629A gets attracted and consequently the liquidator shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ₹ 5,000 and a further fine of ₹ 5,000 per day in case of continuing contravention.

Committee of inspection under compulsory winding up (Sections 464 and 465)

Sec. 464. Appointment and Composition of Committee of Inspection

- (1) (a) The court* may, at the time of making an order for the winding up of a company or at any time thereafter, direct that there shall be appointed a committee of inspection to act with the liquidator.

- (b) Where a direction is given by the court* as aforesaid, the liquidator shall, within two months from the date of such direction, convene a meeting of the creditors of the company (as ascertained from its books and documents) for the purpose of determining who are to be members of the committee.
- (2) The liquidator shall, within fourteen days from the date of the creditors' meeting or such further time as the court* in its discretion may grant for the purpose ; convene a meeting of the contributories to consider the decision of the creditors' meeting with respect to the membership of the committee ; and it shall be open to the meeting of the contributories to accept the decision of the creditors' meeting with or without modifications or to reject it.
- (3) Except in the case where the meeting of the contributories accepts the decision of the creditors' meeting in its entirety, it shall be the duty of the liquidator to apply to the court* for directions as to what the composition of the committee shall be, and who shall be members thereof.

Sec. 465. Constitution and Proceedings of Committee of Inspection

- (1) A committee of inspection appointed in pursuance of section 464 shall consist of not more than twelve members, being creditors and contributories of the company or persons holding general or special powers of attorney from creditors or contributories, in such proportions as may be agreed on by the meetings of creditors and contributories, or in case of difference of opinion between the meetings, as may be determined by the court*.
- (2) The committee of inspection shall have the right to inspect the accounts of the liquidator at all reasonable times.
- (3) The committee shall meet at such times as it may from time to time appoint, and the liquidator or any member of the committee may also call a meeting of the committee as and when he thinks necessary.
- (4) The quorum for a meeting of the committee shall be one-third of the total number of the members, or two, whichever is higher.
- (5) The committee may act by a majority of its members present at a meeting, but shall not act unless a quorum is present.
- (6) A member of the committee may resign by notice in writing signed by him and delivered to the liquidator.
- (7) If a member of the committee is adjudged an insolvent, or compounds or arranges with his creditors, or is absent from five consecutive meetings of the committee without the leave of those members who, together with himself, represent the creditors or contributories, as the case may be, his office shall become vacant.
- (8) A member of the committee may be removed at a meeting of creditors if he represents creditors, or at a meeting of contributories if he represents contributories, by an ordinary resolution of which seven days' notice has been given, stating the object of the meeting.
- (9) On a vacancy occurring in the committee, the liquidator shall forthwith summon a meeting of creditors or of contributories, as the case may require, to fill the vacancy ; and the meeting may, by resolution, re-appoint the same, or appoint another, creditor or contributory to fill the vacancy :
Provided that if the liquidator, having regard to the position in the winding up, is of the opinion that it is unnecessary for the vacancy to be filled, he may apply to the court* and the court* may make an order that the vacancy shall not be filled, or shall not be filled except in such circumstances as may be specified in the order.
- (10) The continuing members of the committee, if not less than two, may act notwithstanding any vacancy in the committee.

Statement of affairs to be made to the Liquidator (Section 454)

The provisions of section 454 in this regard are explained as follows:

1. Submission of statement of affairs

A statement of affairs shall be made out and submitted to the Official Liquidator where -

- (a) the Court* has made a winding up order; or
- (b) the Court* has appointed the Official Liquidator as a provisional liquidator.

2. Contents of statement of affairs

The statement of affairs shall contain the following particulars:

- (a) the assets of the company, stating separately the cash balance in hand and at the bank, and the negotiable securities.
- (b) its debts and liabilities.
- (c) the names, residences and occupations of its creditors, stating separately the amount of secured and unsecured debts; and in the case of secured debts, detailed particulars of the securities given.
- (d) the debts due to the company and the names, residences and occupations of the persons from whom they are due and the amount likely to be realised on account thereof.
- (e) such further or other information as may be prescribed, or as the Official Liquidator may require.

3. Verification of the statement

The statement of affairs shall be submitted and verified by one or more persons who were directors, managers, secretary or other chief officer of the company as on the relevant date. Also, the Official Liquidator may require that the said verification be given by any of the following persons:

- (a) A person who is or has been an officer of the company.
- (b) A person who has taken part in the formation of the company at any time within preceding 1 year.
- (c) A person who is in the employment of the company, or had been in the employment of the company within the preceding 1 year, and is in the opinion of the Official Liquidator, capable of giving the information required.

4. Time limit for filing the statement

The statement of affairs shall be submitted within 21 days of the “relevant date”. However, the Court* or the Official Liquidator has the power to extend the time up to 3 months.

‘Relevant date’ means –

- (a) in a case where a provisional liquidator is appointed, the date of his appointment; and
- (b) in a case where no provisional liquidator is appointed, the date of the winding up order.

5. Inspection or copy of the statement

A creditor or contributory of the company shall be entitled to inspect, or obtain a copy or extract of the statement of affairs.

6. Cost of preparing the statement

A person preparing the statement of affairs and affidavit shall be entitled to recover the costs and expenses incurred in such preparation. Such payment shall be made by the Official Liquidator or the provisional liquidator. An appeal shall lie to the Court* against determination of such costs.

Dissolution and revival of a company (Sections 481 and 559)

The provisions relating to dissolution of a company and revival of a dissolved company are contained in sections 481 and 559 respectively. These provisions are “explained in the following paragraphs:

1. Dissolution of a company (Section 481)

- (a) Grounds for dissolution. Only the Court* has the power to order the dissolution of a company. The Court may make the order of dissolution in the following cases:
 - (i) Where the affairs of a company have been completely wound up.
 - (ii) Where the Court* is of the opinion that the following two conditions have been satisfied:
 - the liquidator cannot proceed with the winding up of a company –
 - for want of funds and assets; or
 - for any reason whatsoever.
 - it is just and reasonable in the circumstances of the case that an order of dissolution of the company should be made.
- (b) Effective date of dissolution. The company shall be dissolved from the date of the order of the Court*.
- (c) Filing of order with registrar. Within 30 days from the date of order of the Court*, a copy of the order shall be filed by the liquidator with the registrar.

2. Revival of a dissolved company (Section 559)

- (a) Order of the Court*. Where a company has been dissolved, it may be revived by the Court* by declaring the dissolution void. The effect of an order under section 559 is that it makes the dissolution void ab initio and all consequences resulting from the dissolution are avoided, including proceedings taken during the interval between the date of dissolution and the date of declaration of dissolution as void [Morris v Harris 1927 AC 252].
- (b) Who can make the application? Following persons are eligible to make an application to the Court*:
 - (i) Liquidator of the company.
 - (ii) Any other interested person. Following persons have been held to be interested:
 - Any creditor of the company.
 - Any contributory of the company.
 - The Income Tax Officer who makes a final assessment after dissolution of the company.
 - An unpaid landlord.
- (c) Time limit. Section 559(1) of the Act reads as under:

“Where a company has been dissolved, whether in ‘pursuance of this Part or of section 394 or otherwise, the Court* may at any time within two years of the date of the dissolution, on application by the liquidator of the company or by any other person who appears to the Court* to be interested, make an order, upon such terms as the Court* thinks fit, declaring the dissolution to have been void; and thereupon such proceedings may be taken as might have been taken if the company had not been dissolved."

Two different views have been expressed while interpreting section 559. According to One view, the application shall be made within 2 years from the date of dissolution of the company, although the order of the Court* may be passed even after the expiry of two years [Re, Scad Ltd. (1941) 2 All ER 466; Income Tax Officer v Vemulapalli & Sons Private Ltd., (1967) 37 Comp Cas 686 (AP)]. However, a conflicting view has been expressed according to which the order under section 559 must be passed within 2 years from the date of order of dissolution [ITO, Ernakulam .v Mambad Timber and Estates Ltd. (1973) 43 Comp Cas 332]. The former view appears to be more in consonance with justice and common sense.

- (d) Filing a copy of order with the registrar. Where the Court* makes an order declaring the dissolution void, the applicant shall file a copy of the order with the registrar within 30 days of the making of order. The Court* may extend the time limit for filing the said copy.
- (e) Discretionary power of the Court*. The Court* has wide discretion under this section and it shall consider each case on its own merits. Following points need consideration:
 - (i) Where the applicant alleged and proved fraud in the winding up proceedings, the Court* declared the dissolution void [Barrett v African Products Ltd. AIR 1928 PC. 2(51)].
 - (ii) Where the assets were realised by the liquidator after the company was dissolved, the Court* passed an order declaring the dissolution void [Henderson's Nigel Co. 105 LT 370].
 - (iii) The mere fact that misfeasance proceedings had been started did not itself amount to a ground for declaring the dissolution void [Lewis and Smart (1954) 1 WLR 755].

[* Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect]

Voluntary winding up (Sections 484 to 487)

The provisions relating to voluntary winding up are explained in the following paragraphs:

1. Meaning of voluntary winding up

Winding up by the Court is a time consuming process and involves compliance of various legal requirements. However, voluntary winding up is a rather simplified process.

Voluntary winding up means winding up at the instance of the members of the company, without any interference by the Court. In other words, the decision to wind up the company is taken by the members of the company, without approaching the Court.

2. Grounds for voluntary winding up (Section 484)

A company may be wound up voluntarily under any of the following circumstances:

- 1. If the company in general meeting passes an ordinary resolution for voluntary winding up (i) where the period fixed by the Articles for the duration of the company has expired, or (ii) the event has occurred on which under the Articles the company is to be dissolved.
- 2. If the company resolves by special resolution that it shall be wound up voluntarily..

3. Advertisement of resolution (Section 485)

Within 14 days of the passing of the resolution for voluntary winding up, a notice of the resolution shall be advertised in -

- (a) the Official Gazette; and
- (b) one newspaper circulating in the district where the registered office of the company is situated.

4. Commencement of voluntary winding up (Section 486)

The voluntary winding up shall be deemed to have commenced when the resolution (ordinary or special, as the case may be) for voluntary winding up was passed.

5. Effect on the status of the company (Section 487)

On passing a resolution for voluntary winding up, the company shall cease to carry on its business, except so far as may be required for the beneficial winding up of the business. But, the corporate status and powers of the company shall continue until it is dissolved.

6. Duty of liquidator to give notice to income tax officer

The liquidator appointed to conduct the voluntary winding up shall give notice of his appointment to the income tax officer. Such notice shall be given within 30 days of his appointment. Thereafter, within 3 months, the income tax officer shall intimate the liquidator the estimated amount to meet the tax liability. The liquidator is required to set aside the amount to meet the tax liability.

7. Kinds of Voluntary winding up

- (a) Members' voluntary winding up
- (b) Creditors voluntary winding up

Generally speaking, where a company is solvent, i.e., it is able to pay its debts in full, the voluntary winding up takes the form of members' voluntary winding up. As opposed to it, where a company is unable to pay its debts, it is called as creditors' voluntary winding up.

Members' voluntary winding up - Declaration of solvency (Section 488)

Where the company is solvent, a 'declaration of solvency' is made by the directors and consequently, winding up proceedings remain in the control of the members of the company. The provisions relating to 'declaration of solvency' are explained as follows:

1. Requirements of a valid declaration of solvency

To be effective, the declaration of solvency must fulfill the following conditions:

- (a) Made by whom? It shall be made by a majority of the directors or all the directors if there are only 2 directors.
- (b) Verification. It shall be verified by an affidavit.
- (c) No inability to pay debts. The declaration must specify, that the directors have made a full enquiry into the affairs of the company. The declaration shall further state -
 - (i) that the company has no debts; or
 - (ii) the period not exceeding 3 years, within which, in the opinion of directors, the company will be able to pay its debts in full.
- (d) Date of declaration of solvency. It shall be made within 5 weeks immediately preceding the date of passing of the resolution for voluntary winding up.
- (e) Filing with the registrar. It shall be registered with the registrar before the date of passing of the resolution for voluntary winding up.
- (f) Auditor's report. The declaration shall be accompanied by a copy of the auditor's report on the profit and loss account and balance sheet of the company. The report shall also contain a statement of assets and liabilities of the company as on the latest practicable date immediately before the date of the declaration of solvency. The report on the profit and loss account and balance sheet shall relate to a period -

- (i) commencing from the date upto which the last profit and loss account was prepared; and
- (ii) ending with the latest practicable date immediately before the making of the declaration of solvency.

2. Proceedings void if declaration is not valid

Where the declaration of solvency is not made in accordance with the law, the resolution for winding up and all subsequent proceedings will be null and void [Shri Raja Mohan Manucha v. Lakshminath Saigal (1963)33CompCas719].

3. Penalty for wrong declaration

Any director of a company making a declaration of solvency without having reasonable grounds for the opinion that the company will be able to pay its debts in full within the period specified in the declaration, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 6 months, or with fine which may extend to ₹ 50,000, or with both. If the debts of the company are not paid or provided for in full within the period specified in the declaration, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is shown, that the director did not have reasonable grounds for his opinion.

The declaration of solvency shall be made only by way of passing a resolution at a Board meeting. Thus, it is not permitted to pass a resolution, by circulation.

Members' voluntary winding up - Provisions applicable (Sections 490 to 498)

The provisions relating to the members' voluntary winding up are explained as follows:

1. Appointment of liquidators (Section 490)

The members of the company shall appoint one or more liquidators by passing a resolution in the general meeting. Following points need to be noted:

- ❖ The meeting shall also fix the remuneration of the liquidator.
- ❖ If no remuneration is fixed, the liquidator shall not take charge of his office.
- ❖ Remuneration once fixed cannot be increased, even with the sanction of the Court*.

Body corporate not to be appointed as liquidator. A body corporate shall not be qualified for appointment as liquidator of a company in a voluntary winding up (Section 513). Notice by liquidator of his appointment. The liquidator shall, within 30 days after his appointment publish in the Official Gazette and deliver to the registrar for registration a notice of his appointment (Section 516).

2. Cessation of powers of the Board (Section 491)

On the appointment of a liquidator, all the powers of the Board of directors and of the managing or wholetime director or manager shall come to an end. But they will be required to give notice to the registrar of the appointment of the liquidator. Exception. The powers of the Board of directors, managing director and manager shall not cease if -

- (a) the company in general meeting has sanctioned the continuance of their powers; or
- (b) the liquidator has sanctioned the continuance of their powers.

3. Vacancy in the office of liquidator (Section 492)

If a vacancy occurs by death, resignation or otherwise in the office of a liquidator appointed by the company, a general meeting of the company may be convened by any contributory or by the continuing liquidator, if any, to fill the vacancy.

4. Notice of appointment of liquidator to be given to registrar (Section 493)

The company must give notice to the ROC regarding the appointment of liquidator within ten days of his appointment. In case of default, the company and every officer of the company (including liquidator) who is in default, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to rupees one thousand for every day during which the default continues.

5. Power of liquidator to accept shares, etc. as consideration of sale of property of the company (Section 494)

The liquidator may accept shares, policies or like interests in consideration of the sale of the company's undertaking to another company, with an object to distribute the same amongst the members of transferor company, provided:

- (a) a special resolution is passed by the company to that effect; and
- (b) he purchases the interest of any dissenting member at a price to be determined by agreement or by arbitration.

The money to the dissenting members should be paid before the company is dissolved and should be raised in such manner as may be determined by special resolution.

6. Notice to income tax officer

The liquidator shall give notice of his appointment to the income tax officer. Such notice shall be given within 30 days of his appointment. Thereafter, within 3 months, the income tax officer shall intimate the liquidator the estimated amount to meet the tax liability. The liquidator is required to set aside the amount to meet the tax liability.

7. Duty of liquidator to call creditors' meeting in case of insolvency (Sections 495)

If, at any time, the liquidator is of the opinion that the company will not be able to pay its debts in full within the period specified in the declaration of solvency or the period specified in the declaration of solvency has expired without the debts having been paid in full, he shall forthwith summon a meeting of the creditors. The liquidator shall lay before the meeting a statement of assets and liabilities of the company. If he fails to comply with the above requirements, he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to rupees five thousand. The liquidator shall thereafter proceed as if it was a creditor's voluntary winding up.

8. Duty of liquidator to call general meeting at the end of each year (Section 496)

In case winding up proceedings continue for more than 1 year, the liquidator must:

- (a) call a general meeting of the company at the end of the first year from the commencement of winding up and at the end succeeding year, or as soon thereafter as may be convenient within three months from the end of the year or such longer period as the Central Government may allow;
- (b) lay before the meeting an account of his acts and dealing and of the conduct of the winding up during the preceding year.

Any failure of the liquidator in respect of (a) and (b) above will make him punishable with fine upto rupees one thousand in respect of each failure.

9. Final meeting and dissolution (Section 497)

- (a) Final account. As soon as the affairs of a company are fully wound up, the liquidator shall prepare an account of the winding up, showing how the winding up has been conducted and the property of the company has been disposed of.
- (b) Final meeting. As soon as the affairs of a company are fully wound up, the liquidator shall call a general meeting of the company. At the meeting, the liquidator shall lay the account of the proceedings of winding up and give any explanations, if required. The meeting shall be called by advertisement. The advertisement shall specify the time, place and object of the meeting. The advertisement shall be published not less than 1 month before the meeting in the Official Gazette, and also in some newspapers circulating in the district where the registered office of the company is situated.

- (c) Filing. Within 1 week of conclusion of the general meeting, the liquidator shall send to the registrar and the Official Liquidator appointed u/s 448(1)(c) i.e., the government officer category of the official liquidator (when the Tribunal starts functioning) each a copy of the final account. The liquidator shall also make a return to the registrar and the Official Liquidator stating the dates of holding the general meeting.
- (d) Position if no quorum is present at the meeting. If a quorum is not present at the meeting the liquidator shall, in lieu of the return, make a return that the meeting was duly called and that no quorum was present thereat.
- (e) Registration by the registrar. On receiving the account and the return, the registrar shall forthwith register them.
- (f) Scrutiny by Official Liquidator. On receiving the account and the return, the Official Liquidator shall make a scrutiny of the books and papers of the company. All the officers of the company shall give the Official Liquidator all reasonable facilities to make such scrutiny. Following position may emerge from the report of the Official Liquidator:
 - (i) Dissolution. If the Official Liquidator makes a report to the Court that the affairs of the company have not been conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of its members or to public interest, then, from the date of the submission of such report the company shall be deemed to have been dissolved.
 - (ii) Further investigation. If the Official Liquidator makes a report to the Court that the affairs of the company have been conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of its members or to public interest, the Court shall by order direct the Official Liquidator to make a further investigation of the affairs of the company. For this purpose, the Court shall invest him with all such powers as it may deem fit.
 - (iii) Result of further investigation. On the receipt of the report of the Official Liquidator on such further investigation the Court may either make an order that the company shall stand dissolved with effect from the date to be specified by the Court therein or make such other order as the circumstances of the case brought out in the report permit.

If the liquidator fails in sending the copy of the accounts or the return as mentioned, he is punishable with fine upto rupees five hundred for everyday during which the default continues. In case of failure of the liquidator to call the general meeting, he is liable to the punishment by way of fine upto rupees five thousand.

Creditors' voluntary winding up - Provisions applicable (Sections 500 to 509)

Where a company is insolvent, the declaration of solvency is not made by the directors and therefore the voluntary winding up is called as creditors' voluntary winding up. In creditors' voluntary winding up, the dominant control over the winding up proceedings remain in the control of the creditors of the company. Following provisions are applicable to creditors' voluntary winding up:

1. Meetings of members and creditors (Section 500)

Separate meetings. A company may be wound up voluntarily by passing a resolution (ordinary or special, as the case may be) in a general meeting (Section 484). In a case where no declaration of solvency has been made and filed as required by the Act, by the directors, the company shall call two separate meetings, one of members and the other of creditors. The meeting of the creditors shall be called -

- on a day on which the meeting of members is held; or
- on a day next following the meeting of members.

Notice. The notice to the creditors shall be sent by post at the same time when notice is sent to the members. The notice of the meeting of the creditors shall be advertised once in the Official Gazette and once in two newspapers circulating in the district where the registered office or principal place of business of the company is situated.

A director to preside at the meeting of creditors. One of the directors shall preside at the meeting of the creditors. It shall be the duty of the director appointed to preside at the meeting of creditors, to attend the meeting and preside thereat.

Laying of a statement of company's affairs at the meeting. The Board of directors of the company shall lay before the creditor's meeting –

- (a) a full statement of the position of the company's affairs; and
- (b) a list of the creditors of the company and the estimated amount of their claims.

2. Notice to the registrar (Section 501)

Notice of a resolution passed at the creditors' meeting shall be given by the company to the registrar within 10 days of the passing thereof.

3. Appointment of liquidator (Section 502)

The provisions relating to appointment of liquidator in case of creditor's voluntary winding up are as under:

- (a) The members may nominate a person to be the liquidator for the purpose of winding up of the company.
- (b) The creditors' meeting held thereafter will consider the nomination made by the members. The creditors' meeting may nominate a different person to be a liquidator.
- (c) If no person is nominated by the members, creditors' nominee shall be the liquidator. If no person is nominated by the creditors, the members' nominee shall be the liquidator.
- (d) If the creditors and members nominate different persons to be a liquidator, the person nominated by the creditors shall be the liquidator.
- (e) Any director, member or creditor of the company may, within 7 days of nomination by the creditors, make an application to the Court for an order that:
 - (i) the nominee of the members shall be the liquidator instead of the nominee of the creditors; or
 - (ii) the nominee of the members shall be the liquidator jointly with the nominee of the creditors; or
 - (iii) the Official Liquidator be appointed as the liquidator instead of the nominee of the creditors; or
 - (iv) some other person be appointed as the liquidator instead of the nominee of the creditors.

Body corporate not to be appointed as liquidator. A body corporate shall not be qualified for appointment as liquidator of a company in a voluntary winding up (Section 513).

Notice by liquidator of his appointment. The liquidator shall, within 30 days of his appointment, publish in the Official Gazette and deliver to the registrar for registration a notice of his appointment (Section 516).

4. Appointment of committee of inspection (Section 503)

The creditors may, at any time, appoint a committee of inspection consisting of not more than 5 persons. If such committee is appointed, the company may, either at the meeting at which the winding up resolution is passed, or at a later meeting, appoint not more than five persons to serve on the committee. Thus, the strength of a committee of inspection is restricted to ten.

5. Fixing of liquidators' remuneration (Section 504)

The remuneration of the liquidator shall be fixed by -

- (a) the committee of inspection; or
- (b) the creditors, if there is no committee of inspection; or
- (c) the Court*, if the remuneration is not fixed by the committee of inspection or the creditors.

No increase in remuneration. The remuneration of liquidator shall not be increased in any circumstances. Even the Court* cannot sanction an increase in remuneration of the liquidator.

6. Cessation of powers of the Board (Section 505)

On the appointment of a liquidator, all the powers of the Board of directors shall come to an end except in so far as -

- the committee of inspection has sanctioned the continuance of their powers; or
- the creditors have sanctioned the continuance of their powers, where there is no committee of inspection.

7. Power to fill vacancy in office of liquidator (Section 506)

If a vacancy occurs in the office of a liquidator, it shall be filled by the creditors in general meeting. The committee of inspection, if any, cannot fill the vacancy. However, where the liquidator was appointed by the Court* or at the direction of the Court*, then such vacancy shall be filled only by the Court*.

8. Power of liquidator to accept shares, policies etc. as consideration of sale of property (Section 507)

Section 494 as discussed under members' voluntary winding up will have application to creditors' voluntary winding up also but only subject to the permission to exercise such power is granted either by the committee of inspection or the court.

9. Notice to Income Tax Officer

The liquidator shall give notice of his appointment to the income tax officer. Such notice shall be given within 30 days of his appointment. Thereafter, within 3 months, the income tax officer shall intimate the liquidator the estimated amount to meet the tax liability. The liquidator is required to set aside the amount to meet the tax liability.

10. Duty of liquidator to call annual meetings (Section 508)

- (a) Meetings of members and creditors to be held. Where the winding up proceedings continue for more than 1 year, the liquidator shall call a general meeting of the company and a meeting of the creditors.
- (b) Time limit for holding the meeting. The meetings shall be held within 3 months of the end of the first year. Also in every subsequent year, such meetings shall be held within 3 months of the end of the year until the winding up is concluded.

- (c) Status of proceedings of winding up. At the meetings, the liquidator shall place an account of his acts and dealings and of the conduct of the winding up during the preceding year, together with a statement in the prescribed form and containing the prescribed particulars with respect to the proceedings of the liquidation.

11. Final meeting and dissolution (Section 509)

- (a) Final account. As soon as the affairs of a company are fully wound up, the liquidator shall prepare an account of the winding up, showing how the winding up has been conducted and the property of the company has been disposed of.
- (b) Final meeting. As soon as the affairs of a company are fully wound up, the liquidator shall call a meeting of the members and a separate meeting of the creditors. At each such meeting, the liquidator shall lay an account of the proceedings of winding up and give any explanations, if required. Each such meeting shall be called by an advertisement. The advertisement shall specify the time, place and object of the meeting. The advertisement shall be published not less than 1 month before the meeting in the Official Gazette, and also in some newspapers circulating in the district where the registered office of the company is situated.
- (c) Filing. Within 1 week of conclusion of the creditors' meeting, the liquidator shall send to the registrar and the Official Liquidator a copy of the Final account. The liquidator shall also make a return to the registrar and the Official Liquidator stating the dates of holding the members' and creditors' meetings.
- (d) Position if no quorum is present at the meeting. If quorum is not present in either of the meetings, the liquidator shall, in lieu of the return, make a return that the meeting was duly called and that no quorum was present thereat.
- (e) Duty of the registrar. On receiving the account and the return, the registrar shall forthwith register them.
- (f) Scrutiny by Official Liquidator. On receiving the account and the return, the Official Liquidator shall make a scrutiny of the books and papers of the company. All the officers of the company shall give the Official Liquidator all reasonable facilities to make such scrutiny. Following position may emerge from the report of the Official Liquidator:
 - (i) Dissolution. If the Official Liquidator makes a report to the Court that the affairs of the company have not been conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of its members or to public interest, then, from the date of the submission of the report to the Court the company shall be deemed to be dissolved.
 - (ii) Further investigation. If the Official Liquidator makes a report to the Court that the affairs of the company have been conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of its members or to public interest, the Court shall, by order, direct the Official Liquidator to make a further investigation of the affairs of the company and for that purpose shall invest him with all such powers as the Court may deem fit.
 - (iii) Report of further investigation. On the receipt of the report of the Official Liquidator on such further investigation, the Court may either make an order that the company shall stand dissolved with effect from the date to be specified by the Court therein or make such other order as the circumstances of the case brought out in the report permit.

The provisions of sections 508 and 509 (as applicable to creditors' voluntary winding up) correspond to ' the provisions of sections 496 and 497 respectively (as applicable to members' voluntary winding up), except that sections 508 and 509 require the liquidator to call a separate meeting of creditors in addition to the meeting of members.

Committee of inspection under creditors' voluntary winding up (Section 503)

The provisions in respect of committee of inspection in creditors' voluntary winding up are explained as follows:

1. Appointment of committee of inspection by creditors

The creditors may, at any time, appoint a committee of inspection consisting of not more than 5 persons.

2. Appointment of members of the committee

Where the creditors appoint a committee of inspection, the members of the company at a general meeting may appoint the members of the committee of inspection, not exceeding 5 in number.

3. Objection by creditors

The creditors may object to the persons appointed by the members of the company. Also, they may nominate the persons of their choice to be the members of the committee.

4. Intervention by Court

Where the members of the company nominate the members of the committee, but the creditors object to such nomination, the matter will be referred to the Court. The nominees of the members of the company shall not act as members of the committee, unless the Court otherwise directs. The Court has the power to direct that-

- ❖ the members' nominee shall be taken in the committee; and
- ❖ any other person shall also act in the committee instead of the nominees of the creditors.

5. Other applicable provisions

Following provisions of section 465 shall also apply to a committee of inspection appointed in a creditors' voluntary winding up (In the case of compulsory winding up, these provisions apply when a committee of inspection is appointed by the Court):

- (a) Meetings of the committee. The committee shall meet at such times as it may from time to time appoint. Also, the liquidator or any member of the committee may call a meeting of the committee as and when he thinks necessary.
- (b) Decision by majority. The committee shall act by a majority of its members present at the meeting.
- (c) Quorum for a meeting. The quorum for a meeting of the committee shall be one-third of the total number of members or two members, whichever is higher. The committee shall not act unless a quorum is present.
- (d) Right of inspection of accounts. The committee of inspection shall have the right to inspect the accounts of the liquidator at all reasonable times.
- (e) Cessation of membership. A person shall cease to be a member of the committee in the following cases:
 - (i) Resignation. Where a member of the committee resigns by giving a notice in writing, signed by him, and delivers it to the liquidator.
 - (ii) Insolvency or compounding. Where a member of the committee is adjudged an insolvent, or compounds or arranges with his creditors.
 - (iii) Absence from 5 consecutive meetings. Where a members absents himself from five consecutive meetings of the committee without the leave of other members.
 - (iv) Removal. A member of the committee may be removed at a meeting of creditors if he represents creditors, or at a meeting of contributories if he represents contributories. For this purpose, an ordinary resolution shall be passed of which 7 days' notice has to be given, stating the object of the meeting.

(f) Filling of vacancies

- (i) On a vacancy occurring in the committee, the liquidator shall call a meeting of the creditors/ contributories for the purpose of filling the vacancy. The meeting may, reappoint the same person or any other person in his place,
- (ii) Where the liquidator is of the opinion that it is unnecessary to fill the vacancy, he may apply to the Court that vacancy need not be filled. In such a case, the liquidator shall act in accordance with the directions of the Court,
- (iii) The continuing members of the committee, if not less than two, may act notwithstanding any vacancy in the committee.

Distinction between members' voluntary winding up & creditors' voluntary winding up

1. Only a solvent company can take the advantage of members' voluntary winding up. Creditors' voluntary winding up is resorted to by insolvent companies.
2. Declaration of solvency must be filed if the company intends to take the advantage of members' voluntary winding up. However, no declaration of solvency can be filed in case of creditors' voluntary winding up.
3. Members' voluntary winding up requires the calling of a meeting of members only. Creditors' voluntary winding up requires the calling of separate meetings of members and creditors.
4. In members' voluntary winding up, the dominant control over the proceedings of the winding up remains with the members. However, in creditors' voluntary winding up, the dominant control over the winding up proceedings lies with the creditors.
5. In members' voluntary winding up, the liquidator is appointed by the members of the company. In creditors' voluntary winding up, the liquidator is nominated by the members as well as the creditors. If the members and creditors nominate two different persons as a liquidator, the nominee of the creditor is appointed as a liquidator. However, an application may be made to the Court seeking an order that the nominee of the members be appointed as the liquidator.
6. The remuneration of liquidator is fixed by the members in case of members' voluntary winding up. But, in case of creditors' voluntary winding up, the remuneration of liquidator is fixed by the committee of inspection (if any) or the creditors.
7. There is no provision for appointment of a committee of inspection in case of members' voluntary winding up. But, the creditors have the option to appoint a committee of inspection in case of creditors' voluntary winding up.

Winding up subject to supervision of Court (Sections 522 to 527)*

The provisions relating to order of winding up subject to supervision of the Court may be explained as follows:

At any time after a company has passed a resolution for voluntary winding up, the court may make an order that the voluntary winding up should continue subject to the supervision of the court [Section 522]. Application for each supervision may be made by a creditor, or a contributory, or the company, or the liquidator.

Such an order is passed by the court where:

1. the resolution for winding up was obtained by fraud, or
2. the rules relating to winding up order are not being observed, or

3. the liquidator is prejudicial or is negligent in collecting the assets.

The court, in such a case, gets the same powers as it has in the case of compulsory winding up under order of the court. The court may also appoint an additional liquidator or liquidators, It may also remove any liquidator and fill any vacancy occasioned by the removal or by death or by resignation [Section 524]. A liquidator so appointed shall have the same powers, be subject to the same obligations and in all respects stand in the same position as if he had been appointed in accordance with the provisions of the Act relating to the appointment of liquidator in voluntary winding up, subject, however, to any restrictions the court may impose [Section 525].

Effect of supervision order [Section 526] – Unless the court imposes restrictions on the exercise of any powers by the liquidator, he will have all the powers conferred on a liquidator in voluntary winding up [Section 526(1)]. The court will also have as wide powers as in compulsory winding up. The court may stay suits or legal proceedings. It can make or enforce calls and all other orders necessary for beneficial winding up of the company [Section 526(2)].

Powers of court to order compulsory winding up [Section 527] – The court may pass an order for compulsory winding up superseding the order of winding up under its supervision. The court may then appoint a person who is the liquidator, either provisionally or permanently to be liquidator in winding up by the court in addition to and subject to the control of Official Liquidator.

[*When Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 becomes operational, “winding up under supervision of the court” will not be there.]

Important provisions applicable in case of every mode of winding up (i.e., Compulsory and Voluntary winding ups including Members and Creditors Voluntary winding up.)

Order of payment of liabilities (Sections 529 A and 530)

Overriding preferential payments (Section 529A)

The purpose of section 529A is to protect the rights of workmen so that they are not deprived of their legitimate claims in the event of winding up of a company. As per section 529A, following debts shall be paid in priority to all other debts -

(a) Workmen's dues.

(b) Debts due to secured creditors to the extent such debts rank pari passu with workmen's dues.

These debts shall be paid in full unless the assets are insufficient to meet them, in which case they shall abate in equal proportions.

For the purposes of sections 529A and section 530 -

(a) 'Workmen' means the employees of the company, being 'workmen' within the meaning of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947.

(b) 'Workmen's dues' means the aggregate of the following sums due from the company to its workmen:

- (i) All wages, salaries and commission earned including any compensation payable to any workman under any of the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947.
- (ii) All accrued holiday remuneration becoming payable to any workman before or by the effect of the winding up order.
- (iii) Any compensation, due under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 on account of the death or disablement of any employee of the company. However, no amount shall become payable if the company is being wound up voluntarily merely for the purposes of reconstruction or amalgamation with another company.

- (iv) All sums due to any workman from a provident fund, a pension fund, a gratuity fund or any other fund for the welfare of the workmen, maintained by the company.
- (c) 'Workmen's portion', in relation to the security of any secured creditor of a company, means the amount which bears to the value of the security the same proportion as the amount of the workmen's dues bears to the aggregate of-
 - the amount of workmen's dues; and
 - the amounts of the debts due to the secured creditors.

e.g.-The realisable value of the security of a secured creditor of a company is ₹ 1,00,000. The total amount of the workmen's dues is ₹ 2,00,000. The amount of the debts due from the company to its secured creditors is ₹ 3,00,000. The aggregate of the amount of workmen's dues and of the amounts of debts due to secured creditors is ₹ 5,00,000. The workmen's portion of the security is, therefore, two-fifth of the value of the security, i.e., ₹ 40,000.

Preferential payments (Section 530)

Section 530(1) specifies that the following unsecured debts shall be paid in priority to other unsecured debts. These are as under:

- (a) Revenues, taxes, cesses and rates. All revenues, taxes, cesses and rates due from the company to the Central or a State Government or to a local authority at the relevant date. The amount should have become due and payable within 12 months before the relevant date.
- (b) Wages and salaries of employees. All wages and salaries (including wages payable for time or piece work and salary earned wholly or in part by way of commission) of any employee, due for a period not exceeding 4 months within 12 months before the relevant date. However, in case of each employee, the amount shall not exceed such sum as may be notified by the Central Government in the Official Gazette. The sum notified is ₹ 20,000 for the time being [Notification No. GSR 80(E), dated 17.2.1997].
- (c) Holiday remuneration of employees. All accrued holiday remuneration becoming payable to any employee before, or by the effect of, the winding up order.
- (d) Contributions payable as employers. All amounts due, in respect of contributions payable by the company as an employer under any law for the time being in force. The amount should have become payable within 12 months before the relevant date. No such contribution shall be payable if the company is being wound up voluntarily merely for the purposes of reconstruction or amalgamation with another company.
- (e) Compensation to employees. Any compensation due under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 on account of the death or disablement of any employee of the company. However, no amount shall become payable if the company is being wound up voluntarily merely for the purposes of reconstruction or amalgamation with another company.
- (f) Sums due from various funds. All sums due to any employee from a provident fund, a pension fund, a gratuity fund or any other fund for the welfare of the employees, maintained by the company.
- (g) Investigation expenses. The expenses of any investigation held in pursuance of section 235 or 237, in so far as they are payable by the company.

Relevant date. The expression 'relevant date' may be understood as follows:

(a) In case of compulsory winding up.

- (i) In a case where provisional liquidator is appointed, 'relevant date' means the date of appointment of provisional liquidator,

- (ii) In a case where no provisional liquidator is appointed, 'relevant date' means the date of winding up order.

(b) In case of voluntary winding up. 'Relevant date' means the date of passing the resolution for voluntary winding up of the company.

Subrogation. Where a person makes payment on account of preferential payments on behalf of the company, he is entitled to claim priority in respect of that amount. For example, where a bank provides an overdraft for payment of wages, the bank shall be entitled to claim priority in respect of the sum actually advanced.

Payment of preferential debts. The preferential debts as mentioned under section 530(1) shall -

- (a) rank equally among themselves and be paid in full, unless the assets are insufficient to meet them, in which case they shall abate in equal proportions;
- (b) be discharged forthwith so far as the assets are sufficient to meet them.

Priority of preferential debts. The preferential debts shall -

- have priority over the claims of holders of debentures under any floating charge created by the company.
- have no priority over costs and expenses of the winding up.

1. Distribution of property of the company (Section 511)

Subject to the provisions of this Act as to preferential payments, the assets of a company shall be applied in satisfaction of its liabilities pari passu.

2. Payment of liabilities - Order of priority

- (a) Overriding preferential payments under section 529A (i.e., workers' dues and debts due to secured creditors).
- (b) Costs and expenses of winding up.
- (c) Preferential payments under section 530.
- (d) Creditors secured by a floating charge.
- (e) Unsecured creditors.

3. Overriding effect of section 529A

The provisions of section 529A shall apply notwithstanding anything contained in any other provision of the Companies Act or any other law for the time being in force.

Fraudulent preference (Section 531)

Fraudulent preference means giving an improper benefit or favourable treatment to some, of the creditors. The object of avoidance of fraudulent preference is to grant protection to the creditors of the company.

Meaning and essentials of fraudulent preference

A transaction shall be deemed to be a fraudulent preference and consequently invalid if all the following conditions are satisfied:

- (a) The transaction relates to transfer of property, delivery of goods, payment of money or other act relating to the property of the company.
- (b) It took place within 6 months before the commencement of the winding up of the company.
- (c) It was an entirely voluntary act and not made under any pressure.

(d) The dominant motive was to give a creditor a preference over other creditors.

Meaning of 'commencement of winding up',

- In case of a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court*, the winding up shall be deemed to commence at the time of presentation of the petition for the winding up.
- In case of a voluntary winding up, the winding up shall be deemed to have commenced when the resolution for voluntary winding up was passed.

Involuntary acts do not amount to fraudulent preference. Payments made under pressure shall not be treated as fraudulent preference.

- Payments made to a creditor solely with a view to avoid civil or criminal proceedings do not amount to fraudulent preference [Re, Blackpool Motorcar Co. Ltd. (1901) 1 Ch. 77].
- Payments made by the directors under pressure and to keep good relations with the creditor do not amount to fraudulent preference.

Purpose must be to give preference to a creditor.

- Any transaction would amount to a fraudulent preference only if the dominant motive behind the transaction is to give a creditor some preference over the other creditors. It is not enough to show that preference was given to a particular creditor, it must also be shown that it was done with a view to give him the favoured treatment.
- If the dominant motive of the transaction is tainted with an element of dishonesty, it amounts to fraudulent preference.
- Fraudulent preference cannot be inferred by mere suspicion. The fraud must be clearly alleged, proved and established and there should be a legal evidence [M. Kushler Ltd. (1943) 2 All ER 22].
- There is no fraudulent preference when a debtor's dominant intention is to benefit himself rather than to confer an advantage on his creditor. Thus, where a company created a legal mortgage in favour of a bank in the hope that by keeping good faith with the bank it could get further advance from the bank which could be utilised to revive the company, the mortgage was held not to be a fraudulent preference even though the mortgage was created after it was fairly clear that the company had become insolvent [Re, RLE. Holdings Ltd, (1967) 3 All ER 553].

Examples of fraudulent preference

- A director of a company had given guarantee for certain overdrafts granted to the company on the agreement that the company would give him security over the assets whenever called upon by him to do so. The agreement was not registered. The director later received a debenture charging the assets of the company. Within a month thereafter, the company passed a resolution for voluntary winding up. Held, the charge created on the assets of the company was a fraudulent preference and was void [Re, Jackson & Bassford Ltd. (1906) 2 Ch 467].
- A shareholder advanced money to the company on the condition that the company would execute formal mortgages in his favour whenever asked by him. When the company became unable to pay its debts, mortgages were executed by the company in his favour. Two months later, the company went into voluntary liquidation. Held, the mortgages created in favour of the shareholder amounted to a fraudulent preference and were therefore void [Re, Eric Holmes (Property) Ltd. (1965) 2 All ER 333].

Transfers for benefit of all creditors to be void (Section 532)

Any transfer or assignment by a company of all its property to trustees for the benefit of all its creditors shall be void.

Liabilities and rights of fraudulently preferred persons (Section 533)

Where a transaction is declared as a fraudulent preference, any person who is fraudulently preferred shall have the same rights and liabilities as if he had undertaken to be personally liable as surety for the debt, to the extent of the mortgage or charge on the property or the value of his interest, whichever is less.

Where the company gives a fraudulent preference to a creditor so as to benefit a person who has stood as a guarantor or surety for payment of that creditor, following consequences shall follow:

- The creditor shall be liable to refund to the liquidator the amount paid by the company.
- The creditor shall be entitled to claim such amount from the surety or guarantor.
- The winding up Court* shall be empowered to order that the surety or guarantor shall make the payment to the creditor.

Voluntary transfer to be invalid (Section 531A)

Any transfer of property or delivery of goods made by a company shall be void against the liquidator if it is made within a period of 1 year before the commencement of winding up of the company.

Exceptions

Following transactions shall remain valid even if made: within a period of 1 year before the commencement of winding up:

- (a) Any transfer of property or delivery of goods made in the ordinary course of business.
- (b) Any transfer of property or delivery of goods made in favour of a purchaser or encumbrancer in good faith and for valuable consideration.

Meaning of commencement of winding up:

- In case of a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court*, the winding up shall be deemed to commence at the time of presentation of the petition for the winding up.
- In case of a voluntary winding up, the winding up shall be deemed to have commenced when the resolution for voluntary winding up was passed.

Floating charge to be invalid in certain cases (Section 534)

Section 534 prevents an insolvent company from creating a floating charge on its undertaking to secure past debts or for moneys which do not come into the hands of the company.

A floating charge created by the company within 12 months preceding the commencement of its winding up shall be invalid.

Exceptions

- (a) A floating charge shall not be invalid where it is proved that the company was solvent immediately after the creation of the charge.
- (b) Abating charge shall be valid upto the amount of any cash paid to the company (whether at the time of creation of charge or thereafter) as a consideration for the charge. Also, interest shall be allowed on that amount at the rate of 5% per annum or such other rate as may be notified by the Central Government in the Official Gazette.

The words 'as a consideration for the charge' means that the money was paid in consideration of the fact that charge is created. In other words, it will be treated as if the cash has been paid to the company in the following cases:

- Where the cash is paid to the company simultaneously with creation of the charge.

- Where the cash is paid a few days before the charge is created provided it was paid hi reliance upon the promise to create the-charge.
- Where the cash is paid to the company subsequent to the creation of charge provided the cash would not have been paid to the company had the company not given the security (by way of creation of floating charge).

1. Effect of section 534

Unless' a floating charge is covered in the two exceptions, it is invalid. However, the debt is not affected. But, it becomes an unsecured debt.

2. Debt secured by floating charge already paid-Consequences

Where the debt secured by the floating charge has already been paid by the company before winding up commenced, the sum paid cannot be recovered by the liquidator under section 534 [Re, Parkes Garage (Swadlincote) (1929) 1 Ch 139]. However, if the transaction falls under any other section (e.g., section 531), the liquidator may proceed under that section.

Disclaimer of onerous property (Section 535)

When a company court has jurisdiction to entertain and dispose of a suit or any claim by or against the company in liquidation, claim for eviction and enforcement of right to re-enter leased property in terms of lease deed would be clearly within jurisdiction of such court. A disclaimer ought to be ordered by court only if it is essentially in interest of the company being wound up and if retention of such property is required to effectively carry out winding up proceedings; otherwise no disclaimer would be ordered – In Re, Board of trustees for the Port of Kolkata [2003] 44 SCL 81 (Gau.)

Avoidance of transfers, etc. after commencement of winding-up (Section 536)

Section 536 declares that all transfers of shares in the company and any alteration in the status of the members of the company, made after the commencement of winding-up, shall be void. However, such transfers/alterations shall not be adversely affected where the same are made with the sanction of the liquidator(in case of voluntary winding-up) or the court(in case of winding-up by or subject to supervision of the court.)

Avoidance of certain attachments (Section 537)

In case of winding-up by or subject to the supervision of the court*, section 537 declares that the following shall be void:

- (a) any attachment, distress or execution put in force, without leave of the court, against the estate or effects of the company, after the commencement of the winding-up; or
- (b) any sale held, without leave of the court, of any of the properties or effects of the company after such commencement.

As per Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002 substitution of new section for section 537

537.Avoidance of certain attachments, executions, etc., in winding up by.-

- (1) Where any company is being wound up by the Tribunal:
 - (a) any attachment, distress or execution put in force, without leave of the Tribunal against the estate or effects of the company, after the commencement of the winding up; or
 - (b) any sale held, without leave of the Tribunal of any of the properties or effects of the company after such commencement,

Shall be void.

- (2) Nothing in this section applies to any proceedings for the recovery of any tax or impost or any dues payable to the Government.

[*The word 'court' has been substituted by the word 'Tribunal' as per Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002, yet to come in force.]

Sec.539. Penalty for Falsification of Books

If with intent to defraud or deceive any person, any officer or contributory of a company which is being wound up -

- (a) destroys, mutilates, alters, falsifies or secrets, or is privy to the destruction, mutilation, alteration, falsification or secreting of, any books, papers or securities ; or
- (b) makes, or is privy to the making of, any false or fraudulent entry in any register, books of account or document belonging to the company ; he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Sec. 540. Penalty for Frauds by Officers

If any person, being at the time of the commission of the alleged offence an officer of a company which is subsequently ordered to be wound up by the 1[Tribunal] or which subsequently passes a resolution for voluntary winding up, -

- (a) has, by false pretences or by means of any other fraud induced any person to give credit to the company ; or
- (b) with intent to defraud creditors of the company, has made or caused to be made any gift or transfer of or charge on, or has caused or connived at the levying of any execution against, the property of the company ; or
- (c) with intent to defraud creditors of the company, has concealed or removed any part of the property of the company since the date of any unsatisfied judgment or order for payment of money obtained against the company, or within two months before that date; he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years and shall also be liable to fine.

Sec. 541. Liability Where Proper Accounts Not Kept

- (1) Where a company is being wound up, if it is shown that proper books of account were not kept by the company throughout the period of two years immediately preceding the commencement of the winding up, or the period between the incorporation of the company and the commencement of the winding up, whichever is shorter, every officer of the company who is in default shall, unless he shows that he acted honestly and that in the circumstances in which the business of the company was carried on, the default was excusable, be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year.

- (2) For the purposes of sub-section (1), it shall be deemed that proper books of account have not been kept in the case of any company, if there have not been kept -
 - (a) such books or accounts as are necessary to exhibit and explain the transactions and financial position of the business of the company, including books containing entries made from day-to-day in sufficient detail of all cash received and all cash paid ; and
 - (b) where the business of the company has involved dealings in goods, statements of the annual stock takings and (except in the case of goods sold by way of ordinary retail trade) of all goods sold and purchased, showing the goods and the buyers and the sellers thereof in sufficient detail to enable those goods and those buyers and sellers to be identified.

Sec. 543. Power of Court to assess damages against delinquent directors, etc.

- (1) If in the course of winding up a company, it appears that any person who has taken part in the promotion or formation of the company, or any past or present director, manager, liquidator or officer of the company -

- (a) has misapplied, or retained, or become liable or accountable for, any money or property of the company ; or
 - (b) has been guilty of any misfeasance or breach of trust in relation to the company ; the Court may, on the application of the Official Liquidator, or the liquidator, or of any creditor or contributory, made within the time specified in that behalf in sub-section (2), examine into the conduct of the person, director, manager, liquidator or officer aforesaid, and compel him to repay or restore the money or property or any part thereof respectively, with interest at such rate as the Court thinks just, or to contribute such sum to the assets of the company by way of compensation in respect of the misapplication, retainer, misfeasance or breach of trust, as the Court thinks just.
- (2) An application under sub-section (1) shall be made within five years from the date of the order for winding up, or of the first appointment of the liquidator in the winding up, or of the misapplication, retainer, misfeasance or breach of trust, as the case may be, whichever is longer.
- (3) This section shall apply notwithstanding that the matter is one for which the person concerned may be criminally liable. “

Substituted by Companies (Second amendment) Act,2002

543. Power of Tribunal to assess Damages against delinquent Directors, etc

- (1) If in the course of winding up of a company, it appears that any person who has taken part in the promotion or formation of the company, or any past or present director, manager, liquidator or officer of the company -
- (a) has misapplied, or retained, or become liable or accountable for, any money or property of the company ; or
 - (b) has been guilty of any misfeasance or breach of trust in relation to the company, the Tribunal may, on the application of the Official Liquidator, or the liquidator, or of any creditor or contributory, made within the time specified in that behalf in sub-section (2), examine into the conduct of the person, director, manager, liquidator or officer aforesaid, and compel him to repay or restore the money or property or any part thereof respectively, with interest at such rate as the Tribunal thinks just, or to contribute such sum to the assets of the company by way of compensation in respect of the misapplication, retainer, misfeasance or breach of trust, as the Tribunal thinks just.

- (2) An application under sub-section (1) shall be made within five years from the date of the order for winding up, or of the first appointment of the liquidator in the winding up, or of the misapplication, retainer, misfeasance or breach of trust as the case may be, whichever is longer.
- (3) This section shall apply notwithstanding that the matter is one for which the person concerned may be criminally liable.]

Defunct Companies (Section 560)

The expression ‘defunct company’ denotes a company which is not functioning and is almost dead. Where a company does not have adequate assets to meet out the cost of liquidation, the course followed is to strike the name of the company off the register of companies pursuant to section 560 of the Act.

1. Circumstances in which a company may be made a defunct company

The registrar has the power to strike off the name of a defunct company in the following cases:

- (a) Registrar on believing that a company is not carrying on business or has ceased to be in operation

Where a company has ceased to carry on business, the registrar may strike off the name of the company from the register of companies. The registrar shall follow the following procedure:

- (i) Enquiry to determine whether the company is in operation. Where the registrar has reasonable cause to believe that a company is not carrying on business or has ceased to be in operation, he shall send to the company a letter inquiring whether the company is carrying on business or is in operation.
- (ii) Registered letter to show cause if no response is received for first letter. If the registrar does not get any reply from the company within 1 month, he shall within next 14 days send to the company a registered letter referring to his earlier letter. The registered letter shall also state that if no reply is received within 1 month, a notice shall be published in the Official Gazette with a view to strike off the name of the company from the register of companies.
- (iii) Publication of registrar's notice in the Official Gazette. The registrar shall publish a notice in the Official Gazette that the name of the company will be struck off the register of companies if no cause is shown within 3 months. A copy of the notice shall also be served on the company by the registered post. The registrar has the power to publish such a notice in the Official Gazette in the following cases:
 - Where the registrar receives an answer from the company to the effect that it is not carrying on business or ceased to be in operation.
 - Where the registrar does not receive any reply from the company within 1 month of the date of sending the second letter.
- (iv) Dissolution of the company. If no reply is received or no cause is shown within 3 months of the date of publication of notice in the Official Gazette, the registrar shall strike off the name of the company from the register of companies and publish a notice thereof in the Official Gazette. On such publication, the company shall stand dissolved.

(b) Company in the course of winding up - No liquidator acting or no return received

Where a company is being wound up, the registrar shall have the power to strike off the name of the company if he has reasonable ground to believe that –

- (i) no liquidator is acting; or
- (ii) the affairs of the company have been completely wound up and any returns required to be made by the liquidator have not been made for a period of 6 consecutive months.

The registrar shall follow the following procedure:

- (i) Publication in the Official Gazette. The registrar shall publish a notice in the Official Gazette that the name of the company shall be struck off the register of companies if no cause is shown within 3 months. A copy of the notice shall also be served on the company or the liquidator by the registered post.
- (ii) Dissolution of the company. If no reply is received or no cause is shown within 3 months of the date of publication of notice in the Official Gazette, the registrar shall strike off the name of the company from the register of companies and publish a notice thereof in the Official Gazette. On such publication, the company shall stand dissolved.

2. Consequences of striking off the name of the company

- (a) The company shall stand dissolved. The company shall stand dissolved as from the date of publication of notice, striking the name of the company off the register, in the Official Gazette.

(b) Liability of managerial personnel and members is not affected. The dissolution of a company under section 560 does not affect the liability of its managerial personnel or its members. In other words, the liability of every director, manager or other officer who was exercising any power of management and of every member of the company shall continue and may be enforced as if the company had not been dissolved.

(c) Power of the Court to wind up the company. Dissolution of a company under section 560 does not affect the power of the Court to wind up the company. In other words, a winding up order may be passed without first getting the dissolution order vacated.

3. Mode of sending letters or notices to the company

All the letters or notices to be sent to a company by the registrar under section 560 shall be addressed to its registered office, or if no office has been registered, to the care of some director, manager, secretary or any responsible officer of a company. If no such address is available with the registrar, he shall send such notices to each of the subscribers to the memorandum of association.

Restoration of name of the company (Section 560)

Where the name of a company has been struck off by the registrar, the Court* has the power to restore the name of the company. The procedure in this regard is as under:

1. Application to the Court

An application may be made to the Court* for restoring the name of the company on the register of companies.

(a) Time limit for making the application. The application shall be filed with the Court* within 20 years from the date of publication of order of dissolution in the Official Gazette.

(b) Who can make the application? The application may be made by –

- (i) the company; or
- (ii) any member of the company; or
- (iii) any creditor of the company.

2. Restoration of company on satisfaction of Court

The Court* may order that the name of the company be restored to the register if the Court* is satisfied that –

- the company was, at the time of striking off the name, carrying on business or was in operation; or
- it is just and equitable that the name of the company be restored to the register.

3. Directions by the Court

While passing an order for restoration, the Court* may give such directions and make such provisions as seem just for placing the company and all other persons in the same position as nearly as may be as if the name of the company had not been struck off.

4. Filing of order with the registrar

The order of the Court* shall be filed with the registrar.

5. Restoration becomes effective on filing the order of registrar

The order of the Court* becomes effective only when a certified copy of the Court* has been delivered to the registrar for registration. Until the order of the Court* is filed with the registrar, the order remains in abeyance.

6. Effects of restoration

On restoration, the company shall be deemed to have continued its existence as if its name had not been struck off. The company, its creditors, debtors and members go back to the position in which they were before the date on which the name of the company was struck off.

[*Tribunal- Vide Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002- Yet to take effect]

Contributory (Sections 428 to 432 and 467)

The provisions applicable to a contributory may be explained as follows:

1. Meaning (Section 428)

The term 'contributory' means every person liable to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up. It also includes -

- (a) a holder of any shares which are fully paid up;
- (b) an alleged contributory for the purpose of proceedings prior to final determination of persons who are to be deemed as contributories.

2. Persons liable as contributories

Following persons shall be liable as contributories on the winding up of the company:

- (a) Present and past members (Section 426): A member of a limited company shall be liable to contribute the amount unpaid on the shares in respect of which he is a contributory, or the amount he has guaranteed to pay in the event of winding-up. A past member shall be liable to contribute if he ceased to be a member within one year before the commencement of winding-up and the present members fail to meet their liabilities in respect of the debts incurred while he was a member.(Section 426)
- (b) Directors and manager with unlimited liability (Section 427): Where the liability of any director or manager is unlimited (under the provisions of sections 322 and 323), he shall contribute as an ordinary member in respect of the shares held by him. Also, he shall have an additional liability to contribute as a member of an unlimited company.

Limitation of liability. A past director or manager shall not be liable to make the additional contribution (as a member of an unlimited company) :-

- ❖ if he has ceased to hold office for 1 year or upwards before the commencement of the winding up;
- ❖ in respect of any debt or liability of the company contracted after he ceased to hold office; a unless the Court deems it necessary that such additional contribution is required.
- (c) Legal representative of a deceased member (Section 430): The legal representative of a deceased member shall be liable for the debts of the deceased. But his liability is limited to estate inherited by him. In other words, on the death of a contributory, his legal representative will be deemed to be a contributory.
- (d) Official assignee of an insolvent member (Section 431): Where a contributory is adjudged an insolvent, his official assignee shall be liable to pay the debts of the insolvent contributory out of the estate of the insolvent. In other words, the official assignee or the official receiver, as the case may be, of a contributory who is adjudged an insolvent, shall be deemed to be a contributory.
- (e) Liquidator of a body corporate which is a member (Section 432): Where a body corporate is a contributory and is ordered to be wound up, the liquidator of such body corporate shall be treated as a contributory.

- (f) Subscribers to the Memorandum: Subscribers to the Memorandum are deemed to be members of the company even though their names may or may not be entered in the Register of members. Accordingly, in the event of winding-up, inspite of the fact that their names are not entered in the Register of Members, they shall be deemed as contributories for the amount remaining unpaid on the shares they agreed to subscribe for.

3. Liability of Contributories (Section 426)

For determining liability of contributories, the list of contributories shall be prepared in two parts, viz, List A and List B.

- ❖ List A shall include the present members of the company, i.e., members whose names appear in the company's register of members at the time of the winding-up of the company.
- ❖ List B shall include the past members of the company, i.e., members who ceased to be members within one year preceding the commencement of the winding-up of the company.

Liability of present members:

The liability of a present member (i.e., List A contributory) shall be limited-

1. In the case of a company limited by shares, to the amount remaining unpaid on the shares;
2. In the case of a company limited by guarantee, to the amount undertaken to be contributed by him to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up; and
3. In the case of a company limited by guarantee but also having share capital, to the amount undertaken to be contributed by him in the event of winding up as well as any sums unpaid on any shares held by him.

Liability of past members:

A past member (i.e., List B contributory) shall not be liable to contribute-

1. If he has ceased to be a member for one year or more before the commencement of the winding-up.
2. In respect of any debt or liability of the company contracted after he ceased to be a member.
3. If it appears to the court that the present members will be able to satisfy the contributions required to be made by them.

4. Nature of liability of a contributory (Section 429)

- (a) Absolute liability. The liability of a contributory is a liability created by law. Although the liability of a contributory becomes a statutory debt, it becomes payable only when the Court makes an order for calls to be made and the calls are made by the liquidator in accordance with the order of the Court (Section 429).
- (b) Fresh cause of action to the liquidator. The members of a company in liquidation are liable in respect of unpaid calls even though the calls were made by the company before it went into liquidation and suit of the company for its realisation had become time barred. Thus, on the commencement of winding up, a new liability is cast on the members in respect of unpaid calls. The liquidator gets a fresh right to enforce the payment of unpaid calls. His rights are independent of the rights which the company had before winding up [Pokhar Mai v Flour and Oil Mills Co. Ltd. AIR (1934) Lah. 1015].
- (c) Ex-lege liability. The liability of a member to be included in the list of contributories is not ex-contractu, i.e., it does not arise as a result of the contract of membership. His liability is ex-lege, i.e., the liability arises only by reason of the fact that his name appears in the register of members even though the allotment to him was void or that he had sold his shares to a purchaser who. has not got his shares registered with the company.

The Court has the power to rectify the register of members, if required (Section 467). Unless the Court orders the rectification of register of members, the liability of a contributory is absolute [Mphd. Akbar v Official Liquidator AIR 1950 Bom 386].

(d) When does the liability of a contributory arise? A contributory shall be required to pay an unpaid call only when such call is made on him. A call shall be made on a contributory when the assets of the company fall short of its liabilities and expenses of winding up. Also, a call may be made for adjustment of rights of contributories among themselves. In other words, a contributory shall be liable to pay the following sums:

- (i) An amount sufficient for payment of its debts and liabilities,
- (ii) The costs, charges and expenses of winding up.
- (iii) The amount payable for adjustment of rights of the contributories among themselves (Adjustment of rights becomes necessary when some shareholders have paid a higher amount on shares as compared to the amount paid by some other shareholders).

5. Settlement of list of contributories (Section 467)

(a) Two lists of contributories. After making a winding up order, the Court shall settle a list of contributories. It shall distinguish between the persons who are contributories in their own right and those who are contributories as being representatives of others. Accordingly, the liquidator prepares two lists of contributories, i.e., 'List A' and 'List B'.

- (i) 'List A' of contributories. 'List A' contains the names of present members of the company, i.e., the members whose names appear in the register of members as on the date of commencement of winding up of the company.
- (ii) 'List B' of contributories. 'List B' contains the names of past members of the company, i.e., the members who ceased to be members within 1 year preceding the commencement of winding up of the company.

(b) List of contributories may be dispensed with. If it appears to the Court that it will not be necessary to make calls or adjust the rights of the contributories, the Court may dispense with the settlement of list of contributories.

6. No right of set off

A member may be a creditor of the company for unpaid dividend or otherwise. Any such money due to a member cannot be set off against any claim of the company against a member. In other words, a member who is a creditor of the company cannot set off his debt against any liability for calls. Thus, a member or contributory has no right of set off where he is also a creditor of the company.

(a) Principle behind denial of set off. The principle underlying denial of right of set off is that where a person entitled to participate in a fund is also bound to make a contribution in aid of that fund, he cannot be allowed to participate until he has discharged his obligation [Re, Peruvian Railway Construction Co. (1915) 2 Ch. 442].

(b) Exceptions - Right of set off allowed as per section 469. In the following cases, a contributory shall have a right of set off:

- (i) In the case of an unlimited company, the Court may allow the set off in respect of any money due to a contributory on account of any independent dealing or contract between the company and the contributory,

- (ii) In the case of a limited company, the Court may allow the set off in respect of any money due to a director or manager whose liability is unlimited, on account of any independent dealing or contract between the company and such director or manager,
 - (iii) In the case of any company (whether limited or unlimited) when all the creditors have been paid in full, any money due to a contributory may be allowed to be set off against any subsequent call.
1. On the commencement of winding up the members of a company are referred to as 'contributories'.
 2. There is a difference between the terms 'member' and a 'contributory'. A holder of shares (whether partly paid or fully paid) shall be a contributory. However, he shall not be regarded as a member if his name has not been entered in the register of members.

Winding up of unregistered companies (Sections 582 to 589)

The provisions relating to winding up of unregistered companies are explained as follows:

1. Meaning of unregistered company (Section 582)

An unregistered company includes any partnership, association, or company having 8 or more members. Such membership must exist as on the day of presentation of petition of winding up. An unregistered company shall not include -

- (a) a railway company;
- (b) a company registered under the Companies Act, 1956;
- (c) a company registered under any of the previous Indian Companies Act (excluding a company whose registered office was situated in Burma, Aden or Pakistan immediately before the separation of that country from India);
- (d) an illegal association.

2. Applicability of provisions relating to winding up (Section 583)

An unregistered company may be wound up under the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956. In such a case, all the provisions of the Companies Act with respect to winding up shall apply to the unregistered company, with the following modifications:

- (a) Jurisdiction of Court*. The principal place of business of the unregistered company shall be deemed to be its registered office and the appropriate Court* of that place shall have the jurisdiction to wind up the unregistered company.
- (b) Mode of winding up. An unregistered company shall not be wound up voluntarily or subject to the supervision of the Court*. It shall be wound up only by the Court*.
- (c) Grounds for winding up. An unregistered company may be wound up on the following grounds:
 - (i) That the company has ceased to carry on its business or it is carrying on its business only to wind up its affairs.
 - (ii) That the company is unable to pay its debts,
 - (iii) That in the opinion of the Court* it is just and equitable that it should be wound up.

3. Inability to pay debts - meaning (Section 583)

An unregistered company shall be deemed to be unable to pay its debts in the following circumstances:

- (a) If a creditor, to whom the company is indebted in a sum exceeding ₹ 500, has served on the company a demand under his hand requiring the company to pay the sum so due, and the company has, for three weeks neglected to pay the sum or to secure or compound for it to the satisfaction of the creditor.

- (b) Where any suit or legal proceeding has been instituted against a member for any debt due from the unregistered company and a notice thereof has been served and the company has not within 10 days thereafter -
 - (i) paid, secured or compounded the debt or demand; or
 - (ii) procured the suit or legal proceedings to be stayed; or
 - (iii) indemnified the defendant-member of the suit against costs, damages or expenses.
- (c) Where the company fails to satisfy a decree of any Court* in favour of a creditor.
- (d) Where it is proved that the company is unable to pay its debts.

4. Winding up of a foreign company (Section 584)

A body corporate incorporated outside India may be wound up as an unregistered company if it had been carrying on business in India and it has ceased to carry on business in India. It may be wound up even if it has been dissolved or has ceased to exist according to the law of the country where it had been incorporated.

5. Winding up of unregistered companies - provisions applicable (Sections 585 to 589)

(a) Contributory (Section 585)

Every person shall be deemed to be a contributory who is liable to pay -

- (i) any debt or liability of the company;
- (ii) the costs, charges and expenses of winding up;
- (iii) the amount payable for adjustment of rights of the members amongst themselves.

(b) Stay of suits (Sections 586 and 587)

- (i) Pending order of the Court*. At any time after the presentation of a winding up petition and before a winding up order has been made, the company, or any creditor or contributory, may apply to the Court* for stay of suits or proceedings against the company. The Court* may stay or restrain the suit or proceedings against the company on such terms as it thinks fit (Section 586).
- (ii) On order of winding up. On the making of a winding up order, all suits or legal proceedings are automatically stayed against a contributory. No suit or legal proceeding shall be started against a contributory except with the leave of the Court* and on such terms as the Court* may impose (Section 587).

(c) Directions as to property in certain cases (Section 588)

If an unregistered company has no power to sue in its own name, the Court* may order that all or any part of the property, movable or immovable, shall vest in the Official Liquidator by his official name. On such an order being made, the Official Liquidator may bring or defend in his official name any suit or legal proceeding relating to that property.

(d) Application of other provisions of the Act (Section 589)

Sections 582 to 590 apply to winding up of unregistered companies. Additionally, provisions of sections 425 to 560 (relating to winding up of companies registered under the Companies Act, 1956) shall also apply to an unregistered company.

1.15. E - GOVERNANCE

Section 610B of the Companies Act, 1956 as inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2006 empowers the Central Government to introduce E-Governance and to modify the Act to facilitate electronic filing of forms, returns and documents with the ROC.

E-Governance-Meaning

Electronic Governance is the application of information technology to the Government functioning in order to bring about Simple, Moral, Accountable, Responsive and Transparent (SMART) Governance. E-Governance is a highly complex process requiring provision of hardware, software, networking and re-engineering of the procedures for better delivery of services.

Traditionally, the interaction between citizens or business and Government agency takes place in a Government office. In e-Governance, the interaction takes place virtually using Internet based technology, thus reducing time and cost involved. Even better, E-Governance enhances the citizens and business access to Government information and services and provides new ways to increase citizen participation in the democratic process.

Advantages of e-Filing

- Business shall be enabled to register a company and file statutory documents quickly and easily.
- Public to get easy access to relevant records and get their grievances re-dressed effectively.
- Professionals to be able to offer efficient services to their client companies.
- Financial institutions to find registration and verification of charges easy.
- Government to ensure proactive and effective compliance of relevant laws and corporate governance.
- MCA employees shall be enabled to deliver best of services.

Launch of MCA-21 Programme

Ministry of Company (now, 'Corporate') Affairs (MCA) has launched a major E-Governance initiative (MCA-21). It envisages e-filing of all documents relating to company matters on the MCA portal. MCA 21 Project is a project of the Ministry of Company Affairs carried out under the National e-governance Programme of the Government - an online portal www.mca.gov.in to enable e-filing under the Companies Act, 1956.

MCA is moving from the traditional paper-based operation to a near paperless environment. Consequently, the conventional forms prescribed for various transactions have been adapted for use through electronic medium. The processes and forms of MCA have been simplified and standardized for electronic filing (e-Filing) through e-Forms.

Salient Features of the MCA-21 include :

- Corporations, professionals and the public at large will no longer need to visit the Registrar of Companies offices and would be able to interact with the Ministry using the MCA-21 portal from their offices or home or by going to the facilitation centres, which have been set-up.
- The users will have multiple options to make payments in the online mode either through credit cards or the Internet banking facility. Besides this, the traditional payment through demand draft would be accepted against a system-generated challan at more than 200 bank branches across the country.
- The programme also introduces the concept of Director Identification Number (DIN), which is a unique and lifetime identification number being issued to all current and prospective directors. It is mandatory for all directors who wish to interact with the Ministry in future to acquire a DIN. By a General Circular dated 4-3-2011 [No. 5/2011 (F. No. 2011-CL V)] the M.C.A. has simplified the process of application and issuance of DIN. Now application will only be made on-line accompanied by scanned and self-verified documents, certified by a recognised professional.
- The system would also enable the stakeholder to track the service request through a Service Request Number (SRN).

MCA has vide Notification No. GSR 56(E) dated 10th February, 2006, issued the Companies (Central Government's) General Rules and Forms (Amendment) Rules, 2006 and notified new e-forms. The statutory filing of forms and returns in the offices of ROCs is now on the basis of new E-forms only from 15-9-2006; all manual filing of documents has been discontinued.

Permanent documents of existing companies like, Memorandum of Association, Articles of Association, current charge documents, etc. are presently maintained in paper form across various Registrar of Companies (RoC) offices. Almost all of these documents have been converted into electronic format. The scope of E-filing covers only the offices of RoCs, Regional Directors and the Headquarters at New Delhi and it does not include Official Liquidators, Company Law Board/Tribunal and Courts.

The present scope of the MCA 21 includes services provided by the Secretariat at New Delhi, the four Regional Directorates (RDs) and the 20 offices of the Registrar of Companies (RoC) located all over the country. The E-filing facility includes :

- Registration and incorporation of new companies
- Filing of Annual Returns and Balance Sheets
- Filing of forms for change of names/address/Director's details
- Registration and verification of charges
- Inspection of documents
- Applications for various statutory services from MCA
- Investor grievance redressal.

In the process of E-filing system the ROC office will become the Back Office of the Ministry. There are likely to be a number of companies/entities who may find it difficult to switch over to E-filing at the initial stage. Facilitation Centres known as Physical Front Offices (PFOs) have been set up at 53 locations throughout the country to provide requisite comfort for e-filing to such companies.

Most of the e-Forms require the digital signature of the Managing Director or Director, Manager or Secretary of the company for successful filing/submission. Further, the digital signature of a third party may also be required in certain cases. In the case of an e-Form for creation or modification of charges, such digital signature is also required from the Bank or Financial Institution. In certain cases, a certificate from the Chartered Accountant or Cost Accountant or Company Secretary in whole-time practice is also required to authenticate the particulars contained in the e-Form. The MCA has also issued guidelines for the Bank and Financial Institutions on 4th March, 2006 for filing process.

For the purpose of standardization and better understanding, the proposed e-Forms have been grouped under the following broad categories :

- (a) New Company Registration
- (b) Compliance Related Filing- Whether annually or event based include Annual Return, Balance Sheet and Profit & Loss Account, Return of allotment, Return of buy back of securities, Return of deposits, Return of appointment of managing director, whole-time director, Notice of appointment of auditor, Statutory report, Cost audit report, etc.
- (c) Change services - It covers matters in respect of any change in the capital structure, changes in the registered office or the persons appointed as directors, secretaries and authorized representatives.
- (d) Charge Management - For registration of charge created or modified and satisfaction of charge, to be filed with the ROC. It also includes filing of e-Forms for appointment and cessation of receiver and filing of accounts by receiver. Various Forms have been deleted which includes Form 13, relating to charges.
- (e) Investor Services- E-filing system accepts complaints filed against a company by an investor as part of investor services. There is a specific e-Form for this purpose.
- (f) Application for ROCs approval – ROC is having powers to give direction in relation to the matters pertaining to the change of name of an existing company and the conversion of a public company to private company. In addition, ROC approval is required in case of extension of time period for holding AGM, holding AGM at place other than registered address, declaring a company as defunct, extension of the period of annual accounts, amalgamation of companies, Forms relating to winding up, etc. The MCA has also prescribed several new E-Forms, for which there were no prescribed Forms available.
- (g) Information Services – It covers those forms which are to be filed with ROC for informational purposes, in compliance with the provisions of the Companies Act, viz., declaration of solvency in case company decides to buy back its shares. Form 23 for filing of resolutions and agreements, Form 23AA regarding place where books of account are kept, Form 35A in case company decides to transfer its shares to another company, Form 21 regarding order received from Court or Company Law Board, etc.

In the e-filing system search facilities are available for viewing public documents, getting certified copies, finding the Corporate Identity Number (CIN), checking company name, finding name availability. The categories of public documents includes incorporation documents, charge documents, annual returns and balance sheets, change in directors and other documents.

Certification of company documents by practising professionals has not been continued by MCA-21 in its e-Forms filing but the same has also been extended to several other forms comprising of e-Forms 2, 3, 5, 8, 10, 17, 18, 23, 24AB, 32, etc. This pre-certification can be carried out either by Company Secretaries in whole-time practice, Chartered Accountants or Cost Accountants in practice.

Five Step e-Filing Process

If you have a PC of reasonable configuration, a printer/scanner, an Internet connection and the Digital Signature Certificate, you can carry out e-Filing all by yourself through the five steps described below:

Step 1: Register Yourself

- Only registered users will be allowed to do e-Filing.
- Registration is a simple one-time process, where guidance will be available on MCA-21 portal to create your personalized login ID - this is to ensure security and also serves as a channel for providing you personalized information as the functionality evolves.
- If you possess a Digital Signature Certificate (DSC) and if you intend to sign the e-Forms as an authorised signatory, you will need to also register your DSC. You will need to Register your DSC every time you procure a new DSC or renew/revalidate your DSC.

Step 2 : Download e-Form

- Step 2: Download e-Form e-Forms are freely downloadable and are in the 'PDF' format. You will need Adobe Reader v7.0.5 which is downloadable through link available on MCA-21 portal.
- There are new set of e-Forms available on MCA-21 portal and you may need to familiarize yourself with the new set of e-Forms. Once these new e-Forms are notified, the old forms will not be accepted thereafter.
- Instruction kits for each e-Form would also be available alongside the e-Forms.

Step 3: Complete e-Form

- e-Forms are essentially PDF documents, specifically tailored by MCA to meet e-filing needs as required by the Companies Act, 1956. You may choose to fill-in an e-Form offline at your convenience without staying connected to internet.
- These e-Forms can be filled-in and signed digitally. for informational purposes, in compliance with the provisions of the Compa-Application for ROCs approval - ROC is having powers to give direction in
- As a part of the simplification of form filing, certain fields can be filled-up automatically by the System (to the extent such data is available in the database of MCA) by selecting the "pre-fill" option that is available in the form.
- You will also be able to do "automated pre-scrutiny" a step that will ensure that your e-Form is complete in all respects and is good for e-filing.
- You may also attach supporting documents, where applicable, but please make sure that these are also in PDF format - support for conversion of popular formats such as Microsoft Office into PDF will be made available in the MCA-21 portal.
- Make sure that you keep the size of your attachments minimal, wherever possible.
- Sign the e-Form using the Digital Signature Certificate.
- If more than one signatory is involved, you can send the e-Form either on suitable media or as an e-mail attachment (or transfer a file over the network) to other individuals who can also sign digitally.
- Multiple signatures can be applied on a given e-Form, but just make sure that contents of the e-Form are not altered after it has been signed, in which case the document will become invalid and will be rejected during the e-filing process.
- After all individuals have digitally signed the form, it is ready for submission.

Step 4: Submit e-Form

- You will need to connect to the Internet if you want to carry out e-Filing.
- Submission will need to be made at the MCA-21 portal using specialized functionality that is provided.
- Sending the e-Form by email DOES NOT constitute e-Filing and should be avoided.
- Submission of e-Form will generally take a couple of minutes and will depend on the size of e-Form/attachments and the speed/quality of your Internet connection - better the connection, faster the process.
- If the e-Form is defective as may be identified by the MCA-21 system during submission, it will be rejected and returned to the user with clear details of the nature of the defect - such defect could be a result of incorrect data that may have been entered in the e-Form or due to missing or invalid digital signatures.
- If your e-Form is correct in all respects, you can proceed to the next step.
- It is advisable to save a copy of the document before submission (using submit button) as a part of your records.

Step 5: Make Payment

- Fee calculation is done automatically by the system as applicable under law and the fee for the service is displayed to the user.
- MCA-21 system supports following methods of payment:
 - (i) Credit Card
 - (ii) Internet Banking
 - (iii) challan (i.e. at the Bank counter)
- A total of two hundred branches of five banks have been authorised to collect MCA payment. These bank branches will be fully computerized (over a period of time) and have the facility to send data in e-form to MCA to acknowledge the payment that is made by you.
- The list of Banks is given below:
 - (i) State Bank of India
 - (ii) Punjab National Bank
 - (iii) Indian Bank
 - (iv) ICICI Bank
 - (v) HDFC Bank
- In the case of Credit Card and Internet banking method, the computer of the authorised bank will take over at this stage to carry forward the transaction to completion. It is to be noted that the charges/commissions towards this facility, as may be levied by the bank, will be charged in addition to MCA payments by the concerned bank and will need to be borne by you. System will generate a receipt that you can retain as a part of your records.
- In the case of challan payment, a fully completed challan will be generated by the system that can be printed by you and taken to any of the nearest authorised branch. You may choose to pay either through cash (limits as stipulated by Law will be applicable) or through a local cheque or DD. The acknowledged copy of the challan will serve as your receipt.
- Once you have made the payment in the Bank following the challan payment system, the filing is complete. Based on confirmation of payment by the bank to the MCA-21 system, the document will be transmitted to the Back Office for further processing.

- In case you are approaching the last day of time-bound filing (e.g. in the case of ARs and BSs), you have to ensure that you complete the payment process on or before the last day failing which you will have to pay the delayed filing fees. Suitable arrangements have been made to generate the challans accordingly. Local cheques will need to be remitted well in advance so that the same is cleared before the challan expiry date.
- In case you do not make payment within the period stipulated in the challan i.e., five days from the date of submission (subject to the caveat of last date of time-bound filing), your request submitted earlier will automatically expire. If you are desirous of filing a document that has expired, start the process from Step 4 (or Step 3 if any changes to the e-Form are required).

Assistance at the Facilitation Centre

If you do not have access to necessary computing infrastructure or you are not familiar with the process of e-Filing, you may seek the services of a Facilitation Centre i.e., PFO located conveniently near you. At the PFO, the following can be accomplished:

- You will have kiosk facility where you can download and fill in the e-Form (you may alternatively choose to do this on your home PC or at a cyber cafe).
- Assistance will be provided to help you digitally sign the e-Forms and submit the same. For this, remember to bring your Digital Signature Certificate along with you.
- Scanning facility for attachments is also provided.
- A challan copy generated by the system will be provided to you, which you may take to any authorised bank branch located conveniently and make necessary payment.
- The facilitation centre will assist you in completing your transaction as explained under Step 5 above.

Completion of e-Filing

e-Filing will be completed once the necessary payment is remitted either through electronic payment means or through the challan based method. Banks will authorize the transactions after which the documents filed by you will be electronically forwarded to the concerned RoC Office (also referred to as Back Office) for further processing within two working days. You will also be provided a facility at MCA-21 portal to check if the e-Filing has been completed successfully. The challan number that is printed on the challan or the computer generated receipt will be helpful for future reference of your service request.

Getting Ready for e-Filing

Change is not easy and MCA has taken all steps to make this as simple as possible. There are, however, a few simple steps that need to be followed in order to get ready for e-Filing. These are:

- Register yourself as a Director : All directors, be it those of existing companies or first time directors, will need to register themselves online for obtaining the Director Identification Number (DIN). Details for obtaining a DIN will be made available as soon as the MCA-21 portal is made operational. Two months' time will be provided for this purpose from the date of commencement of this facility, within which directors of existing companies will need to complete this process. In case you have difficulty doing it by yourself, please visit any of the facilitation centres where assistance will be available. Make sure you carry one photograph of yours, a photo identity card and address proof when you visit the facilitation centre to complete this process. After obtaining the DIN, intimate the same to all companies in which you are a Director.
- Acquire a Digital Signature Certificate (DSC) : A director or authorised representative of a company (including branches of foreign companies) engaged in signing documents and professionals who wish to attest documents that will be e-Filed, will need to obtain a DSC from any of the authorised agencies by the Government. A list of authorised agencies are published in the website of Controller of Certifying authorities, www.cca.gov.in. MCA will shortly notify the requirements related to the type of DSC that will need to be procured. Typically, these certificates are provided on a variety of media, the most popular being the USB token or a smart card. These DSCs are generally valid for a period of one year and will need to be renewed thereafter each year. There is a cost associated with the first time procurement and subsequent renewal of these DSCs that will need to be borne by you. It will be essential to submit only digital signed electronic documents as part of e-Filing as per the requirements of the Information Technology Act, 2000. It is sufficient that you procure one DSC irrespective of the role you play i.e., director or professional in practice, as long as there is no conflict of interest (i.e., professionals will not be able to attest documents of the companies if they serve as directors in the same company).

- Register your DSC : Once you have procured your DSC, you will also need to register your DSC with the MCA-21 portal using your personalized login. In case you have to renew your DSC, you will need to register these as well. Thereafter, you can also use your DSC to login to the MCA-21 system directly.
- Familiarize Basics : Familiarize yourself with the new e-Forms and find out the facilitation centre (PFO) and Bank branch that is conveniently located nearest to you.

Detailed Information

Detailed information is available on the MCA-21 portal. One can access all the key e-Forms on this site.

Details of New Forms

Ministry of Company Affairs has notified the e-Forms as of 10th February, 2006 and made operational from 28th February, 2006.

The prescribed forms may be filed through electronic media or through any other computer readable media as referred under section 610A of the Companies Act, 1956. The electronic form shall be authenticated by authorised signatories using digital signatures, as defined under the Information Technology Act, 2000. The Forms, when filed in physical form, may be authenticated by authorised signatory for affixing his signature manually.

Amendment to the Companies Act with respect to e-Filing

New sections inserted by Companies (Amendment) Act, 2006 relating to e-filing of forms, are as below:

- (c) such applications, balance-sheet, prospectus, return, register, memorandum of association, articles of association, particulars of charge, or any other particulars or document and return filed under this Act or rules made thereunder shall be maintained by the Registrar in the electronic form and registered or authenticated, as the case maybe, in such manner as may be specified in the rules;

- (d) such inspection of the memorandum of association, articles of association, register, index, balance-sheet, return or any other document maintained in the electronic form, which is otherwise available for such inspection under this Act or rules made thereunder, may be made by any person through the electronic form as may be specified in the rules;
 - (e) such fees, charges or other sums payable under this Act or rules made thereunder shall be paid through the electronic form and in such manner as may be specified in the rules;
 - (f) the Registrar shall, register change of registered office, alteration of memorandum of association or articles of association, prospectus, issue certificate of incorporation or certificate of commencement of business, register such document, issue such certificate, record notice, receive such communication, as may be required to be registered or issued or re-corded or received, as the case may be, under this Act or rules made thereunder or perform duties or discharge functions or exercise powers under this Act or rules made thereunder or do any act which is by this Act directed to be performed or discharged or exercised or done by the Registrar, by the electronic form, in such manner as may be specified in the rules.
- (2) The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, frame a scheme to carry out the provisions specified under sub-section (1) through the electronic form :

Provided that the Central Government may appoint different dates in respect of different Registrars of Companies or Regional Directors from which such Scheme shall come into force."

"Section 610C - Power to modify Act in relation to electronic records (including the manner and form in which electronic records shall be filed). - (1) The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, direct that any of the provisions of this Act, so far as it is required for the purpose of electronic record specified under section 610B in the electronic form:

- (a) shall not apply, in relation to the matters specified under clauses (a) to (f) of sub-section (1) of section 610B, as may be specified in the notification; or
- (b) shall apply, in relation to the matters specified under clauses (a) to (f) of sub-section (1) of section 610B only with such consequential exceptions, modifications or adoptions as may be specified in the notification.

Provided that no such notification which relates to imposition of fines or other pecuniary penalties or demand or payment of fees or contravention of any of the provisions of this Act or offence shall be issued under this sub-section.

(2) A copy of every notification proposed to be issued under sub-section (1), shall be laid in draft before each House of Parliament, while it is in session, for a total period of thirty days which may be comprised in one session or in two or more successive sessions, and if, before the expiry of the session immediately following the session or the successive sessions aforesaid, both Houses agree in disapproving the issue of the notification or both Houses agree in making any modification in the notification, the notification shall not be issued or, as the case may be, shall be issued only in such modified form as may be agreed upon by both the Houses.'

Section 610D - Providing of services through electronic form

The Central Government may provide such value added services through the electronic form and levy such fees as may be prescribed.

Section 610E - Application of provision of Information Technology Act, 2000

All the provisions of the Information Technology Act, 2000 relating to the electronic records (including the manner and format in which the electronic records shall be filed), insofar as they are not inconsistent with this Act, shall apply, or in relation, to the records in electronic form under section 610B.

Note: A circular has been issued by the Department of Corporate Affairs, Government of India, to the effect that 'Role Check' procedure will be on to accept any e-filing in MCA 21 Portal. Role Check means checking that the document being filed bears signature(s) of persons who are authorized to file and their digital signature certificates are already registered with the portal. The copy of the circular is given hereunder:

Register Digital Signature Certificate

Role check for Indian companies is to be implemented in the MCA application. Role check can be performed only after the authorized signatories have registered their Digital Signature Certificates (DSC) with MCA.

Once the role check is implemented, system shall verify whether the signature on the e-form filed, is of an authorized signatory of the company.

Notice for Practising members of ICSI and ICWAI

- “ Practising members of ICSI may encounter problems in registering their DSC because the numeric part of the membership number is common for Fellow and Associate members. The system is being updated to cater to these cases and the issue would be resolved soon.
- “ Practising members of ICWAI will not be able to register their DSC as the database of members has not been received from ICWAI.

Step by step process for DSC registration by Director, Manager/Secretary and by Practising Professional

Step by step process for Director

Step by step process to be followed for DSC registration of Director's DSC is as under :

1. Click on the 'Register DSC' link available on the MCA portal homepage.
2. On the next screen, click on the 'Director' link on the left hand panel and fill-up your DIN. Please ensure that the DIN is approved and typed correctly.
3. System shall verify that the DIN is valid and approved. If the DIN is filed incorrectly or DIN filled is not approved, system will throw an error message to that effect.
4. Fill-up rest of the particulars and ensure that details filled are as per DIN-1. If the applicant has filed DIN-4, then fill the details as submitted in DIN-4 form.
5. Click on the 'Next' button. The system would verify the details.
6. If the details filed do not match with DIN-1 /DIN-4, as the case may be, for the reason that you do not have your DIN application details, you can retrieve DIN-1 form from 'Get DIN application' link on the MCA portal or in the case of DIN-4, you can get the details from the company in which you are a director.
7. If the details are correct, the system would prompt you to select the DSC.
8. Click on the 'Select Certificate' button to browse and select the certificate. Please ensure that the selected DSC belongs to the applicant, whose particulars are being registered.

- 2.4 Acquiring Shares in another Company [Sec. 395]
- 2.5 Compulsory Amalgamation in public interest [Sec. 396]

2.1 AMALGAMATION/MERGER

"Amalgamation"/"Merger"- Meaning

The term "amalgamation" is not defined in the Companies Act, 1956. The term is defined under the Income-tax Act, 1961 ("IT Act"). The Companies Act makes a reference to "amalgamation" in section 394 while dealing with the powers of the National Company Law Tribunal ("Tribunal") [prior to amendment by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2002 the "Court"]. In addition there is reference to "amalgamation" in sections 396 and 396A dealing with the power of the Central Government to amalgamate companies in public interest and the maintenance of records by the amalgamated company.

In the absence of a definition of the term amalgamation in the Companies Act one will have to look to the meaning the term in the dictionary meaning. "Amalgamation" is to compound, to consolidate or to combine (business interest of firms). The Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. VU(2) para 1461 page 1103, it is said

"Neither 'reconstruction' nor 'amalgamation' has a precise legal meaning. Amalgamation is a blending of two or more existing undertakings into one undertaking, the shareholders of each blending company becoming substantially the shareholders in the company which is to carry on the blended undertakings. There may be amalgamation either by the transfer of two or more undertakings to a new company, or by the transfer of one or more undertakings to an existing company. Strictly, 'amalgamation' does not, it seems, cover the mere acquisition by a company of the share capital of other companies which remain in existence and continue their undertakings, but the context in which the term is used may show that is intended to include such an acquisition."

"A "merger" may be defined as an arrangement whereby the assets of two (a merger may involve more than two companies) companies become vested in, or under the control of, one company (which may or may not be one of the original two companies), which has as its shareholders all, or substantially all, the shareholders of one or both of the merging companies exchanging their shares (either voluntarily or as the result of legal operation) for shares in the other or a third company."

The definition of the term "amalgamation" as contained in section 2(1B) of the IT Act is as follows:

"2(1B) "amalgamation", in relation to companies, means the merger of one or more companies with another company or the merger of two or more companies to form one company (the company or companies which so merge being referred to as the amalgamating company or companies and the company with which they merge or which is formed as a result of the merger, as the amalgamated company) in such a manner that—

- (i) all the property of the amalgamating company or companies immediately before the amalgamation becomes the property of the amalgamated company by virtue of the amalgamation;
- (ii) all the liabilities of the amalgamating company or companies immediately before the amalgamation become the liabilities of the amalgamated company by virtue of the amalgamation;
- (iii) shareholders holding not less than three-fourths in value of the shares in the amalgamating company or companies (other than shares already held therein immediately before the amalgamation by, or by a nominee for, the amalgamated company or its subsidiary) become shareholders of the amalgamated company by virtue of the amalgamation, otherwise than as a result of the acquisition of the property of one company by another company pursuant to the purchase of such property by the other company or as a result of the distribution of such property to the other company after the winding up of the first-mentioned company".

The definition contained in IT Act cannot, it is submitted, be adopted in interpreting the term "amalgamation" under the corporate law, though, by and large, the definition will have the same meaning. The requirements of the IT Act are different than that of the corporate law. The definition in IT Act specifically mentions that amalgamation is a 'merger'.

From the above we may understand by "amalgamation" - one company blending with another company - both being existing companies carrying on business, while by "merger" means two or more companies blend to form a third company and thus 'merge' with each other. In the case of 'amalgamation' only the amalgamating company or companies cease to exist after the blending and the company into which it or they blended (amalgamated) continue to have the same legal existence, while in the case of 'merger' all the merging companies would cease to exist after the blending and only the new company which is formed specifically for the purpose would have legal existence. This is a very minor difference between the two terms. However, in this book the terms 'amalgamation' and 'merger' are used interchangeably to refer to the blending of one or more companies under a scheme for arrangement sanctioned by the Court, until the operational establishment of the National Company Law Tribunal constituted under sub-section (1) of Section 10FB of the Companies Act, 1956 (the "Tribunal").

Objectives of corporate amalgamations

Corporate restructuring through acquisitions and consequent amalgamation or merger is resorted to achieve inter alia the economies of scale - economies of scale in production and marketing. With the spread of shareholding population and the need to tap resources for growth the companies have also to consider increase in shareholders' value by increasing profits and by reducing the costs. Broadly the following are the reasons for companies to seek to grow non-organically:

1. To achieve economies of scale;
2. To reduce the gestation period for new businesses which would be complementary to the existing business of the company;
3. To compete globally;
4. To put to use the liquidity available with the company for achieving growth through diversification;
5. To acquire and maximise the available managerial skill to increase the profitability; and
6. To take advantage of concession given by tax laws.

We deal below with some of the objectives:

1. The combination of two or more companies and their resources - production facilities, marketing outlets, managerial skills, liquidity etc. - could be used to achieve economies of scale and thus improve the profitability and attain synergetic operating economies. It will result in reduction in advertising costs, administration costs and production costs.
2. To develop new businesses will need a gestation period and might amount to 'reinventing the wheel'. If, however, a company can acquire another company which has a profitable business running and merge with it, it is possible to avoid the initial teething trouble period of a new business and venture into new fields with relative ease.
3. With globalisation, unless a company is large in size and capital, it will be very difficult to compete with nations where the cost of production is lower due to economies of scale. In a free competitive world it is necessary to position oneself in such a manner to compete with the best and prove one is better than the best. For this growth shorter route is necessary. This could be achieved only by acquisition and merger of companies in the same line of business and create a niche world market for oneself.
4. Finance is a scarce commodity. Liquidity could be better put to use by acquiring competing and complementary businesses. Sometimes mergers take place by a cash strapped company with a cash rich company and thus take advantage of the cash available with the merged company.
5. It is possible that a company may have expertise and skilled managerial personnel having gained experience and for reasons beyond their control the company may not be able to; compete with another company. In such cases the other company would benefit by merging with the former company and take full advantage of the available managerial skill and thus save costs and improve its own profitability and at the same time the skilled persons are also gainfully employed.
6. Very often tax incentives are given for healthy companies to take over sick companies and thus contribute to the national growth and provide employment to larger section of the public. In this regard mention can be made of various benefits available under the IT Act, 1961, including the benefit "of accumulated loss of a sick company made available for set off against the profits of the merged healthy company.

The case of amalgamation of Mafatlal Fine Spinning and Manufacturing Co. Ltd with Mafatlal Industries Ltd is an illustration on the advantages of an amalgamation. The reasons for amalgamation in that case were:

- (1) The proposed amalgamation will pave the way for better, more efficient and economical control in the running of operations.
- (2) Economies in administrative and management costs will improve the combined profitability;
- (3) The amalgamated company will have the benefit of the combined reserves, manufacturing assets, manpower and cash flows of the two companies. The combined technological, managerial and financial resources are expected to enhance the capability of the amalgamated company to invest in larger and sophisticated projects to ensure rapid growth.
- (4) The amalgamated company will have a strong and large resource base. With a strong resource base, the risk bearing capacity of the amalgamated company will be substantial. Hitherto, with limited resources and capacity, either company had to forgo business opportunities which would otherwise have been profitable to the group. f
- (5) "Exports" have been identified as a "thrust"; area for' both the companies and response in time to customers' needs is considered to be critical in this area of operations. An amalgamated company will be strategically better placed to reduce the response time. Customers' confidence in dealing with such a mega company ensures timely delivery of large orders.

- (6) The amalgamated company will be able to source and absorb new technology and spend on research and development, market surveys, etc., more comprehensively.
- (7) More particularly in the textiles division, with five operating units at the company's disposal, the flexibility in operations will be very much pronounced. The managers will not be inhibited by capacity constraints and will have the freedom of choosing from various options.
- (8) Both the companies have been subject to the pressures of raw material price fluctuations and of adverse market conditions in their respective product mix. Hence, the amalgamation will neutralise the adverse effects of contrary business cycles. The operations of one unit will be complementary to the other and a stable profitability will be achieved.

Types of Amalgamation or mergers

Mergers could be classified into the following types:

- (a) Horizontal mergers;
- (b) Vertical mergers; and
- (c) Conglomerate merger.

Horizontal mergers

A merger is horizontal if it involves the merger of two or more companies which are producing or rendering essentially the same products or services, or products and/or services which compete directly with each other, (e.g. sugar and artificial sweeteners). Horizontal mergers result in eliminating duplication of facilities and operations and broadening the product line, reduction in finance for working capital, widening the market area, and reducing unhealthy competition. Care should be taken while attempting horizontal mergers to avoid impediment to competition and result in monopolistic organisation, as this would attract governmental restraints.

Vertical mergers

A merger is vertical merger where backward integration is possible. In case one or more companies are the suppliers of some of the basic inputs for the final product to be manufactured by a company, then the latter company merges with the former company or companies so that it is assured of supplies and is able to control the quality of production of the supplies and also effect economies and improve the profitability of the final product. A car manufacturer acquires and merges the suppliers of some of the essential parts and product of which parts could be more economically carried out by it. Here the object is to ensure source of supply or/and outlet for products or services and improve efficiency.

Conglomerate merger

A conglomerate merger is a merger where two or more companies carrying different businesses are acquired and merged to diversify the products marketed. The companies may not be related to each other horizontally. In a "pure conglomerate" there are no important common factors between the companies in production, marketing, research and development or technology. Conglomerate merger is quite often the result of desire

- (i) to obtain greater stability of earnings through spreading activities in different industries with different business cycles or to diversify out of static or dying industry;
- (ii) to employ spare resources, whether of capital or management;
- (iii) where there are some common factors, to obtain benefit of economies of scale, particularly to "staff functions (such as personnel, advertising, accounting and financial);
- (iv) defensive diversifications, designed to make the company too large to be likely, to be the object of a take-over, or perhaps to make it a less attractive object;

- (v) to provide an outlet for the ambitions of management, where anti-monopoly laws make further acquisitions (or perhaps even growth) in the company's own field impracticable.

Premerger activity

As stated earlier, unless there are existing companies which, are either under the same control or there exists a holding-subsiary relationship, normally an acquisition or takeover precedes merger. The acquisition could be a private limited company or a listed company or an overseas company. Some of the premerger activities - such as due diligence, memorandum of understanding - are not totally relevant in cases other than when acquisition precedes a merger. However issues like valuation of the companies and preparation of a scheme of amalgamation etc. would be applicable in all cases. With these preliminary observations, we now proceed to consider the premerger requisites:

Formulating business objectives

The first step to be taken by the management of a company which wishes to acquire another company is to assess its own strengths and evolve the strategy for growth. They should express their plan and the strategy to be adopted for growth by increasing the market share, geographical access, new products, synergies arising out of available technologies and financial synergies. Thereafter an action plan should be drawn for implementation of the objectives.

Identifying the target company

The next stage is identifying the target company or companies which would fit the growth plan envisaged. In this exercise the management should evaluate the ideal target company based, inter alia, on the following:

- (a) Will the target company fit into the growth strategy planned?
- (b) Will the acquisition and later merger result in the maximum number of synergies which would contribute to its growth?
- (c) What are the new regions or countries which the company could reach for its existing products through this acquisition?
- (d) Does the company have the resources to acquire and in case it has to raise resources then at what cost and whether such actions will jeopardise the existing business?
- (e) What are the areas of manufacturing or "sale of products which the company considers conflicting with its present business and what would be the cost of discontinuing such products or line of manufacturing?
- (f) What problems, if any, will be faced for integrating the acquired company into the existing organisation?
- (g) What is the time frame for acquisition and merger?

Due diligence

Once the management team zeroes in on the target company, it should carry out preliminary due diligence work - commercial due diligence from the following sources:

- (i) Published information sources
 - (a) News papers;
 - (b) Commercial databases if available;
 - (c) General trade directories;
 - (d) Buyers' guides;
 - (e) Market reports;

- (f) Trade magazines;
- (g) Company journals and brochures;
- (h) The internet.
- (ii) Market information sources
 - (a) Gathering intelligence through the market;
 - (b) If in competitive business gathering information from sources within the Target; ;
 - (c) Interview with market experts;
 - (d) From suppliers;
 - (e) From customers
- (iii) Internal source
 - (a) Employees who have worked previously with the Target;
 - (b) Sometimes through persons employed with the Target for the specific purpose of gathering information
 - (c) Expertise available within the organisation.

Valuation

Based on the above due diligence an estimate of the valuation of the company should be arrived at so that an offer could be made to the target company's promoters/holders of controlling interest in the said target company. If the valuations indicate that the objectives stated earlier could be achieved in a cost effective manner, the next move should be made. At this stage no need to arrive at swap ratio or the exchange ratio on merger of the companies, though this aspect should also be kept in mind.

Memorandum of Understanding

If the earlier actions satisfy the management that the company in question is the right option to be the target company, then approaches should be made to the promoters and or controlling shareholders to acquire their interest. In this regard if the target company's management also concurs for acquisition and later merger, then suitable Memorandum of Understanding should be signed, followed by a confidentiality agreement to carry out detailed due diligence on the following matters:

Financial due diligence

- (i) Audited financial accounts;
- (ii) Un audited information supplied by the seller or given in press publications;
- (iii) Information with stock exchanges;
- (iv) In the case of acquisition through agreement recent management accounts generated.

Legal due diligence

- (v) Memorandum and Articles of Association;
- (vi) Prospectus filed at the time raising funds from public;
- (vii) Information with the Stock Exchanges;
- (viii) Documents filed with Registrar of Companies including registration of charges;
- (ix) Documents with Registrar relating to immovable properties;
- (x) In the case of acquisition through agreement
 - 1) all agreements, guarantees and indemnities issued,

- 2) title deeds to property,
- 3) covenants,
- 4) insurance cover,
- 5) taxation records,
- 6) health and safety measures,
- 7) environmental law compliance,
- 8) compliance with other regulations,
- 9) pending litigation,
- 10) banking facilities and borrowing powers, lending agreements,
- 11) product liability,
- 12) any non-compliance with any regulations or agreements,
- 13) compliance with special industry legislations,
- 14) labour agreements, labour compensations and benefit schemes etc.

Powers of liquidator to sell whole or part of business or property of a company in liquidation

We may now consider the provisions of section 494 of Companies Act 1956, which could, in our view, appear to facilitate amalgamation through purchase under the powers vested with the liquidator appointed by the members by a resolution for voluntary winding up of a company. The section reads as follows:

Sec.494: Power of liquidator to accept shares, etc., as consideration for sale of property of company:-

(1) Where —

- (a) a company (in this section called “the transferor company”) is proposed to be, or is in course of being, wound up altogether voluntarily; and
- (b) the whole or any part of its business or property is proposed to be transferred or sold to another company, whether a company within the meaning of this Act or not (in this section called “the transferee company”);

the liquidator of the transferor company may, with the sanction of a special resolution of that company conferring on the liquidator either a general authority or an authority in respect of any particular arrangement,—

- (i) receive, by way of compensation or part compensation for the transfer or sale, shares, policies, or other like interests in the : transferee company, for distribution among the members of the transferor company; or
 - (ii) enter into any other arrangement whereby the members of the transferor company may, in lieu of receiving cash, shares, policies, or other like interests or in addition thereto, participate in the profits of, or receive any other benefit from, the transferee company.
- (2) Any sale or arrangement in pursuance of this section shall be binding on the members of the transferor company.
- (3) If any member of the transfer or company who did not vote in favour of the special resolution expresses his dissent therefrom in writing addressed to the liquidator, and left at the registered office of the company within seven days after the passing of the resolution, he may require the liquidator either—
- (a) to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect; or

- (b) to purchase his interest at a price to be determined by agreement or by arbitration in the manner provided by this section.
- (4) If the liquidator elects to purchase the member's interest, the ' purchase money shall be paid before the company is dissolved, and be raised by the liquidator in such manner as may be determined by special resolution.
- (5) A special resolution shall not be invalid for the purposes of this section by reason only that it is passed before or concurrently with a resolution for voluntary winding up or for appointment liquidators; but if an order is made within a year for winding up the company by or subject to the supervision of the Court, the special resolution shall not be valid unless it is sanctioned by the Court.
- (6) The provisions of the Arbitration Act, 1940 [X of 1940), other than those restricting the application of that Act in respect of the subject matter of the arbitration, shall apply to all arbitrations in pursuance of this section.

To summarise, the provisions of section 494 provides for exercise of the following powers by the liquidator:

- (a) power to transfer or sell the whole or part of the business or property of the company to another company;
- (b) power to receive by way of compensation for such transfer or sale shares, policies and other like interest of the transferee company for distribution among the members of the company; and
- (c) power to settle, by agreement or through arbitration, with dissentient members by purchasing, their shares at a price to be acceptable to such members.

The powers of the liquidator are as per the special resolution passed by the members. The liquidator could, as we had seen earlier, make an application, in terms of section 394, to the Court/Tribunal to seek the Court/Tribunal's approval for the transfer of the whole or part of the business or property.

There is no power with the liquidator to transfer liabilities similar to the powers of the Court/Tribunal under section 394, referred to earlier. Though the power to transfer liabilities could be achieved by the liquidator through holding a meeting of the creditors (which he is bound to do under section 495 if he cannot settle their dues). Further in terms of powers vested with the liquidator under section 546, the liquidator could reach a compromise or arrangement, but such action is subject to the control of the Court. In any case if the creditors do not agree to the manner of settlement of their dues either by way of transfer to the transferee company or otherwise, within one year of the passing of the resolution by the members they could approach the Court/Tribunal and once they approach the Court/Tribunal the special resolution will not be valid unless the Court approves it. In this sense, the power of the liquidator to transfer or sell the whole or part of the business or property is not absolute. Hence care has to be taken in exercise of such powers.

From the above it would be seen that the powers of the liquidator under a voluntary liquidation arise as per the terms of the special resolution passed by the members at a general meeting called by the members or by the liquidator as against the meeting to be called by the Court/Tribunal under section 391(1) of Companies Act 1956; and that these powers are not complete inasmuch as the special resolution could be invalidated by any dissenting persons approaching the Court/Tribunal. As against this the powers of the Court/Tribunal, rightly so, are very wide and covers all eventualities in case of amalgamation.

Powers of liquidator to arrive at a compromise or arrangement with the creditors Similar powers as given in section 494 could be exercised by the liquidator if he was appointed by the creditors. In this connection, refer to provisions of section 507 of Companies Act 1956. This section reads as follows:

Sec.507: Application of section 494 to a creditor's voluntary winding up

The provisions of section 494 shall apply in the case of a creditor's voluntary winding up as in the case of a members' voluntary winding up, with the modification that the powers of the liquidator under that section shall not be exercised except with the sanction either of the Court or of the committee of inspection.

The powers of compromise or arrangement with creditors are as provided by section 546, which reads as follows:

Sec. 546: Liquidator to exercise certain powers subject to sanction —

(1) The liquidator may —

- (a) with the sanction of the Court, when the company is being wound up by or subject to the supervision of the Court; and
- (b) with the sanction of a special resolution of the company, in the case of a voluntary winding up,—
 - (i) pay any classes of creditors in full;
 - (ii) make any compromise or arrangement with creditors or persons claiming to be creditors, or having or alleging themselves to have any claim, present or future, certain or contingent, ascertained or sounding only in damages, against the company, or whereby the company may be rendered liable; or
 - (iii) compromise any call or liability to call, debt, and liability capable of resulting in a debt, and any claim, present or future, certain or contingent, ascertained or sounding only in damages, subsisting or alleged to subsist between the company and a contributor or alleged contributory or other debtor or person apprehending liability to the company, and all questions in any way relating to affecting the assets or liabilities or the winding up of the company, on such terms as may be agreed, and take any security for the discharge of any such call, debt, liability or claim, and give a complete discharge in respect thereof.
- (2) In the case of a voluntary winding up, the exercise by the liquidator of the powers conferred by sub-section {1} shall be subject to the control of the Court.
- (3) Any creditor or contributory may apply to the Court with respect to any exercise or proposed exercise of any such power.

Need to have prior approval of the Commissioner of Income-tax before effecting the transfer or sale

It should be noted that when amalgamation by way of purchase is attempted through voluntary liquidation as per section 494 or 507 of Companies Act 1956, there is requirement to comply with provisions of section 178 of IT Act, 1961. This section reads as follows:

Sec.178: Company in liquidation —

(1) Every person —

- (a) who is the liquidator of any company which is being wound up, whether under the orders of a court or otherwise; or
- (b) who has been appointed the receiver of any assets of a company, (hereinafter referred to as the liquidator) shall within thirty days after he has become such liquidator, give notice of his appointment as such to the Assessing Officer who is entitled to assess the income of the company.
- (2) The Assessing Officer shall, after making such enquiries or calling for such information as he may deem fit, notify to the liquidator within three months from the date on which he receives notice of the appointment of the liquidator the amount which, in the opinion of the Assessing Officer, would be sufficient to provide for any tax which is then, or is likely thereafter to become, payable by the company.

(3) The liquidator —

- (a) shall not, without the leave of the Chief Commissioner or Commissioner, part with any of the assets of the company or the properties in his hands until he has been notified by the Assessing Officer under sub-section (2); and
- (b) on being so notified, shall set aside an amount equal to the amount notified and, until he so sets aside such amount, shall not part with any of the assets of the company or the properties in his hands:

Provided that nothing contained in this sub-section shall debar the liquidator from parting with such assets or properties for the purpose of the payment of the tax payable by the company or for making any payment to secured creditors whose debts are entitled under law to priority of payment over debts due to Government on the date of liquidation or for meeting such costs and expenses of the winding up of the company as are in the opinion of the Chief Commissioner or Commissioner reasonable.

- (4) If the liquidator fails to give the notice in accordance with subsection (1) or fails to set aside the amount as required by subsection (3) or parts with any of the assets of the company or the properties in his hands in contravention of the provisions of that sub-section, he shall be personally liable for the payment of the tax which the company would be liable to pay:

Provided that if the amount of any tax payable by the company is notified under sub-section (2), the personal liability of the liquidator under this sub-section shall be to the extent of such amount.

- (5) Where there are more liquidators than one, the obligations and liabilities attached to the liquidator under this section shall attach to all the liquidators jointly and severally.
- (6) The provisions of this section shall have effect notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any other law for the time being in force.

Thus no part of the assets could be parted without getting approval of the Commissioner of Income-tax. Hence any agreement for transfer or sale of the whole or part of the business or property of the company in liquidation requires prior approval of the tax department.

Is amalgamation through voluntary winding up covered by definition of “amalgamation” under the Income-tax Act, 1961

The definition treats both amalgamation of one company with another or more than one company forming a new company as amalgamation so long as, by virtue of the amalgamation, all the ‘property’ and all the ‘liabilities’ of the transferor company/ies become the ‘property’ or ‘liability’ of the transferee company and at least 75% of the members of the transferor company/ies are also members of the transferee company. But the section seems to specifically exclude amalgamation through purchase of property as can be seen from the use of the following words:

“otherwise than as a result of the acquisition of the property of one company by another company pursuant to the purchase of such property by the other company or as a result of distribution of such property to the other company after the winding up of the first mentioned company”.

It appears by the term ‘property’ in the above definition would cover the business and both tangible and intangible assets. If that interpretation is adopted then amalgamation through purchase may not be treated as amalgamation under the Income-tax Act, 1961, though it could be treated as amalgamation under the Companies Act, 1956. This is a grey area. In fact the Chokshi Committee had recommended that the definition under the Income-tax Act should cover all amalgamations under section 394 of the Companies Act 1956. This was not accepted. Further, whether or not the words “for distribution among the members of the transferor company” used in section 494 of Companies Act 1956 could disentitle the benefits of the tax concession to both companies amalgamating and amalgamated pursuant to section 494/507, unless such amalgamation is approved under section 394 of the Companies Act 1956, is highly debatable.

Merger of an Indian company with a foreign company, whether a holding company or not, is possible under section 494.

The Competition Act, 2002 (12 of 2003)

The preamble to the Competition Act states that it has been enacted “to provide, keeping in view of the economic development of the country, for the establishment of a Commission to prevent practices having adverse effect on competition, to promote and sustain competition in markets, to protect the interests of consumers and to ensure freedom of trade carried on by other participants in markets, in India, and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto.”

Compared to this its predecessor, if it can be called so, the Monopolies and Restrictive Trade Practices Act, 1969 stated in its preamble

“An Act to provide that the operation of the economic system does not result in the concentration of economic power to the common detriment, for the control of monopolistic and restrictive trade practices and for matter connected therewith or incidental thereto.”

The US and EU laws require prior approval for mergers above certain thresholds, they also impose a timeliness requirement on the relevant authority, with delays being subject to limitation. There is no pre-notification requirement in the existing U.K. law.

We have seen one of the legitimate means by which a company can grow is by amalgamation or merging with other companies. This process is generally a part of the natural process of industrial evolution and restructuring as new entity and growth. If a merger of company has a potential for reducing competition it is a matter of public concern.

Keeping these in mind the Competition Act contains provisions relating to:

- (1) prohibition of agreements which impair competition;
- (2) prohibition of abuse of dominant position; and
- (3) regulation of combination.

Regulation of combinations is discussed hereunder as it relates to amalgamation and mergers of companies:

Regulation of combinations [Section 6]

- (1) No person or enterprise shall enter into a combination which causes or is likely to cause an appreciable adverse effect on competition within the relevant market in India and such a combination shall be void.
- (2) Subject to the provisions contained in sub-section (1), any person or enterprise, who or which proposes to enter into a combination, [shall] give notice to the Commission, in the form as may be specified, and the fee which may be determined, by regulations, disclosing the details of the proposed combination, within [thirty days] of
 - (a) approval of the proposal relating to merger or amalgamation, referred to in clause (c) of section 5, by the board of directors of the enterprises concerned with such merger or amalgamation, as the case may be;
 - (b) execution of any agreement or other document for acquisition referred to in clause (a) of section 5 or acquiring of control referred to in clause (b) of that section.
- (2A) No combination shall come into effect until two hundred and ten days have passed from the day on which the notice has been given to the Commission under sub-section (2) or the Commission has passed orders under section 31, whichever is earlier.
- (3) The Commission shall, after receipt of notice under sub-section (2), deal with such notice in accordance with the provisions contained in sections 29, 30 and 31.

- (4) The provisions of this section shall not apply to share subscription or financing facility or any acquisition, by a public financial institution, foreign institutional investor, bank or venture capital fund, pursuant to any covenant of a loan agreement or investment agreement.
- (5) The public financial institution, foreign institutional investor, bank or venture capital fund, referred to in sub-section (4), shall, within seven days from the date of the acquisition, file, in the form as may be specified by regulations, with the Commission the details of the acquisition including the details of control, the circumstances for exercise of such control and the consequences of default arising out of such loan agreement or investment agreement, as the case may be.

Explanation.-For the purposes of this section, the expression

- (a) "foreign institutional investor" has the same meaning as assigned to it in clause (a) of the Explanation to section 115AD of the Income-tax Act, 1961;
- (b) "Venture capital fund" has the same meaning as assigned to it in clause (b) of the Explanation to clause (23 FB) of section 10 of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Meaning of combination

For this purpose the meaning of combination is to be found in section 5 of the Competition Act. The relevant provisions of section 5 of the Competition Act read as follows:

Combination [Section 5]

The acquisition of one or more enterprises by one or more persons or merger or amalgamation of enterprises shall be a combination of such enterprises and persons or enterprises, if

 - (B) in India or outside India, in aggregate, the assets of the value of more than two billion US dollars, including at least rupees five hundred crores in India, or turnover more than six billion US dollars, including at least rupees fifteen hundred crores in India; or]
- (b) acquiring of control by a person over an enterprise when such person has already direct or indirect control over another enterprise engaged in production, distribution or trading of a similar or identical or substitutable goods or provision of a similar or identical or substitutable service, if
 - (i) the enterprise over which control has been acquired along with the enterprise over which the acquirer already has direct or indirect control jointly have,

- (A) either in India, the assets of the value of more than rupees one thousand crores or turnover more than rupees three thousand crores; or
- (B) in India or outside India, in aggregate, the assets of the value of more than five hundred million US dollars, including at least rupees five hundred crores in India, or turnover more than fifteen hundred million US dollars, including at least rupees fifteen hundred crores in India; or]
- (ii) the group, to which enterprise whose control has been acquired, or is being acquired, would belong after the acquisition, jointly have or would jointly have,
 - (A) either in India, the assets of the value of more than rupees four thousand crores or turnover more than rupees twelve thousand crores; or
 - (B) in India or outside India, in aggregate, the assets of the value of more than two billion US dollars, including at least rupees five hundred crores in India, or turnover more than six billion US dollars, including at least rupees fifteen hundred crores in India; or
- (c) any merger or amalgamation in which-
 - (i) the enterprise remaining after merger or the enterprise created as a result of the amalgamation, as the case may be, have,
 - (A) either in India, the assets of the value of more than rupees one thousand crores or turnover more than rupees three thousand crores; or
 - (B) in India or outside India, in aggregate, the assets of the value of more than five hundred million US dollars, including at least rupees five hundred crores in India, or turnover more than fifteen hundred million US dollars, including at least rupees fifteen hundred crores in India; or
 - (ii) the group, to which the enterprise remaining after the merger or the enterprise created as a result of the amalgamation, would belong after the merger or the amalgamation, as the case may be, have or would have,
 - (A) either in India, the assets of the value of more than rupees four thousand crores or turnover more than rupees twelve thousand crores; or
 - (B) in India or outside India, in aggregate, the assets of the value of more than two billion US dollars, including at least rupees five hundred crores in India, or turnover more than six billion US dollars, including at least rupees fifteen hundred crores in India;

Explanation. – For the purposes of this section,-

- (a) “control” includes controlling the affairs or management by –
 - (i) one or more enterprises, either jointly or singly, over another enterprise or group;
 - (ii) one or more groups, either jointly or singly, over another group or enterprise;
- (b) “group” means two or more enterprises which, directly or indirectly, are in a position to-
 - (i) exercise twenty-six per cent. or more of the voting rights in the other enterprise; or
 - (ii) appoint more than fifty per cent. of the members of the board of directors in the other enterprise; or
 - (iii) control the management or affairs of the other enterprise;
- (c) the value of assets shall be determined by taking the book value of the assets as shown, in the audited books of account of the enterprise, in the financial year immediately preceding the financial year in which the date of proposed merger falls, as reduced by any depreciation, and the value of assets shall include the brand value, value of goodwill, or value of copyright, patent, permitted use, collective mark, registered proprietor, registered trade mark, registered user, homonymous geographical indication, geographical indications, design or layout design or similar other commercial rights, if any, referred to in sub-section (5) of section 3.

Meaning of 'enterprise'

- (h) "enterprise" means a person or a department of the Government, who or which is, or has been, engaged in any activity, relating to the production, storage, supply, distribution, acquisition or control of articles or goods, or the provision of services, of any kind, or in investment, or in the business of acquiring, holding, underwriting or dealing with shares, debentures or other securities of any other body corporate, either directly or through one or more of its units or divisions or subsidiaries, whether such unit or division or subsidiary is located at the same place where the enterprise is located or at a different place or at different places, but does not include any activity of the Government relatable to the sovereign functions of the Government including all activities carried on by the departments of the Central Government dealing with atomic energy, currency, defence and space.

Explanation.- For the purposes of this clause, -

- (a) "activity" includes profession or occupation;
- (b) "article" includes a new article and "service" includes a new service; (c) "unit" or "division", in relation to an enterprise, includes
- (i) a plant or factory established for the production, storage, supply, distribution, acquisition or control of any article or goods;
- (ii) any branch or office established for the provision of any service;

Consequent to the above, if an amalgamation proposal comes within the purview of the prohibited combination viz. amalgamation resulting in a book asset value of the transferee company to be over ₹ 1,000 crores or the turnover of the transferee company after the amalgamation is likely to exceed ₹ 3,000 crores in case of the group to which the transferee company belongs would have an asset value of ₹ 4,000 crores or a turnover of ₹ 12,000 crores, the transferee company concerned must at its option send the proposal to the Competition Commission.

The Commission, if it is prima facie of the opinion that the combination has, or is likely to have, an appreciable adverse effect on competition, it shall, within seven working days from the date of receipt of the response of the parties to the combination, [or the receipt of the report from Director General called under sub section (1A), whichever is later] direct the parties to the said combination to publish details of the combination within ten working days of such direction, in such manner, as it thinks appropriate, for bringing the combination to the knowledge or information of the public and persons affected or likely to be affected by such combination. The Commission may invite any person or member of the public, affected or likely to be affected by the said combination, to file his written objections, if any, before the Commission within fifteen working days from the date on which the details of the combination were published under sub-section (2). The Commission may, within fifteen working days from the expiry of the period specified in sub-section (3), call for such additional or other information as it may deem fit from the parties to the said combination. The additional or other information called for by the Commission shall be furnished by the parties referred to in sub-section (4) within fifteen days from the expiry of the period specified in sub-section (4). After receipt of all information and within a period of fortyfive working days from the expiry of the period specified in sub-section (5), the Commission shall proceed to deal with the case in accordance with the provisions contained in section 31. If the Commission does not, on the expiry of a period of [two hundred and ten days from the date of notice given to the Commission under sub-section (2) of section 6], pass an order or issue direction in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) or sub-section (7), the combination shall be deemed to have been approved by the Commission.

Explanation.-For the purposes of determining the period of two hundred and ten] days specified in this sub-section, the period of thirty working days specified in sub-section (6) and a further period of thirty working days specified in sub-section (8) shall be excluded. Where any extension of time is sought by the parties to the combination, the period of ninety working days shall be reckoned after deducting the extended time granted at the request of the parties.

It is also provided that the Competition Commission could suggest modification of the scheme so as to enable competition and if the transferee company complies with such modification then it would give its approval.

Any combination violative of the Competition Act, cannot be given effect to. If any person does not abide by the directions of the Commission, penalties will be levied under the said Act. Hence care should be taken while considering amalgamation.

The Competition (Amendment) Act, 2007 made a few significant modifications. In the context of mergers and amalgamation, it has inserted the need to have certain amount of turnover in India in addition to the amount of turnover outside India as a prerequisite for application of the Competition Act. The more significant change is the insertion of sub-section (2A) to section 6 providing that all combinations will need prior approval of the Competition Commission to be effective in so far as India is concerned.

Income-tax Act, 1961

One of the important aspects which is required to be considered in deciding about amalgamation of two companies is the effect of such amalgamation on the transferor company and the transferee company under the various provisions of the Income-tax Act. We have referred to various factors which may influence the decision for amalgamation and one of them is the concessions given or treatment meted out under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Definition of Amalgamation

According to section 2(1B) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 (hereinafter referred to as the Act), amalgamation in relation to companies means the merger of one or more companies with another company or the merger of two or more companies to form one company (the company or companies which so merge being referred to as the amalgamating company or companies and the company with which they merge or which is formed as a result of the merger, as the amalgamated company) in such a manner that

1. All the property of the amalgamating company or companies immediately before the amalgamation becomes the property of the amalgamated company by virtue of amalgamation

2. All the liabilities of the amalgamating company or companies immediately before the amalgamation become the liabilities of the amalgamated company by virtue of amalgamation
3. Shareholders holding not less than $\frac{3}{4}$ th in value of the shares in amalgamating company or companies (other than shares held therein immediately before the amalgamation or by a nominee for the amalgamated company or its subsidiary) become shareholders of the amalgamated company by virtue of the amalgamation, otherwise than as a result of the acquisition of the property of one company by another company pursuant to the purchase of such property by the other company or as a result of distribution of such property to the other company after the winding up of first mentioned company.

With effect from April 1, 2000 (i.e., for the assessment year 2000-2001 and subsequent years) it is sufficient if shareholders holding three-fourths in value of the shares in the amalgamating company become shareholders of the amalgamated company. Prior to this not less than nine-tenths in value of the shares in the amalgamating company or companies (other than shares already held therein immediately before the amalgamation by, or by a nominee for, the „ amalgamated company or its subsidiary) become shareholders of the amalgamated company by virtue of the amalgamation.

It should be noted that the requirement is not all the shareholders of the amalgamating company must be shareholders of the amalgamated company, but it is only $\frac{3}{4}$ th of the value of shares in the amalgamating company should have been shareholders of the amalgamated company. If 75% of the shares in amalgamating company is held by one person and he is one among 100 shareholders and thus form only 1% of the number of shareholders, yet it is possible to be covered under the definition of 'amalgamation' under IT Act.

It would appear that while the ITA 1961 talk of shareholders of amalgamating company having not less than $\frac{3}{4}$ th in value of shares should become shareholders of the amalgamated company for getting the benefit of tax laws, the Accounting Standard as per Section 211(3A) of the CA 1956 talk of 'not less than 90%'. All mergers where the requirement of 90% is not satisfied will be treated as 'merger by way of purchase'. Hence it is possible that there could be a merger where more than 75% but less than 90% of the shareholders of the transferor company become shareholders of the transferee company. Whether such a merger would be treated as merger for tax purposes is not clear, specially as such merger is treated as merger by way of purchase under the Accounting Standards.

Tax Concessions

If any amalgamation takes place within the meaning of section 2(1B) of the Act, the following tax concession shall be available

1. Tax concession to amalgamating company.
2. Tax concession to shareholders of the amalgamating company.
3. Tax concession to amalgamated company.

(1) Tax Concession to Amalgamating company: Capital Gains tax not attracted : According to section 47(vi) where there is a transfer of any capital asset in the scheme of amalgamation, by an amalgamating company to the amalgamated company, such transfer will not be regarded as a transfer for the purpose of capital gain provided the amalgamated company, to whom such assets have been transferred, is an Indian company

(2) Tax concessions to the shareholders of an amalgamating company section 47(vii):

Where as shareholder of an amalgamating company transfers his shares, in a scheme or amalgamation, such transaction will not be regarded as a transfer for capital gain purposes, if following conditions are satisfied:

- The transfer of shares is made in consideration of the allotment to him of any share or shares in the amalgamated company and

- The amalgamated company is an Indian company

Cost of acquisition such shares of the amalgamated company are later on transferred. The cost of acquisition of such shares of the amalgamated company shall be the cost of acquisition of the shares in the amalgamating company. Further, for computing the period of holding of such shares, the period for which such shares were held in the amalgamating company shall also be included.

(3) Tax concessions to the amalgamated company: The amalgamated company shall be eligible for tax concessions only if the following two conditions are satisfied:

- The amalgamation satisfies all the three conditions laid down in section 2(1B) and
- The amalgamated company is an Indian company

If the above conditions are satisfied, the amalgamated company shall be eligible for the following tax concessions:

(a) Expenditure on Scientific Research [Section 35(5)]: Where an amalgamating company transfers any asset represented by capital expenditure on scientific research to the amalgamated Indian company in a scheme of amalgamation, the provisions of section 35 which were applicable to the amalgamating company shall become applicable to the amalgamated company consequently.

- Unabsorbed capital expenditure on scientific research of the amalgamating company will be allowed to be carried forward and set off in the hands of the amalgamated company.
- If such asset ceases to be used in a previous year for scientific research related to the business of the amalgamated company and is sold by the amalgamated company without having been used for other purposes, the sales price, to the extent of the cost of the asset, shall be treated as business income of the amalgamated company. The excess of the sale price over the cost of the asset shall be subject to the provisions of the capital gains.

(b) Expenditure on acquisition of patent rights or copy rights [Section 35A(6)]: Where the patent or copyrights acquired by the amalgamating company is transferred to any amalgamated Indian company, the provisions of section 35A which were applicable to the amalgamating company shall become applicable in the same manner to the amalgamated company consequently.

- The expenditure on patents/copyrights not yet written off shall be allowed to the amalgamated company in the same number or balance instalments.
- Where such rights are later on sold by the amalgamated company, the treatment of the deficiency/surplus will be the same as would have been in the case of the amalgamating company.

However, if such expenditure is incurred by the amalgamating company after 31-3-1998, deduction under section 35A is not allowed, as such expenditure will be eligible for depreciation as an intangible asset. In this case, provisions of depreciation shall apply.

(c) Expenditure of know-how [Section 35AB(3)]: With effect from assessment year 2000-01, where there is a transfer of an undertaking under a scheme of amalgamation, the amalgamated company shall be entitled to claim deduction under section 35AB in respect of such undertaking to the same extent and in respect of the residual period as it would have been allowable to the amalgamating company, had amalgamation not taken place.

However, if such expenditure is incurred by the amalgamating company after 31-3-1998, deduction under section 35AB is not allowed, as such expenditure will be eligible for depreciation as an intangible asset. In this case, provisions of depreciation shall apply.

(d) Expenditure for obtaining licence to operate telecommunication services [Section 35ABB(6)]

Where in a scheme of amalgamation, the amalgamating company sells or otherwise transfers its licence to the amalgamated company (Being an Indian Company), the provisions of Sec.35ABB which were applicable to the amalgamating company shall become applicable in the same manner to the amalgamated company, consequently:

- The expenditure on acquisition on licence , not yet written off, shall be allowed to the amalgamated company in the same number of balance instalments.
- Where such licence is sold by the amalgamated company, the treatment of the deficiency/surplus will be same as would have been in the case of amalgamating company.

(e) Treatment of preliminary expenses [Section 35D(5)]: Where an amalgamating company merges in a scheme of amalgamation with the amalgamated company, the amount of preliminary expenses of the amalgamating company, which are not yet written off, shall be allowed as deduction to the amalgamated company in the same manner as would have been allowed to the amalgamating company.

(f) Amortisation of expenditure in case of amalgamation [Section 35DD]: Where an assessee, being an Indian company, incurs any expenditure, on or after the 1st day of April, 1999, wholly and exclusively for the purposes of amalgamation or demerger of an undertaking, the assessee shall be allowed a deduction of an amount equal to one-fifth of such expenditure for each of the five successive previous years beginning with the previous year in which the amalgamation or demerger takes place.

(g) Deduction for expenditure on prospecting, etc., for certain minerals [Section 35E]: Where an undertaking entitled to deduction on expenditure on prospecting is transferred in a scheme of amalgamation, no further deduction will be allowed to the amalgamating company, but the amalgamated company will enjoy the benefits as if the amalgamation had not taken place.

(h) Treatment of capital expenditure on family planning [Section 36(1)(ix)]: Where the asset representing the capital expenditure on family planning is transferred by the amalgamating company to the Indian amalgamated company, in a scheme of amalgamation, the provisions of section 36(a)(ix) to the amalgamating company shall become applicable in the same manner, the amalgamated company. Consequently

- Such transfer shall not be regarded as transfer by the amalgamating company
- The capital expenditure on family planning not yet written off shall be allowable to the amalgamated company in the same number of balance instalments
- Where such assets are sold by amalgamated company, the treatment of the deficiency/surplus will be same as would have been in the case of amalgamating company

(i) Treatment of bad debts [Section 36(1)(vii)]: Where due to amalgamation, the debts of amalgamating company have been taken over by the amalgamated company and subsequently such debt or part of the debt becomes bad, such bad debt will be allowed a deduction to the amalgamated company

(j) Special provision for deduction in case of business for prospecting, etc., for mineral oil [Section 42]: In the business of prospecting for mineral oil, the balance of expenditure disallowed in the hands of the amalgamating company will not be allowed to the amalgamated company, nor will the excess received on transfer subjected to tax.

(k) Deduction available under [Section 80-1A or 801B]: Where an undertaking which is entitled to deduction under section 801A/80-1B is transferred in the scheme of amalgamation before the expiry of the period of deduction under section 80-1A or 80-1B then

- No deduction under section 80-1A or 80-1B shall be available to the amalgamating company for the previous year in which amalgamation takes place and
- The provisions of section 80-1A or 80-1B shall apply to the amalgamated company in such manner in which they would have applied to the amalgamating company

(I) Carry forward and set off of business losses and unabsorbed depreciation of the amalgamating company: Under the new provisions of Section 72A of the Act, the amalgamated company is entitled to carry forward the unabsorbed depreciation and brought forward loss of the amalgamating company provided the following conditions are fulfilled

- The amalgamation should be of a company owning an industrial undertaking or ship
 - The amalgamated company holds at least 3/4th of the book value of fixed assets of the amalgamating company for a continuous period of 5 years from the date of amalgamation
 - The amalgamated company continues the business of the amalgamating company for period of 5 years from the date of amalgamation
- The amalgamated company fulfills such other conditions, as may be prescribed to ensure that revival of the business of the amalgamating company or to ensure that the amalgamation is for genuine business purposes

It may be noted that in case of amalgamation, the amalgamated company gets a fresh lease of 8 years to carry forward and set off the brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation for the amalgamating company.

Amalgamation of Shipping Companies under Tonnage Tax scheme

The Finance Bill, 2004, has for the first time proposes to introduce certain special provisions relating to income of shipping companies. In this regard, the Bill proposes to insert a new Chapter XII-G, consisting of sections 115V to 115VZC. It is proposed that in case of a company having income from the business of operating qualifying ships, the company is given the option to either be subject to tax on computation of income under sections 28 to 43G or be subject to tax on a notional income as given in section 115VG based on the tonnage of ships operated during the financial year. For this purpose, the company should make an application under section 115VP and get its name approved to be covered under the tonnage tax scheme. Such option will be valid for a period of ten years. The company could opt out of the scheme by filing a declaration seeking to be assessed to tax in the normal way. Such company could again opt for the scheme within a year from the end of the year when the option ceases to have effect.

A qualifying company inter alia must be a company formed and registered under the Companies Act, 1956, with its main object the carrying on of business of operating qualifying ships, having its place of effective management in India, and owning at least one qualifying ship. Qualifying ship has been given a very wide meaning and apart from being required to be registered under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958, it includes a sea going ship or vessel, fishing vessels, factory ships, pleasure crafts, harbour and river ferries, off-shore installations, and dredgers. Thus only an Indian registered company with Indian flag vessels alone could be covered under this special provision,

We are not concerned with the manner in which such companies would be liable to pay tax, but are concerned with the effect in case of amalgamation of one of opted companies or amalgamation with an opted company.

Section 115VY, as per the said Bill, reads as follows:

115VY Where there has been an amalgamation of a company with another company or companies, then, subject to the other provisions of this section, the provisions relating to the tonnage tax scheme shall, as far as may be, apply to the amalgamated company if it is a qualifying company;

Provided that where the amalgamated company is not a tonnage tax company, it shall exercise an option for tonnage tax scheme under sub-section (1) of section 115VP within three months from the date of the approval of the scheme of amalgamation;

Provided further that where the amalgamating companies are tonnage tax companies, the provisions of this Chapter shall, as far as may be, apply to the amalgamated company for such period as the option for tonnage tax scheme which has the longest unexpired period continues to be in force;

Provided also that where one of the amalgamating companies is a qualifying company as on the 1st day of October, 2004 and which has not exercised the option for tonnage tax scheme within the initial period, the provisions of this Chapter shall not apply to the amalgamated company and the income of the amalgamated company from the business of operating qualifying ships shall be computed in accordance- with the other provisions of this Act.

Only if the amalgamating company is a qualifying company and has opted to the tonnage tax scheme, the benefit would be available to the amalgamated company,

Excise law implications on amalgamation of companies

Central Excise duty is an indirect tax levied on goods manufactured. The taxable event under the Central Excise law is manufacture and the liability of Central Excise duty arises as soon as the goods are manufactured. The duty is now called the 'Central Value Added Tax (CENVAT)'.

Generally every manufacturer is required to discharge his CENVAT liability in respect of clearances made during the month, by the 5th of the following month: The present system allows instant CENVAT Credit to be taken of duties paid on inputs and capital goods received in a factory for the manufacture of any dutiable final product. This credit can be utilised to pay Excise duty on any final product.

Rule 2(c) of the Central Excise Rules, 2002, defines "assessee" means any person who is liable for payment of duty assessed or a producer or manufacturer of excisable goods or a registered person of a private warehouse in which excisable goods are stored and includes an authorized agent of such person. Thus in case of a company which is carrying on an industrial undertaking the company is the assessee - or the tax payer who will be entitled to the credit of CENVAT.

Under Rule 9(1) it is provided that every person, who produces, manufactures, carries on trade, holds private store-room or warehouse or otherwise uses excisable goods, shall get registered:

Where any goods on which duty had been paid at the time of removal thereof are brought to any factory for being re-made, refined, re-conditioned or for any other reason, the assessee shall state the particulars of such receipt in his records and shall be entitled to take CENVAT credit of the duty paid as if such goods are received as inputs under the CENVAT Credit Rules, 2002 and utilise this credit according to the said rules,

Rule 3 CENVAT credit Rules 2002 provides that the manufacturer or producer of final products shall be allowed to take CENVAT credit of the duty paid on inputs lying in stock or in process or inputs contained in the final products lying in stock on the date on which any goods cease to be exempted goods or any goods become excisable. It also provides that the CENVAT credit may be utilized for payment of any duty of excise on any final products or for payment of duty on inputs or capital goods themselves if such inputs are removed as such or after being partially processed, or such capital goods are removed as such:

Provided that while paying duty, the CENVAT credit shall be utilized only to the extent such credit is available on the last day of the month for payment of duty relating to the month. This proviso was substituted with effect from 1st April, 2003 vide Notification No. 13/2003-C.E. (N.T.), dated 1st March, 2003. Prior to this the proviso read as follows:

Provided that while paying duty, the CENVAT credit shall be utilised only to the extent such credit is available on the fifteenth day of a month for payment of duty relating to the first fortnight of the month, and the last day of a month for payment of duty relating to the second fortnight of the month or in case of a manufacturer availing exemption by a notification based on value of clearances in a financial year, for payment of duty relating to the entire month.

Rule 8(1): If a manufacturer of the final products shifts his factory to another site or the factory is transferred on account of change in ownership or on account of sale, merger, amalgamation, lease or transfer of the factory to a joint venture with the specific provision for transfer of liabilities of such factory, then, the manufacturer shall be allowed to transfer the CENVAT credit lying unutilized in his accounts to such transferred, sold, merged, leased or amalgamated factory.

(2) The transfer of the CENVAT credit under sub-rule (1) shall be allowed only if the stock of inputs as such or in process, or the capital goods is also transferred alongwith the factory to the new site or ownership and the inputs, or capital goods, on which credit has been availed of are duly accounted for to the satisfaction of the Assistant Commissioner of Central Excise or the Deputy Commissioner of Central Excise, as the case may be.

In case of amalgamation the following issues to be attended to:

- (a) when transfer of excisable goods from transferor to transferee should be done in accordance with Rule 8 and it should be ensured that the stock inputs or in process goods or the capital goods are transferred along with the factory to the new owners;
- (b) the transferor company which ceases manufacture should apply and deregister itself;
- (c) the transferee company should take steps to get a new registration as a new owner of the same factory;
- (d) care should be taken not to lose sight of the time limit by which CENVAT credit can be claimed for final goods as per the revised rules which are effective from 1 March, 2003;
- (e) since all liabilities are being taken over the transferee company will be required to settle the dues of the transferor company as a successor to the business;
- (f) the transferee company cannot be responsible for any penalty for short payment as the penal liability is on the 'manufacturer' who failed to observe the Rules. This cannot be passed on to the transferee;
- (g) keep proper records of the duty payable and CENVAT credit available for the intervening period when the petition had already been filed but the Tribunal's final order had not been issued. As we stated earlier once the Tribunal's order becomes effective the date of transfer relates back to the date as per the scheme. Although during this period both the transferor and the transferee would have to keep paying the duty and claiming the credit, after the order becomes effective the duty would be clubbed and duty reworked.

Value Added Tax provisions

In all the States, Sales Tax has been replaced by Value Added Tax (VAT). Specific provision has been made to deal with interse transfer between amalgamating companies in Assam, Goa, Gujarat, Jammu & Kashmir, Jharkhand, Maharashtra, Manipur, Meghalaya, Mizoram, Nagaland, Orissa, Punjab, Rajasthan, Tripura and Uttaranchal. The provision in these States except in case of Maharashtra Rajasthan reads as follows:

- (a) When two or more companies are to be amalgamated by the order of a Court or of the Central Government and the order is to take effect from a date earlier to the date of order and any two or more such companies have sold or purchased any goods to or from each other in the period commencing on the date from which the order is to take effect and ending on the date of order, then such transactions of sale or purchase will be included in the turnover of sales or of purchases, as the case may be, of the respective companies and will be assessed to tax accordingly.
- (b) Notwithstanding anything contained in the said order, for the purposes of this Act, the said two or more companies shall be treated as distinct companies and shall also be treated as such for all periods upto the date of the said order, and the registration certificate of the company, which merged, shall be cancelled with effect from the date of the said order.

Explanation. — Words and expressions used in this sub-section, but not defined, shall have the respective meanings as assigned to them in the Companies Act, (1 of 1956) 1956. In Maharashtra section 47 of the Maharashtra VAT Act, 2002 provides for demerger as well and this section reads as follows:

47. Amalgamation or demerger Of Companies

- (1) When two or more companies are to be amalgamated by the order of Court or of the Central Government passed after the appointed day and is to take effect from a date, earlier to the date of the order and any two or more of such companies have sold or purchased any goods to or from each other in the period commencing on the date from which the order is to take effect and ending on the date of the order, then such transactions of sale and purchase shall be included in the turnovers of sale or purchase of the respective companies and shall be assessed to tax accordingly.
- (2) Notwithstanding anything contained in the said order, for all of the purposes of this Act, the said two or more companies shall be treated as distinct companies for all the periods upto the date of the said order and the registration certificates of the said companies shall be cancelled, where necessary, with effect from the date of the said order.
- (2A) (a) When any company is to be demerged by the order of the Court or of the Central Government passed after the appointed day and is to take effect from a date earlier to the date of the order, then for all of the purposes of this Act, it shall be presumed that the two or more companies brought into existence by the operation of the said order have not sold or purchased any goods to each other from the date of effect of the order to the date of the order.
- (b) Notwithstanding anything contained in the said order, for the purposes of this Act, the said two or more companies shall be treated as a single company for all the periods upto the date of the said order and the registration certificate of the company to be demerged shall be cancelled with effect from the date of the said order and the said two or more companies shall, subject to rules, be granted registration certificates from the date of the said order.
- (3) Words and expressions used in this section but not defined shall have the respective meanings assigned to them in the Companies Act, (1 of 1956) 1956.

The Rajasthan VAT, section 46 states as follows:

46 Liability in case of amalgamation of companies

- (1) When two or more companies are to be amalgamated by the order of a court or of the Central Government and the order is to take effect from a date earlier to the date of the order and any two or more of such companies have sold or purchased any goods to or from each other in the period commencing on the date from which the order is to take effect and ending on the date of the order, then such transactions of sale and purchase shall be included in the turnover of sales or purchases of the respective companies and shall be assessed to tax accordingly.
- (2) Notwithstanding anything contained in the said order of amalgamation, for all of the purposes of this Act, the said two or more companies shall be treated as distinct companies for all periods up to the date of the said order and the registration certificates of the said companies shall be cancelled, where necessary, with effect from the date of said order.
- (3) Any tax or other sum found recoverable under this Act for the period prior to the operative date of amalgamation, from the company being amalgamated, shall be payable by the company formed after amalgamation.
- (4) Words and expressions used in this section, but not defined shall have the respective meaning assigned to them in the Companies Act, 1956, (Central Act No. 1 of 1956).

From the above it would appear that while sub-section one talks of a case where the order of amalgamation were to take effect from a date earlier to the date of the order, in sub-section 2 provides that the amalgamating companies would be treated as distinct companies upto the date of the order. However, it is provided that the cancellation of the registration will be done from the effective date of the amalgamation. The Rajasthan legislation provides for the tax to be paid by the 'company formed after amalgamation'. It is not clear what will be the position in case of merger with an existing company. Though the wordings may appear to need some clarification, it is clear that provisions have been made to ensure that the VAT in respect of transactions between the amalgamating companies would be treated as the liability of the respective companies.

There does not appear to be any specific provision relating to liability to VAT in respect of sale of valuable goods to parties other than the interse transactions between amalgamating companies. Such cases will be covered by the general provisions as applicable to transfer of business.

In case of transfer of business, when the ownership of the business of a dealer liable to pay tax is entirely transferred, the transferor and the transferee, shall jointly and severally be liable to pay any tax, interest and penalty, if any payable in respect of such business and remaining unpaid at the time of the transfer and the transferee shall also be liable to pay tax on sales or purchases made by the transferee on and from the date of such transfer and shall forthwith apply for the grant of a registration certificate unless such certificate is already possessed by him. Further it is provided that where a dealer liable to pay tax transfers the ownership of a part of his business the transferor shall be liable to pay tax in respect of the stock of goods transferred with that part of the business.

It would be seen that section 33C which was inserted by the Maharashtra Tax Laws Levy and Amendment) Act, 2002, published on 4th May, 2002, in the Bombay Sales & x Act, 1959 with retrospective effect from July 1, 1981 This section covered cases of amalgamation of two companies, and provided that the transferor and the transferee companies would be treated as separate entities from the appointed date under the scheme up to the date of approval of the scheme of amalgamation by the court and to tax the transactions between the two during the said period as sale transactions. This section reads as follows:

33C. (1) When two or more companies are to be amalgamated by the order of a court or of the Central Government and the order is to take effect from a date anterior to the date of said order and any two or more of such companies have sold or purchased any goods to or from each other during the period commencing on the date from which the order is to take effect and ending on the date of the order, then notwithstanding anything contained in the said amalgamation order, such transactions of sale and purchase shall be included in the turnover of sales or, as the case may be, purchases of the respective companies and 'shall be assessed to tax accordingly, and for the purposes of this Act, the said two or more companies shall be treated as distinct companies and shall be treated as such for the entire period up to the date of the said order, and the registration certificates of the said companies shall be cancelled, or amended, where necessary, with effect from the date of the said amalgamation order.

(2) Words and expressions used in this section, but not defined, shall have the respective meanings assigned to them in the Companies Act, 1956."

The wordings are similar to the provisions of section 47 of the Maharashtra VAT Act referred to earlier. The Bombay High Court in National Organic Chemical Industries Ltd. and another v. State of Maharashtra and Others [2004] 135 STC 50 considered the provisions and its retrospective effect on companies amalgamating and observed that Once the court has declared that the corporate personality of a company shall come to an end from a particular date, then that status can be altered only by the court. The said status cannot be altered by the State even in exercise of its legislative powers as it would amount to directly interfering with the order passed by the court.

Moreover, there cannot be different dates of amalgamation for different authorities. It cannot be said that for the purposes of Companies Act a company loses its corporate personality from a particular date and for the purposes of the BST Act the said company loses its corporate personality from another date. Once the court declares that a company stands destroyed from a particular date then the corporate personality of that company is destroyed completely from that date. Prospectively for the purposes of sales tax, it may be open to the State Legislature to artificially preserve the separate identity of the companies up to the date or which the court approves the scheme of amalgamation.

In our opinion, section 33C in fact creates a new liability by treating the transferee-company and the transferor-company carrying on business as agent or trustee of the transferee-company as two separate entities from the appointed date till the date of approval of the scheme by the court. But for this new impost sales tax could not be levied in respect of the transactions between the transferee-company and the transferor-company carrying on business as agent of the transferee-company. In the light of several decisions of the apex Court set out hereinabove where the transferor and the transferee form one entity, it cannot be said that there were sale transactions between two entities. Even if the State is competent to create such a legal fiction, it cannot be created retrospectively. Under these circumstances, we have no hesitation in holding that section 33C imposes new levy, a new principle and, therefore, the same cannot be said to be clarificatory or explanatory in nature.

In Castrol India Ltd. v. State of Tamil Nadu [1999] 114 STC 468, the Madras High Court considered the question of levy of sales tax in case of amalgamation. In that case the assessee-dealer in Madras, having corporate office in Bombay, claimed that the buying company Indtech Speciality Chemicals Limited (ISCL) in Bangalore ceased to exist from 1st January, 1992 which date was the "transfer date" consequent upon the orders of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay and High Court of Karnataka on the scheme of amalgamation of ISCL with it and that any transfer of goods, subsequent to that date should be taken as branch transfer and not as sales. The Court held –

"that when the courts specify a date as the transfer date, the amalgamation would take effect from that date and when the court has not specified any other date and merely sanctioned the scheme presented to it, the date of amalgamation/date of transfer would be the date specified in the scheme as the "transfer date". Following the decision of the Supreme Court in Marshall Sons and Co, (India) Ltd. v. Income-tax Officer [1997] 223 ITR 809, it must be held that the amalgamation took effect from January 1, 1992 and from that date, the transferor-company, ISCL, continued only for the benefit of the transferee-company. When it has no separate entity, the transfer by the assessee-dealer in favour of ISCL cannot be regarded as the sale which would attract the provisions of the Central Sales Tax Act. The view of the Appellate Tribunal that it would attract the provisions of the Central Sales Tax Act is not in conformity with the decision of the Supreme Court, and the order of the Appellate Tribunal is set aside."

Considering the above it can be said under the provisions contained in the VAT Acts of the different States, in all cases of amalgamation until the effective date of the order of the Court/Tribunal, the inter-se transactions would be liable to VAT in the respective companies' hands.

Stamp Act provisions

A. CHARGEABILITY TO STAMP DUTY

Section 3 of the Indian Stamp Act creates a charge for levy of stamp duty on execution of an instrument. Similar charge is created by the Stamp Acts of different States.

The expression "conveyance" has been defined in section 2, sub-section (10) of the Indian Stamp Act as follows:

"(10) Conveyance. — 'Conveyance' includes a conveyance on sale and every instrument by which property, whether movable or immovable, is transferred inter vivos and which is not otherwise specifically provided for by Schedule 1 ; or by Schedule IA, as the case may be."

With a view to putting matters beyond doubt the Draft Bill seeking to amend the Indian Stamp Act, the meaning of 'conveyance' is proposed to be as follows:

(10) "Conveyance" includes-

- (i) a conveyance on sale;
- (ii) every decree or final order of any civil court or revenue authority;
- (iii) every order made by the High Court/Tribunal under Section 394 of the Companies Act, 1956 in respect of the amalgamation or reconstruction of companies; and ever]' order made by the Reserve Bank of India under section 44 A of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 in respect of amalgamation or reconstruction of Banking Companies;
- (iv) any other instrument, by which property, whether movable or immovable, or any estate or interest in any property is transferred to, or vested in any other person, inter vivos and which is not specifically provided for by Schedule-1;

Explanation:- An instrument, whereby a co-owner of any property transfers his interest to another co-owner of the 4 property and which is not an instrument of partition, is for the purposes of this clause, an instrument by which the property is transferred.

The General Clauses Act does not define "instrument". Therefore, the instrument must be taken to have been used in the sense in which it is generally understood in legal parlance. The term 'instrument' is defined as "a writing, and generally imports a document of a formal legal kind" [Stroud's Judicial Dictionary of Words and Phrases (third edition, volume 2, page 1472)]. However, the Indian Stamp Act has defined the term in section 2(14) as follows:

"(14) Instrument. — 'Instrument' includes every document by which any right or liability is, or purports to be, created, transferred, limited, extended, extinguished or recorded."

In the draft bill to amend the Indian Stamp Act, it is proposed to include 'electronic record' as well; the proposed definition is as under:

(14) "Instrument" includes every document and every "electronic record" as defined under clause (t) of Section 2 of the Information Technology Act, 2000 (21 of 2000) by which any right or liability is or purports to be created, transferred, limited, extended, extinguished or recorded; and any other document mentioned in the Schedule-1.

Thus an 'instrument' is a writing by which any right or liability is, or purported to be, created, transferred, limited, extended, extinguished or recorded.

B. DATE ON WHICH THE STAMP DUTY IS CHARGEABLE

We have already seen that the date on which property is transferred is the date as mentioned in the Scheme of Amalgamation and not the date of the order of the Tribunal. [Marshall Sons and Co. (India) Ltd. v. Income-tax Officer [1997] 223 ITR 809 (SC)]. Hence for stamp duty purposes the market price should be taken as of the appointed day - effective date of amalgamation.

However, in the case of shares allotted for the first time (not the shares given in exchange) the stamp duty will be as on the date of such allotment.

C. WHERE PAYABLE

It is possible that the transferee company may be in one State, while the transferor company would be registered in another State. Similarly, immovable property of the transferor company could be situated in different States. A question arises as to in which State the stamp duty is payable. We have seen that an order of the Tribunal would be treated as 'instrument' on which stamp duty is payable. It is the transferor who transfers the property and the transferee is the recipient of the property. Stamp duty would be payable in the State where the order is passed in the case of the transferor. The conveyance could be executed in the State where the transferee is registered. Hence there is a possibility of stamp duty being levied in two States; Still there are set-off provisions under the Stamp Acts of different States or the Indian Stamp Act to avoid such double taxation; still there could be problems in the valuation for stamp duty purposes in that when the duty is paid on the order of the Tribunal it would be based on the value of the shares exchanged. But in case of immovable property each State would have a different method to evaluate the value of the property. Since the instrument is the same set off should be available.

D. Rate of duty

The rate of duty is different in different States. Except in the case of Maharashtra, [Gujrat, Karnataka and Kerala where there exists separate Stamp Acts, the Indian Stamp Act would apply, subject to modifications made by each State.

SEBI AND LISTING AGREEMENT REQUIREMENTS

A. Disclosure under the DIP Guidelines

There are certain requirements of disclosures under the SEBI (Disclosure and Investors Protection) Guidelines (DIP). Consequent to the coming into force of ICDR Regulations, the DIP Guidelines have been rescinded and hence no longer valid. However, we have reproduced some of the requirements under the DIP Guidelines for benefit of the readers:

1. An unlisted company may make an application to the Board for relaxation from applicability of clause (b) to sub-rule (2) of Rule 19 of the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Rules, 1957 for listing of its shares without making an initial public offer if it satisfies the following conditions:

- (i) Shares have been allotted by the unlisted company (transferee company) to the holders of securities of a listed company (transferor company) pursuant to a scheme of reconstruction or amalgamation under the provision of the Companies Act, 1956 and such scheme has been sanctioned by the High Court/s of the Judicature.
- (ii) The listing of the shares of the unlisted transferee company is in terms of scheme of arrangement sanctioned by the High Court/s of the Judicature.
- (iii) Atleast 25% of the paid-up share capital, post scheme, of the unlisted transferee company seeking listing comprises shares allotted to the public holders of shares in the listed transferor company.
- (iv) The unlisted company has not issued/re-issued any shares, not covered under the scheme.
- (v) There are no outstanding warrants/instruments/agreements which gives right to any person to take the shares in the unlisted transferee company at any future date. If there are such instruments in the scheme sanctioned by the Court, the percentage referred to in point (iii) above, shall be computed after giving effect to the consequent increase of capital on account of compulsory conversions outstanding as well as on the assumption that the options outstanding, if any, to subscribe for additional capital will be exercised.
- (vi) The share certificates have been despatched to the allottees pursuant to the scheme of arrangement or their names have been entered as beneficial owner in the records of the depositories.
- (vii) That the shares of the transferee company issued in lieu of the locked-in shares of the transferor company are subjected to the lock-in for the remaining period.
- (viii) In addition to the requirements of Clause (vii) above, the following conditions are also to be complied with:
 - (a) in case of a hiving off of a division of a listed company (say 'A') and its merger with a newly formed company or existing company (say 'B') there would not be any additional lock-in, if the paid-up share capital of company 'B' is only to the extent of requirement for incorporation purposes.
 - (b) in case of merger where the paid-up share capital of the company seeking listing (company 'B') is more than the requirement for incorporation; the promoters' shares shall be locked-in to the extent 20% of the post-merger paid-up capital of the unlisted company, for a period of 3 years from the date of listing of the shares of the unlisted company. The balance of the entire pre-merger capital of the unlisted company shall also be locked-in for a period of 3 years from the date of listing of the shares of the unlisted company.

2. An application to the Board under Clause 1 shall be made through the designated stock exchange of the listed company and the designated stock exchange may recommend the application giving the reason therefore.
3. The unlisted company shall take steps for listing, simultaneously on all stock exchanges where the shares of the (transferor) listed company are/ were listed, within 30 days of the date of the final order of the High Court/s approving the scheme. The formalities for commencing of trading shall be completed within 45 days of the date of final order of the High Court/s.
4. Before commencement of trading, the company shall give an advertisement in one English and one Hindi newspaper with nationwide circulation and one regional newspaper with wide circulation at the place where the registered office of the company is situated, giving details as specified in Schedule XXVIII.

Non-Applicability of the guidelines

Clauses 13.1 (Pricing of the issue) to 13.5 shall not be applicable in the following cases:

- (i) where the further shares are allotted in pursuance to the merger and amalgamation scheme approved by the High Court.

Securities Ineligible for Computation of Promoters' Contribution

1. Where the promoters of any company making an issue of securities have acquired equity during the preceding three years, before filing the offer documents with the Board, such equity shall not be considered for computation of promoters contribution if it is;
 - (i) acquired for consideration other than cash and revaluation of assets or capitalisation of intangible assets is involved in such transaction(s); or
 - (ii) resulting from a bonus issue, out of revaluation reserves or reserves without accrual of cash resources;

2. In case of public issue by unlisted companies, securities which have been issued to the promoters during the preceding one year, at a price lower than the price at which equity is being offered to public shall not be eligible for computation of promoters' contribution.

Provided that the shares for which the difference between the offer price and the issue price for these shares is brought in by the promoters shall be considered eligible subject to issuer company complying with the applicable provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 (such as passing of revised resolution by shareholders or issuer's Board, filing of revised return of allotment with ROC, etc.

3. In respect of companies formed by conversion of partnership firms, where the partners of the erstwhile partnership firm and the promoters of the converted company are the same and there is no change in management, the shares allotted to the promoters during previous one year out of the funds brought in during that period shall not be considered eligible for computation of promoters' contribution unless such shares have been issued at the same price at which the public offer is made,

Provided that if the partners' capital existed in the firm for a period of more than one year on a continuous basis, the shares allotted to promoters against such capital shall be considered eligible.

4. In respect of Clauses 1, 2 and 3, such ineligible shares acquired in pursuance to a scheme of merger or amalgamation approved by a High Court shall be eligible for computation of promoters' contribution.

B. Merger of corporate broking firms and Consolidation of memberships by corporate brokers

By its Circular No. SMD/Policy (Brk.Reg.)/Cir-18/98 July 9, 1998, SEBI had given certain requirements in regard to merger of corporate broking firms. The gist of the Circular is given below:

- (1) When two or more corporate broking firms merge leading to creation of a new entity, the SEBI registration granted to the extinguishing entity does not automatically devolve upon the emerging entity and the new entity has to fulfill the eligibility criteria and apply afresh for registration and pay the registration fees.
- (2) It is generally seen that while the application comes to SEBI after the court has approved the scheme of amalgamation/merger, the existing entity is required to seek prior approval from SEBI in case of any change in its constitution, in terms of Rule 4(c) of SEBI (Stock Brokers and Sub-brokers) Rules and Regulations, 1992. Therefore, you are advised that as soon as the application for merger is filed before the High Court, the extinguishing broking entity should approach SEBI through the Stock Exchange for obtaining prior permission, to the scheme of merger/amalgamation giving all necessary details of the proposal.
- (3) It is also seen that some of the Stock Exchanges would be inclined to disconnect the trading terminal of the extinguishing entity, on the approval of the scheme of the merger by the High Court until SEBI grants registration to the new emerging entity. As this may cause hardship to the business interests of the emerging entity, it is suggested that the emerging entity may be allowed to trade on the registration of the extinguishing entity for a period of, say 45 days. However, the emerging entity should apply to SEBI at the earliest and give an undertaking to be liable for the act of the extinguishing entity and such applications in any case should be made not later than 30 days of the registration granted by the Registrar of Companies to the emerging entity. In view of the above, you may consider amending the Bye-laws/ trading rules suitably.

SEBI also considered the question of merger of one or more corporate broking firms under the same management viz, one corporate broking firm having membership of different stock exchanges through other corporate entities under the same management. Same management would mean where majority of directors of one company are also majority directors in the other company and the majority shareholding/controlling stake of both the companies is with the same group.

Where merger of such corporate entities takes place for consolidation of multiple membership SEBI has by its Circular No. SMD/DBA-II/POLICY/CIR-1/99 dated January 12, 1999 given the following clarification:

- (i) If the transferee/applicant is a SEBI registered corporate broker and acquiring a membership in another Exchange, from a corporate under the same management which is also registered with SEBI as a corporate broker, then as both the entities were registered with SEBI, the transferee company will not apply to SEBI for a fresh registration. Instead the transferee and as well as the transferor will apply to SEBI under Rule 4 (c) of the SEBI (Stock Brokers and Sub-brokers) Rules and Regulations, 1992 for approval of change in status.

For e.g. ABC & Co., which is a member of X Exchange acquires the membership from XYZ & Co., which is a member of Y Exchange. ABC & Co. and XYZ & Co., will then apply to SEBI for change in status under Rule 4 (c) of SEBI (Stock Brokers and Sub-brokers) Rules, 1992 only if XYZ & Co., is a corporate broker under the same management.

The application should be forwarded to SEBI with the registration certificate of the transferor member/corporate and this registration would be cancelled.. SEBI will be issuing a New Registration Number to the applicant/ transferee on the Exchange on which it is acquiring the membership, which would also reflect that it is a multiple member henceforth.

- (ii) The transferee/applicant company will have to satisfy all the financial and other norms under the SEBI Act, 1992 and SEBI (Stock Brokers and Sub-brokers) Rules and Regulations, 1992.

- (iii) The transferee/applicant company will be required to give an undertaking that it would honour all the rights/liabilities including any SEBI action to be taken against the transferor company as well as liabilities, in respect of fees under SEBI (Stock Brokers and Sub-brokers) Regulations, 1992, etc..
- (iv) If consolidation is made in a manner where a new entity comes into existence, it would be treated as case of application by a new entity and SEBI requirements in respect of registration, payment of registration fee etc., will be required to be complied with.

In view of the above, in case of corporate broking firms seeking approval of the Tribunal for amalgamation/merger with another corporate broking firm, care should be taken to seek prior permission of SEBI. It would appear that in case of merger of a non-broking corporate with a corporate broking firm no such requirement would apply.

C. SEBI directions in regard to Amalgamation and mergers

SEBI had issued a Press Release 311-2003 dated 17 December 2003, giving summary of their proposals for disclosures to shareholders under section 393. The Press Release stated that the disclosure requirements would be implemented through the Listing Agreement. As of date to our knowledge, no such requirement has been made as part of the Listing Agreement. However, as the information supposed to be disclosed in the Explanatory Statement calling for meeting of shareholders to approve merger proposals, and is very relevant we give below the said requirements:

1. The terms "company/companies" mean the companies which are parties to the terms of arrangement of merger/demerger/amalgamation specified under Sections 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956.
2. The term "resultant company" shall mean the company which comes into existence as a result of the scheme of arrangement for merger/demerger/ amalgamation.
3. The term "issuing company" shall mean the listed company which is seeking approval of shareholders for the scheme of arrangement for merger/ demerger/amalgamation.

Details about the companies:

1. Names & registered office of the companies.
2. The extent to/manner in which the companies are related to each other.
3. Capital structure of the companies.
4. Shareholding pattern clearly indicating the shares held by the promoters and by persons other than promoters.
5. Line of business.
6. Dates of agreement, if any, with the other companies which are parties to the scheme of arrangement.
7. Names and Profile of the promoters and directors - viz. age, educational qualifications, experience, personal addresses etc of the companies.
8. Names of subsidiary/group companies and companies with which the promoters of the resultant company are associated.
9. Indicate whether there would be a change in control in the resultant company vis-a-vis the issuing company,
10. Capital Structure and Shareholding pattern, before (of issuing company) and after (of resultant company) the proposed scheme of arrangement, and the management's views on the change in the public holding on how it would affect the shareholders at large.
11. Audited Financial statements of the companies for the last 3 years including the latest audited financial statement (not more than 6 months old) and material development after balance-sheet date (as per the format given in clause 49 of Listing agreement).

Details about the scheme:

1. Basis of valuation,
2. Nature of consideration if any, payable/receivable under the scheme,
3. Mode of payment/receipt,
4. Manner of surrender/receipt of shares or securities,
5. The time schedule within which the shares/securities are to be surrendered/received and payments to be made/received,
6. Tentative date by which the scheme would become effective under the provisions of the Companies Act,
7. Details of approvals obtained/to be obtained/sought from creditors, authorities like stock exchanges/authorities under Companies Act etc.
8. Dates of Board Meeting when the proposal was considered/approved,
9. Any other details which deemed necessary for information to shareholders enabling them to make an informed decision about the proposed scheme, including those required under Section 393 of the Companies Act, 1956.

D. Listing Agreement requirements

Listing agreement of the Mumbai Stock Exchange requires a listed company to comply with the following:

1. The company agrees that it shall file any scheme/petition proposed to be filed before any Court or Tribunal under sections 391, 394 and 101 of the Companies Act, 1956, with the stock exchange, for approval, at least a month before it is presented to the Court or Tribunal [Clause 24(f)].
2. The company agrees to ensure that any scheme of arrangement/ amalgamation/merger/reconstruction/reduction of capital, etc., to be presented to any Court or Tribunal does not in any way violate, override or circumscribe the provisions of securities laws or the stock exchange requirements.

Explanation : For the purpose of this sub-clause, 'securities laws' mean the SEBI Act, 1992, the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956, the Depositories Act, 1996 and the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 which are administered by SEBI under section 55A thereof, the rules, regulations, guidelines etc. made under these Acts and the Listing Agreement. [Clause 24(g)].

3. The company agrees that in the explanatory statement forwarded by it to the shareholders u/s 393 or accompanying a proposed resolution to be passed u/s 100 of the Companies Act, it shall disclose the pre and post-arrangement or amalgamation (expected) capital structure and shareholding pattern. [Clause 24(h)]
4. The Company will promptly notify the Exchange of any action which will result in the redemption, cancellation or retirement in whole or in part of any securities listed on the Exchange [Clause 27(a)].
5. The Company will not make any change in the form or nature of any of its securities that are listed on the Exchange or in the rights or privileges of the holders thereof without giving twenty-one days' prior notice to the Exchange of the proposed change and making an application for listing of the securities as changed if the Exchange shall so require. [Clause 28]
6. File with the Stock Exchange three copies of all the notices, call letters or any other circulars including notices of meetings convened u/s 391 or section 394 read with section 391 of the Companies Act, 1956 together with Annexures thereto, at the same time as they are sent to the shareholders, debenture holders or creditors or any class of them or advertised in the Press [Clause 31(c)].

7. File with the Stock Exchange three copies of all notices, circulars, etc., issued or advertised in the press either by the Company, or by any company which the Company proposes to absorb or with which the Company proposes to merge or amalgamate, or under orders of the court or any other statutory authority in connection with any merger, amalgamation, re-construction, reduction of capital, scheme or arrangement, including notices, circulars, etc. issued or advertised in the press in regard to meetings of shareholders or debenture holders or creditors or any class of them and copies of the proceedings at all such meetings. [Clause 31(e)]

The relevant clauses of the Bombay Stock Exchange of Listing Agreement are given below:

Clause 24

- (g) The company agrees to ensure that any scheme of arrangement/ amalgamation/merger/ reconstruction/reduction of capital, etc., to be presented to any Court or Tribunal does not in any way violate, override or circumscribe the provisions of securities laws or the stock exchange requirements.

Explanation: For the purpose of this sub-clause, 'securities laws' mean the SEBI Act, 1992, the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956, the Depositories Act, 1996 and the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 which are administered by SEBI under section 55A thereof, the rules, regulations, guidelines etc. made under these Acts and the Listing Agreement.

- (h) The company agrees that in the Explanatory statement forwarded by it to the shareholders u/s. 393 or accompanying a proposed resolution to be passed u/s. 100 of the Companies Act, it shall disclose the pre and post-arrangement or amalgamation (expected) capital structure and shareholding pattern and the "fairness opinion" obtained from an Independent merchant bankers on valuation of assets/shares done by the valuer for the company and unlisted company.

In the case of Chemidye Mfg.Co (Pvt) Ltd, In re. [2006] 69 SCL 10 (Bom.) the Court held that there is nothing either in the Listing Agreement or in the SCR Act which indicates that non-compliance of the terms and conditions of the Listing Agreement would bar a company from making an application under sections 391 and 394 for merger or would entail an automatic dismissal of such a petition. The consequence of non-compliance with any of the provisions of the Listing Agreement would entail action by the relevant exchange under the provision of the Listing Agreement and SCR Act, 1956. For instance, the BSE may initiate action against a defaulting member including by delisting the member. Such non-compliance does not ipso facto entail consequences under the Companies Act. It observed that the "non-compliance with the provisions of Clause 24(f), (g) and (h) of the Listing Agreement does not, by itself, bar a company from seeking sanction of a scheme of amalgamation under sections 391 to 394. Nor does it entail an automatic dismissal of such a petition."

Clause 31

The Company will forward to the Exchange promptly and without application...

- (c) three copies of all the notices, call letters or any other circulars including notices of meetings convened u/s 391 or section 394 read with section 391 of the Companies Act, 1956 together with Annexures thereto, at the same time as they are sent to the shareholders, debenture holders or creditors or any class of them or advertised in the Press.
- (e) three copies of all notices, circulars, etc., issued or advertised in the Press either by the Company, or by any company which the Company proposes to absorb or with which the Company proposes to merge or amalgamate, or under orders of the court or any other statutory authority in connection with any merger, amalgamation, re-construction, reduction of capital, scheme or arrangement, including notices, circulars, etc. issued or advertised in the Press in regard to meetings of shareholders or debenture holders or creditors or any class of them and copies of the proceedings at all such meetings.

Clause 36

Apart from complying with all specific requirements as above, the Company will keep the Exchange informed

7(ii) Acquisition, merger, de-merger, amalgamation, restructuring, scheme of arrangement, spin-off or selling divisions of the company, etc.

Foreign Exchange Management Act provisions - Acquisition of shares under a Scheme of Amalgamation/ Merger

Where a Scheme of Merger or Amalgamation of two or more Indian companies has been approved by a Court in India, the transferee company may issue shares to the shareholders of the transferor company, resident outside India subject to ensuring that the percentage of shareholding of persons resident outside India, in the transferee or new company does not exceed the percentage specified in the approval granted by the Central Government or the Reserve Bank. In case the percentage is likely to exceed the percentage specified in the approval or the Regulations, the transferor company or the transferee or new company may, after obtaining an approval from the Central Government, apply to the Reserve Bank for its approval under these Regulations. Further, the transferor company or the transferee or new company shall not engage in agriculture, plantation or real estate business or trading in TDRs.

Accounting requirements

One other issue which is to be considered in the case of amalgamation is the accounting aspects of the transactions. In this regard sub-section (3A) of section 211 provides that "every profit and loss account and balance sheet of the company shall comply with the accounting standards". Section 2(1A) defines the term "accounting standards" as "the standards of accounting, recommended by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India, constituted under the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949, and which may be prescribed by the Central Government in consultation with the National Advisory Committee on Accounting Standards constituted under subsection (1) of section 210A".

By the Notification G.S.R. 739 (E) dated 7th December, 2006, the Government has prescribed that the Accounting Standards 1 to 7 and 9 to 29 as recommended by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India as the Accounting Standards under the CA 1956. The said Standards would be applicable to all accounting years ending after the date of the Notification. Thus Accounting Standard 14 issued by the Institute of Chartered Accountants is now prescribed as the Standard for accounting in case of amalgamation of companies.

TAKE OVERS/ACQUISITIONS

'Takeover' - Definition

Broadly speaking, a "take-over" refers to acquisition of a company by another company. M.A. Weinberg, one of the pioneers in treating the law and practice relating to takeovers, has defined a take-over as "a transaction or series of transactions whereby a person (individual, group of individuals or company) acquires control over the assets of a company, either directly by becoming the owner of those assets or indirectly by obtaining control of the management of the company. Where shares are closely held (i.e. by a small number of persons), a take-over will generally be effected by agreement with the holders of the majority of the share capital of the company being acquired. Where the shares are held by the public generally, the takeover may be effected (1) by agreement between the acquirer and the controllers of the acquired company; (2) by purchase of shares on the Stock Exchange; or (3) by means of a "take-over bid"."

Companies Act provisions

The law relating to take-overs is contained in both the Companies Act, 1956 and the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1997 (SEBI Takeover Code).

The Companies Act 1956 deals with the power of a company to acquire shares of another company generally (section 372A), and specifically, in relation to acquiring shares from persons who did not sell or have not agreed to sell shares held by them, notwithstanding approval of the scheme or contract for acquisition of the shares, by shareholders owning 90% and over of the shares (section 395). The company being acquired could be either a public quoted company or a private limited company.

The SEBI Takeover Code deals with the law relating to substantial acquisition of shares or control of a public quoted company (listed company) or an unquoted public limited company or a private limited company (an unlisted company) including a foreign registered company, which owns or controls a listed company.

Acquisition of shares by a company of another company

Power of a company to invest in shares of another company is generally governed by its memorandum and is further subject to certain restrictions placed by the Companies Act. Section 372 as it stood prior to amendment by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988, prohibited inter corporate investment in shares in excess of 10% of the subscribed capital of the company whose shares are being purchased or subscribed and subject to an overall limit in respect of investment in all bodies corporate of 30% of the subscribed capital of the investing company. Investment could be made in excess of these limits, if the investment is approved by the shareholders by a resolution and further approved by the Central Government.

After the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1988, section 372 of the Companies Act prohibited inter corporate investment in excess of 30% of the subscribed equity capital or the aggregate of the paid up equity and preference share capital of such other body corporate whichever is less. In addition there were restrictions on investment in all bodies corporate as also limits relating to investment by the company along with its subsidiaries and/or group companies. The restriction of 10% of the subscribed capital (be it preference and/or equity) was removed. Further the approval by the Central Government should have been obtained, in case of investment in excess of the limits prescribed, prior to making of the investment. This was achieved by adding the word "previously" before "approved by the Central Government" in sub-section (4) of section 372.

However, by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1999, the existing provisions of section 372 were made inoperative effective from 31st October, 1998 and instead a new provision viz section 372A was introduced. Relevant provisions of Section 372A read as follows:

372A. Inter corporate loans and investments.—

- (1) No company shall, directly or indirectly;
 - (a) make any loan to any other body corporate;
 - (b) give any guarantee, or private security, in connection with a loan made by any other person to, or to any other person by, any body corporate; and
 - (c) acquire, by way of subscription, purchase or otherwise the securities of any other body corporate.

exceeding sixty per cent, of its paid-up share capital and free reserves, or hundred per cent, of its free reserves, whichever is more:

Provided that where the aggregate of the loans and investments so far made, the amounts for which guarantee or security so far provided to or in all other bodies corporate, along with the investment, loan, guarantee or security proposed to be made or given by the board, exceeds the aforesaid limits, no investment or loan shall be made or guarantee shall be given or security shall be provided unless previously authorized by a special resolution passed in a general meeting:

Provided.....

Provided also that the notice of such resolution shall indicate clearly the specific limits, the particulars of the body corporate in which the investment is proposed to be made..... to be given, the purpose of the investment,....., specific sources of funding and such other details.

- (2) No investment shall be made by the company unless the resolution sanctioning it is passed at a meeting of the board with the consent of all the directors present at the meeting and the prior approval of the public financial institution referred to in section 4A, where any term loan is subsisting, is obtained :

Provided that prior approval of a public financial institution shall not be required where the aggregate of the loans and investments so far made, the amounts for which guarantee or security so far provided to or in all other bodies corporate, along with the investments, loans, guarantee or security proposed to be made or given does not exceed the limit of sixty per cent, specified in subsection (1), if there is no default in repayment of loan instalments or payment of interest thereon as per the terms and conditions of such loan to the public financial institution :

- (4) No company, which has defaulted in complying with the provisions of section 58A, shall, directly or indirectly,—

(a).....

(c) acquire, by way of subscription, purchase or otherwise the securities of any other body corporate, till such default is subsisting.

- (5) (a) Every company shall keep a register showing the following particulars in respect of every investment or loan made,..... by it in relation to any body corporate under sub-section (1), namely :—

(i) the name of the body corporate;

(ii) the amount, terms and purpose of the investment

(in) the date on which the investment has been made; and

(iv)

(v) The particulars of investment, ... referred to in clause (a) shall be entered chronologically in the register aforesaid within seven days of the making of such investment.....

- (6) The register referred to in sub-section (5) shall be kept at the registered office of the company concerned and—

(a) shall be open to inspection at such office ; and

(b) extracts may be taken there from and copies thereof may be required, by any member of the company to the same extent, in the same manner, and on payment of the same fees as in the case of the register of members of the company; and the provisions of section 163 shall apply accordingly.

- (7) The Central Government may prescribe guidelines for the purposes of this section.

(8) Nothing contained in this section shall apply,—

(a) any investment made by—

- (i) a banking company, or an insurance company, or a housing finance company in the ordinary course of its business, or a company established with the object of financing industrial enterprises, or of providing infrastructural facilities ;
- (ii) a company whose principal business is the acquisition of shares, stock, debentures or other securities ;
- (iii) a private company, unless it is a subsidiary of a public company.

(b) to investment made in shares allotted in pursuance of clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 81.

(e) to acquisition by a holding company, by way of subscription, purchases or otherwise, of securities of its wholly owned subsidiary.

(9) If default is made in complying with the provisions of this section, other than sub-section (5), the company and every officer of the company who is in default shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to two years or with fine which may extend to fifty thousand rupees :

Provided that.....

Provided further.....

(10) If default is made in complying with the provisions of sub-section (5), the company and every officer of the company who is in default shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five thousand rupees and also with a further fine which may extend to five hundred rupees for every day after the first day during which the default continues.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section,—

(a) “loan” includes debentures or any deposit of money made by one company with another company, not being a banking company;

(b) “free reserves” means those reserves which, as per the latest audited balance-sheet of the company, are free for distribution as dividend and shall include the balance to the credit of the securities premium account but shall not include share application money.

Presently, the powers of investment in shares together with loans granted or issue of guarantee issued by a company have been very much relaxed. The power of the Board of Directors is restricted to sixty per cent, of the investing company's paid-up share capital and free reserves, or hundred per cent of its free reserves, whichever is more. The restrictions cover, not only investment in shares but also includes loans granted as also guarantees issued. No separate limit for each viz. shares, loans and guarantees, is provided. But the company could exceed this limit if special resolution (not ordinary resolution) of the shareholders is obtained. While authorizing investment in shares of another company care should be taken to consider the loans granted to other bodies corporate and guarantees issued in connection with loan made by any other person or bodies corporate. Such approval of the shareholders is required to be obtained prior to the board authorizing the investment.

The section covers both direct investment as well as indirect investment. See the use of the words “No company shall directly or indirectly” in the beginning of the section. It is rather unfortunate that the term “indirectly” has not been spelt out as was the case in section 372, In section 372 the words used are “(whether by itself, or by an individual, or association of individuals in trust for it or for the benefit or on its account)". May be the use of word "indirectly" could cover instances as stated in section 372 and also any other method of indirect investment' such as investment by persons acting in concert.

Though provisions of section 369 (inter corporate loan) has been deleted the new section 372A covers both investment in shares as also grant of loans and issue of guarantees. The term 'loan' has been defined to include debentures and any deposit of money, other than deposit in a banking company.

In considering takeovers, the Board of Directors of a company will need to comply with these provisions, in addition to the provisions of the SEBI Takeover Code and other law or regulations. Note that if a company has defaulted in repayment of deposit to customers such a company cannot invest in another company unless it returns the deposit. It is also provided that investment must be recorded in the register specifically required to be maintained for this purpose, within 7 days of the investment.

Non-applicability of investment restrictions

The provisions of section 372A are not applicable to investments made by:

- (a) a banking company or an insurance company or housing finance company in the ordinary course of its business;
- (b) a company established with the object of financing industrial enterprises of providing infrastructural facilities;
- (c) a company whose principal business is the acquisition of shares, stock, debentures or other securities;
- (d) a private company which is not a subsidiary of a public company;
- (e) exercise of rights under section 81(1)(a) of Companies Act; and
- (f) a holding company in relation to investment by subscription, purchase or otherwise, in securities of its wholly owned subsidiary.

The provisions of section 372A are applicable to an investing company which is a public limited company (whether it is a listed company or unlisted company) as also a private limited company which is a subsidiary of a public limited company. Hence if a public limited company were to invest in a private limited company these provisions would apply, though the provisions of SEBI Takeover Code would not apply in such a case so long as that private company does not control a listed company. A company which is a trader in securities is exempt, possibly as the investment would have been made as its "stock-in-trade" and not as a capital investment. Investment by a private company is not restricted, though its investment in a public listed company might attract the provisions of SEBI Takeover Code.

Further, one should note the words "body corporate" instead of "company" in clause (c) of sub-section (1) of section 372A. We have seen that definition of a "body corporate" includes a company incorporated outside India, while a company is a company incorporated under the Companies Act 1956. The definition of 'body corporate' is an inclusive definition and it will not only include companies incorporated in India, but also companies incorporated outside India. Hence if an Indian public limited company or its subsidiary were to acquire shares in a foreign company it needs to comply with the provisions of section 372A though the provisions of SEBI Takeover Code may not apply.

Purchase of shares of dissentient shareholders in a friendly takeover

In a friendly takeover it is possible that the board of directors of the company (transferor company) whose shares are sought to be acquired by another company (transferee company), they would seek the approval of the shareholders. In such cases, even after the shareholders of the transferor company agreeing to accept the offer from the transferee company, there could be certain shareholders who may have failed to transfer the shares or may disagree with the terms of offer by the transferee company. Such shareholders are referred to as “dissentient shareholders”. A separate provision exists for purchase of shares held by dissentient shareholders in case of offer of shares by a transferee company under a scheme or contract approved by majority of the shareholders of the transferor company. These provisions are contained in section 395 of the Companies Act. This provision is similar to provisions contained in section 209 of the English Companies Act, 1948. Under the present Companies Act, 2006, the English law provides elaborately on takeovers and gives right to the acquirer to acquire the shares of dissentient shareholders or the right to the minority dissentient shareholders to compel the acquirer to acquire his shares. These provisions are contained in Chapter 3 of Part 28 of the Companies Act, 2006 viz. “Squeeze out” [section 979] and “sell-out” [section 983]. The section reads as follows:

395 Power and duty to acquire shares of shareholders dissenting from scheme or contract approved by majority.—

- (1) Where a scheme or contract involving the transfer of shares or any class of shares in a company (in this section referred to as “the transferor company”) to another company (in this section referred to as “the transferee company”), has within four months after the making of the offer in that behalf by the transferee company, been approved by the holders of not less than nine-tenths in value of the shares whose transfer is involved (other than shares already held at the date of the offer by, or by a nominee for, the transferee company or its subsidiary), the transferee company may, at any time within two months after the expiry of the said four months, give notice in the prescribed manner to any dissenting shareholder, that it desires to acquire his shares; and when such a notice is given, the transferee company shall, unless, on an application made by the dissenting shareholder within one month from the date on which notice was given, the Tribunal thinks fit to order otherwise, be entitled and bound to acquire those shares on the terms on which, under the scheme or contract, the shares of the approving shareholders are to be transferred to the transferee company:

Provided that where shares in the transferor company of the same class as the shares whose transfer is involved are already held as aforesaid to a value greater than one-tenth of the aggregate of the values of all the shares in the company of such class, the foregoing provisions of this subsection shall not apply, unless—

- (a) the transferee company offers the same terms to all holders of the shares of that class (other than those already held as aforesaid) whose transfer is involved; and
 - (b) the holders who approve the scheme or contract, besides holding not less than nine-tenths in value of the shares (other than those already held as aforesaid) whose transfer is involved, are not less than three-fourths in number of the holders of those shares.
- (2) Where, in pursuance of any such scheme or contract as aforesaid, shares, or shares of any class, in a company are transferred to another company or its nominee, and those shares together with any other shares or any other shares of the same class, as the case may be, in the first-mentioned company held at the date of the transfer by, or by a nominee for, the transferee company or its subsidiary comprise nine-tenths in value of the shares, or the shares of that class, as the case may be, in the first-mentioned company, then,—
 - (a) the transferee company shall, within one month from the date of the transfer (unless on a previous transfer in pursuance of the scheme or contract it has already complied with this requirement), give notice of that fact in the prescribed manner to the holders of the remaining shares or of the remaining shares of that class, as the case may be, who have not assented to the scheme or contract; and
 - (b) any such holder may, within three months from the giving of the notice to him, require the transferee company to acquire the shares of question; and where a shareholder gives notice under clause (b) with respect to any shares, the transferee company shall be entitled and bound to acquire those shares on the terms on which, under the scheme or contract, the shares of the approving shareholders were transferred to it, or on such other terms as may be agreed, or as the Tribunal on the application of either the transferee company or the shareholder thinks fit to order.

- (3) Where a notice has been given by the transferee company under sub-section (1) and the Tribunal has not, on an application made by the dissenting shareholder, made an order to the contrary, the transferee company shall, on the expiry of one month from the date on which the notice has been given, or, if an application to the Tribunal by the dissenting shareholder is then pending, after that application has been disposed of, transmit a copy of the notice to the transferor company together with an instrument of transfer executed on behalf of the shareholder by any person appointed by the transferee company and on its own behalf by the transferee company, and pay or transfer to the transferor company the amount or other consideration representing the price payable by the transferee company for the shares which, by virtue of this section, that company is entitled to acquire; and the transferor company shall-

- (a) thereupon register the transferee company as the holder of those shares, and
- (b) within one month of the date of such registration, inform the dissenting shareholders of the fact of such registration, and of receipt of the amount or other consideration representing the price payable to them by the transferee company :

Provided that an instrument of transfer shall not be required for any share for which a share warrant is for the time being outstanding.

- (4) Any sums received by the transferor company under this section shall be paid into a separate bank account, and any such sums and any other consideration so received shall be held by that company in trust for the several persons entitled to the shares in respect of which the said sums or other consideration were respectively received.
- (4A) (a) The following provisions shall apply in relation to every offer of a scheme or contract involving the transfer of shares or any class of shares in the transferor company to the transferee company, namely :—
- (i) every such offer or every circular containing such offer or every recommendation to the members of the transferor company by its directors to accept such offer shall be accompanied by such information as may be prescribed;
 - (ii) every such offer shall contain a statement by or on behalf of the transferee company, disclosing the steps it has taken to ensure that necessary cash will be available;
 - (iii) every circular containing, or recommending acceptance of, such offer shall be presented to the Registrar for registration and no such circular shall be issued until it is so registered;
 - (iv) the Registrar may refuse to register any such circular which does not contain the information required to be given under sub-clause (i) or which sets out such information in a manner likely to give a false impression; and
 - (v) an appeal shall lie to the Tribunal against an order of the Registrar refusing to register any such circular.
- (b) whoever issues a circular referred to in sub-clause (iii) of clause (a), which has not been registered, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five thousand rupees.
- (5) In this section—
- (a) "dissenting shareholder" includes a shareholder who has not assented to the scheme or contract and any shareholder who has failed or refused to transfer his shares to the transferee company in accordance with the scheme or contract;

(b) "transferor company" and "transferee company" shall have the same meaning as in section 394.

Section 395 of the Companies Act stands alone and covers a case of purchase of shares of dissentient shareholders of a company (transferor company) by another company (transferee company) based on a scheme or contract. It is not clear as to whether the scheme of contract is to be between the two companies or between the purchaser company and the shareholders having controlling interest of the company whose shares are offered to be bought. 'In either case it contemplates approval by the shareholders of the transferor company prior to such purchase. It does not cover a case of buy back of shares by a company, though in a case where the persons controlling the transferor company might resort to buy back before accepting the offer' from the transferee company. It presupposes the- existence of a scheme (not necessarily a scheme under section 391 of the Companies Act, for, the definition of the term "arrangement" in section 390 is applicable only to sections 391 to 393. or a contract between two companies, one company (transferee company) contracting to purchase the shares of another company (transferor company).

A summary of the provisions is as under:

- (a) a scheme or contract exists under which a transferee company agrees to purchase the shares (not necessarily the whole of the shares) of the transferor company;
- (b) the scheme or contract must be in relation to the transfer of shares or any class of shares of the transferor company to the transferee company;
- (c) the proposed transfer of shares by the transferor company must have the approval of nine-tenths in value of the shares (other than shares already held at the date of the offer by, or by a nominee for, the transferee company or its subsidiary) whose transfer is involved and this approval should be obtained within four months of the offer being floated;
- (d) the transferee company may give notice, within two months of the aforesaid four months, to the dissenting shareholders, in the prescribed manner (form 35 of the General Rules and Forms), for acquisition of their shares;
- (e) unless the dissentient shareholders, within one month of the above notice, obtain Court Orders to the contrary or stipulating certain other conditions, the transferee company is entitled and bound to acquire the shares on the terms as stated in the scheme or contract;
- (f) if the shares transferred to the transferee company together with shares held by or by a nominee of the transferee company or by its subsidiary exceeds 9/10^{ths} in value of the shares or the shares of that class of the transferor company, then the transferee company must give notice of the fact of such holding to the remaining persons who have not assented to the scheme or contract;
- (g) upon receipt of the notice the remaining shareholders may, within three months from the giving of the notice require the transferee to acquire the shares on same terms as per scheme or contract, unless the Tribunal on an application made by the transferee company or the shareholder directs otherwise.
- (h) If within one month of the notice no order to the contrary is passed by the Tribunal, then the transferee company within one month from the end of the notice period may approach the transferor company along with the duly executed transfer deed and pay the transfer consideration to the transferor company and where upon the transferor company is required to register the transfer and within one month inform the dissentient shareholders of this fact.
- (i) If the shares transferred under the scheme or contract together with the shares already held by or by a nominee of the transferor company or by its subsidiary comprise of 9/10th in value of the shares or the shares of that class then the transferee company shall within one month from the date of transfer give notice of that fact in the prescribed manner;

- (j) the dissentient shareholders may within three months of receipt of the notice require the transferee company to acquire the shares in question and the transferee company is entitled and bound to purchase the shares of the dissentient shareholders on same terms as the scheme or contract.
- (k) In cases where the dissentient shareholders had approached the Tribunal and the Tribunal gives direction in the matter the transferee company is bound to adhere to the Tribunal's directions.

Every offer or scheme to purchase shares of another company must comply, apart from the above, with the requirements of sub-section (4A). The requirements are:

- (1) every such offer or every circular containing such offer or every recommendation to the members of the transferor company by its directors to accept such offer shall be accompanied by the following prescribed information:
 - (a) Name of the company making the offer or issuing any circular in connection with the offer;
 - (b) Management structure of the transferee company (composition of Board of Directors and particulars regarding managers, managing director, if any);
 - (c) Capital structure of the transferee company.
 - (d) The extent of shareholdings of the directors, manager, managing director, or other associates in the transferor company;
 - (e) The extent of shareholdings of the directors, manager, managing directors or their associates of the transferee company in the transferor company.
 - (f) In case the offer is made by another person on behalf of the transferee company the extent of such person's holding in the transferee company.
 - (g) A summary of the financial position of the company to be given separately in the proforma prescribed (see Appendix to the form 35A).
 - (h) The price or consideration offered. If consideration is other than cash, full particulars thereof. If the consideration is by way of allotment of shares in the transferee company, full particulars of the shares and rights attached thereto. The basis of valuation of the shares to be allotted.
 - (i) Sources from which the transferee company proposes to pay for the acquisition if the consideration is cash.
 - (j) The basis of valuation of the shares of the transferor company;
 - (k) Name of the transferor company;
 - (l) Management structure of the transferor company (composition of Board of Directors and particulars regarding managers, managing director, if any
 - (m) Capital structure of the transferor company;
 - (n) The extent of shareholdings of the directors, manager, managing director or their associates, if any, of the transferor company in the transferor and transferee companies;
 - (o) Details of transfer of shares in the transferor company by its directors, manager, managing directors, or their associates in the two years preceding the offer;
 - (p) The reasons for which the offer has been recommended for acceptance by the members of the transferor company by its directors, showing the interest of the directors, manager, managing directors or their associates in the transferee company; and
 - (q) A certificate from the auditors of the transferee company that the information contained in the offer/recommendation is correct,
- 2) Every such offer shall contain a statement by or on behalf of the transferee company, disclosing the steps it has taken to ensure that necessary cash will be available.

- 3) Every circular containing, or recommending acceptance of, such offer shall be presented to the Registrar of Companies for registration and no such circular shall be issued until it is so registered. The Registrar may refuse to register any such circular which does not contain the information as in (1) above which are required to be given or if the circular issued sets out such information in a manner likely to give a false impression. Failure to present to the Registrar is punishable with fine.
- 4) An appeal shall lie to the Tribunal against an order of the Registrar refusing to register any such circular.

Obligation not to seek compensation

It is provided that in certain specified cases of transfer of shares by a transferor company to a transferee company, no director of the transferor company shall receive any payment by way of compensation for loss of office, or as consideration for retirement from office or in connection with such loss or retirement from a transferor company or except as provided in the Companies Act from the transferee company or any other person, [section 320(1)]. The specified cases are:

Transfer to any persons all or any of the shares of the company being a transfer resulting from:

- (i) an offer made to the general body of shareholders;
- (ii) an offer made by or on behalf of some other body corporate with a view to the company becoming a subsidiary of such body corporate or a subsidiary of its holding company;
- (iii) an offer made by or on behalf of an individual with a view to his obtaining the right to exercise, or control the exercise of, not less than one-third of the total voting power at any general meeting of the company; or
- (iv) any other offer which is conditional on acceptance to a given extent.

In the case of receipt of compensation from the transferee company or any other person, the director concerned must ensure that particulars with respect to the payment proposed to be made by the transferees or other person (including the amount thereof) are included in, or sent with, any notice of the offer made for their shares which is given to any shareholders. [section 320(2)].

If there is default in the above, any sum received by the director on account of the payment shall be deemed to have been received by him in trust for any persons who have sold their shares as a result of the offer made, and the expenses incurred by him in distributing that sum amongst those persons shall be borne by him and not retained out of that sum.

This is very similar to the prohibition from payment of compensation for loss of office in case of transfer of whole or substantially whole of the undertaking of a company as provided in section 319 of the Companies Act.

Procedure

Rule 12 of the Company (Central Government's) General Rules and Forms, 1956 provides the manner in which notice under sub-section (1) or 2(a) of section 395 are to be issued. The Rule reads as follows:

12. (1) The notice required to be given by a transferee company—

- (a) to any dissenting shareholder of the transferor company in pursuance of section 395, sub-section (1); or
- (b) to any shareholder of the transferor company who has not assented to the scheme or contract in pursuance of section 395, sub-section (2), clause (a),

Takeover of Control and Management by secured creditors

Another method of takeover of a company is envisaged by the Securitization and Reconstruction of Finance Assets and Enforcement of Security Interest Act, 2002 (SRFAESIA). Under the aforesaid Act, as part of measures for asset reconstruction by securitization company or reconstruction company, such a company could take over the management of the business of a borrower. At the outset, it should be pointed out that such a measure is possible only in terms of guidelines to be framed by the Reserve Bank of India, and till date no such guidelines have been prescribed.

In this regard, section 9 of SRFAESIA inter alia provides that —

Without prejudice to the provisions contained in any other law for the time being in force, a securitization company or reconstruction company may, for the purposes of asset reconstruction, having regard to the guidelines framed by the Reserve Bank in this behalf, provide for any one or more of the following measures, namely :—

- (a) the proper management of the business of the borrower, by change in, or take over of, the management of the business of the borrower;

If, and when a securitization company or a reconstruction company takes over the management of a borrower, it is provided in section 15 of SRFAESIA the manner and effect of such take over of management. The said section reads as follows:

Manner and effect of take over of management.

15. (1) When the management of business of a borrower is taken over by a secured creditor, the secured creditor may, by publishing a notice in a newspaper published in English language and in a newspaper published in on Indian language in circulation in the place where the principal office of the borrower is situated, appoint as many persons as it thinks fit—
 - (a) in a case in which the borrower is a company as defined in the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956), to be the directors of that borrower in accordance with the provisions of that Act; or
 - (b) in any other case, to be the administrator of the business of the borrower.
- (2) On publication of a notice under sub-section (1),—
 - (a) in any case where the borrower is a company as defined in the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956), all persons holding office as directors of the company and in any other case, all persons holding any office having power of superintendence, direction and control of the business of the borrower immediately before the publication of the notice under sub-section (1), shall be deemed to have vacated their offices as such;
 - (b) any contract of management between the borrower and any director or manager thereof holding office as such immediately before publication of the notice under sub-section (1), shall be deemed to be terminated;
 - (c) the directors or the administrators appointed under this section shall take such steps as may be necessary to take into their custody or under their control all the property, effects and actionable claims to which the business of the borrower is, or appears to be, entitled and all the property and effects of the business of the borrower shall be deemed to be in the custody of the directors or administrators, as the case may be, as from the date of the publication of the notice;
 - (d) the directors appointed under this section shall, for all purposes, be the directors of the company of the borrower and such directors or as the case may be, the administrators appointed under this section, shall alone be entitled to exercise all the powers of the directors or as the case may be, of the persons exercising powers of superintendence, direction and control, of the business of the borrower whether such powers are derived from the memorandum or articles of association of the company of the borrower or from any other source whatsoever.

- (3) Where the management of the business of a borrower, being a company as defined in the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956), is taken over by the secured creditor, then, notwithstanding anything contained in the said Act or in the Memorandum or Articles of Association of such borrower,—
 - (a) it shall not be lawful for the shareholders of such company or any other person to nominate or appoint any person to be a director of the company;
 - (b) no resolution passed at any meeting of the shareholders of such company shall be given effect to unless approved by the secured creditor;
 - (c) no proceeding for the winding up of such company or for the appointment of a receiver in respect thereof shall lie in any court, except with the consent of the secured creditor.
- (4) Where the management of the business of a borrower had been taken over by the secured creditor, the secured creditor shall, on realization of his debt in full, restore the management of the business of the borrower to him.

From the above it would be seen a strong signal is sent to borrowing companies that default in repayment of loan to banks or financial institutions might result in change of management. The takeover if and when effected in terms of the above section is valid only till the debt in question has been realized in full. In this sense it is only a temporary takeover of the management of a company.

By a Circular No. DNBS. PD.CC.I/SCRC/10.30/2002-2003 dated April 23, 2003, the Reserve Bank had stated that "The Bank is in the process of framing a set of standard guidelines in the matter of takeover of the management, sale or lease of whole or part of the business of the borrower. Securitization Companies and Reconstruction Companies are, therefore, advised to refrain from exercising the measures of takeover of management, sale or lease of the borrowers' business as provided for in Section 9 of the Act, until guidelines in this regard are notified by the Reserve Bank of India," As stated earlier, no such guidelines have been issued till date.

In this regard, it must be noted that section 35 of SRFAESIA provides that the provisions of the SRFAESIA shall have effect, notwithstanding anything inconsistent therewith contained in any other law for the time being in force or any instrument having effect by virtue of any such law. Further section 37 provides that the provisions of SRFAESIA shall be in addition to, and not in derogation of, the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956), the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956 (42 of 1956), the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act, 1992 (15 of 1992), the Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993 (51 of 1993) or any other law for the time being in force.

In the light of the above, a takeover by a secured creditor under the SRFAESIA will also be subject to Takeover Regulations and the Companies Act, 1956 provisions.

TAKEOVER REGULATIONS
SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE BOARD OF INDIA (SUBSTANTIAL ACQUISITION OF SHARES AND TAKEOVERS) REGULATIONS, 1997

Preliminary

The Securities and Exchange Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 1994, ("Takeover Code 1994") was a maiden attempt in India to regulate in an organized manner 'takeover' of a quoted company. It was found to have certain deficiencies. Within two years of its working a need was felt to improve the regulations. Substantial modifications were made and the entire regulation was recast in 1997 and the new regulations - Securities and Exchange Board of India (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, (Takeover Code 1997 or the Regulations) - was announced by Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) after receiving the report of a high powered Committee under the Chairmanship of Justice P. N. Bhagwati, former Chief Justice of India ("Justice Bhagwati Committee"). Since 1997 further changes were made based on the recommendations of the Review Committee again chaired by Justice P. N. Bhagwati. Presently there is a move to overhaul the entire Takeover Code and SEBI constituted a Takeover Regulations Advisory Committee under the Chairmanship of Shri C. Achuthan. This Committee submitted its recommendations in July 2010, including a draft text of the proposed takeover regulations in part III of the Report. The proposed Code is yet to be adopted. Apart from this the Competition Commission of India has circulated a draft of Competition of India (Procedure in regard to the transactions of business relating to combination) Regulations.

The Takeover Code 1997 underwent several amendments. The latest one being SEBI (Substantial Acquisition of Shares and Takeovers) (Amendment) Regulations, 2013.

Applicability

The objectives of the Takeover Code 1997 are to regulate substantial acquisition of shares and takeover of companies whose shares are listed on a stock exchange i.e. listed company. They also apply in a limited sense to an unlisted company including a body corporate incorporated outside India, so long as such acquisitions give indirect control over or substantial voting rights in, a listed company. The other enactments which have a bearing, on such substantial acquisition are Companies Act 1956, Securities Contracts Regulation Act (SCR Act), the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act (SEBI Act) and various Regulations made there under, the Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999 ("FEMA") and the Competition Act, 2002, Industrial policy, and other governmental policy and procedures, as also other legislations affecting an industry.

The Takeover Code 1997 deals with an acquirer's —

- (a) substantial acquisition of shares of a target company or
- (b) substantial acquisition of voting rights of a target company or
- (c) acquisition of control over a target company.

The provisions of the Regulations have been discussed in detail in study note 3.5. Please refer the same.

Joint Ventures (JVs)

Introduction

One form of business reorganization carried out to achieve economic growth based on the strengths of an enterprise - commercial, financial, technical, managerial, manufacturing, marketing or research skills or a combination of one or more of these skills - is the profitable exploitation of such skills by combining its strengths with another enterprise. This is generally achieved by entering into agreements between the enterprises. Such an agreement could be any one or more of the following types:

- (a) Traditional joint venture
 - (i) Technical collaboration agreement
 - (ii) Financial collaboration agreement
 - (iii) Licensing agreement for use of Intellectual Properties
 - (iv) Licensing manufacturing operations
- (b) Franchising arrangement
- (c) Outsourcing
 - (i) Business Process Outsourcing agreement
 - (ii) Business Process Off shoring agreement

(iii) Knowledge Process Outsourcing agreement

A joint venture, being an entity founded on mutual belief and faith, would call for certain sacrifices or reconciliation. If the parties do not fully understand the objectives - benefit for both parties - for which they have come together then such a joint venture would be a failure.

Joint Venture- Definition

A joint venture is an arrangement generally between two or more persons coming together with a view to co-operate with each other to carry on a business. The agreement could be a written agreement or even an oral arrangement, though the former is preferred. The expression "joint venture" has not been defined in the Companies Act 1956, but under one of the Accounting Standards prescribed under the Companies Act viz the Accounting Standards (AS) 27 - explains the concept of a joint venture. As we are concerned with the company law relating to joint ventures, we give below the explanations contained in the AS 27 to highlight the nature of a joint venture. There is also a reference to "joint venture" in other Accounting Standards such as AS 18, AS 21 and AS 23. A word of caution, in that, the explanations under the mandatory Accounting Standards AS 27, covers only joint ventures which have joint control of operations or joint control of assets or joint control of entities. There could be other joint ventures which are in the nature of co-operation without having joint control, in relation to which AS 27 does not apply. However, the characteristics enumerated in AS 27 do have a bearing to other joint ventures as well.

In New Horizons Ltd vs. Union of India [1995 (1) SCC 478] it was held:

"The expression "joint venture" is more frequently used in the United States. It connotes a legal entity in the nature of a partnership engaged in the joint undertaking of a particular transaction for mutual profit or an association of persons or companies jointly undertaking some commercial enterprise wherein all contribute assets and share risks. It requires a community of interest in the performance of the subject matter, a right to direct and govern the policy in connection therewith, and duty, which may be altered by agreement, to share both in profit and losses. According to Words and Phrases, Permanent Edition, a joint venture is an association of two or more persons to carry out a single business enterprise for profit."

Further, one may also refer to the following definition of a joint venture:

"A joint venture is to be distinguished from a relationship of independent contractor, the latter being one who, exercising an independent employment, contracts to do work according to his own methods and without being subject to the control of his employer except as to the result of the work, while a joint venture is a special combination of two or more persons where, in some specific venture, a profit is jointly sought without any actual partnership or corporate designation."

Forms of Joint Venture covered by the AS 27

This Standard identifies three broad types — jointly controlled operations, jointly controlled assets and jointly controlled entities — which are commonly described as, and meet the definition of, joint ventures. The following characteristics are common to all joint ventures:

- (a) two or more venturers are bound by a contractual arrangement; and
- (b) the contractual arrangement establishes joint control.

The expression "joint venture" is defined to mean "a contractual arrangement whereby two or more parties undertake an economic activity, which is subject to joint control"; the expression "Joint control" is defined as "the contractually agreed sharing of control over an economic activity" and the expression "Control" means "the power to govern the financial and operating policies of an economic activity so as to obtain benefits from it".

Contractual Arrangement

The existence of a contractual arrangement distinguishes interests which involve joint control from investments in associates in which the investor has significant influence i.e. holding of 20% and more of equity. Activities which have no contractual arrangement to establish joint control are not joint ventures for the purposes of this Standard. The contractual arrangement may be evidenced in a number of ways, for example by a contract between the venturers or minutes of discussions between the venturers. In some cases, the arrangement is incorporated in the articles or other by-laws of the joint venture.

Whatever its form, the contractual arrangement is normally in writing and deals with such matters as:

- (a) the activity, duration and reporting obligations of the joint venture;
- (b) the appointment of the board of directors or equivalent governing body of the joint venture and the voting rights of the venturers;
- (c) capital contributions by the venturers; and
- (d) the sharing by the venturers of the output, income, expenses or results of the joint venture.

The contractual arrangement establishes joint control over the joint venture. Such an arrangement ensures that no single venturer is in a position to unilaterally control the activity. The arrangement identifies those decisions in areas essential to the goals of the joint venture which require the consent of all the venturers and those decisions which may require the consent of a specified majority of the venturers. The contractual arrangement may identify one venturer as the operator or manager of the joint venture. The operator does not control the joint venture but acts within the financial and operating policies which have been agreed to by the venturers in accordance with the contractual arrangement and delegated to the operator.

Jointly Controlled Operations

The operation of some joint ventures involves the use of the assets and other resources of the venturers rather than the establishment of a corporation, partnership or other entity, or a financial structure that is separate from the venturers themselves. Each venturer uses its own fixed assets and carries its own inventories. It also incurs its own expenses and liabilities and raises its own finance, which represent its own obligations. The joint venture's activities may be carried out by the venturer's employees alongside the venturer's similar activities. The joint venture agreement usually provides means by which the revenue from the jointly controlled operations and any expenses incurred in common are shared among the venturers.

An example of a jointly controlled operation is when two or more venturers combine their operations, resources and expertise in order to manufacture, market and distribute, jointly, a particular product, such as an aircraft. Different parts of the manufacturing process are carried out by each of the venturers. Each venturer bears its own costs and takes a share of the revenue from the sale of the aircraft, such share being determined in accordance with the contractual arrangement.

Jointly Controlled Assets

Some joint ventures involve the joint control, and often the joint ownership, by the venturers of one or more assets contributed to, or acquired for the purpose of, the joint venture and dedicated to the purposes of the joint venture. The assets are used to obtain economic benefits for the venturers. Each venturer may take a share of the output from the assets and each bears an agreed share of the expenses incurred.

These joint ventures do not involve the establishment of a corporation, partnership or other entity, or a financial structure that is separate from the venturers themselves. Each venturer has control over its share of future economic benefits through its share in the jointly controlled asset.

An example of a jointly controlled asset is an oil pipeline jointly controlled and operated by a number of oil production companies. Each venturer uses the pipeline to transport its own product in return for which it bears an agreed proportion of the expenses of operating the pipeline. Another example of a jointly controlled asset is when two enterprises jointly control a property, each taking a share of the rents received and bearing a share of the expenses.

Jointly Controlled Entities

A jointly controlled entity is a joint venture which involves the establishment of a corporation, partnership or other entity in which each venturer has an interest. The entity operates in the same way as other enterprises, except that a contractual arrangement between the venturers establishes joint control over the economic activity of the entity.

A jointly controlled entity controls the assets of the joint venture, incurs liabilities and expenses and earns income. It may enter into contracts in its own name and raise finance for the purposes of the joint venture activity. Each venturer is entitled to a share of the results of the jointly controlled entity, although some jointly controlled entities also involve a sharing of the output of the joint venture.

An example of a jointly controlled entity is when two enterprises combine their activities in a particular line of business by transferring the relevant assets and liabilities into a jointly controlled entity. Another example is when an enterprise commences a business in a foreign country in conjunction with the Government or other agency in that country, by establishing a separate entity which is jointly controlled by the enterprise and the Government or agency.

Many jointly controlled entities are similar to those joint ventures referred to as jointly controlled operations or jointly controlled assets. For example, the venturers may transfer a jointly controlled asset, such as an oil pipeline, into a jointly controlled entity. Similarly, the venturers may contribute, into a jointly controlled entity, assets which will be operated jointly. Some jointly controlled operations also involve the establishment of a jointly controlled entity to deal with particular aspects of the activity, for example, the design, marketing, distribution or after-sales service of the product.

A jointly controlled entity maintains its own accounting records and prepares and presents financial statements in the same way as other enterprises in conformity with the requirements applicable to that jointly controlled entity.

Legal form of a joint venture

A joint venture could take any one of the following legal forms:

- (a) A joint venture company - Generally a private limited company, with or without joint control;
- (b) A Registered Partnership - with or without limited liability;
- (c) Contractual - a mutual agreement for a specific job outlining the rights and obligations of each party.

The Indian party to a joint venture agreement could be a private limited company or a public limited company. Generally for new joint ventures for large projects a Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV) in the form a private limited company is preferred, especially as it is possible to record the private arrangement for joint control in the Articles of the company. If, however, the Indian party, being a public limited company, admits a joint venture partner into it, then care should be taken to amend the Articles of the company. It is necessary that the laws in India should not pre-empt the decision as to what structure is appropriate for controlling businesses. Such prescriptions will make the environment rigid and put Indian companies at a disadvantage vis-a-vis their competitors internationally. Such restrictions would also not facilitate sound corporate planning, formation of joint ventures, international operations or restructuring of companies. Doubts have been raised as to certain restrictions for transfer of shares as it may conflict with the provisions of Section 111A. Further, in view of the specific provisions of Section 9 of Companies Act 1956, the Articles will have to be consistent with the Companies Act 1956 as otherwise the Articles will not be enforceable.

Contents of a joint venture agreement

Given below are some of the suggested contents of a joint venture agreement:

- (a) Objective of joint venture;
- (b) Conditions precedent, if any, to be complied by the parties;
- (c) Form or structure of the joint venture - company, partnership, other association etc.;
- (d) Capital structure and equity participation;
- (e) Financing options;
- (f) Management - day-to-day as well as overall;
- (g) Auditors;
- (h) Operational issues;
- (i) Distribution policy;
- (j) Intellectual property rights;
- (k) Dispute resolution method;
- (l) Disclosures and warranties;
- (m) Confidentiality provisions;
- (n) Preemptive rights;
- (o) Events of default;
- (p) Defaults and termination;
- (q) Non-assignment;
- (r) Mode of communication;
- (s) Effect of variation, if any;
- (t) Jurisdiction of Courts;
- (u) Interpretation of the Agreement; and
- (v) Supplementary agreements relating to licensing of trade mark, territory, technical know-how and non-competition.

Types of joint venture

As stated earlier a joint venture agreement is entered into or joint ventures are formed between:

- (a) an entity which possesses modern technology, technical skill, knowledge and financial strengths joins hands with an entity which does not possess or has a dearth of such technology, skills and finance but possesses certain other strengths and skills which the first entity does not possess or has a dearth of it - traditional joint venture;
- (b) an entity which has trade mark, trade name and the marketing skills gets its products manufactured by another entity who has only manufacturing capacity but no product, trade name or trade mark or marketing strength but enjoys certain concessions - loan licensing or product outsourcing;
- (c) an entity which has the market (ready customers) but needs to get the services done more economically from another entity who has no access to such market or have no ready customer but has ability to render the services more economically or in a globalised economy has the advantage of time difference - Business Process Outsourcing or Off shoring (BPOs);

- (d) an entity which has the management skills for marketing products, and gives such skills to another entity who does not possess such skills but has presence in the market concerned - Franchising; etc.

We now deal broadly with each of the above types of joint ventures.

(a) Traditional joint venture

The traditional joint venture envisages an agreement for the transfer of technology or a combination of transfer of technology and trade mark. In certain cases these transfers include financial participation by the joint venture partners.

Prior to the opening up of Indian economy to foreign investment there were restrictions on such joint venture agreements under the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act (FERA). Such joint venture needed prior approval of the RBI and the Central Government. There were severe restrictions on allotment of shares in the Indian company to foreign entities, payment of royalty, use of trade mark etc.

Under the liberalized foreign investment policy foreign collaboration has been permitted under automatic investment route with far less control than what was prevailing earlier. Further with foreign direct investment allowed with least hassle such agreements have become a thing of the past as the foreign entities could set up their own subsidiaries in all fields except a few strategic industries affecting the country's sovereignty and security as also in cases covered by Press Note 1 of 2005.

We quote the relevant portion of Press Note 1 of 2005:

"The Government has reviewed the guidelines notified vide Press Note 18 (1998 series) which stipulated approval of the Government for new proposals for foreign investment/technical collaboration where the foreign investor has or had any previous joint venture or technology transfer trademark agreement in the same or allied field in India.

New proposals for foreign investment/technical collaboration would henceforth be allowed -under the automatic route, subject to sectoral policies, as per the following guidelines:

- (i) Prior approval of the Government would be required only in cases where the foreign investor has an existing joint venture or technology transfer/trademark agreement in the 'same' field. The onus to provide requisite justification as also proof to the satisfaction of the Government that the new proposal would or would not in any way jeopardize the interests of the existing joint venture or technology/trademark partner or other stakeholders would lay equally on the foreign investor/technology supplier and the Indian partner.
- (ii) Even in cases where the foreign investor has a joint venture or technology transfer/trademark agreement in the 'same' field prior approval of the Government will not be required in the following cases:
 - (a) Investments to be made by Venture Capital Funds registered with the Security and Exchange Board of India (SEBI); or
 - (b) where in the existing joint-venture investment by either of the parties is less than 3%; or
 - (c) where the existing venture/collaboration is defunct or sick.

In so far as joint ventures to be entered into after the date of this Press Note are concerned, the joint venture agreement may embody a 'conflict of interest' clause to safeguard the interests of joint venture partners in the event of one of the partners desiring to set up another joint venture or a wholly owned subsidiary in the 'same' field of economic activity."

Since the Indian industry has also grown there are possibilities of traditional joint ventures with other Indian entities. Further, under the liberalized policy for encouraging Indian investment abroad, there are specific provisions for investing in joint ventures abroad and also setting up wholly owned subsidiaries abroad.

(b) Loan Licensing or business product outsourcing arrangements

One form of reorganization of a business, within India, is to effect economies in cost of manufacture, and source the products at cheaper costs. This could be achieved by supplying the base raw materials and getting the products manufactured by one or more entities whose cost of manufacturing is low. Further such small entities may be able to take advantage of incentives given by governments and thus reduce cost of manufacturing. This type sourcing of products can be achieved by entering into a licence agreement, popularly known as 'loan licensing' or business product outsourcing.

This form of licensing is rampant in India especially adopted by the various automobile, pharmaceutical and electrical manufacturing companies. Readers would be aware of special incentives and benefits granted to small scale and medium scale industries in India. The large scale industries are at a disadvantage due to its size as compared to small scale and medium scale industries. At the same time the latter do not have the funding available to carry out manufacturing and marketing of their products. They are unable to spend large funds for creating a market for their products. Again there are investment restrictions in small scale industries viz. FDI is not allowed without prior FIPB approval beyond 24% and the value of plant and machinery could not be more than Rs. 5 crores. Hence it suited both the large scale manufacturer who have the financial and technical strengths for marketing the products and the small scale and medium scale manufacturers who lack such facilities. These small scale and medium scale manufacturers have manufacturing facilities with smaller capacity, and hence fewer labour issues and at the same time they get various tax incentives and concessional loan from banks and other financial institutions. By entering into such arrangements both parties benefit.

In this type of reorganization the licensor sources his products from one or more manufacturers to whom the licensor pays a fee. Often the raw materials are procured by the licensor and remain in their custody at the premises of the licensee. The licensor provides know how and retains with itself the quality control in respect of the products. The licensee utilizes its man power (labour), facility and factory management skills. It gets an advance payment towards these costs and thus financing is indirectly done by the licensor. The packaged goods will bear the name of the manufacturer with specific mention that it is manufactured under licence from the licensor, and the trade marks etc. of the product remains with the licensor only. The agreement is generally drafted in such a manner that it avoids the concept of labour contract, but a licence to manufacture and thus, as far as possible, the licensor is relieved from onerous labour problems. All the licences for manufacturing, premises etc. remains with the licensee only.

(c) Business Process Outsourcing and or Off shoring

We have seen that as a cost saving measure companies enter into loan licensing or business product outsourcing agreements, While the outsourcing involving a manufacturing activity is referred to as a business product outsourcing, the activity involving services is called business process outsourcing. When this type of outsourcing takes place between an entity in one country and another entity in another country it is sometimes referred to as business process offshore outsourcing or off shoring. When the services are dependent computer software it is often referred to as Information Technology Enabled Services (ITES). Examples of BPO services include Customer Support, Technical Support, Telemarketing, Insurance Processing, legal services, medical services, Data Processing, Internet/ Online/Web Research and so on.

Thus by BPO we refer to contracting of a specific task, generally a non-core activity, with a third party service provider within the same country or outside a country. Usually, BPO is implemented as a cost-saving measure. Sometimes it is done to take advantage of time difference between countries so as to give a 24 hours and 7 days a week (24/7) services. BPO may consist of back office jobs such as billing or purchasing etc. or front office tasks such as marketing or technical support. Without being offensive, in a crude sense BPO services involve a 'slave trade' except that the 'slaves' are often educated and qualified professionals and in certain cases take business risks as well.

Before entering into a BPO arrangement the company outsourcing must undertake the following steps:

- (a) evaluate the company's philosophy on the role of outsourcing its activities;
- (b) to select appropriate outsourcing project;
- (c) evaluate the profitability of outsourcing;
- (d) to decide on the appropriate outsourcing location;
- (e) to identify the appropriate service provider;
- (f) to decide on the legal, pricing and service level agreement terms; and
- (g) to determine the management and governance issues.

There are instances where the BPO acts as a 'virtual office' of the person for whom the services are rendered. This happens where the service provider in India develops the BPO through a special purpose vehicle (SPV) wholly owned by the provider, but render services for one specific person and manages and run the SPV during the initial days of operation and after attaining a specific performance level the person to whom the services are rendered will take over the SPV at either a pre-determined price or a negotiated price. During the period of the agreement the SPV cannot render any service to any other person and thus the SPV act as the 'virtual office' of the person to whom the services are provided. In this type of joint venture there is risk and finance of the service provider involved and the other party gets services done from the provider and unless the service level reaches certain level of performance the SPV will remain with the service provider. In case the level of service does not reach the desired level, the BPO contract will get terminated. In this type of business reorganization the company which is providing the service will need to take greater care as its investments are involved.

(d) Franchising

One form of successfully exploiting one's success of an established business, trade name, acceptability of products, services and management support systems is to license these valuable assets to another person for a fee and thus utilize these self generated assets for profit. This type of licensing relating to goods and services is referred to as 'franchising'.

When you finance the growth of your business through franchising it allows the existing shareholders to maintain a greater share of equity within the firm. This means that going forward they can run the business in a way that they see fit, and capitalize on opportunities when they arise.

The term "franchising" is defined in the Code issued by the Franchising Association of India, as "a system of marketing goods and/or services and/or technology, which is based upon a close and ongoing collaboration between legally and financially separate and independent undertakings, the Franchisor and its Individual Franchisees whereby the Franchisor grants its Individual Franchisees the right, and imposes the obligation, to conduct a business in accordance with the Franchisor's concept. The right entitles and compels the individual Franchisee, in exchange for a direct or indirect financial consideration, to use the Franchisor's trade name, and/or trade mark and/or service mark, know-how, business and technical methods, procedural system, and other industrial and/or intellectual property rights, supported by continuing provision of commercial and technical assistance, within the framework and for the term of a written franchise agreement, concluded between parties for this purpose".

By franchising brand equity, and technology of one person - generally a foreign brand owner - could be combined with another person - generally a domestic entity - by providing finances, building, equipment etc. Under such a licence the franchisee is required to follow standards of quality, service, value, formula and specifications in respect of goods or products or services of the franchisor. The franchisee is also required by the agreement to adhere to business ethics of the franchisor and to protect the goodwill, trademarks and technology of the franchisor.

For exploiting the above said assets of the franchisor, the franchisee may be required to pay an initial fee, ongoing management fees, a percentage of the turnover of the business carried on under the franchise or a combination of these. In certain cases the franchisee is required to purchase goods and products from the franchiser at fixed price.

A franchise business can take different legal forms - sole traders, partnerships or limited companies. Whatever the structure, the franchisee's freedom to manage the business is limited by the terms of the franchise agreement.

Franchise agreements usually set out how the franchised business should be run, although they may allow some flexibility. Franchisers usually provide management help and training to franchisees.

The advantage of such a form of business reorganization is to take advantage of:

- Some one else's tested products and or services;
- Build a profitable organization riding on the back of large, well-organized franchisor who normally carries out advertisement campaigns;
- Take advantage of comprehensive training programmes and marketing skills of the franchisor; and
- Instant good will created with customers that the products or services supplied are best value for money and these are provided under the 'supervision' of established business house.

Successful examples of franchises run are the Hotel chains, eateries like McDonald, Pizza Hut, Kentucky Chicken etc. The recent entry of Wal Mart into India through Bharti group as a new venture in retail trading.

The FAI's Code, which is binding on its members, enumerates the following issues should be covered in any franchise agreement:

- Requiring the parties to comply with the Code;
- the rights of the Franchisor;
- the rights granted to the Individual Franchisee;
- the goods and/or services to be provided to the Individual Franchisee;
- the obligations of the Franchisor;
- the obligations of the Individual Franchisee;
- the terms of payment by the Individual Franchisee;
- the duration of the agreement;
- the basis for any renewal of the agreement;
- the terms upon which the Individual Franchisee may sell or transfer the franchised business and the Franchisor's possible preemption rights in this respect;
- provisions relevant to the use by the individual Franchisee of the Franchisor's distinctive signs, trade name, trade mark, service mark, store sign, logo or other distinguishing identification;
- the Franchisor's right to adapt the franchise system to new or changed methods;
- provisions for termination of the agreement;
- provisions for surrendering promptly upon termination of the franchise agreement any tangible and intangible property belonging to the Franchisor or other owner thereof.

The agreement must reflect the interests of the members of the franchised network in protecting the Franchisor's industrial and intellectual property rights and in maintaining the common identity and reputation of the franchised network. All agreements and all contractual arrangements in connection with the franchise relationship should be written in or translated by a sworn translator into the official language of the country the Individual Franchisee is established in, and signed agreements shall be given immediately to the Individual Franchisee.

Joint Venture between private sector and public sector

Many infrastructure projects involve very large financial resources apart from leaning towards social responsibility. Apart from infrastructure, as a policy to diversify industry in the country the governments -both Central and State, through public financial institutions owned by it, encourage setting up of industry in joint sector - a sector which is a joint venture between private and public sectors. In such cases the government and the private sector participant enter into a joint venture agreement under which both the parties participate in the equity while the private sector participant is vested with the management powers. The government also grants certain specific incentives to the joint venture entity. At some point of time later the government will reduce its stake or even sell out their stake to the private participant or to the public.

Infrastructure projects, we have pointed out earlier, has leanings towards social responsibility of the government. The government has the basic requirement of land and has the ability to acquire land for public good. Private sector with profit motive has less incentive to undertake infrastructure projects as they have long gestation period and involves large capital outlay. The government has the social responsibility to develop infrastructure and profit is not necessarily its sole motive. Hence joint venture in respect of infrastructure projects relating to national highways, airports, transport, oil exploration and the like take the shape of what is called build- operate-transfer (BOT) in which the government provides the land for the project and the private sector develops the project with certain concessions from the government and get its return on capital by operating the project for a fixed period. At the end of the fixed period the entire project is transferred to the government. In this regard the recent development of airport modernization, extension of national highways and development of motorways in India are examples. Normally BOT arrangements are adopted for greenfield projects.

There are many possible variations of the BOT model. Some of them are:

- (a) build-operate-own (BOO) arrangements, in which the assets remain indefinitely with the private sector participant;
- (b) design-build-operate (DBO) arrangements, in which the public and private sectors share responsibility for capital investments;
- (c) build-transfer-lease (BTL) arrangements under which the private sector takes back on lease land and other immovable assets and take on lease the project for management at some fixed remuneration;
- (d) build-own-operate-transfer (BOOT) arrangements where a certain part of the project is owned by the private sector while after realizing reasonable return by operating it and then transfer it back to the public sector;

A slight variation of the above arrangements could possibly be adopted as a model for revival and rehabilitation of sick industries where a model of design-build-finance-operate (DBFO) could be adopted and where the ownership continues to remain with the company.

Dispute Resolution

One aspect of any contract or agreement is the possibility of 'dispute' or 'differences' between the parties. Consequently all agreements must contain some provision for resolution of any dispute or difference arising between the parties, in the course of giving effect to the terms of the agreement. This is more pronounced in case of joint venture agreement as it is generally a contract under which joint control of the entity is envisaged. The disputes could be relating to financing the joint venture, day-to-day running of the business, managerial: control, policy matters relating to raising of capital, distribution of dividends and the like, non-disclosure, breach of warranty and such other matters.

Most agreements provide that if any dispute arises as to any matters contained in the agreement or in the interpretation of the different clauses in the agreement, the parties would endeavour to resolve the same amicably and if the dispute is remediable, a time frame is given for remedying the defect or action which resulted in the dispute. Failing this personal touch of the parties, normally the matter is resolved through arbitration proceedings. If the dispute does not get resolved through arbitration, the matters will have to be decided by the Court. Care should be taken to choose the law as applicable to arbitration and decide the courts which would have jurisdiction to resolve disputes.

Tax treatment of Joint Ventures

The tax treatment of joint ventures under the Income-tax Act, 1961, depends on the legal form the joint venture takes place. If it is through a separate corporate entity, no specific advantage exists. The new corporate entity would be subject to tax in the normal course. Under the present law any technical know-how fee or royalty for trade mark would be subject to tax in the hands of the foreign joint venture partner at specified tax rates. Dividend to the extent it suffers tax in the hands of the distributing company would not be subject to tax in the hands of the recipient.

If joint venture takes the shape of a partnership firm, then such entity would be subject to tax as any other partnership firm. The partners would not be subjected to tax on their share of income, once the liability is raised against the firm. Depending upon the provisions of Agreement between the countries of residence of the foreign collaborator benefit of tax credit for the tax paid by the firm would be available under the related agreement between the two countries for avoidance of double taxation. At the same the provisions relating to transfer pricing - a measure to curb tax avoidance - would also be applicable in such cases. This can happen irrespective of the legal entity is a company or a firm or an AOP.

If the joint venture is a one off arrangement then such a joint venture would be treated as an Association of Persons (AOP) for tax purposes and its income taxed accordingly, and the joint venture partners would not be subjected to tax on their share of income. The rate of tax is similar to a resident individual. However, as stated above the provisions of transfer pricing would be applicable in the respective country of residence of the joint venture partners.

If the joint venture in special cases such as exploration of mineral oils, business of civil construction in case of turnkey power projects, the non-resident joint venture partner would be charged to tax under provisions of sections 44BB and 44BBB.

One other issue which needs to be in mind is the determination of residential status of the joint venture entity. In this regard Section 6(3) of ITA 1961, provides that

- (3) A company is said to be resident in India in any previous year, if
- (i) it is an Indian company ; or
 - (ii) during that year, the control and management of its affairs is situated wholly in India.

Hence if the joint venture company is incorporated in India, it will be a resident for tax purposes in India. However, if it were a company incorporated outside India and even if there is joint control, such a company will not be resident of India for tax purposes as the control is not "wholly in India".

As against this legal form, if the joint venture is a partnership or AOP then in terms of section 6(4) of ITA 1961, such a joint venture would be treated as a resident for Indian tax purposes. Section 6(4) reads as follows:

- (4) Every other person is said to be resident in India in any previous year in every case, except where during that year the control and management of his affairs is situated wholly outside India.

This in a joint venture as there would be a joint control, some part of the control would vest in India and consequently the joint venture firm or AOP will be treated as a resident.

One should also consider the provisions of section 6(5) of ITA 1961, which reads as under:

- (5) If a person is resident in India in a previous year relevant to an assessment year in respect of any source of income, he shall be deemed to be resident in India in the previous year relevant to the assessment year in respect of each of his other sources of income.

Hence care should be taken to decide which legal form a joint venture should take keeping in view the effect of such a decision under the tax laws of India.

Joint Ventures provisions under FEMA

Since India has strict foreign exchange control regulations, any investment outside India by Indian companies is governed by Foreign Exchange Management (Transfer or issue of any foreign security) Regulations, 2000. This regulation was first notified by Notification No. FEMA 19/RB -2000 dated 3rd May 2000, later this was replaced by Notification 120/RB-2004 dated July 7, 2004. This Notification is modified from time to time and every year the Reserve Bank of India issues a Master Circular on the subject, incorporating the modifications made.

We give below the salient aspect contained in the Master Circular No.11/2012-13 which relate to joint ventures abroad (JV):

Introduction

- (1) Overseas investments in Joint Ventures (JV) and Wholly Owned Subsidiaries (WOS) have been recognised as important avenues for promoting global business by Indian entrepreneurs. Joint Ventures are perceived as a medium of economic and business co-operation between India and other countries. Transfer of technology and skill, sharing of results of R&D, access to wider global market, promotion of brand image, generation of employment and utilisation of raw materials available in India and in the host country are other significant benefits arising out of such overseas investments. They are also important drivers of foreign trade through increased exports of plant and machinery and goods and services from India and also a source of foreign exchange earnings by way of dividend earnings, royalty, technical know-how fee and other entitlements on such investments.
- (2) In keeping with the spirit of liberalisation, which has become the hallmark of economic policy in general, and Foreign Exchange regulations in particular, the Reserve Bank has been progressively relaxing the rules and simplifying the procedures both for current account as well as capital account transactions.

Statutory basis

- (1) Section 6 of the Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999 provides powers to the Reserve Bank to specify, in consultation with the Government of India the classes of permissible capital account transactions and limits up to which foreign exchange is admissible for such transactions. Section 6(3) of the aforesaid Act provides powers to the Reserve Bank to prohibit, restrict or regulate various transactions referred to in the sub-clauses of that sub-section, by making Regulations.
- (2) In exercise of the above powers conferred under the Act, the Reserve Bank has in supersession of the earlier Notification No.FEMA19/RB-2000 dated 3rd May 2000 and subsequent amendments thereto, issued Foreign Exchange Management (Transfer or Issue of any Foreign Security) Regulations, 2004 vide Notification No. FEMA 120/RB-2004 dated July 7, 2004. The Notification seeks to regulate acquisition and transfer of a foreign security by a person resident in India i.e. investment by Indian entities in overseas joint ventures and wholly owned subsidiaries as also investment by a person resident in India in shares and securities issued outside India. Overseas Investment can be made under two routes viz. (i) Automatic Route and (ii) Approval Route.

Prohibitions

Indian parties are prohibited from making investment in a foreign entity engaged in real estate (meaning buying and selling of real estate or trading in Transferable Development Rights (TDRs) but does not include development of townships, construction of residential/commercial premises, roads or bridges) or banking business, without the prior approval of the Reserve Bank.

General Permission

In terms of Regulation 4 of the Notification, general permission has been granted to persons residents in India for purchase / acquisition of securities in the following manner :

- a. out of the funds held in RFC account;
- b. as bonus shares on existing holding of foreign currency shares; and
- c. when not permanently resident in India, out of their foreign currency resources outside India.

General permission is also available to sell the shares so purchased or acquired.

Automatic Route

- (1) In terms of Regulation 6 of the Notification, an Indian party has been permitted to make investment in overseas Joint Ventures (JV) / Wholly Owned Subsidiaries (WOS), not exceeding 400 per cent of the net worth as on the date of last audited balance sheet of the Indian party, i.e. a company incorporated in India or a body created under an Act of Parliament or a partnership firm registered under the Indian Partnership Act, 1932, making investment in a JV/WOS abroad and includes any other entity in India excluding individuals as may be notified by the Reserve Bank.
- (2) The ceiling of 400 per cent of net worth will not be applicable where the investment is made out of balances held in Exchange Earners' Foreign Currency account of the Indian party or out of funds raised through ADRs/GDRs. The Indian party should approach an Authorised Dealer Category - I bank with an application in Form ODI (Annex A) and prescribed enclosures / documents for effecting remittances towards such investments.
- (3) The total financial commitment of the Indian party, in all the Joint Ventures / Wholly Owned Subsidiaries put together, shall not exceed 400% of the net worth of the Indian party as on the date of the last audited balance sheet. For the purpose of determining the 'total financial commitment' within the limit of 400% as specified above, the following shall be reckoned, namely:
 - a. 100% of the amount of equity shares;
 - b. 100% of the amount of compulsorily and mandatorily convertible preference shares;
 - c. 100% of the amount of other preference shares;
 - d. 100% of the amount of loan;
 - e. 100% of the amount of guarantee (other than performance guarantee) issued by the Indian party;
 - f. 100% of the amount of bank guarantee issued by a resident bank on behalf of JV or WOS of the Indian party provided the bank guarantee is backed by a counter guarantee / collateral by the Indian party.
 - g. 50% of the amount of performance guarantee issued by the Indian party provided that the outflow on account of invocation of performance guarantee results in the breach of the limit of the financial commitment in force, prior permission of the Reserve Bank is to be obtained before executing remittance beyond the limit prescribed for the financial commitment.

The investments are subject to the following conditions:

- a) The Indian party / entity may extend loan / guarantee only to an overseas JV/ WOS in which it has equity participation. Proposals from the Indian party for undertaking financial commitment without equity contribution in JV / WOS may be considered by the Reserve Bank under the approval route. AD banks may forward the proposals from their constituents after ensuring that the laws of the host country permit incorporation of a company without equity participation by the Indian party.

Indian entities may offer any form of guarantee - corporate or personal (including the personal guarantee by the indirect resident individual promoters of the Indian Party)/ primary or collateral / guarantee by the promoter company / guarantee by group company, sister concern or associate company in India provided that:

- i. All financial commitments including all forms of guarantees are within the overall ceiling prescribed for overseas investment by the Indian party i.e. currently within 400 per cent of the net worth as on the date of the last audited balance sheet of the Indian party.
- ii. No guarantee should be 'open ended' i.e. the amount and period of the guarantee should be specified upfront. In the case of performance guarantee, time specified for the completion of the contract shall be the validity period of the related performance guarantee.
- iii. In cases where invocation of the performance guarantees breach the ceiling for the financial exposure of 400 per cent of the net worth of the Indian Party, the Indian Party shall seek the prior approval of the Reserve Bank before remitting funds from India, on account of such invocation.
- iv. As in the case of corporate guarantees, all guarantees (including performance guarantees and Bank Guarantees / SBLC) are required to be reported to the Reserve Bank, in Form ODI-Part II. Guarantees issued by banks in India in favour of WOSs / JVs outside India, and would be subject to prudential norms, issued by the Reserve Bank (DBOD) from time to time.

Foot note: Compulsorily Convertible Preference Shares (CCPS) shall be treated at par with equity shares

Note: Specific approval of the Reserve Bank will be required for creating charge on immovable/ moveable property and other financial assets (except pledge of shares of overseas JV/WOS) of the Indian parent/ group companies in favour of a non-resident entity within the overall limit fixed (presently 400%) for financial commitment subject to submission of a 'No Objection' by the Indian Party and their Group companies from their Indian lenders.

- b) The Indian party should not be on the Reserve Bank's Exporters' caution list / list of defaulters to the banking system circulated by the Reserve Bank / Credit Information Bureau (India) Ltd. (CIBIL) / or any other credit information company as approved by the Reserve Bank or under investigation by any investigation / enforcement agency or regulatory body.
- c) All transactions relating to a JV / WOS should be routed through one branch of an Authorised Dealer bank to be designated by the Indian party.
- d) In case of partial / full acquisition of an existing foreign company, where the investment is more than USD 5 million, valuation of the shares of the company shall be made by a Category I Merchant Banker registered with SEBI or an Investment Banker / Merchant Banker outside India registered with the appropriate regulatory authority in the host country; and, in all other cases by a Chartered Accountant or a Certified Public Accountant.
- e) In cases of investment by way of swap of shares, irrespective of the amount, valuation of the shares will have to be made by a Category I Merchant Banker registered with SEBI or an Investment Banker outside India registered with the appropriate regulatory authority in the host country. Approval of the Foreign Investment Promotion Board (FIPB) will also be a prerequisite for investment by swap of shares.
- f) In case of investment in overseas JV / WOS abroad by a registered Partnership firm, where the entire funding for such investment is done by the firm, it will be in order for individual partners to hold shares for and on behalf of the firm in the overseas JV / WOS if the host country regulations or operational requirements warrant such holdings.
- g) An Indian party may acquire shares of a foreign company engaged in a bonafide business activity, in exchange of ADRs/GDRs issued to the latter in accordance with the Scheme for issue of Foreign Currency Convertible Bonds and Ordinary Shares (through Depository Receipt Mechanism)

Scheme, 1993, and the guidelines issued there under from time to time by the Government of India, provided:

- (i) ADRs/GDRs are listed on any stock exchange outside India;
 - (ii) The ADR and/or GDR issued for the purpose of acquisition is backed by underlying fresh equity shares issued by the Indian party;
 - (iii) The total holding in the Indian entity by persons resident outside India in the expanded capital base, after the new ADR and/or GDR issue, does not exceed the sectoral cap prescribed under the relevant regulations for such investment under FDI;
 - (iv) Valuation of the shares of the foreign company shall be:
 - (a) as per the recommendations of the Investment Banker if the shares are not listed on any recognized stock exchange; or
 - (b) based on the current market capitalisation of the foreign company arrived at on the basis of monthly average price on any stock exchange abroad for the three months preceding the month in which the acquisition is committed and over and above, the premium, if any, as recommended by the Investment Banker in its due diligence report in other cases.
- (4) The Indian Party is required to report such acquisition in form ODI to the AD Bank for submission to the Reserve Bank within a period of 30 days from the date of the transaction.

Note: Investments in Nepal are permitted only in Indian Rupees. Investments in Bhutan are permitted in Indian Rupees as well as in freely convertible currencies. All dues receivable on investments made in freely convertible currencies, as well as their sale / winding up proceeds are required to be repatriated to India in freely convertible currencies only. Investments in Pakistan by Indian Parties are permissible under the approval route.

Issue of guarantee by an Indian Party to step down subsidiary of JV /WOS

- (a) Indian Parties are permitted to issue corporate guarantees on behalf of their first level step down operating JV /WOS set up by their JV / WOS operating as a Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV) under the Automatic Route, subject to the condition that the financial commitment of the Indian Party is within the extant limit for overseas direct investment. It has been decided that irrespective of whether the direct subsidiary is an operating company or a SPV, the Indian promoter entity may extend corporate guarantee on behalf of the first generation step down operating company under the Automatic Route, within the prevailing limit for overseas direct investment. Such guarantees will have to be reported to the Reserve Bank in Form ODI, as hitherto, through the designated AD Category – I bank concerned.
- (b) Further, the issuance of corporate guarantee on behalf of second generation or subsequent level step down operating subsidiaries will be considered under the Approval Route, provided the Indian Party directly or indirectly holds 51 per cent or more stake in the overseas subsidiary for which such guarantee is intended to be issued.

Investment through Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV) under Automatic Route

- (i) Investments in JV/WOS abroad by Indian parties through the medium of a Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV) are also permitted under the Automatic Route in terms of Regulation 6 of the Notification, subject to the conditions that the Indian party is not included in the Reserve Bank's caution list or is under investigation by the Directorate of Enforcement or included in the list of defaulters to the banking system circulated by the Reserve Bank/any other Credit Information company as approved by the Reserve Bank. Indian parties whose names appear in the Defaulters' list require prior approval of the Reserve Bank for the investment.
- (ii) Setting up of an SPV under the Automatic Route is permitted for the purpose of making a investment in JV/WOS overseas.

Investment in unincorporated entities overseas under the Automatic Route

- (1) Investments in unincorporated entities overseas in the oil sector (i.e. for exploration and drilling for oil and natural gas, etc.) by Navaratna PSUs, ONGC Videsh Ltd.(OVL) and Oil India Ltd.(OIL) may be permitted by AD Category - I banks, without any limit, provided such investments are approved by the competent authority.
- (2) Other Indian companies are also permitted under the Automatic Route to invest in unincorporated entities overseas in the oil sector up to 400 per cent of their net worth provided the proposal has been approved by the competent authority and is duly supported by certified copy of the Board resolution approving such investment. Investment in excess of 400 per cent of the net worth of an Indian company shall require prior approval of the Reserve Bank.
- (3) Indian companies are also permitted to participate in a consortium with other international operators to construct and maintain submarine cable systems on co-ownership basis under the automatic route. Accordingly, AD Category - I banks may allow remittances by Indian companies for overseas direct investment, after ensuring that the Indian company has obtained necessary licence from the Department of Telecommunication, Ministry of Telecommunication & Information Technology, Government of India to establish, install, operate and maintain International Long Distance Services and also by obtaining a certified copy of the Board Resolution approving such investment.

Accordingly, these transactions may be reported by the Indian entities investing in the consortium to the AD Category - I banks in form ODI for enabling on-line submission of the same by the AD Category -I banks to the Reserve Bank for allotment of Unique Identification Number.

Method of Funding

- (1) Investment in an overseas JV / WOS may be funded out of one or more of the following sources:
 - i. drawal of foreign exchange from an AD bank in India;
 - ii. capitalisation of exports;
 - iii. swap of shares (valuation as mentioned in para B.1 (e) above);
 - iv. proceeds of External Commercial Borrowings (ECBs) / Foreign Currency Convertible Bonds (FCCBs);
 - v. in exchange of ADRs/GDRs issued in accordance with the Scheme for issue of Foreign Currency Convertible Bonds and Ordinar Shares (through Depository Receipt Mechanism) Scheme, 1993, and the guidelines issued thereunder from time to time by the Government of India;
 - vi. balances held in EEFC account of the Indian party; and
 - vii. proceeds of foreign currency funds raised through ADR / GDR issues.

In respect of (vi) and (vii) above, the ceiling of 400 per cent of the net worth will not apply. However, all investments made in the financial sector will be subject to compliance with Regulation 7 of the Notification, irrespective of the method of funding.

"Wherever, the host country Regulations stipulate that the investments into the country is required to be routed through a designated account, an Indian party will be allowed to open, hold and maintain Foreign Currency Account (FCA) abroad for the purpose of overseas direct investments subject to certain terms and conditions".

- (2) General permission has been granted to persons resident in India for purchase / acquisition of securities in the following manner :

- (i) out of funds held in RFC account;
- (ii) as bonus shares on existing holding of foreign currency shares; and
- (iii) when not permanently resident in India, out of their foreign currency resources outside India (para A.4 above)

Capitalisation of exports and other dues

- (1) Indian party is permitted to capitalise the payments due from the foreign entity towards exports, fees, royalties or any other dues from the foreign entity for supply of technical know-how, consultancy, managerial and other services within the ceilings applicable. Capitalisation of export proceeds remaining unrealised beyond the prescribed period of realization will require prior approval of the Reserve Bank.
- (2) Indian software exporters are permitted to receive 25 per cent of the value of their exports to an overseas software start-up company in the form of shares without entering into Joint Venture Agreements, with prior approval of the Reserve Bank.

Investments in Financial Services Sector

- (1) In terms of Regulation 7 of the Notification, an Indian party seeking to make investment in an entity outside India, which is engaged in the financial sector, should fulfill the following additional conditions:
 - i. be registered with the regulatory authority in India for conducting the financial sector activities;
 - ii. has earned net profit during the preceding three financial years from the financial services activities;
 - iii. has obtained approval from the regulatory authorities concerned both in India and abroad for venturing into such financial sector activity; and
 - iv. has fulfilled the prudential norms relating to capital adequacy as prescribed by the concerned regulatory authority in India.
- (2) Any additional investment by an existing JV/WOS or its step down subsidiary in the financial services sector is also required to comply with the above conditions.
- (3) Regulated entities in the financial sector making investments in any activity overseas are required to comply with the above guidelines. Unregulated entities in the financial services sector in India may invest in non financial sector activities subject to compliance with the provisions of Regulation 6 of the Notification. Trading in Commodities Exchanges overseas and setting up JV/ WOS for trading in overseas exchanges will be reckoned as financial services activity and require clearance from the Forward Markets Commission.

Investment in Equity of Companies Registered Overseas / Rated Debt Instruments

- (1) (i) Portfolio Investments by listed Indian companies

Listed Indian companies are permitted to invest up to 50 per cent of their net worth as on the date of the last audited balance sheet in (i) shares and (ii) bonds / fixed income securities, rated not below investment grade by accredited / registered credit rating agencies, issued by listed overseas companies.
- (ii) Investment by Mutual Funds

LIMITED LIABILITY PARTNERSHIP

Preliminary

Limited Liability Partnership ("LLP") is a body corporate having a legal personality and perpetual succession and any change in the partners will not affect its existence, rights or liabilities. Though LLP is a body corporate it is governed, not by the Companies Act, but by the special LLP Act.

The question of LLP has been debated since 1972 by various expert committees including the Abid Hussain Committee 1997 and the Naresh Chandra Committee on Private Companies and Partnerships 2003. The Expert Committee on Company Law under the Chairmanship of Dr.J.J. Irani, had, while dealing with need to have provisions exempting small companies from the rigors of compliance under the Companies Act recommended "enabling of new vehicles for business, such as Limited Liability Partnerships, through separate legislation, if necessary" should be done. In the light of these recommendations the LLP Act has been enacted.

LLP format "is an alternative corporate business vehicle that provides the benefits of limited liability of a company but allows its members the flexibility of organizing their internal management on the basis of a mutually arrived agreement, as is the case in a partnership firm. This format would be quite useful for small and medium enterprises in general and for the enterprises in services, sector in particular, Internationally, LLPs are the preferred vehicle of business particularly for service industry or for activities involving professionals." However, the LLP Act does not restrict the benefit of LLP structure to certain classes of professionals only but made applicable to any enterprise which fulfils the requirements of the LLP Act. A specific provision is made that, unless otherwise specified, the provisions of the Indian Partnership Act, 1932 shall not apply to a LLP,

Advantages of a LLP

In the words of the Nareshchandra Committee, a LLP is "a hybrid entity between the partnership simpliciter, or general partnership, and a private limited company." "Such an entity would provide the flexibility of a partnership (allowing the owners to adopt whatever form of internal organization they prefer), and limiting at the same time, the owner's liability with respect to the LLP." Following are some of the advantages of a LLP as for vehicle for carrying out a business:

- (a) It is a partnership but has a legal entity of its own any property in its own name and can sue and be sued in its name;
- (b) It has perpetual existence as any change in the partners of a limited liability partnership shall not affect the existence, rights or liabilities of the limited liability partnership;
- (c) Though a partnership, the liability of its members i.e. partners is limited to the respective capital contributed by them similar to the case of a company where members have limited liability;
- (d) Its internal management is not prescribed by law, but is governed by the terms of the partnership agreement entered into and hence is flexible; any change in the terms require compliance but not a cumbersome procedure;
- (e) One partner may act as agent of another partner, but he is not liable for acts of another partner while all partners can bind the partnership; the partnership alone is liable for- all lawful, acts of the partners;
- (f) The compliance cost of a LLP is far less than that of a company be it a private limited company or otherwise;
- (g) Relieves the partnership from the requirement of CA 1956 which restricts the number of persons who could form an association or partnership unless such association or partnership is registered as a company.

LLP- Definition

Section 2(1)(n) defines the expression “limited liability partnership” to mean “a partnership formed and registered under this Act”. Unlike a partnership firm a LLP is a legal entity separate from that of its partners and has a perpetual succession. Section 3 of LLP Act reads as under;

3. (1) A limited liability partnership is a body corporate formed and incorporated under this Act and is a legal entity separate from that of its partners.

(2) A limited liability partnership shall have perpetual succession.

(3) Any change in the partners of a limited liability partnership shall not affect the existence, rights or liabilities of the limited liability partnership.

It is provided that a LLP is a body corporate. The term “body corporate” for the limited purposes of the LLP Act has been given a very wide meaning to include a company under the Companies Act or incorporated outside India and further includes a LLP whether incorporated under the LLP Act or incorporated outside India. This term is defined in Section 2(1)(d) as under:

“body corporate” means—a company as defined in section 3 of the Companies Act, 1956 and includes —

- (i) a limited liability partnership registered under this Act;
- (ii) a limited liability partnership incorporated outside India; and
- (iii) a company incorporated outside India, but does not include —

- (i) a corporation sole;
- (ii) a co-operative society registered under any law for the time being in force
- (iii) any other body Corporate (not being a company as defined in section 3 of the Companies Act, 1956 or a limited liability partnership as defined in this Act), which the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette specify in this behalf.

PRE-REQUISITES FOR FORMING A LLP

A. Application for name approval

Similar to formation of a company under the Companies Act 1956, before forming a LLP the concerned promoters need to apply for name approval. In terms of the Rule 18(5) of the Concept Rules, an application for reservation of name with which the proposed limited liability partnership is to be registered shall be made to the Registrar having jurisdiction over the proposed registered office in the prescribed Form 1. Rule 18(1) gives details as to what types of names which are prohibited and will not be approved. The name as approved by the Registrar will be valid for a period of three months from the date of intimation by the Registrar. Procedure has been given for seeking change of name. Every limited liability partnership shall have either the words “limited liability partnership” or the acronym “LLP” as the last words of its name [sec, 15(1)]. It is further provided that every limited liability partnership shall ensure that its invoices, official correspondence and publications bear the following, namely : —

- (a) the name, address of its registered office and registration number of the limited liability partnership; and
- (b) a statement that it is registered with limited liability.

B. Registered office

Section 13(1) of LLP Act states that “every limited liability partnership shall have a registered office to which all communications and notices may be addressed and where they shall be received”.

The choice of place for the Registered office is that of the promoters of the LLP. The application for registration will have to be sent to the Registrar having jurisdiction over the place chosen. For change of registered office simple procedure has been prescribed.

C. Who could be partners

It is made clear that the two 'persons' could be two individuals or bodies corporate or one or more partners individuals and others being bodies corporate. As we have seen the term 'bodies corporate' includes LLPs formed and registered outside India, and hence such foreign LLPs could also be a partner in a LLP. In the case of individual person he cannot be a partner if 'he is (a) he has been found to be of unsound mind by a court of competent jurisdiction and the finding is in force or (b) he is an undischarged insolvent or (c) he has applied to be adjudicated as an insolvent and his application is pending. Similar to the case of a limited company under the Companies Act 1956, in the case of a LLP there must be a minimum of two partners, There is no maximum number prescribed.

D. Designated partner

However, there is a need to have two persons as "designated partners". If a body corporate is one of the partners and the other is an individual then a person nominated by the body corporate will be a designated partner. Further out of the two designated partners one must be a person 'resident' in India the term 'resident' means a person who has stayed in India for a period of not less than one hundred and eighty two days during the immediately preceding one year. There is also the requirement that each designated partner must have a Designated Partner Identification Number ("DPIN"). This would mean before making the application for registration the person proposing to act as a designated partner must have obtained the DPIN, In this regard the provisions of the CA 1956 relating to Director Identification Number ("DIN") would apply.

Section 2(1)(j) defines the expression "designated partner" as "any partner designated as such pursuant to section 7". Section 7 reads as follows:

7, Designated partners

- (1) Every limited liability partnership shall have at least two designated partners who are individuals and at least one of them shall be a resident in India :

Provided that in case of a limited liability partnership in which all the partners are bodies corporate or in which one or more partners are individuals and bodies corporate, at least two individuals who are partners of such limited liability partnership or -nominees of such bodies corporate shall act as designated partners,

Explanation.— For the purposes of this section, the term "resident in India" means a person who has stayed in India for a period of not less than one hundred and eighty-two days during the immediately preceding one year.

- (2) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (1),— (i) if the incorporation document-
 - (a) specifies who are to be designated partners, such persons shall be designated partners on incorporation; or
 - (b) states that each of the partners from time to time of limited liability partnership is to be designated partner, every partner shall be a designated partner;
- (ii) any partner may become a designated partner by and in accordance with the limited liability partnership agreement and a partner may cease to be a designated partner in accordance with limited liability partnership agreement.
- (3) An individual shall not become a designated partner in any limited liability partnership unless he has given his prior consent to act as such to the limited liability partnership in such form and manner as may be prescribed.

- (4) Every limited liability partnership shall file with the Registrar the particulars of every individual who has given his consent to act as designated partner in such form and manner as may be prescribed within thirty days of his appointment.
- (5) An individual eligible to be a designated partner shall satisfy such conditions and requirements as may be prescribed.
- (6) Every designated partner of a limited liability partnership shall obtain a Designated Partner Identification Number (DPIN) from the Central Government and the provisions of sections 266A to 266G (both inclusive) of the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956) shall apply mutatis mutandis for the said purpose.

The importance of a 'designated partner' lies in the additional responsibilities and functions of the person so appointed. Section 8 of LLP Act provides that a designated partner shall be

- (a) responsible for doing of all acts, matters and things as are required to be done by the limited liability partnership in respect of compliance of the provisions of this Act including filing of any document, return, statement and the like report pursuant to the provisions of this Act and as may be specified in the limited liability partnership agreement; and
- (b) liable to all penalties imposed on the limited liability partnership for any contravention of those provisions.

E, Agreement between partners

Similar to the need to have a Memorandum and Articles in the case of a company under Companies Act 1956, for a LLP there is a need to have a written agreement between the partners detailing the terms under which the partnership will function. The expression "limited liability partnership agreement" has been defined in Section 2(1) to mean "any written agreement between the partners of the limited liability partnership or between the limited liability partnership and its partners which determines the mutual rights and duties of the partners and their rights and duties in relation to that limited liability partnership." Section 23(1) states "Save as otherwise provided by this Act, the mutual rights and duties of the partners of a limited liability partnership, and the mutual rights and duties of a limited liability partnership and its partners, shall be governed by the limited liability partnership agreement between the partners, or between the limited liability partnership and its partners." Hence a limited liability partnership agreement between the partners of a limited liability partnership is a pre-requisite for incorporating such a partnership.

Rule 21 of the Concept Rules provide that "every limited liability partnership shall file information with regard to the limited liability partnership agreement in Form 4 with the Registrar within 30 days from the date of agreement" and that "If the LLP agreement is silent on any of the matters contained in the First Schedule, the relevant provisions of the said schedule shall apply to that extent." The First Schedule is similar to Schedule A of the Companies Act 1956. Hence care should be taken to draft the limited liability partnership agreement. The following issues should be considered:

1. The name, duration of the partnership;
2. The place of registered office;
3. The extent of share of equity and profits and or loss of each partner; as failing this all the partners of a limited liability partnership are entitled to share equally in the capital, profits and losses of the limited liability partnership;
4. Clause providing for indemnify in respect of payments made and personal liabilities incurred by each partner in the ordinary and proper conduct of the business of the limited liability partnership; or in or about anything necessarily done for the preservation of the business or property of the limited liability partnership;
5. Clause that every partner shall indemnify the limited liability partnership for any loss caused to it by his fraud in the conduct of the business of the limited liability partnership;

6. The person or persons in whom the day to day management of the limited liability partnership vest;
7. Drawing of partners;
8. Remuneration, if any, for any partner acting in the business or management of the limited liability partnership;
9. The terms on which a new partner could be join the partnership;
10. The basis on which issues relating to the limited liability partnership shall be decided i.e. whether a majority decision is acceptable or a consent of any specific partner is needed etc. and mention of matters which need consent of all partners apart from change in the nature of business for which consent of all partners must be taken;
11. Maintenance of minutes of decisions;
12. The rights a duties of each partner;
13. Matters relating to carrying on business in conflict with that of the partnership;
14. Power to expel any partner or accept resignation of a partner;
15. Financial Provisions on Death, Expulsion or Retirement;
16. Further Provisions Following Retirement or Expulsion;
17. Maintenance of bank accounts and its operation;
18. Appointment of auditors;
19. Financial year of the partnership for which accounts are to be maintained;
20. Provisions for winding up or dissolution of the partnership;
21. Dispute resolution;
22. Such other clauses which are relevant to the business of the partnership.

Incorporation and effect of incorporation of a LLP

In terms of Section 11 of LLP Act, for incorporating a LLP, following action is to be taken:

- (a) the persons (minimum two) intending to carry on a lawful business with a view to profit must subscribed their names to an incorporation document;
- (b) The incorporation document should be in the prescribed form - Form 2 of Concept Rules;
- (c) The Form 2 to be filed with the Registrar of the State in which the registered office of the LLP is to be situated;
- (d) Along with the Form 2, a statement in the prescribed form - Form 3, made by either an advocate, or a company secretary or a chartered accountant or a cost accountant, who is engaged in the formation of the limited liability partnership and by any one who subscribed his name to the incorporation document, shall be filed declaring that all the requirements of the LLP Act and the Rules made thereunder have been complied with, in respect of incorporation and matters precedent and incidental thereto;
- (e) The incorporation document must contain the following information:
 - (i) the name of the limited liability partnership; (ii) the proposed business of the limited liability partnership;
 - (iii) the address of the registered office of the limited liability partnership;

- (iv) the name and address of each of the persons who are to be partners of the limited liability partnership on incorporation;
- (v) the name and address of the persons who are to be designated partners of the limited liability partnership on incorporation;
- (vi) other information concerning the proposed limited liability partnership as per Form 2.

The Registrar, if he is satisfied that the requirements of Section 11 are complied, is required to register the incorporation document and issue a certificate of incorporation. The certificate issued shall be conclusive evidence that the limited liability partnership is incorporated by the name specified therein. Rules 11 to 20 of the LLP Concept Rules deal with the requirements relating to incorporation of a LLP.

Restructuring of a LLP

As stated earlier, we are mainly concerned with restructuring of corporate entities. LLP being a body corporate could also be restructured to meet the needs of the business. The restructuring of a LLP is considered under the following heads:

- (1) Compromise or arrangement of a limited liability partnership;
- (2) Amalgamation or reconstruction of a limited liability partnership;
- (3) Conversion of a partnership firm to a limited liability partnership;
- (4) Conversion of a private limited company to a limited liability partnership; and
- (5) Conversion of an unlisted public company to a limited liability partnership.

Compromise, arrangement or reconstruction of a limited liability partnership

The provisions relating to compromise or an arrangement between the limited liability partnership and its partners or between the limited liability partnership and its creditors are dealt with in Sections 60 and 61 of LLP Act and Rule 35 of the LLP Concept Rules. These provisions are very similar to sections 391 and 392 of the Companies Act 1956.

The procedure is explained below:

The application in respect of the proposed compromise or an arrangement is to be made to the Tribunal. The party who could make the application is either the limited liability partnership or its creditor or its partner. In the case of a LLP which is being wound up, the application could be made by the liquidator.

On the application made, the Tribunal may order a meeting of the creditors or of the partners to be called, held and conducted in such manner as is prescribed or as the Tribunal directs. Rule 35(1) of Concept LLP Rules provides that the application shall be by summons (Form 20) of the Tribunal supported by an affidavit (Form 21). A copy of the proposed compromise or arrangement shall be annexed to the affidavit as an exhibit thereto. Unless it is required to send notice to the limited liability partnership or to the liquidator, ordinarily the summons shall be moved ex parte. The notice of the meeting shall be advertised, if so decided by the Tribunal, in such newspapers and in such manner as the Tribunal may direct.

In terms of Rule 35(3), upon the hearing of the summons or any adjourned hearing thereof, the Tribunal shall, unless it thinks fit for any reason to dismiss the summons, give such directions as it may think necessary in respect of the following matters:

- (i) determining the class or classes of creditors and/or of partners whose meeting or meetings have to be held for considering the proposed compromise or arrangement;
- (ii) fixing the time and place of such meeting or meetings;
- (iii) appointing a chairman or chairmen for the meeting or meetings to be held, as the case may be;

- (iv) fixing the quorum and the procedure to be followed at the meeting or meetings, including voting by proxy;
- (v) determining the values of the creditors and/or the partners, as the case may be, whose meetings have to be held;
- (vi) notice to be given of the meeting or meetings and the advertisement, if any, of such notice;
- (vii) the time within which the Chairman of the meeting is to report to the Tribunal the result of the meeting; and
- (viii) such other matters as the Tribunal may deem necessary.

Every creditor or partner entitled to attend the meeting shall be furnished by the limited liability partnership, free of charge and within 24 hours of a requisition being made for the same, with a copy of the proposed compromise or arrangement stating any material interests of the designated partners, unless the same had been already furnished to such partner or creditor. [Rule 35(6)(1)]. Also an affidavit is required to be filed by the persons moving the application that all material facts relating to the LLP including the latest financial position of the LLP and all pending investigation proceedings in relation to the LLP.

The meeting shall be conducted in the manner the Tribunal directs. It is necessary that the scheme of compromise or arrangement must be approved by a majority representing three-fourths in value of the creditors, or partners, as the case may be.

The Tribunal, if it is satisfied that all material facts relating to the limited liability partnership, including the latest financial position of the LLP and the pendency of any investigation proceedings in relation to the LLP have been disclosed to all partners and or creditors, may pass an order sanctioning the scheme of compromise or arrangement. In this connection reference could be made to the decision of the Rajasthan High Court in the case of TCI Infrastructure Finance Ltd, In re: (2008) 146 Com Cas 133 (Raj). In that case it was found that material facts were not disclosed in that the application filed against the petitioner by one of the creditors before the Debt Recovery Tribunal and pending criminal cases under section 136 of the Negotiable Instruments Act against the managing director and other directors which were not disclosed in the Explanatory Statement. The Court rejected the scheme of arrangement with creditors. Though this case related to sections 391 and 393 of the CA 1956, it has relevance as to compromise or arrangement under the LLP Act as well, since the requirement of disclosing all material facts is also a requirement under the LLP Act.

An order passed by the Tribunal will be binding on all the creditors or all the partners, as the case may be, and also on the limited liability partnership, or in the case of a limited liability partnership which is being wound up, on the liquidator and contributories of the limited liability partnership.

The Tribunal has also the powers to stay the commencement or continuation of any suit or proceeding against the limited liability partnership on such terms as the Tribunal thinks fit until the final disposal of the application made to it.

The Tribunal has also the power to supervise the carrying out of the compromise or an arrangement in respect of a LLP. It has the powers to give such directions in regard to any matter or make such modifications in the compromise or arrangement as it may consider necessary for the proper working of the compromise or arrangement. It could also make an order for winding up of the LLP, in case it is satisfied that a compromise or arrangement cannot be worked satisfactorily with or without modification.

Amalgamation or reconstruction of a limited liability partnership

Section 62 of LLP Act deals with provisions relating to reconstruction and amalgamation of limited liability partnerships. These provisions are very similar to the provisions of Section 394 of the Companies Act 1956.

As in the case of reconstruction of companies, in the case of reconstruction of LLPs an application is to be made under section 60 of LLP Act to the Tribunal. The process of compromise or arrangement is to be first adopted. In an application to the Tribunal if the parties show that compromise or arrangement has been proposed for the purposes of, or in connection with, a scheme for -

- (a) the reconstruction of any limited liability partnership or limited liability partnerships, or ‘
- (b) the amalgamation of any two or more limited liability partnerships; and
- (c) the whole or any part of the undertaking, property or liabilities of any limited liability partnership concerned in the scheme (in this section referred to as a “transferor limited liability partnership”) is to be transferred to another limited liability partnership (in this section referred to as the “transferee limited liability partnership”), and seek appropriate orders and directions under Section 62 [Rule 35(10)(1)] the Tribunal may, either by the order sanctioning the compromise or arrangement or by a subsequent order, make provisions for all or any of the following matters, namely: —

- (i) the transfer to the transferee limited liability partnership of the whole or any part of the undertaking, property (includes property, rights and powers of every description) or liabilities (includes duties of every description) of any transferor limited liability partnership;
- (ii) the continuation by or against the transferee limited liability partnership of any legal proceedings pending by or against any transferor limited liability partnership;
- (iii) the dissolution, without winding up, of any transferor limited liability partnership;
- (iv) the provision to be made for any person who, within such time and in such manner as the Tribunal directs, dissent from the compromise or arrangement; and
- (v) such incidental, consequential and supplemental matters as are necessary to secure that
 - (a) the reconstruction or
 - (b) the amalgamation shall be fully and effectively carried out.

The above powers are exercisable by the Tribunal subject to the following:

- (a) in the case of a compromise or arrangement for the purposes of, or in connection with, a scheme for the amalgamation, which is being wound up, with any other limited liability partnership or limited liability partnerships, the Tribunal shall not sanction the scheme unless the Tribunal has received a report from the Registrar that the affairs of the limited liability partnership have not been conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of its partners or to public interest.
- (b) further an order permitting dissolution without winding up shall not be made unless the Official Liquidator has, on scrutiny of the books and papers of the limited liability partnership, made a report to the Tribunal that the affairs of the limited liability partnership have not been conducted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of its partners or to public interest.

The Tribunal has powers to pass an order transferring any property or liabilities free of any charge so long as the compromise or arrangement provisions provide for such discharge.

The limited liability partnership in relation to which the order is made shall file with the Registrar in the prescribed form - Form 22 - along with appropriate fee prescribed, for purposes of registration, a certified copy of such order within thirty days of the order.

As stated earlier the order of the Tribunal will be binding on all the parties. Powers of modification etc. as in the case of compromise or arrangement equally applies to cases under this section.

Conversion into a limited liability partnership

Sections 55, 56 and 57 of the LLP Act provide that a partnership firm ("firm") or a private limited company or an unlisted public company may convert itself into a limited liability partnership in accordance with the Second Schedule. Section 58 makes provisions for registration and consequential actions once the conversion becomes effective. The term "convert" is defined in all the three Schedules referred to above. This definition is in relation to a firm or a private limited company or an unlisted public company. The respective definition in each of the above referred Schedules is given below:

Clause 1(b) of the Second Schedule

"convert", in relation to a firm converting into a limited liability partnership, means a transfer of the property, assets, interests, rights, privileges, liabilities, obligations and the undertaking of the firm to the limited liability partnership in accordance with this Schedule.

Clause 1(b) of the Third Schedule

(b) "convert", in relation to a private company converting into a limited liability partnership, means a transfer of the property, assets, interests, rights, privileges, liabilities, obligations and the undertaking of the private company to the limited liability partnership in accordance with this Schedule,

Clause 1(b) of the Fourth Schedule

(b) "convert", in relation to a company converting into a limited liability partnership, means a transfer of the property, assets, interests, rights, privileges, liabilities, obligations and the undertaking of the company to the limited liability partnership in accordance with the provisions of this Schedule;

Hence conversion in this context refers to transfer of the whole of the undertaking i.e all the assets and all the liabilities, of a firm or a private company or an unlisted public company into a LLP, Thus conversion is a voluntary act and can be done by means of an agreement between all the partners of the firm. Such an agreement should in conformity with the LLP Act and the parties must comply with the requirements of the LLP Act.'

Conversion of a partnership firm to a limited liability partnership

The conversion can take place only if the partners of the proposed LLP comprise of ALL the partners of firm and NO ONE ELSE. Thus at the time of conversion the LLP will have no other person as a partner other than those who were partners of the erstwhile firm.

The application for conversion must be filed with the Registrar of LLPs having jurisdiction in which the registered office of the proposed LLP situate. The application shall be in the prescribed form - Form 17, and shall be accompanied by the prescribed fee. The particulars required are:

- (i) the name and registration number, if applicable, of the firm;
- (ii) the date on which the firm was registered under the Indian Partnership Act, 1932 or under any other law, if applicable, and
- (iii) incorporation document and statement referred to in section 11.

As we noted earlier, the incorporation document statement referred to in section 11 are as follows:

- (i) the name of the limited liability partnership;
- (ii) the proposed business of the limited liability partnership;
- (iii) the address of the registered office of the limited liability partnership;
- (iv) the name and address of each of the persons who are to be partners of the limited liability partnership on incorporation;
- (v) the name and address of the persons who are to be designated partners of the limited liability partnership on incorporation;

(vi) other information concerning the proposed limited liability partnership as per Form 2.

Each of the partners is required to give a statement in Form 17 [Rule 38(1) of LLP Concept Rules]. Since it is a requirement that statement referred to in Section 11 is also to be filed, it is necessary that in addition the statement in Form 17, a statement in the prescribed form - Form 3, made by either an advocate, or a company secretary or a chartered accountant or a cost accountant, who is engaged in the formation of the limited liability partnership and by any one who subscribed his name to the incorporation document, shall also be filed declaring that all the requirements of the LLP Act and the Rules made thereunder have been complied with, in respect of incorporation and matters precedent and incidental thereto.

Upon receipt of the above documents and statement, the Registrar is, if he is satisfied that all the particulars or other information as required by the LLP Act, has been furnished and is verified in the manner he requires, required to register the documents, and issue a certificate of registration in the prescribed form - Form 19 [Rule 38(2) of LLP Concept Rules]. The Registrar would specify the date on and from which the LLP is registered.

The LLP, shall within fifteen days of the date of registration, inform, the concerned Registrar of Firms with which it was registered about the conversion and of the particulars of the LLP in Form 3 [Rule 38(3) of LLP Concept Rules].

There is a right of appeal given to the LLP in case of refusal, for any reason, by the Registrar to register the conversion.

Effects of registration of the LLP upon conversion from a firm

Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being, on and from the date of registration specified in the certificate of registration issued by the Registrar of LLPs -

- (a) there shall be a limited liability partnership by the name specified in the certificate of registration registered under LLP Act;
- (b) all tangible (movable and immovable) property as well as intangible property vested in the firm] all assets, interests, rights, privileges, liabilities, obligations relating to the firm and the whole of the undertaking of the firm shall be transferred to and shall vest in the limited liability partnership without further assurance, act or deed;
- (c) the firm shall be deemed to be dissolved and if earlier registered under the Indian Partnership Act, 1932 removed from the records maintained under that Act;
- (d) All proceedings by or against the firm which are pending in any Court or Tribunal or before any authority on the date of registration may be continued, completed and enforced by or against the limited liability partnership;
- (e) Any conviction, ruling, order or judgment of any Court, Tribunal or other authority in favour of or against the firm may be enforced by or against the limited liability partnership;
- (f) Every agreement to which the firm was a party immediately before the date of registration, whether or not of such nature that the rights and liabilities thereunder could be assigned, shall have effect as from that date as if —
 - (i) the limited liability partnership were a party to such an agreement instead of the firm; and
 - (ii) for any reference to the firm, there were substituted in respect of anything to be done on or after the date of registration a reference to the limited liability partnership.
- (g) All deeds, contracts, schemes, bonds, agreements, applications, instruments and arrangements subsisting immediately before the date of registration relating to the firm or to which the firm is a party, shall continue in force on and after that date as if they relate to the limited liability partnership and shall be enforceable by or against the limited liability partnership as if the limited liability partnership were named therein or were a party thereto instead of the firm;

- (h) Every contract of employment to which paragraph 11 or paragraph 12 of Second Schedule applies shall continue to be in force on or after the date of registration as if the limited liability partnership were the employer thereunder instead of the firm;
- (i) Every appointment of the firm in any role or capacity which is in force immediately before the date of registration shall take effect and operate from that date as if the limited liability partnership were appointed;
- (j) Any authority or power conferred on the firm which is in force immediately before the date of registration shall take effect and operate from that date as if it were conferred on the limited liability partnership; and
- (k) Any approval, permit or licence issued to the firm under any other Act which is in force immediately before the date of registration of the limited liability partnership, subject to the provisions of such other Act under which such approval, permit or licence has been issued, will stand transferred to the converted limited liability partnership;

Continuation of liability of the partners of the firm

Notwithstanding the effect of conversion referred to above, every partner of a firm that has converted into a limited liability partnership shall continue to be personally liable (jointly and severally with the limited liability partnership) for the liabilities and obligations of the firm which were incurred prior to the conversion or which arose from any contract entered into prior to the conversion. However, if any such partner discharges any liability or obligation of the erstwhile firm, he shall be entitled (subject to any agreement with the limited liability partnership to the contrary) to be fully indemnified by the limited liability partnership in respect of such liability or obligation.

Follow up action by the LLP and the firm

- (a) If any property referred above is registered with any authority, the limited liability partnership shall, as soon as practicable after the date of registration, take all necessary steps as required by the relevant authority to notify the authority of the conversion and of the particulars of the limited liability partnership in such medium and form as the authority may specify.
- (b) The limited liability partnership shall ensure that for a period of twelve months commencing not later than fourteen days after the date of registration, every official correspondence of the limited liability partnership bears a statement that it was, as from the date of registration, converted from a firm into a limited liability partnership; and the name and registration number, if applicable, of the firm from which it was converted.

Penal provisions

If the limited liability partnership contravenes the provisions above, it will be punished with fine which shall not be less than ten thousand rupees but which may extend to one lakh rupees and with a further fine which shall not be less than fifty rupees but which may extend to five hundred rupees for every day after the first day after which the default continues.

Conversion from private company into limited liability partnership

The conversion can take place only subject to the following two conditions:

- (a) there is no security interest in its assets subsisting or in force at the time of application; and
- (b) if the partners of the proposed LLP comprise of ALL the shareholders of the private company and NO ONE ELSE.

Thus at the time of conversion the LLP will have no other person as a partner other than those who were shareholders of the erstwhile private company.

The application for conversion must be filed with the Registrar of LLPs having jurisdiction in which the registered office of the proposed LLP situate. The application shall be in the prescribed form - Form 18, and shall be accompanied by the prescribed fee. The particulars required are:

- (i) the name and registration number, if applicable, of the company;
- (ii) the date on which the company was incorporated; and
- (iii) incorporation document and statement referred to in section 11.

As we noted earlier, the incorporation document statement referred to in section 11 are as follows:

- (i) the name of the limited liability partnership;
- (ii) the proposed business of the limited liability partnership;
- (iii) the address of the registered office of the limited liability partnership;
- (iv) the name and address of each of the persons who are to be partners of the limited liability partnership on incorporation;
- (v) the name and address of the persons who are to be designated partners of the limited liability partnership on incorporation;
- (vi) other information concerning the proposed limited liability partnership as per Form 2.

Each of the partners is required to give a statement in Form 18 [Rule 39(1) of LLP Concept Rules]. Since it is a requirement that statement referred to in Section 11 is also to be filed, it is necessary that in addition the statement in Form 18, a statement in the prescribed form - Form 3, made by either an advocate, or a company secretary or a chartered accountant or a cost accountant, who is engaged in the formation of the limited liability partnership and by anyone who subscribed his name to the incorporation document, shall also be filed declaring that all the requirements of the LLP Act and the Rules made thereunder have been complied with, in respect of incorporation and matters precedent and incidental thereto.

Upon receipt of the above documents and statement, the Registrar is, if he is satisfied that all the particulars or other information as required by the LLP Act has been furnished and is verified in the manner he requires, required to register the documents, and issue a certificate of registration in the prescribed form - Form 19 [Rule 39(3) of LLP Concept Rules], The Registrar would specify the date on and from which the LLP is registered.

The LLP, shall within fifteen days of the date of registration, inform, the concerned Registrar of Companies with which the private company was registered under the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 about the conversion and of the particulars of the LLP in Form 14 [Rule 39(4) of LLP Concept Rules].

There is a right of appeal given to the LLP in case of refusal, for any reason, by the Registrar to register the conversion.

Effects of registration of the LLP upon conversion from a private company

Upon grant of certificate of registration by the Registrar of LLP the conversion of the private company to a LLP is complete and the shareholders of private company, the limited liability partnership to which such company has converted, and the partners of the limited liability partnership shall be bound by the provisions of the Third Schedule of the LLP Act.

- (f) Every agreement to which the company was a party immediately before the date of registration, whether or not of such nature that the rights and liabilities thereunder could be assigned, shall have effect as from that date as if —
 - (1) the limited liability partnership were a party to such an agreement instead of the company; and
 - (2) for any reference to the company, there were substituted in respect of anything to be done on or after the date of registration a reference to the limited liability partnership;
- (g) All deeds, contracts, schemes, bonds, agreements, applications, instruments and arrangements subsisting immediately before the date of registration relating to the company or to which the company is a party shall continue in force on and after that date as if they relate to the limited liability partnership and shall be enforceable by or against the limited liability partnership as if the limited liability partnership were named therein or were a party thereto instead of the company;
- (h) Every contract of employment to which paragraph 10 or paragraph 11 of Third Schedule applies shall continue in force on or after the date of registration as if the limited liability partnership were the employer thereunder instead of the company;
- (i) Every appointment of the company in any role or capacity which is in force immediately before the date of registration shall take effect and operate from that date as if the limited liability partnership were appointed;
- (j) Any authority or power conferred on the company which is in force immediately before the date of registration shall take effect and operate from that date as if it were conferred on the limited liability partnership; and
- (k) Any approval, permit or licence issued to the company under any other Act which is in force immediately before the date of registration of the limited liability partnership, subject to the provisions of such other Act under which such approval, permit or licence has been issued will stand transferred to the limited liability partnership.

Follow up action by the LLP and the company

- (a) In respect of any property referred above registered with any authority, the limited liability partnership shall, as soon as practicable, after the date of registration, take all necessary steps as required by the relevant authority to notify the authority of the conversion and of the particulars of the limited liability partnership in such form and manner as the authority may determine; and
- (b) The limited liability partnership shall ensure that for a period of twelve months commencing not later than fourteen days after the date of registration, every official correspondence of the limited liability partnership bears the following, namely:—
 - (a) a statement that it was, as from the date of registration, converted from a company into a limited liability partnership; and

- (b) the name and registration number of the company from which it was converted.

Penal provisions

Any limited liability partnership which contravenes the provisions of sub-paragraph (b) above shall be punishable with fine which shall not be less than ten thousand rupees but which may extend to one lakh rupees and with a further fine which shall not be less than fifty rupees but which may extend to five hundred rupees for every day after the first day after which the default continues.

Conversion from unlisted public company into limited liability partnership

The following definitions are relevant:

- (a) "company" means an unlisted public company;
- (c) "listed company" means a listed company as defined in the Securities Exchange Board of India (Disclosure and Investor Protection) Guidelines, 2000 issued by the Securities and Exchange Board of India under section 11 of the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act, 1992;
- (d) "unlisted public company" means a company which is not a listed company.

The Securities Exchange Board of India (Disclosure and Investor Protection) Guidelines, 2000, defines the expression "listed company" means

"a company which has any of its securities offered through an offer document v; listed on a recognised stock exchange and also includes Public Sector \ Undertakings whose securities are listed on a recognised stock exchange" [Clause 1.2.1.(xviii)].

The expression Securities is defined in clause (h) of section 2 of the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956 (42 of 1956) (the "SCRA"), to include:

- (i) shares, scrips, stocks, bonds, debentures, debenture stock or other marketable securities of a like nature in or of any incorporated company or other body corporate;
- (ia) derivative;
- (ib) units or any other instrument issued by any collective investment scheme to the investor in such schemes; i
- (ii) Government securities;
- (iia) such other instruments as may be declared by the Central Government to be securities; and
- (iii) rights or interests in securities.

The conversion can take place only subject to the following two conditions:

- (c) there is no security interest in its assets subsisting or in force at the time of application; and
- (d) if the partners of the proposed LLP comprise of ALL the shareholders of the unlisted public company and NO ONE ELSE.

Thus at the time of conversion the LLP will have no other person as a partner other than those who were shareholders of the erstwhile unlisted public company.

The application for conversion must be filed with the Registrar of LLPs having jurisdiction in which the registered office of the proposed LLP situate. The application shall be in the prescribed form - Form 18, and shall be accompanied by the prescribed fee. The particulars required are:

- (iv) the name and registration number, if applicable, of the company;
- (v) the date on which the company was incorporated; and (vi) incorporation document and statement referred to in section 11.

As we noted earlier, the incorporation document statement referred to in section 11 are as follows:

- (vii) the name of the limited liability partnership;
- (viii) the proposed business of the limited liability partnership;
- (ix) the address of the registered 'office of the limited liability partnership;
- (x) the name and address of each of the persons who are to be partners of the limited liability partnership on incorporation;
- (xi) the name and address of the persons who are to be designated partners of the limited liability partnership on incorporation;
- (xii) other information concerning the proposed limited liability partnership as per Form 2.

Each of the partners is required to give a statement in Form 18 [Rule 40(1) of LLP Concept Rules]. Since it is a requirement that statement referred to in Section 11 is also to be filed, it is necessary that in addition the statement in Form 18, a statement in the prescribed form - Form 3, made by either an advocate, or a company secretary or a chartered accountant or a cost accountant, who is engaged in the formation of the limited liability partnership and by anyone who subscribed his name to the incorporation document, shall also be filed declaring that all the requirements of the LLP Act and the Rules made thereunder have been complied with, in respect of incorporation and matters precedent and incidental thereto.

Upon receipt of the above documents and statement, the Registrar is, if he is satisfied that all the particulars or other information as required by the LLP Act has been furnished and is verified in the manner he requires, required to register the documents, and issue a certificate of registration in the prescribed form - Form 19 [Rule 40(3) of LLP Concept Rules]. The Registrar would specify the date on and from which the LLP is registered.

The LLP, shall within fifteen days of the date of registration, inform, the concerned Registrar of Companies with which the unlisted public company was registered under the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 about the conversion and of the particulars of the LLP in Form 14 [Rule 40(4) of LLP Concept Rules].

There is a right of appeal given to the LLP in case of refusal, for any reason, by the Registrar to register the conversion.

Effect of registration of the LLP upon conversion from an unlisted public company

Upon grant of certificate of registration by the Registrar of LLP the conversion of the unlisted public company to a LLP is complete and the shareholders of the unlisted public company, the limited liability partnership to which such company has converted, and the partners of the limited liability partnership shall be bound by the provisions of the Fourth Schedule to LLP Act.

 - (b) for any reference to the unlisted public company, there were substituted in respect of anything to be done on or after the date of registration a reference to the limited liability partnership;
- (g) All deeds, contracts, schemes, bonds, agreements, applications, instruments and arrangements subsisting immediately before the date of registration relating to the unlisted public company or to which the said company is a party shall continue in force on and after that date as if they relate to the limited liability partnership and shall be enforceable by or against the limited liability partnership as if the limited liability partnership were named therein or were a party thereto instead of the said unlisted public company;
- (h) Every contract of employment to which paragraph (f) or paragraph (g) above applies shall continue in force on or after the date of registration as if the limited liability partnership were the employer thereunder instead of the unlisted public company;
- (i) Every appointment of the unlisted public company in any role or capacity which is in force immediately before the date of registration shall take effect and operate from that date as if the limited liability partnership were appointed;
- (j) Any authority or power conferred on the unlisted public company which is in force immediately before the date of registration shall take effect and operate from that date as if it were conferred on the limited liability partnership;
- (k) any approval, permit or licence issued to the unlisted public company under any other Act which is in force immediately before the date of registration of the limited liability partnership, subject to the provisions of such other Act under which such approval, permit or licence has been issued, will stand transferred to the limited liability partnership.

Follow up action by the LLP and the company

- (a) the limited liability partnership shall, within fifteen days of the date of registration, inform the concerned Registrar of Companies with which the unlisted public company was registered under the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 about the conversion and of the particulars of the limited liability partnership in Form 14.
- (b) In respect of any property referred above registered with any authority, the limited liability partnership shall, as soon as practicable, after the date of registration, take all necessary steps as required by the relevant authority to notify the authority of the conversion and of the particulars of the limited liability partnership in such form and manner as the authority may determine; and
- (c) The limited liability partnership shall ensure that for a period of twelve months commencing not later than fourteen days after the date of registration, every official correspondence of the limited liability partnership bears the following, namely:-
 - (a) a statement that it was, as from the date of registration, converted from an unlisted public company into a limited liability partnership; and

(b) the name and registration number of the unlisted public company from which it was converted.

Penal provisions

Any limited liability partnership which contravenes the provisions of sub-paragraph (b) above shall be punishable with fine which shall not be less than ten thousand rupees but which may extend to one lakh rupees and with a further fine which shall not be less than fifty rupees but which may extend to five hundred rupees for every day after the first day after which the default continues.

Liquidation of LLPs

By a recent notification 'GSR 6(E) dated 6 January 2010, It is now provided that most of the provisions of the Companies Act 1956 relating to liquidation would apply to a LLP, with modifications of terms such as 'company', 'articles', 'member', etc,

Income-tax provisions

The Nareshchandra Committee recommended in its Report that "The LLPs should be governed by a taxation regime that taxes the partners as individuals, rather than taxing the LLP itself, i.e., the LLPs should be treated in the same manner as the firm under the tax laws." [Recommendation 3.6]

The above recommendation was accepted by the Government and the Finance (No. 2) Act, 2009, now provide that the expression 'firm' will include a LLP [sec.2(23)(i)], and the expression 'partner' will include a partner of a LLP [sec. 2(23)(ii)]. By this single change all the provisions of the ITA 1961 relating to general partnership firm applies equally to a LLP. The amendments are effective from assessment year 1st April 2010 i.e. for the accounting year starting on 1st April 2009.

We are primarily concerned with restructure of a partnership firm to a LLP, conversion of a limited liability company to a LLP, and conversion of unlisted public company to a LLP. There is no provision in the ITA 1961 to cover the latter two situations. However, as regards conversion of a partnership firm to a LLP is concerned the memorandum to the Finance (No, 2) Bill, 2009, states as follows:

"As an LLP and a general partnership is being treated as equivalent (except for recovery purposes) in the Act, the conversion from a general partnership firm to an LLP will have no tax implications if the rights and obligations of the partners remain the same after conversion and if there is no transfer of any asset or liability after conversion. If there is a violation of these conditions, the provisions of section 45 shall apply."

However, there does not appear to be a specific provision in this regard in the ITA 1961. Possibly if a general partnership firm converts itself to a LLP through a 'slump sale' some tax concession relating to capital gains may be available. Further there is no provision of exemption in respect of reverse conversion viz. conversion of a limited liability company to a LLP or an unlisted public limited company to a LLP.

The Finance Act 2010 has inserted new provisions for exempting, in a limited sense, capital gains arising on conversion of a private limited company or an unlisted public company to a LLP in terms of Sections 56 or 57 of the LLP Act, subject to the following conditions:

- (a) all the assets and liabilities of the company immediately before the conversion become the assets and liabilities of the limited liability partnership;
- (b) all the shareholders of the company immediately before the conversion become the partners of the limited liability partnership and their capital contribution and profit sharing ratio in the limited liability partnership are in the same proportion as their shareholding in the company on the date of conversion;
- (c) the shareholders of the company do not receive any consideration or benefit, directly or indirectly, in any form or manner, other than by way of share in profit and capital contribution in the limited liability partnership;

- (d) the aggregate of the profit sharing ratio of the share holders of the company in the limited liability partnership shall not be less than fifty per cent at any time during the period of five years from the date of conversion;
- (e) the total sales, turnover or gross receipts in business of the company in any of the three previous years preceding the previous year in which the conversion takes place does not exceed sixty lakh rupees; and
- (f) no amount is paid, either directly or indirectly, to any partner out of balance of accumulated profit standing in the accounts of the company on the date of conversion for a period of three years from the date of conversion.

Thus the exemption is available only for certain small companies.

With the introduction of tax exemption for certain conversion of unlisted public companies or private companies, modifications have been made to sections 35DDA -amortisation of certain voluntary retirement payments, 43(6) — relating to depreciation of blocked assets, 72A — carry forward of loss, and 15JAA — Minimum Alternate Tax.

While the Finance Act 2010 provided that MAT will not be levied on an LLP, the Finance Act, 2011 has inserted a new Chapter XII-BA consisting of sections 115JC to 115JF to provide for levy of MAT at the rate of 18.5% on adjusted total income in case of LLPs. This will have a dampening effect on formation of LLPs.

Corporate Restructure

Reconstruction- Meaning

The term “reconstruction” is not specifically defined in the Companies Act. The Little Oxford dictionary gives the meaning of reconstruct as “construct again, repair, restore to former condition or appearance, construct a new in mind” and “reconstruction” is the noun form of reconstruct.

Webster's Dictionary, 2nd edition, explains the word “reconstruction” as “the act of constructing again”.

The Halsbury's Laws of England States as follows:

“Neither ‘reconstruction’ nor ‘amalgamation’ has a precise legal meaning. Where an undertaking is being carried by a company and is in substance transferred, not to an outsider, but to another company consisting substantially of the same shareholders with a view to its being continued by the transferee company, there is a reconstruction. It is none the less a reconstruction because all the assets do not pass to the new company, or all the shareholders in the transferee company are not shareholders of the transferor company, or the liabilities of the transferor company are not taken over by the transferee company. “

The Securitization and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interest Act, 2002, an Act to regulate one of the aspects of reconstruction viz. reconstruction of financial assets defines in section 2(1)(b) ‘asset reconstruction’ to mean “acquisition by any securitization company or reconstruction company of any right or interest of any bank or financial institution in any financial assistance for the purpose of realization of such financial assistance”.

Section 2(1)(k) defines “financial assistance” to mean any loan or advance guaranteed or any debentures or bonds subscribed or any guarantees given or letters of credit established or any other credit facility extended by any bank or financial institution.”

The said Act provides, among others, sale of financial assets by banks/Financial Institutions to Securitization Company/ Reconstruction Company. The above said Act has been enacted with a special emphasis on asset reconstruction activity, which mainly centres around impaired assets, the whole process of asset reconstruction and matters related thereto. The term financial asset is defined in section 2(1)(l) to mean debt or receivables and includes:

- (i) a claim to any debt or receivables or part thereof whether secured or unsecured;
- (ii) any debt or receivables secured by, mortgage of, or charge on, immovable property; or
- (iii) a mortgage, charge hypothecation or pledge of movable property; or
- (iv) any right or interest in the security, whether full or part underlying such debt or receivables; or
- (v) any beneficial interest in property whether movable or immovable, or in such debt, receivables, whether such interest is existing, future, accruing, conditional or contingent; or
- (vi) any financial assistance;

The term “property” is defined in section 2(1)(f) to mean—

- (i) immovable property;
- (ii) movable property;
- (iii) any debt or any right to receive payment of money whether secured or unsecured;
- (iv) receivables, whether existing or future;
- (v) intangible assets, being know-how patent, copyright, trademarks, license, franchise or any other business or commercial rights of similar nature;

Section 2(1)(v) defines “reconstruction company” means a company formed and registered under the Companies Act, 1956 for the purpose of asset reconstruction;

Thus under the above said Act, ‘reconstruction’ would refer to acquisition of financial assets which may be a debt - secured or unsecured, and/or an interest in fixed and/ or current assets and/or intangible assets, by a company formed under the Companies Act, 1956, having its main object - reconstruction activity and is registered under section 3(1) of the said Act with the Reserve Bank of India.

In the traditional sense, reconstruction refers to a company transferring its assets to a new company in consideration of the issue of the new company's shares to the first company's members, and if the first company's debentures are not paid off, in further consideration of the new company issuing debentures to the first company's debenture holders, The result of the transaction is that the new company has the same assets, members and debenture-holders as the old one, and the old company has no undertaking to manage and is therefore wound up.

Undertaking- Meaning

In the context of reconstruction of a corporate body it is necessary also to understand the meaning of the term “undertaking”, as reconstruction is carried out by sale of an undertaking or purchase or acquisition of an undertaking.

The word “undertaking” is not defined in the Companies Act. One has, therefore, necessarily to depend upon the dictionary meaning or such secondary meaning the term might have acquired by commercial usage or long practice governing the workings of and borrowings by companies.

Section 2(v) of the Monopolies and Restrictive Trade Practices Act, 1969 [54 of 1969]

(“MRTP Act”) defines “undertaking”

“means an enterprise which is or has been or is proposed to be engaged in “the production, storage, supply, distribution, acquisition or control of articles or goods or the provision of services of any kind either directly or through one or more of its units or divisions whether such unit or division is located at the same place where the undertaken is located or at a different place or at different places.

Explanation I.— In this clause —

- (a) “article” includes a new article and “service” includes a new service;
- (b) “unit” or “division” in relation to an undertaking includes —

- (i) a plant or factory established for the production, storage, supply, distribution, acquisition or control of any article or goods;
- (ii) any branch or office established for the provision of any service.

Explanation II.— For the purposes of this clause a body corporate which is or has been engaged only in the business of acquiring holding underwriting or dealing with shares, debentures or other securities of any other body corporate shall be deemed to be an undertaking.

Explanation III— For the removal of doubts it is hereby declared that an investment company shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to be an undertaking."

Companies Act, 1956 provisions

Section 125 of Companies Act provides that charges creating security on the company's property or undertaking is void against the liquidator and any other creditor of the company unless it is registered with the Registrar of Companies in the prescribed manner. Section 125(4)(f) mentions "a floating charge on the undertaking or any property of the company" is one such charge.

Section 293 deals with restriction of the powers of the board of directors of a company. In this regard it is provided that in the case of a public limited company or a subsidiary of a public limited company, the board of directors cannot exercise power to "sell, lease or otherwise dispose of the whole, or substantially the whole, of the undertaking of the company or where the company owns more than one undertaking, of the whole or substantially the whole, of any such undertaking" without the consent of the company in general meeting.

Section 394(1) of Companies Act deals with the powers of the National Company Law Tribunal ("Tribunal") in respect of an application is made under section 391 of Companies Act. If an application inter alia relates to a scheme of reconstruction of any company or companies, the Tribunal has powers to pass order on matters involving "the transfer to the transferee company of the whole or any part of the undertaking, property or liabilities of any transferor company".

Corporate Restructure- Meaning

Corporate Restructuring is the process of redesigning one or more aspects of a company. The process of reorganizing a company may be implemented due to a number of different factors, such as positioning the company to be more competitive, surviving a currently adverse economic climate, or acting on the self-confidence of the corporation to move in an entirely new direction. Before restructuring there must be an existing structure which may have many limitations/ restrictions such as finance, legal, business and management which are to be kept in mind before restructuring. In other words, restructuring could be considered as making alterations to some extent to the existing structure.

Corporate Restructuring may have a single objective or multiple objectives; amongst them, there must be a dominant objective in addition to other important objectives for a successful corporate restructuring.

Hence, Corporate Restructuring is a comprehensive process by which a company can consolidate its business operations and strengthen its position for achieving its short-term and long-term corporate objectives. Corporate Restructuring is vital for the survival of a company in a competitive environment.

Process for Corporate Restructuring

While looking at the concept of Corporate restructuring, there is process to make it successful in achieving its stated objectives. For that a company must understand the objectives which are to be achieved and put forward the options or their opinions to achieve them. On selecting the appropriate option, a company can execute the same.

Objectives of Corporate Restructuring:

- Growth
- Technology
- Government policy
- To reduce dependency on others
- Economic stability

Needs of Corporate Restructuring:

- 1) To expand the business or operations of the company.
- 2) To carry on the business of the company more economically or more efficiently.
- 3) To focus on its core strength.
- 4) Cost Reduction, by deriving the benefits of economies of scale.
- 5) To obtain tax advantages by merging a loss-making company with a profit-making company.
- 6) To have access to better technology.
- 7) To improve the debt-equity ratio.
- 8) To have a better market share.
- 9) To overcome significant problems in a company.
- 10) To become globally competitive.
- 11) To eliminate competition between the companies.
- 12) To act in the public interest (by the Central Government in exercise of the powers conferred by section 396).

Corporate Restructuring Tools: In India, the concept has caught on like wildfire, with a merger or two reported frequently. The process of restructuring through mergers and amalgamations has been a regular feature in the developed and free economy nations like USA and European countries, more particularly in the UK, where hundreds of mergers take place every year. There are many tools and strategies by which or through which Corporate Restructuring can be processed such as amalgamations, mergers, demergers, reverse mergers, takeovers, acquisitions, joint ventures, disinvestments, buyback of shares etc.

- By Amalgamation:

It is the process of combining or uniting multiple entities into one form. The term amalgamation is not defined under the Companies' Act, 1956. Generally speaking, amalgamation is a legal process by which two or more companies are joined together to form a new entity or one or more companies are to be absorbed or blended with another. As a consequence, the amalgamating company loses its existence and its shareholder become the shareholder of the new or amalgamated company.

- By Reverse Merger:

It is when a private company purchases control of a public company and then carries out a merger with a private company. With a reverse merger, the private company shareholders receive most of the shares of the public company and control of the Board. A reverse merger is a quick way of going public with the time-table being only a couple of weeks. The reason a reverse merger is so quick is that the public company has already completed all the necessary paper-work and reviews in order to become public.

- By Normal merger:

Merger is an arrangement whereby the assets of two or more companies become vested in or under the control of one company, which may or may not be one of the original two companies, which has as its shareholders, all or substantially all, the shareholders of the two companies.

- By Demerger:

The act of splitting off a part of an existing company to become a new company, which operates completely separately from the original company. Shareholders of the original company are usually given an equivalent stake of ownership in the new company. A demerger is often done to help each of the segments operate more smoothly, as they can now focus on a more specific task.

- By Take-over:

It is the purchase of one company by another. The term refers to the acquisition of a public company whose shares are listed on the Stock Exchange, in contrast to the acquisition of a private company.

- By Joint Venture:

Two parties, (individuals or companies), incorporate a company in India. The business of one party is transferred to the company and, as a consideration for such a transfer; shares are issued by the company and subscribed by that party. The other party subscribes to the shares in cash. The parties subscribe to the shares of the joint-venture company in agreed proportion, in cash, and start a new business.

- By Disinvestment:

It means to sell off certain assets, such as a manufacturing plant, a division or subsidiary, or product line.

- By Buyback:

The repurchase of outstanding shares by a company, in order to reduce the number of shares on the market. Companies will buy back shares either to increase the value of shares still available or to eliminate any threats by shareholders who may be looking for controlling powers. In other words, Buyback is the reverse of issue of shares by a company where it offers to take back its shares owned by the investors at a specified price; this offer can be binding or optional to the investors.

Reduction of entities

- By striking off of the name from the Register of Companies.
- By dissolution without winding up.
- By mergers or absorptions.

The restructuring usually takes place when a business is struggling and losing money. A third party will be brought in to assess the way that the business is being run, and then make recommendations based on what they found that will help make the business run more efficiently. A strong corporate restructuring firm will have experts in a wide variety of areas that can examine all aspects of a business to help find solutions. A good corporate restructuring firm will not just identify problems of where money is being lost, but also offer solutions that a company can implement in order to solve those problems. They will also help a company through the process of restructuring by developing forecasts of what to expect and making sure the company is able to secure the capital available to make those changes. Corporate restructuring can help restore, preserve and enhance the value of an organisation.

Financial Asset Reconstruction

Asset reconstruction refers to reconstruction process adopted by a Securitization or reconstruction company established under the Companies Act 1956 and registered with the Reserve Bank of India. The reconstruction would cover any right or interest of any bank or financial institution in respect of any financial assistance given by them to a company and to enable such bank or financial institution to realize its assets which have become a "non-performing asset". In this regard, elaborate rules have been framed by the Reserve Bank of India. A non-performing asset refers to non-payment of any principal debt or interest thereon or any other amount payable by a borrower to any secured creditor, which is so treated in the books of a secured creditor as non-performing asset in accordance with the directions or guidance issued by the Reserve Bank.

In terms of section 9 of Securitisation and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interest Act, 2002 (SRFAESIA), a Securitization company or reconstruction company may, without prejudice, to the provisions contained in any other law for the time being in force, for the purposes of asset reconstruction, having regard to the guidelines framed by the Reserve Bank in this behalf, carry out reconstruction by providing, inter alia, one or more of the following measures, namely: —

- (a) the proper management of the business of the borrower, by change in, or takeover of, the management of the business of the borrower;
- (b) the sale or lease of a part or whole of the business of the borrower;
- (c) rescheduling of payment of debts payable by the borrower;
- (d) enforcement of security interest in accordance with the provisions of SRFAESIA;
- (e) settlement of dues payable by the borrower; and
- (f) taking possession of secured assets in accordance with the provisions of SRFAESIA.

For these purposes, in terms of section 2(zd) of SRFAESIA, means any bank or financial institution or any consortium or group of banks or financial institutions and includes —

- (i) debenture trustee appointed by any bank or financial institution; or
- (ii) securitization company or reconstruction company; or
- (iii) any other trustee holding securities on behalf of a bank or financial institution,

From the above it would be seen that reconstruction is to be carried out only for "realization of the debt by a bank or financial institution or groups of banks or financial institutions. It does not cover other private secured creditors who are not banks or financial institutions. This is the limitation of applicability of SRFAESIA.

In terms of section 38 of SRFAESIA, the rule making powers under SRFAESIA vests with the Central Government. So far no guidelines have been issued for 'reconstruction' though guidelines have been issued for sale of assets by the secured creditors. This area of the SRFAESIA remains still inactive.

Corporate Debt Restructuring (CDR) System

Considering the need to take a more practical view of recovery of debts by banks and or financial institutions, and with a view to reviving or rehabilitating companies through a scheme of debt restructuring, the Reserve Bank of India had announced for the first time in 2001, a scheme for Corporate Debt Restructuring System or popularly known as CDR System. This scheme was modified in 2003 and further modified in November, 2005, based on expert committees appointed by the Reserve Bank.

In the background note it was noted that "In spite of their best efforts and intentions, sometimes corporates find themselves in financial difficulty because of factors beyond their control and also due to certain internal reasons. For the revival of the corporates as well as for the safety of the money lent by the banks and FIs, timely support through restructuring in genuine cases is called for."

A. Objectives

"The objective of the Corporate Debt Restructuring (CDR) framework is to ensure timely and transparent mechanism for restructuring of the corporate debts of viable entities facing problems, outside the purview of BIFR, DRT and other legal proceedings, for the benefit of all concerned. In particular, the framework will aim at preserving viable corporates that are affected by certain internal and external factors and minimize the losses to the creditors and other stakeholders through an orderly and coordinated restructuring programme."

B. Salient features of CDR

1. CDR will be a non-statutory mechanism;
2. CDR mechanism will be a voluntary system based on debtor-creditor agreement and inter-creditor agreement;
3. The scheme will not apply to accounts involving only one financial institution or one bank. The CDR mechanism will cover only multiple banking accounts/syndication/consortium accounts with outstanding exposure of Rs.20 crore and above by banks and institutions;
4. The CDR system will be applicable only to standard and sub-standard accounts. With a view to provide the necessary flexibility and facilitate timely intervention for debt restructuring exercise, the requests of any corporate indulging in wilful default or misfeasance will not be considered for restructuring under CDR;
5. Under the revised scheme in 2005, it was stated that while corporates indulging in frauds and malfeasance even in a single bank will continue to remain ineligible for restructuring under CDR mechanism as hitherto, the Core group may review the reasons for classification of the borrower as wilful defaulter specially in old cases where the manner of classification of a borrower as a wilful defaulter was not transparent and satisfy itself that the borrower is 'in a position to rectify the wilful default provided he is granted an opportunity under the CDR mechanism. Such exceptional cases may be admitted for restructuring with the approval of the Core Group only. The Core Group may ensure that cases involving frauds or diversion of funds with malafide intent are not covered.
6. The accounts where recovery suits have been filed by the creditors against the company, may be eligible for consideration under the CDR system provided, the initiative to resolve the case under the CDR system is taken by at least 75% of the creditors (by value) and 60% of creditors (by number).
7. BIFR cases are not eligible for restructuring under the CDR system. However, large value BIFR cases may be eligible for restructuring under the CDR system if specifically recommended by the CDR Core Group. The Core Group shall recommend exceptional BIFR cases on a case-to-case basis for consideration under the CDR system. It should be ensured that the lending institutions complete all the formalities in seeking the approval from BIFR before implementing the package.
8. There would be no requirement of the account/company being sick, NPA or being in default for a specified period before reference to the CDR Group. However, potentially viable cases of NPAs will get priority;
9. Reference to Corporate Debt Restructuring System could be triggered by
 - (i) any or more of the secured creditor who have minimum 20% share in either working capital or term finance, or
 - (ii) by the concerned corporate, if supported by a bank or financial institution having stake as in (i) above;
10. The legal basis to the CDR mechanism shall be provided by the Debtor-Creditor Agreement (DCA) and the Inter-Creditor Agreement. The debtors shall have to accede to the DCA, either at the time of original loan documentation (for future cases) or at the time of reference to Corporate Debt Restructuring Cell. Similarly, all participants in the CDR mechanism through their membership of the Standing Forum shall have to enter into a legally binding agreement, with necessary enforcement and penal clauses, to operate the System through laid-down policies and guidelines;

11. Both the debtor and creditor(s) shall agree to a legally binding 'standstill' whereby both the parties commit themselves not to taking recourse to any other legal action during the 'standstill' period i.e. for 90 days or 180 days;
12. To be a binding agreement amongst all the secured creditors, the restructuring of debts must be approved by 75% of secured creditors by value;
13. All references for corporate debt restructuring by creditors or borrowers will be made to the CDR Cell. It shall be the responsibility of the lead institution/major stakeholder to the corporate, to work out a preliminary restructuring plan in consultation with other stakeholders and submit to the CDR Cell within one month. The CDR Cell will prepare the restructuring plan in terms of the general policies and guidelines approved by the CDR Standing Forum and place for consideration of the Empowered Group within 30 days for decision.
14. Each case of debt restructuring will be examined and the viability and rehabilitation potential of the company would be ascertained before approval of the restructuring package within a specified time frame of 90 days or at best within 180 days of reference to the Empowered Group. The acceptable viability benchmark levels which may be applied on a case to case basis, based on the merits of each case. The following would be the parameters considered before recommending restructuring of debt:
 - Return on Capital Employed (ROCE);
 - Debt Service Coverage Ratio (DSCR);
 - Gap between the internal rate of return (IRR) and the cost of fund (COF);
 - Extent of sacrifice.
15. The CDR mechanism applies to category 1 cases, i.e., accounts classified as standard or sub-standard and category 2 cases, i.e., cases classified as doubtful in the books of the lenders. In the first category, the loans can be restructured and additional funds too provided by banks/ FIs. On the other hand, in the second category, the existing loans will only be restructured and additional financing for the restructuring will be firmed up by the promoters, with a new arrangement, either with the existing lenders individually or with new lenders;
16. Administratively the CDR system in the country will have a three-tier structure viz, CDR Standing Forum and its Core Group; CDR Empowered Group and CDR Cell. The CDR Standing Forum would be the representative general body of all financial institutions and banks participating in CDR system. The Forum will also provide an official platform for both the creditors and borrowers (by consultation) to amicably and collectively evolve policies and guidelines for working out debt restructuring plans in the interests of all concerned. A CDR Core Group will be carved out of the CDR Standing Forum to assist the Standing Forum in convening the meetings and taking decisions relating to policy, on behalf of the Standing Forum. The CDR Cell will make the initial scrutiny of the proposals received from borrowers/creditors, by calling for proposed rehabilitation plan and other information and put up the matter before the CDR Empowered Group; and
17. Certain accounting treatments to the restructured accounts have also been prescribed.

Debts Restructuring relating to Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs)

By a Circular No. UBD. BPD. Cir. No. 36/9.9.001/05-06 dated March 9, 2006 the Reserve Bank of India had announced guidelines to be used for restructuring of debts of SMEs.

SMEs refers to a small enterprise or a medium enterprise. SMEs is defined as a small scale industrial unit is an undertaking in which investment in plant and machinery does not exceed Rs.1 crore, except in respect of certain specified items under hosiery, hand tools, drugs and pharmaceutical, stationery items and sports goods, where this investment limit has been enhanced to Rs. 5 crore. Units with investment in plant and machinery in excess of SSI limit and up to Rs. 10 crore may be treated as Medium Enterprises (MEs).

A. Applicability

These guidelines would be applicable to —

- (i) the following entities, which are viable or potentially viable :
 - (a) All non-corporate SMEs irrespective of the level of dues to banks;
 - (b) All corporate SMEs, which are enjoying banking facilities from a single bank, irrespective of the level of dues to the bank;
 - (c) All corporate SMEs, which have funded and non-funded outstanding up to Rs.10 crore under multiple/consortium banking arrangement.
- (ii) As in the case of other CDR Systems, accounts involving wilful default, fraud and malfeasance will not be eligible for restructuring under these guidelines;
- (iii) Accounts classified by banks as “Loss Assets” will not be eligible for restructuring;
- (iv) In respect of BIFR cases, banks should ensure completion of all formalities in seeking approval from BIFR before implementing the package.

B. Viability criteria

Banks may decide on the acceptable viability benchmark, consistent with the unit becoming viable in 7 years and the repayment period for restructured debt not exceeding 10 years.

C. Procedure

- (i) Based on these guidelines, banks registered under the State Acts may formulate, with the approval of the concerned Registrar of the Cooperative Societies, a debt restructuring scheme for SMEs. However, in the case of Multi-State Co-operative Banks, the above guidelines may be formulated with the approval of the Board of Directors.
- (ii) The restructuring would follow a receipt of a request to that effect from the borrowing units.
- (iii) In case of eligible SMEs which are under consortium/multiple banking arrangements, the bank with the maximum outstanding may work out the restructuring package, along with the bank having the second largest share.

D. Time frame

Banks should work out the restructuring package and implement the same within a maximum period of 60 days from date of receipt of requests.

E. Review

Banks may review the progress in rehabilitation and restructuring of SME accounts on a quarterly basis and keep the Board and the concerned RCS informed.

F. Disclosure

It may be ensured that the scheme formulated in this regard is brought to the notice of all beneficiaries. The bank may place the scheme on its website and give adequate publicity through other means. A copy may also be forwarded to SIDBI and the concerned Regional Offices of Reserve Bank of India.

Banks should also disclose in their published annual Balance Sheets, under “Notes on Accounts”, the following information in respect of restructuring undertaken during the year for SME accounts:

- (a) Total amount of assets of SMEs subjected to restructuring, [(a) = (b) + (c) + (d)]
 - (b) The amount of standard assets of SMEs subjected to restructuring.
 - (c) The amount of sub-standard assets of SMEs subjected to restructuring.
 - (d) The amount of doubtful assets of SMEs subjected to restructuring
7. Certain accounting norms have been prescribed.

Accounting issues relating to Corporate Debt Restructuring (CDR system)

In the context of restructuring of the accounts, the following stages at which the restructuring/ rescheduling/renegotiation of the terms of loan agreement could take place, can be identified:

- (a) before commencement of commercial production;
- (b) after commencement of commercial production but before the asset has been classified as sub-standard, and after commencement of commercial production and after the asset has been classified as sub-standard.

In each of the foregoing three stages, the rescheduling, etc., of principal and/or of interest could take place, with or without sacrifice, as part of the restructuring package evolved.

A. Types of accounts

Standard accounts and sub-standard accounts. A sub-standard account is one which has sub-standard assets. A sub-standard asset was one, which was classified as NPA for a period not exceeding eighteen months. However, the asset classification under CDR would continue to be bank-specific based on record of recovery of each bank, as per the existing prudential norms applicable to banks.

B. Treatment of Restructured Standard Accounts

A rescheduling of the instalments of principal alone, at any of the aforesaid first two stages would not cause a standard asset to be classified in the sub-standard category provided the loan/credit facility is fully secured.

A rescheduling of interest element at any of the foregoing first two stages would not cause an asset to be downgraded to sub-standard category subject to the condition that the amount of sacrifice, if any, in the element of interest, measured in present value terms, is either written off or provision is made to the extent of the sacrifice involved. For the purpose, the future interest due as per the original loan agreement in respect of an account should be discounted to the present value at a rate appropriate to the risk category of the borrower (i.e., current PLR+ the appropriate credit risk premium for the borrower-category) and compared with the present value of the dues expected to be received under the restructuring package, discounted on the same basis.

In case there is a sacrifice involved in the amount of interest in present value terms, as at (b) above, the amount of sacrifice should either be written off or provision made to the extent of the sacrifice involved.

C. Treatment of restructured sub-standard accounts

A rescheduling of the instalments of principal alone, would render a substandard asset eligible to be continued in the sub-standard category for the specified period, provided the loan/credit facility is fully secured.

A rescheduling of interest element would render a sub-standard asset eligible to be continued to be classified in sub-standard category for the specified period subject to the condition that the amount of sacrifice, if any, in the element of interest, measured in present value terms, is either written off or provision is made to the extent of the sacrifice involved. For the purpose, the future interest due as per the original loan agreement in respect of an account should be discounted to the present value at a rate appropriate to the risk category of the borrower (i.e., current PLR + the appropriate credit risk premium for the borrower-category) and compared with the present value of the dues expected to be received under the restructuring package, discounted on the same basis.

In case there is a sacrifice involved in the amount of interest in present value terms, as at (b) above, the amount of sacrifice should either be written off or provision made to the extent of the sacrifice involved. Even in cases where the sacrifice is by way of write off of the past interest dues, the asset should continue to be treated as sub-standard.

D. Upgradation of restructured accounts

The sub-standard accounts which have been subjected to restructuring etc., whether in respect of principal instalment or interest amount, by whatever modality, would be eligible to be upgraded to the standard category only after the specified period i.e., a period of one year after the date when first payment of interest or of principal, whichever is earlier, falls due, subject to satisfactory performance during the period. The amount of provision made earlier, net of the amount provided for the sacrifice in the interest amount in present value terms as aforesaid, could also be reversed after the one year period. During this one year period, the sub-standard asset will not deteriorate in its classification if satisfactory performance of the account is demonstrated during the period. In case, however, the satisfactory performance during the one year period is not evidenced, the asset classification of the restructured account would be governed as per the applicable prudential norms with reference to the pre-restructuring payment schedule.

In case of SMEs

1. Treatment of accounts

- (i) Treatment of 'standard' accounts subjected to restructuring
 - (a) A rescheduling of the instalments of principal alone, would not cause a standard asset to be classified in the sub-standard category, provided the borrower's outstanding is fully covered by tangible security.
 - (b) A rescheduling of interest element would not cause an asset to be downgraded to sub-standard category subject to the condition that the amount of sacrifice, if any, in the element of interest, measured in present value terms, is either written off or provision is made to the extent of the sacrifice involved.
- (ii) Treatment of 'sub-standard'/'doubtful' accounts subjected to restructuring
 - (a) A rescheduling of the instalments of principal alone, would render a 'sub-standard'/'doubtful' asset eligible to continue in the 'sub-standard'/'doubtful' category for the specified period, provided the borrower's outstanding is fully covered by tangible security.
 - (b) A rescheduling of interest element would render a sub-standard/'doubtful' asset eligible to be continued to be classified in sub-standard/'doubtful' category for the specified period subject to the condition that the amount of sacrifice, if any, in the element of interest, measured in present value terms, is either written off or provision is made to the extent of the sacrifice involved,
 - (c) Even in cases where the sacrifice is by way of write off of the past interest dues, the asset should continue to be treated as sub-standard/'doubtful'.
- (iii) Treatment of Provision
 - (a) Provision made towards interest sacrifice should be created by debit to Profit & Loss account and held in a distinct account. For this purpose, the future interest due as per the current BPLR in respect of an account should be discounted to the present value at a rate appropriate to the risk category of the borrower (i.e., current PLR + the appropriate term premium and credit risk premium for the borrower category) and compared with the present value of the dues expected to be received under the restructuring package, discounted on the same basis.

- (b) Sacrifice may be re-computed on each balance sheet date till satisfactory completion of all repayment obligations and full repayment of the outstanding in the account, so as to capture the changes in the fair value on account of changes in BPLR, term premium and the credit category of the borrower. Consequently, banks may provide for the shortfall in provision or reverse the amount of excess provision held in the distinct account.
- (c) The amount of provision made for NPA, may be reversed when the account is re-classified as a 'standard asset'.

2. Additional finance

Additional finance, if any, may be treated as 'standard asset' in all accounts viz; standard, sub-standard, and doubtful accounts, up to a period of one year after the date when first payment of interest or of principal, whichever is earlier, falls due under the approved restructuring package. If the restructured asset does not qualify for upgradation at the end of the above period, additional finance shall be placed in the same asset classification category as the restructured debt.

3. Upgradation of restructured accounts

The sub-standard/doubtful accounts at para 1(ii)(a) & (b) above, which have been subjected to restructuring, whether in respect of principal instalment or interest, by whatever modality, would be eligible to be upgraded to the standard category after the specified period, i.e., a period of one year after the date when first payment of interest or of principal, whichever is earlier, falls due under the rescheduled terms, subject to satisfactory performance during the period.

4. Asset classification status

During the specified one-year period, the asset classification status of rescheduled accounts will not deteriorate if satisfactory performance of the account is demonstrated during the period. In case, however, the satisfactory performance during the one year period is not evidenced, the asset classification of the restructured account would be governed as per the applicable prudential norms with reference to the pre-restructuring payment schedule. The asset classification would be bank-specific based on record of recovery of each bank, as per the existing prudential norms applicable to banks.

5. Repeated restructuring

The special dispensation for asset classification as available shall be available only when the account is restructured for the first time.

DEMERGER

The term "demerger" refers to a corporate restructuring procedure as opposed to "merger" i.e. it is a separation or spin-off or hiving-off of one or more undertakings carried on by a company into a separate company so as to either dispose such newly formed company or dispose off the undertaking or undertakings in question to the transferee company. Though the term has relevance to corporate law, the Companies Act, 1956 does not contain a definition of the term.

Demerger is a corporate business decision and not a step taken by companies as part of a tax planning or tax avoidance scheme. However, any concession or removable disabilities under the tax laws would assist an entrepreneur in taking a business decision for demerging an undertaking. Demerger as a method of corporate restructure has assumed greater importance in India consequent to removal of certain tax disabilities arising due to such restructuring and thus encourage this type of restructuring as part of its growth plans by companies or take steps leading to addition to the shareholder's value.

Companies Act, 1956, provisions

As we observed the term “demerger” is not defined under the Companies Act, 1956. Demerger could be achieved either by:

- (a) sale of the whole or substantially whole of an undertaking in terms of section 293(1)(a) of the Companies Act; or
- (b) as a part of a scheme of compromise or an arrangement in terms of sections 391 to 393 of the Companies Act, 1956.

Briefly stated:

- (a) sale of the whole or substantially whole of an undertaking of a company could be achieved by
 - (i) approval by the board of directors of the transferor company
 - (ii) further obtaining approval of its shareholders, at a general meeting of the company, by passing a special resolution.

The resulting company need to ensure that its objects include the carrying of the business of the undertaking proposed to be acquired.

Relevant portion of sections 293 is given below:

Sec.293. (1) The Board of directors of a public company, or of a private company which is a subsidiary of a public company, shall not, except with the consent of such public company or subsidiary in general meeting,—

- (a) sell, lease or otherwise dispose of the whole, or substantially the whole, of the undertaking of the company, or where the company owns more than one undertaking, of the whole, or substantially the whole, of any such undertaking;
- (2) Nothing contained in clause (a) of sub-section (1) shall affect-
 - (a) the title of a buyer or other person who buys or takes a lease of any such undertaking as is referred to in that clause, in good faith and after exercising due care and caution; or
 - (b) the selling or leasing of any property of the company where the ordinary business of the company consists of, or comprises, such selling or leasing.
- (3) Any resolution passed by the company permitting any transaction such as is referred to in clause (a) of sub-section (1) may attach such conditions to the permission as may be specified in the resolution, including conditions regarding the use, disposal or investment of the sale proceeds which may result from the transaction;
 - (b) approval under a scheme of compromise or an arrangement by adopting following the following procedure:
 - (i) approval of the board of a scheme of compromise or an arrangement;
 - (ii) presenting the scheme to the Tribunal;
 - (iii) holding of a general meeting of the concerned persons under the supervision of the Tribunal;
 - (iv) obtaining approval of the general meeting of persons holding not less than $\frac{3}{4}$ th of the voting power;
 - (v) obtaining the consent of the Tribunal; and
 - (vi) implementing the scheme as approved at the general meeting and as consented by the Tribunal,

The word 'arrangement', though not defined specifically, has a wide range and ambit.

It held that demerger would be considered as an "arrangement" under section 391 to section 394 of Companies Act. [Larsen & Toubro Ltd, In re. [2004] 44 SCL 461 (Bom)]

INCOME-TAX ACT, 1961 (IT ACT)

'Demerger'- Definition

The term "demerger" has been defined in the Income-tax Act, 1961. The definition of the term under the IT Act refers back to the provisions of sections 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956, though an exception has been made in case of foreign companies. We know by now that the said sections 391 to 394 deal with a scheme of compromise or/and arrangement duly approved by the company or companies in question and further approved by the Tribunal.

Thus by demerger we refer to a compromise or arrangement by which one or more undertakings of a company is transferred to another company, often a subsidiary of the demerging company or a company having the same shareholders as the demerging company. The sale of an undertaking or transfer of some of the assets and liabilities of an undertaking under section 293(1)(a) of the Companies Act would not be treated as a "demerger" under the Income-tax Act.

The IT Act has made provisions removing certain tax disabilities, often referred to, inappropriately in our view, as tax incentives for demerger, to the companies 'involved in a demerger and to their shareholders. To avoid some of the disabilities under the Income-tax Act, it is essential that a demerger squarely falls within the definition of the term "demerger" under section 2(19AA) of the IT Act.

Section 2(19AA) reads as follows:

"Demerger", in relation to companies, means the transfer, pursuant to a scheme of arrangement under sections 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956), by a demerged company of its one or more undertakings to any resulting company in such a manner that —

- (i) All the property of the undertaking, being transferred by the demerged company, immediately before the demerger becomes the property of the resulting company by virtue of the demerger;
- (ii) All the liabilities relatable to the undertaking, being transferred by the demerged company, immediately before the demerger becomes the liabilities of the resulting company by -virtue of the demerger;
- (iii) The property and the liabilities of the undertaking or undertakings being transferred by the demerged company are transferred at values appearing in its books of account immediately before the demerger;
- (iv) The resulting company issues, in consideration of the demerger, its shares to the shareholders of the demerged company on a proportionate basis;
- (v) The shareholders holding not less than three-fourths in value of the shares in the demerged company (other than shares already held therein immediately before the demerger, or by a nominee for, the resulting company or, its subsidiary) become shareholders of the resulting company or companies by virtue of the demerger, otherwise than as a result of the acquisition of the property or assets of the demerged company or any undertaking thereof by the resulting company;
- (vi) The transfer of the undertaking is on a going concern basis;
- (vii) The demerger is in accordance with the conditions, if any, notified under sub-section (5) of section 72A by the Central Government in this behalf.

Explanation I.- For the purposes of this clause "undertaking" shall include any part of an undertaking or a unit or division of an undertaking or a business activity taken as a whole but does not include individual assets or liabilities or any combination thereof not constituting a business activity.

Explanation 2.- For the purposes of this clause the liabilities referred to in sub-clause (ii) shall include—

- (a) the liabilities which arise out of the activities or operations of the undertaking;
- (b) the specific loans or borrowings (including debentures) raised, incurred and utilised solely for the activities or operations of the undertaking; and
- (c) in cases, other than those referred to in clause (a) or clause (b), so much of the amounts of general or multipurpose borrowings, if any, of the demerged company as stand in the same proportion which the value of the assets transferred in a demerger bears to the total value of the assets of such demerged company immediately before the demerger.

Explanation 3.- For determining the value of the property referred to in sub-clause (iii), any change in the value of assets consequent to their revaluation shall be ignored.

Explanation 4.- For the purposes of this clause, the splitting up or the reconstruction of any authority or a body constituted or established under a Central, State or Provincial Act, or a local authority or a public sector company, into separate authorities or bodies or local authorities or companies, as the case may be, shall be deemed to be a demerger if such split up or reconstruction fulfils such conditions as may be notified in the Official Gazette by the Central Government.

Notification No. S.O. 1159(E), dated December 26, 2000

In exercise of the powers conferred under Explanation 4 to clause (19AA) of section 2 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 (43 of 1961), the Central Government hereby specifies that where the split-up or the reconstructed authority or body, constituted or established under a Central, State or Provincial Act, is an entity engaged in the generation or transmission or distribution of electrical power, or in all of these activities, such splitting up or reconstruction shall be deemed to be a demerger if the following conditions are fulfilled, namely :—

- (i) splitting up or reconstruction is effected through a notification in the Official Gazette by the Central or the State Government; and
- (ii) assets of the split-up or reconstructed authority or body, are transferred to one or more resulting companies on a going concern basis.

Other related definitions:

'Demerged company' - Definition

Section 2(19AAA) "demerged company" means the company whose undertaking is transferred, pursuant to a demerger, to a resulting company;

'Resulting company' Definition

Section 2(41A) "resulting company" means one or more companies (including a wholly owned subsidiary thereof) to which the undertaking of the demerged company is transferred in a demerger and, the resulting company in consideration of such transfer of undertaking, issues shares to the shareholders of the demerged company and includes any authority or body or local authority or public sector company or a company established, constituted or formed as a result of demerger.

Conditions for a demerger

From the above it would be seen that a demerger for purposes of the Income-tax Act, has to fulfil the following conditions:

- (a) the demerger must be a transfer by the transferor company to a transferee company of one or more undertakings belonging to the transferor company;
- (b) this transfer should be achieved pursuant to a scheme of arrangement under sections 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956;

- (c) all the property and related liabilities of the undertaking transferred, immediately before the demerger, must become the property of the transferee company by virtue of the demerger, and not by virtue of sale or otherwise as a result of the acquisition of the property or assets of the transferor company or any undertaking thereof by the transferee company;
- (d) the property and the liabilities transferred must be transferred at values appearing in the books of account of the transferor company immediately before the demerger. Revaluation of assets must be ignored;
- (e) the consideration to be paid by the transferee company should be paid to the shareholders of the transferor company and not to the transferor company. Such payment must be in the form of the shares of the transferee company. The consideration should not be in cash or otherwise. Further such allotment to the shareholders of the transferor company must be in proportion to the shares held by them in the transferor company;
- (f) the shareholders holding not less than three-fourths in value of the shares in the transferor company (other than shares already held therein immediately before the demerger, or by a nominee for, the resulting company or, its subsidiary) must become shareholders of the transferee company or companies by virtue of the demerger;
- (g) the transfer of the undertaking is on a going concern basis;
- (h) and the demerger must be in accordance with the conditions, if any, notified under sub-section (5) of section 72A by the Central Government in this behalf.

Difference of 'demerger' between Companies Act and Income-tax Act

	Companies Act, 1956	Income-tax Act, 1961
1	Demerger could be achieved either as part of a scheme of arrangement under sections 391 to 394 or By a process of sale of an undertaking.	Demerger must be only through a scheme of arrangement under sections 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956 and not otherwise. Sale of undertaking is specifically excluded.
2	The scheme of arrangement could envisage payment of consideration to the transferor company or could be in consideration for settlement of certain debts as part of a scheme of compromise.	The consideration cannot be paid to the transferor company but only the shareholders of the transferor company.
3	It is not necessary that all the property and the related liabilities need to be transferred to the transferee company.	It is necessary that all the property and all the related liabilities must be transferred to the transferee company.
4	The property and/or liabilities transferred could be at values agreed and revaluation values could also be part of the values transferred.	The property and the liabilities must be at the values appearing in the books of account of the transferor company immediately prior to demerger and revaluation of assets or liabilities must be ignored.

5	The transferee company may or may not consist of the shareholders of the transferor company.	The transferee company must have as shareholders persons holding not less than three-fourths in value of the shares in the transferor company (other than shares already held therein immediately before the demerger, or by a nominee for, the resulting company or, its subsidiary).
6	The transfer need not be of a running concern i.e. the undertaking transferred need not be carrying on business at the time of transfer .	The transfer must be of a running concern and the transfer must be as a going concern basis.
7	There is no need to comply with any directions given under section 72A of the Income-tax Act, 1961.	The demerger must comply with the directions issued by the Central Government under section 72A of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Removable of disabilities (or concessions) under the Income-tax Act

But for the specific provisions made in the Income-tax Act, by the Finance Act, 1999, removing some of the disabilities consequent to demerger, a transfer of an undertaking could result in:

- (a) liability to tax on the gains arising on the transfer (sale) of an undertaking in the hands of the transferor company (demerged company);
- (b) the non-availability of certain type of expenses which are allowed against taxable income or deductions of income in computing taxable income of such undertakings transferred resulting from the change in the ownership of the undertaking to the transferee company (resulting company)
- (c) the non-availability of the benefit of carry forward of unabsorbed losses and/or unabsorbed depreciation related to the undertaking transferred in the hands of the transferee company (resulting company)
- (d) possible liability to tax on the gains arising due to allotment or issue of shares in the transferee company as a distribution of dividend in the hands of the shareholders of the transferor company.

To avoid the harshness of the Income-tax Act provisions consequent to transfer of an undertaking, the demerger must satisfy the following conditions:

- (a) the demerger must be under sections 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956, subject to exception in relation to foreign companies;
- (b) the undertaking demerged must be carrying on a business activity as a whole;
- (c) the transfer of the -undertaking must be as a going concern;
- (d) the entity to which the undertaking is transferred ("resulting company") must be a company under the Companies Act;
- (e) all the assets and liabilities immediately before the demerger of the undertaking which is being demerged must be transferred to the new entity;
- (f) the values at which the assets are transferred should be at book values immediately prior to demerger after ignoring any increase or decrease on account of revaluation;
- (g) the values of liabilities should be those which arose out of the operations of the undertakings or specific liabilities pertaining to the activities of the demerging undertaking or must bear the same proportion which the value of the assets transferred in a demerger bears to the total value of the assets of such demerged company immediately before the demerger;

- (h) the consideration for the transfer of the undertaking is payable to the shareholders of the transferor company ("demerged company") and not to the transferor company and that such consideration shall as far as possible be in shares of the transferee company (resulting company) so as to ensure that the shareholders holding not less than three-fourths in value of the shares in the transferor company (other than shares already held therein immediately before the demerger, or by a nominee for, the transferee company or, its subsidiary) become shareholders of the transferee company or companies (resulting company or companies) by virtue of the demerger; and
- (i) The demerger is in accordance with the conditions, if any, notified under subsection (5) of section 72A by the Central Government in this behalf.
- (j) demerger of a co-operative bank if it fulfils the requirements of section 72AB of IT Act, 1961.

The persons who can avail the above referred benefits under the tax laws for a demerger complying with the above-referred conditions are:

- (a) the transferor company (demerged company);
- (b) the transferee company (resulting company); and
- (c) the shareholders of the transferor company (demerged company).

Benefits to the transferor company (demerged company)

(i) Capital Gains

- Ø Transfer of capital asset by demerged company to resulting Indian company is exempt – Section 47(vib)
 - Ø Transfer to Indian company's shares by demerged foreign company to resulting foreign company is exempt if following conditions are satisfied – Section 47(vic)
 - (a) Shareholders holding not less than 3/4th in value of the shares of demerged foreign company remain shareholder of resulting foreign company
 - (b) Such transfer does not attract any capital gain in the country of demerged company
- Proviso – this exemption is not applicable in case of demerger as mentioned in Section 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956
- (i.e., demerger of an Indian company to a foreign company)
- Ø Transfer or issue of shares by the resulting company in a scheme of demerged to the shareholders of the demerged company is exempt – Section 47(vid)

(ii) Depreciation allowance

For purposes of determination of written down value of the block of assets in the hands of the demerged company after the demerger the written down value of the assets transferred to the resulting company will be reduced from the written down value of the block of assets as existed immediately prior to such demerger-Explanation 2A to Section 43(6)

- (iii) Amortisation of expenditure in case of demerger (Sec. 35DD): Expenses by an Indian company incurred after 1-4-1999 for amalgamation or demerger of an undertaking, shall be allowed a deduction of an amount equal to one-fifth of such expenditure for each of the five successive previous years beginning with the previous year in which the amalgamation or demerger takes place.

BENEFITS TO THE TRANSFEREE COMPANY (RESULTING COMPANY)

(i) Carry forward & set off of accumulated losses & unabsorbed depreciation in case of demerger

- Ø Accumulated loss or unabsorbed depreciation, if directly relatable to an undertaking, which is transferred to a resulting company shall be allowed to be carried forward and set off in the hands of resulting company – Section 72A(4)(a)
- Ø If loss or unabsorbed depreciation is not directly relatable, the loss carried forward shall be apportioned between the demerged company and the resulting company in proportion to the assets of the undertaking retained by the demerged company and that transferred to the resulting company – Section 72A(4)(b)

(ii) Scientific research expenditure u/s 35(5)

(iii) Patent right/copyright expenditure u/s 35A(6)

(iv) Expenditure on know-how u/s 35AB(3)

(v) Expenditure for licence to operate telecommunication services u/s 35ABB(6 & 7)

(vi) Amortization of preliminary expenses u/s 35D(5)

(vii) Expenditure on prospecting etc. u/s. 35E(7)

(viii) Chapter VI-A deductions u/s 80-IA(12) & 80-IB(12)

(ix) Tax holiday u/s 10A(7A) & 10B(7A)

Benefits to the shareholders of the demerged (transferor) company

(i) Deemed dividend

Section 2(22) has been amended by inserting a new clause (v) to provide that no dividend income shall arise in the hands of shareholders of demerged company on demerger.

(ii) Determination of cost of acquisition of shares allotted by resulting company

Normally when shares are acquired for which no cost is incurred the cost for purposes of determining any chargeable capital gains under section 45 would have been treated as Nil. However, in the case of demerger it is provided that the cost of acquisition of the shares in the resulting company allotted consequent to demerger shall be the amount which bears to the cost of acquisition of shares held by the concerned shareholder in the demerged company in the same proportion as the net book value of the assets transferred in a demerger bears to the net worth of the demerged company immediately before such demerger. "Net worth" for this purposes is the aggregate of the paid-up share capital and general reserves as appearing in the books of account of the demerged company immediately, 'before the demerger [section 49(2C) of IT Act].

(iii) Re-determination of cost of acquisition of shares in the demerged (transferor) company.

Consequent to determination of cost of the shares allotted in the resulting company consequent to demerger, it is provided that the cost of acquisition of the original shares held by the shareholder in the demerged company, on the basis of which the shares are allotted by the resulting company, shall be deemed to have been reduced by the amount determined as cost of acquisition of shares allotted by the resulting company, referred to earlier, [section 49(2D) of IT Act].

Effect of demerger of a company under tonnage tax scheme

Section 115VZ deals with the effect of demerger of a company which had opted to be assessed to tax under the tonnage tax scheme. This section reads as follows:

115VZ. Where in a scheme of demerger, the demerged company transfers its business to the resulting company before the expiry of the option for tonnage tax scheme, then, subject to the other provisions of this Chapter, the tonnage tax scheme shall, as far as may be, apply to the resulting company for the unexpired period if it is a qualifying company.

Provided that the option for tonnage tax scheme in respect of the demerged company shall remain in force for the unexpired period of the tonnage tax scheme if it continues to be a qualifying company.

The effect of demerger would not affect the resulting company in respect of the option exercised by the demerged qualifying shipping company. The resulting company must also be a qualifying company under the said scheme.

Special provisions in respect of newly established Units in Special Economic Zones It is provided in section 10AA(5) that where any undertaking being the Unit which is entitled to the deduction is transferred, before the expiry of the period specified in section 10AA(1) viz. 15 years, to another undertaking, being the Unit in a scheme of demerger,—

- (a) no deduction shall be admissible to the demerged Unit, being the company for the previous year in which the demerger takes place; and
- (b) the provisions of that section shall, as they would have applied to the demerged Unit being the company as if the demerger had not taken place.

Compliance with SEBI Regulations

The SEBI (Disclosures & Investors Protection) Guidelines do provide certain disclosures needed for protecting the investors. Consequent to coming into force of ICDR Regulations, the DIP Guidelines have been rescinded. No specific guidelines are presently there. However, it has been proposed by SEBI that it proposes to enforce appropriate disclosures in case of demergers as in the case of amalgamation. [SEBI Press Release 311-2003 dated 17 December, 2003]. This the SEBI intends to enforce through amendment to the Listing Agreement. Hence this would apply, as in case of other SEBI regulations, only to a listed company. The disclosures which are likely to be made compulsory are:

Details about the companies: |

1. Names & registered offices of the companies. |
2. The extent to/manner in which the companies are related to each other.
3. Capital structure of the companies.
4. Shareholding pattern clearly indicating the shares held by the promoters and by persons other than promoters.
5. Line of business.
6. Dates of agreement, if any, with the other companies which are parties to the scheme of arrangement.
7. Names and Profile of the promoters and directors - viz. age, educational qualifications, experience, personal addresses etc of the companies.
8. Names of subsidiary/group companies and companies with which the promoters of the resultant company are associated.
9. Indicate whether there would be a change in control in the resultant company viz the issuing company.
10. Capital Structure and Shareholding pattern, before (of issuing company) and after (of resultant company) the proposed scheme of arrangement, and the management's views on the change in the public holding on how it would affect the shareholders at large.
11. Audited Financial statements of the companies for the last 3 years including the latest audited financial statement (not more than 6 months' old) and material development after balance-sheet date (as per the format given in clause 49 of Listing agreement).

Details about the scheme:

1. Basis of valuation.
2. Nature of consideration, if any, payable/receivable under the scheme.
3. Mode of payment/receipt.
4. Manner of surrender/receipt of shares or securities.
5. The time schedule within which the shares/securities are to be surrendered/ received and payments to be made/received.

For the above purposes:

1. The terms "company/companies" mean the companies which are parties to the terms of arrangement of merger/demerger/amalgamation specified under Sections 391 to 394 of the Companies Act, 1956.
2. The term "resultant company" shall mean the company which comes into existence as a result of the scheme of arrangement for merger/demerger/ amalgamation.
3. The term "issuing company" shall mean the listed company which is seeking approval of shareholders for the scheme of arrangement for merger/demerger/ amalgamation.

Compliance with Stock Exchange requirements

Under Clause 36 of the Listing Agreement it is provided that the company will also immediately inform the Exchange of all the events which will have bearing on the performance/operations of the company as well as price sensitive information, Inter alia one of the material events is the change in the general character or nature of business. In this regard it is provided that:

"Without prejudice to the generality of Clause 29 of the Listing Agreement, the Company will promptly notify the Exchange of any material change in the general character or nature of its business where such change is brought about by the Company entering into or proposing to enter into any arrangement for technical, manufacturing, marketing or financial tie-up or by reason of the company, selling or disposing of or agreeing to sell or dispose of any unit or division or by the company, enlarging, restricting or closing the operations of any unit or division or proposing to enlarge, restrict or close the operations of any unit or division or otherwise."

Further, under Clause 31 of the Listing Agreement it is provided that the company shall promptly report the following:

(c) three copies of all the notices, call letters or any other circulars including notices of meetings convened u/s 391 or section 394 read with section 391 of the Companies Act, 1956 together with Annexures thereto, at the same time as they are sent to the shareholders, debenture holders or creditors or any class of them or advertised in the Press.

- (d) copy of the proceedings at all Annual and Extraordinary General Meetings of the company;
- (e) three copies of all notices, circulars, etc., issued or advertised in the press either by the company, or by any company which the company proposes to absorb or with which the company proposes to merge or amalgamate, or under orders of the Court or any other statutory authority in connection with any merger, amalgamation, re-construction, reduction of capital, scheme or arrangement, including notices, circulars, etc. issued or advertised in the press in regard to meetings of shareholders or debenture holders or creditors or any class of them and copies of the proceedings at all such meetings.

Procedure

The procedure for demerger is the same as in case of a scheme of arrangement.

REORGANISATION THROUGH COMPROMISE OR AN ARRANGEMENT

The provisions of Companies Act, 1956 regarding scheme of 'Compromise' or 'Arrangement' are mainly applicable to those companies which are liable to be wound up under the act [Sec.390(a)]. By providing these provisions, the law intends to provide a kind of substitute for winding up and thereby save a company from going into liquidation.

Compromise-Meaning

Though the term 'arrangement' has been defined in section 390, the term 'compromise' has not been defined in the Companies Act. Hence, we need to look for the general meaning of this term. The Oxford Little Dictionary inter alia gives the meaning as "agreement attained by mutual concession; adjust by mutual concession."

Thus compromise implies existence of a dispute which needs to be resolved through a give and take action by the parties concerned. In contrast to this an arrangement could exist whether there is a dispute or not.

Section 391 envisages existence of a proposal for a compromise or an arrangement between a company on the one side and either the members or a class of them or the creditors or a class of them on the other side. The proposal could be in the form of a scheme prepared in this regard. The scheme could be to cover all the creditors or all the members or any class of creditors or any class of members.

Arrangement-Meaning

'Arrangement' is defined to include-

"a reorganization of the share capital of the company by the consolidation of shares of different classes, or by the division of shares into shares of different classes or, by both those methods";

In this regard one may refer to section 94(1) of the Companies Act which inter alia deals with power of a company to:

"(b) consolidate and divide all or any of its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares;

(d) sub-divide its shares, or any of them, into shares of smaller amount than is fixed by the memorandum, so however, that in the sub-division the proportion between the amount paid and the amount, if any, unpaid on each reduced share shall be the same as it was in the case of the share from which the reduced share is derived."

The definition of the term "arrangement" is an inclusive definition. The word "arrangement" should not be limited to something analogous in some sense to 'compromise'. The courts have construed "arrangement" as a word of very wide import covering almost every type of legal transaction so long as there is some element of give and take and has the approval of the company concerned, either through its board or through the members in general meeting.

Sections 390 to 393 of the Companies Act, deal with the procedure for giving effect to compromise or an arrangement. Sections 100 to 105 deal with reduction of capital, sections 106 and 107 deal with variation of shareholders' rights, and sections 94 and 95 deal with consolidation of share capital where there is increase in capital.

Sections 390 to 393 read as follows:

390. In sections 391 and 393

- (a) the expression "company" means any company liable to be wound up under this Act;
- (b) the expression "arrangement" includes a reorganization of the share capital of the company by the consolidation of shares of different classes, or by the division of shares into shares of different classes or, by both those methods; and
- (c) unsecured creditors who may have filed suits or obtained decrees shall be deemed to be of the same class as other unsecured creditors.

391. Power to compromise or make arrangements with creditors and members

- (1) Where a compromise or arrangement is proposed-

- (a) between a company and its creditors or any class of them; or
 - (b) between a company and its members or any class of them;

the Court* may, on the application of the company or of any creditor or member of the company, or, in the case of a company, which is being wound up, of the liquidator, order a meeting of the creditors or class of creditors, or of the members or class of members, as the case may be, to be called, held and conducted in such manner as the Court* directs.

- (2) If a majority in number representing three- fourths in value of the creditors, or class of creditors, or members, or class of members as the case may be, present and voting either in person or, where proxies are allowed [under the rules made under section 643], by proxy, at the meeting, agree to any compromise or arrangement, the compromise or arrangement shall, if sanctioned by the Court*, be binding on all the creditors, all the creditors of the class, all the members, or all the members of the class, as the case may be, and also on the company, or, in the case of a company which is being wound up, on the liquidator and contributories of the company:

Provided that no order sanctioning any compromise or arrangement shall be made by the Court* unless the Court* is satisfied that the company or any other person by whom an application has been made under sub- section (1) has disclosed to the Court*, by affidavit or otherwise, all material facts relating to the company, such as the latest financial position of the company, the latest auditor's report on the accounts of the company, the pendency of any investigation proceedings in relation to the company under sections 235 to 251, and the like.

- (3) An order made by the Court* under sub- section (2) shall have no effect until a certified copy of the order has been filed with the Registrar.
- (4) A copy of every such order shall be annexed to every copy of the memorandum of the company issued after the certified copy of the order has been filed as aforesaid, or in the case of a company not having a memorandum, to every copy so issued of the instrument constituting or defining the constitution of the company.
- (5) If default is made in complying with sub- section (4), the company, and every officer of the company who is in default, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to ten rupees for each copy in respect of which default is made.
- (6) The Court* may, at any time after an application has been made to it under this section, stay the commencement or continuation of any suit or proceeding against the company on such terms as the Court* thinks fit, until the application is finally disposed of.

- (7)  An appeal shall lie from any order made by a Court* exercising original jurisdiction under this section to the Court* empowered to hear appeals from the decisions of that Court*, or if more than one Court* is so empowered, to the Court* of inferior jurisdiction. The provisions of sub-sections (3) to (6) shall apply in relation to the appellate order and the appeal as they apply in relation to the original order and the application."

*Tribunal- Substituted by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002, yet to come in effect.

 Sub-section (7) omitted by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002, yet to come in effect.

392. Power of High Court to enforce compromises and arrangements

- (1) Where a High Court* makes an order under section 391 sanctioning a compromise or an arrangement in respect of a company, it--
- (a) shall have power to supervise the carrying out of the compromise or arrangement; and
 - (b) may, at the time of making such order or at any time thereafter, give such directions in regard to any matter or make such modifications in the compromise or arrangement as it may consider necessary for the proper working of the compromise or arrangement.
- (2) If the Court* aforesaid is satisfied that a compromise or an arrangement sanctioned under section 391 cannot be worked satisfactorily with or without modifications, it may, either on its own motion or on the application of any person interested in the affairs of the company, make an order winding up the company, and such an order shall be deemed to be an order made under section 433 of this Act.
- (3) The provisions of this section shall, so far as may be, also apply to a company in respect of which an order has been made before the commencement of this Act under section 153 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 , (7 of 1913) sanctioning a compromise or an arrangement.

*Tribunal- Substituted by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002, yet to come in effect.

 Sub-section (3) omitted by the Companies (Second Amendment) Act, 2002, yet to come in effect.

393. Information as to compromises or arrangements with creditors and members

- (1) Where a meeting of creditors or any class of creditors, or of members or any class of members, is called under section 391-
- (a) with every notice calling the meeting which is sent to a creditor or member, there shall be sent also a statement setting forth the terms of the compromise or arrangement and explaining its effect; and in particular, stating any material interests of the directors, managing director, managing agent, secretaries and treasurers or manager of the company, whether in their capacity as such or as members or creditors of the company or otherwise, and the effect on those interests, of the compromise or arrangement, if, and in so far as, it is different from the effect on the like interests of other persons; and
 - (b) in every notice calling the meeting which is given by advertisement, there shall be included either such a statement as aforesaid or a notification of the place at which and the manner in which creditors or members entitled to attend the meeting may obtain copies of such a statement as aforesaid.
- (2) Where the compromise or arrangement affects the rights of debenture holders of the company, the said statement shall give the like information and explanation as respects the trustees of any deed for securing the issue of the debentures as it is required to give as respects the company's directors.
- (3) Where a notice given by advertisement includes a notification that copies of a statement setting forth the terms of the compromise or arrangement proposed and explaining its effect can be obtained by creditors or members entitled to attend the meeting, every creditor or member so entitled shall, on making an application in the manner indicated by the notice, be furnished by the company, free of charge, with a copy of the statement.

- (4) Where default is made in complying with any of the requirements of this section, the company, and every officer of the company who is in default, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five thousand rupees; and for the purpose of this sub-section any liquidator of the company and any trustee of a deed for securing the issue of debentures of the company shall be deemed to be an officer of the company:

Provided that a person shall not be punishable under this sub-section if he shows that the default was due to the refusal of any other person, being a director, managing director, managing agent, secretaries and treasurers, manager or trustee for debenture holders, to supply the necessary particulars as to his material interests.

- (5) Every director, managing director, managing agent, secretaries and treasurers or manager of the company, and every trustee for debenture holders of the company, shall give notice to the company of such matters relating to himself as may be necessary for the purposes of this section; and if he fails to do so, he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

Scheme of compromise or arrangement

The law requires an applicant viz. the company, or a creditor or a member to present an application to the Tribunal. Generally, it is the company which prepares a scheme of arrangement or compromise after discussion with the members, creditors and its advisors. In case of a company in liquidation, the liquidator prepares the scheme based on the discussions he had with the company directors, the creditors, the members and his advisors. All the 'give and take' exercise between the parties would have normally taken place prior to the preparation of the scheme. The company or the liquidator then presents an application to the Tribunal. The Tribunal then orders a meeting of the creditors or class of creditors or members or class of members, as the case may be. The Tribunal also gives the direction as to the manner in which such meeting takes place. This does not bar any member or creditor to frame a scheme and seek approval of the company and the Tribunal. Under the Rules, the application under section 391(1) will have to be made as a petition to the Tribunal.

Procedure in respect of compromise or arrangement

Except for the preparation of an appropriate scheme and presentation of a petition to the Tribunal, all the rest of the procedure will be as prescribed by the Companies (Court) Rules, 1959 as applicable. An extract of the relevant Rules is given as under:

67. Summons for directions to convene a meeting-

An application u/s 391(1) for an order convening a meeting of creditors and/or members or any class of them shall be by a Judge's summons supported by an affidavit. A copy of the proposed compromise or arrangement shall be annexed to the affidavit as an exhibit thereto. Save as provided in rule 68 hereunder, the summons shall be moved ex parte. The summons shall be in Form No. 33, and the affidavit in support thereof in Form No. 34.

68. Service on company-

Where the company is not the applicant, a copy of the summons and of the affidavit shall be served on the company, or, where the company is being wound up on its liquidator, not less than 14 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the summons.

69. Directions at hearing of summons-

Upon the hearing of the summons or any adjourned hearing thereof, the Judge shall, unless he thinks fit for any reason to dismiss the summons, give such directions as he may think necessary in respect of the following matters:

- (1) determining the class or classes of creditors and/or of members whose meeting or meetings have to be held for considering the proposed compromise or arrangement;
- (2) fixing the time and place of such meeting or meetings;
- (3) appointing a chairman or chairmen for the meeting or meetings to be held, as the case may be;
- (4) fixing the quorum and the procedure to be followed at the meeting or meetings, including voting by proxy;
- (5) determining the values of the creditors and/or the members, or the creditors or members of any class, as the case may be, whose meetings have to be held;
- (6) notice to be given of the meeting or meetings and the advertisement of such notice;
- (7) the time within which the Chairman of the meeting is to report to the Court the result of the meeting; and such other matters as the Court may deem necessary.

The order made on the summons shall be in Form No. 35 with such variations as may be necessary.

70. Proxies.—

- (1) Voting by proxy shall be permitted, provided a proxy in the prescribed form duly signed by the person entitled to attend and vote at the meeting is filed with the company at its registered office not later than 48 hours before the meeting.
- (2) Where a body corporate which is a member or creditor (including holder of debentures) of a company authorises any person to act as its representative at the meeting, of the members or creditors of the company, or of any class of them, as the case may be, a copy of the resolution of the Board of Directors or other governing body of such body corporate authorising such person to act as its representative at the meeting, and certified to be a true copy by a director, the manager, the secretary, or other authorised officer of such body corporate shall be lodged with the company at its registered office not later than 48 hours before the meeting.
- (3) Rules 227 to 229 of these rules relating to proxies shall also apply to proxies lodged under the rule.

71. Application for stay—

An application under sub-section (6) of section 391 for stay of the commencement or continuation of any suit or proceeding against the company may be moved by a Judge's summons ex parte provided that where a petition for winding-up the company or a petition under section 397 or section 398 is pending, notice of the application shall be given to the petitioner in such petition.

72. Application to vacate or vary order of stay.—

Where an order has been made staying the commencement or continuation of any suit or proceeding under sub-section (6) of section 391 any person aggrieved by such order may apply to the Court by a Judge's summons to vacate or vary such order. Notice of the application shall be given to the applicant at whose instance the order of stay was made and to such other persons as the Court may direct.

73. Notice of meeting.—

The notice of the meeting to be given to the creditors and/or members or the creditors or members of any class, as the case may be, shall be in Form No. 36. and shall be sent to them individually by the Chairman appointed for the meeting or if the Court so directs, by the company (or its liquidator), or any other person as the Court may direct, by post under certificate of posting to their last known address not less than 21 clear days before the date fixed for the meeting. It shall be accompanied by a copy of the proposed compromise or arrangement and the statement required to be furnished under section 393, and a form of proxy in Form No. 37.

74. Advertisement of the notice of meeting.—

The notice of the meeting shall be advertised in such newspapers and in such manner as the Judge may direct, not less than 21 clear days before the date fixed for the meeting. The advertisement shall be in Form No. 38.

75. Copy of compromise or arrangement to be furnished by the company.—

Every creditor or member entitled to attend the meeting shall be furnished by the company, free of charge and within 24 hours of a requisition being made for the same, with a copy of the proposed compromise or arrangement together with a copy of the statement required to be furnished under section 393, unless the same had been already furnished to such member or creditor.

76. Affidavit of service.—

The Chairman appointed for the meeting of the company or other person directed to issue the advertisement and the notices of the meeting shall file an affidavit not less than seven days before the date fixed for the holding of the meeting or the holding of the first of the meetings, as the case may be showing that the direction regarding the issue of notices and the advertisement have been duly complied with. In default thereof the summons shall be posted before the Judge for such orders as he may think fit to make.

77. Result of the meeting to be decided by poll.—

The decisions of the meeting or meetings held in pursuance of the order made under rule 69 on all resolutions shall be ascertained only by taking a poll.

78. Report of the result of the meeting.—

The Chairman of the meeting, (or where there are separate meetings, the Chairman of each meeting, shall, within the time fixed by the Judge, or where no time has been fixed, within seven days after the conclusion of the meeting, report the result thereof to the Court. The report shall state accurately the number of creditors or class of creditors or the number of members or class of members, as the case may be, who were present and who voted at the meeting either in person or by proxy, their individual values and the way they voted. The report shall be in Form No. 39.

79. Petition for confirming compromise or arrangement —

Where the proposed compromise or arrangement is agreed to, with or without modification, as provided by sub-section (2) of section 391, the company, (or its liquidator, as the case may be) shall within seven days of the filing of the report by the chairman, present a petition to the Court for confirmation of the compromise or arrangement. The petition shall be in Form No. 40.

Where a compromise or arrangement is proposed for the purposes of or in connection with a scheme for the reconstruction of any company or companies, or for the amalgamation of any two or more companies, the petition shall pray for appropriate orders and directions under section 394,

Where the company fails to present the petition for confirmation of the compromise or arrangement as aforesaid, it shall be open to any creditor or contributory as the case may be, with the leave of the Court, to present the petition and the company shall be liable for the cost thereof.

Where no petition for confirmation of the compromise or arrangement is presented, or where the compromise or arrangement has not been approved by the requisite majority under section 391(2) and consequently no petition for confirmation could be presented, the report of the chairman as to the result of the meeting made under the preceding rule shall be placed for consideration before the Judge for such orders as may be necessary,

80. Date and notice of hearing—

The Court shall fix a date for the hearing of the petition, and notice of the hearing shall be advertised in the same papers as the Court may direct, not less than 10 days before the date fixed for the hearing.

81. Order on petition.—

Where the Court sanctions the compromise or arrangement, the order shall include such directions in regard to any matter and such modifications in the compromise or arrangements as the Judge may think fit to make for the proper working of the compromise or arrangement. The order shall direct that a certified copy of the same shall be filed with the Registrar of Companies within 14 days from the date of the order, or such other time as may be fixed by the Court. The order shall be in Form No. 41 with such variations as may be necessary.

82. Application for directions under section 394—

Where the compromise or arrangement has been proposed for the purposes of or in connection with a scheme for the reconstruction of any company or companies or the amalgamation of any two or more companies, and the matters involved cannot be dealt with adequately on the petition for sanction of the compromise or arrangement, an application shall be made to the Court under section 394 by a summons supported by affidavit, for directions of the Court as to the proceedings to be taken. Notice of the summons shall be given in such manner and to such persons as the Court may direct.

83. Direction at hearing of application—

Upon the hearing of the summons or upon any adjourned hearing thereof the Court may make such order or give such directions as it may think fit, as to the proceedings to be taken for the purpose of reconstruction or amalgamation, as the case may be including, where necessary, an inquiry as to the creditors of the transferor company and the securing of the debts and claims of any of the dissenting creditors in such manner as to the Court may seem just.

84. Order under section 394.—

An order made under section 394 shall be in Form No 42 with such variation as the circumstances may require.

85. Compromise or arrangement involving reduction of capital—

Where a proposed compromise or arrangement involves a reduction of capital of the company, the procedure prescribed by the Act and these rules relating to the reduction of capital, and the requirements of the Act and these rules in relation thereto, shall be complied with before the compromise or arrangement so far as it relates to reduction of capital is sanctioned.

86. Report on working of compromise or arrangement—

At any time after the passing of the order sanctioning the compromise or arrangement the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any person interested, make an order directing the company, or, where the company is being wound-up, the Liquidator, to submit to the Court within such time as the Court may fix, a report on the working of the said compromise or arrangement. On a consideration of the report, the Court may pass such orders or give such directions as it may think fit.

87. Liberty to apply.—

- (1) The company, or any creditor or member thereof or in case of a company which is being wound-up, the liquidator, may, at any time after the passing of the order sanctioning the compromise or arrangement, apply to the Court for the determination of any question relating to the working of the compromise or arrangement.
- (2) The application shall in the first instance be posted before the Court for directions as to the notices and the advertisement, if any, to issue, as the Court may direct.
- (3) The Court may, on such application, pass such orders and give such directions as it may think fit in regard to the matter, and may make such modifications in the compromise or arrangement as it may consider necessary for the proper working thereof, or pass such other order as it may think fit in the circumstances of the case.

2.2. RECONSTRUCTION VS. AMALGAMATION

The term 'Reconstruction' implies the formation of a new company to take over the assets of an existing company with the idea that the persons interested and the nature of business substantially remains the same.

The term 'Amalgamation' is taken to mean as the union of two or more companies, so as to form a third entity or one company is absorbed into another company.

The difference between the two can be highlighted as under:

Particulars	Reconstruction	Amalgamation
1. Number of Companies	Used when one Company is involved, and the rights of its Creditors / Members are reorganized.	Used when two or more Companies are merged together to form a new entity, or one Company taking over another.
2. Nature	Internal Arrangement of rights of Members / Creditors or class thereof.	External in nature, as it involves arrangement with another Company / entity, and also Members / Creditors or class thereof.
3. Business	The same business is carried on by substantially the same persons. The Company continues to operate with its Members / Creditors, but with variation of their rights.	The Company may sell its undertaking to another Company, or takeover another Company as such.
4. Purposes	• To extend the objects of the Company. • To compound with Creditors and determine liabilities afresh. • To re-organize Share Capital. • To alter the rights of different classes of Share / Debenture holders. • To revive a sick unit.	• To avail tax concessions and benefits. • To diversify or expand business operations. • To revive a sick unit. • To eliminate competition, by takeover. • To make full use of unused capacity. • To achieve economies of scale. • To acquire fresh assets at discounted price.

5. Methods of achieving / effecting	• Sale of Company as per power contained in MOA. • Sale of undertaking of the Company [Sec.391 - 394]. • Acquiring Shares in another Company [Sec.395]. • Compulsory Amalgamation in public interest [Sec.396]. • Reconstruction under Members' Voluntary Winding up [Sec.494]. • Reconstruction under Creditors' Voluntary Winding up [Sec.507]. • Reconstruction by arranging with Creditors in Voluntary Winding up [Sec.517].	• Sale of undertaking of the Company [Sec.391 -394]. • Acquiring Shares in another Company [Sec.395]. • Compulsory Amalgamation in public interest [Sec.396].
6. Scope	General and wide term. Amalgamation is also a method of reconstruction.	Specific and restricted in scope. Amalgamation is one of the methods of "external" reconstruction.

2.4. ACQUIRING SHARES IN ANOTHER COMPANY [SEC. 395]

The method of Amalgamation by take-over bid is quite common. A "take-over Bid" means an offer to acquire shares of company with a view to obtaining legal control of the company.

Section 395 provides for the compulsory acquisition of the shares of the dissenting minority.

The provisions of Sec.395 are as follows:

1. The offer of the transferee company to acquire the shares or any class of shares, must be placed before the shareholder of the transferor company.
2. The shareholders have the option to approve the offer within 4 months. Approval must be accorded by the holders of atleast 90 per cent in value of the shares whose transfer is involved (other than shares already held by transferee company at the date of the offer or by its nominees or by its subsidiary.)
3. If the scheme is so approved, the transferee company may, at any time, within two months, after the expiration of above four months, give notice to the dissenting shareholders.
4. The dissenting shareholders can, within one month of the receipt of such notice, apply to the court for annulling the scheme.
5. If the Court refuse to issue the order annulling the scheme of Amalgamation or if no application is made to the Court, the transferee company shall be entitled and bound to acquire the share of dissenting shareholders.
6. The transfer of shares pursuant to the notice given by the transferee company after the disposal of the appeal filed by the dissenting shareholders.
7. Any sums which so received by the transferee company must be paid into a bank account and this amount or any other consideration received must be held for dissenting shareholders.

2.5. COMPULSORY AMALGAMATION IN PUBLIC INTEREST [SEC. 396]

Under Sec.396 of the Act, the Central Government is given power to order Amalgamation of two or more companies in public interest.

The provisions are:

1. If the Central Government is satisfied that it is essential in public interest that two or more companies should be amalgamated.
2. The order aforesaid may provide for the continuation by or against the transferee company of any legal proceedings pending by transferee company.
3. Every Member, Debentureholder or any Creditors of the Amalgamation companies, continue to have the same interest in the new company.
4. No order under this section shall be made by the Central Govt. unless:
 - (a) A draft copy of the proposed order has been sent to each of the companies to file their objectives and suggestions.
 - (b) The time for preferring an appeal to CLB has expired.
 - (c) It has considered and made such modifications if any, in the draft order as may seem to it desirable in the light of any suggestions and objectives.
5. Copies of the order made by the govt. in this connection must, as soon as possible, be laid before both the House of Parliament.
