SECTION -B

2. (a):

Misrepresentation under the Indian Contract Act, 1872 is defined in Section 18,

It refers to an innocent or non-fraudulent false statement of a material fact made by one party that induces the other party to enter into a contract. Unlike fraud, which involves a deliberate intent to deceive, misrepresentation lacks this malicious intent.

Analysis of Misrepresentation

Misrepresentation can occur in three main ways:

1. Positive Assertion of Untrue Facts: A person makes a statement with confidence that it is true, even though their information does not warrant such an assertion. They believe the statement to be true, but in reality, it is false. For example, a car seller states that a vehicle has never been in an accident, genuinely believing this to be true, when in fact, it has been repaired after a major collision.
2. Breach of Duty: A person, without any intention to deceive, breaches a duty which, by misleading another, gains them an advantage. This can involve the concealment of a material fact without the intent to deceive.
3. Inducing a Mistake about the Subject Matter: A party, however innocently, causes the other party to an agreement to make a mistake concerning the substance of the contract. This leads the other party to enter the contract under a false assumption about the subject matter.

Effects of Misrepresentation

The primary effect of misrepresentation, as stated in Section 19 of the Indian Contract Act, is that the contract becomes voidable at the option of the party whose consent was caused by the misrepresentation.

The aggrieved party has the following options:

- Rescind the Contract: The misled party can choose to cancel the contract. Rescission aims to restore both parties to their original positions as if the contract had never been formed.
- Insist on Performance: The aggrieved party can also choose to uphold the contract and insist that they be placed in the position they would have been in if the representation made had been true. This is distinct from claiming damages.
- Exceptions: The contract is not voidable if the party whose consent was caused by misrepresentation had the means to discover the truth with ordinary diligence. This means if the truth was easily verifiable, and the party failed to exercise due diligence, they may not be able to void the contract on the grounds of misrepresentation.

2. (b):

Both a Contract of Indemnity and a Contract of Guarantee are special types of contracts under the Indian Contract Act, 1872, that deal with securing against a loss or a debt. While they share the common goal of providing financial security, their structure, purpose, and the nature of liability are fundamentally different.

Key Distinctions:

The most crucial difference lies in the number of parties and the nature of liability. In an indemnity, there's a direct, one-to-one relationship where one party protects another from a specific loss. In a guarantee, it's a three-party arrangement where the surety's role is to act as a backup, only becoming liable if the primary obligor fails to perform. A contract of indemnity is about a promise to "make good the loss," while a contract of guarantee is about a promise to "perform the promise of another if they default."

Comparison: Contract of Indemnity vs. Contract of Guarantee is tabulated below:

Feature	Contract of Indemnity	Contract of Guarantee
1. Parties	Two Parties: 1. Indemnifier (promisor) who promises to make good the loss. 2. Indemnity-holder (promisee) who is to be protected from the loss.	Three Parties: 1. Principal Debtor who is primarily liable. 2. Creditor to whom the guarantee is given. 3. Surety (guarantor) who promises to pay if the principal debtor defaults.
2. Nature of Liability	The liability of the indemnifier is primary and independent. It arises from a specific event causing a loss.	The liability of the surety is secondary and contingent. It arises only when the principal debtor defaults. The surety's liability is co-extensive with that of the principal debtor.
3. Number of Contracts	There is only one contract between the indemnifier and the indemnity-holder.	There are three contracts: 1. Between the creditor and the principal debtor. 2. Between the creditor and the surety. 3. An implied contract between the surety and the principal debtor.
4. Purpose	To compensate for a loss. The object is to protect a party from a potential loss.	To secure a debt or performance of a promise. The object is to enable a person to get a loan or goods on credit.
5. Right to Sue Third Party	The indemnifier cannot sue a third party in his own name. He must sue in the name of the indemnity-holder after discharging the liability.	The surety, upon fulfilling the principal debtor's obligation, gets the right of subrogation and can sue the principal debtor in their own name.

6.Existing Debt	There is no pre-existing debt or duty. The obligation to pay arises only on the happening of a contingent event (the loss).	There is an existing debt or duty that the principal debtor is bound to fulfill. The surety's promise is to guarantee this existing obligation.
7.Example	An insurance contract (fire, marine, etc.) where the insurer (indemnifier) promises to compensate the insured (indemnity-holder) for a loss due to a specific event.	A promises a bank that if his friend B fails to repay a loan, A will repay it. Here, A is the surety, B is the principal debtor, and the bank is the creditor.

Section 13 of the Indian Partnership Act, 1932 provides that subject to the contract between the partners-

1. A partner is not entitled to receive remuneration for taking part in the conduct of the business;
2. The partners are entitled to share equally in the profits earned and shall contribute equally to the losses sustained by the firm;
3. Where a partner is entitled to interest on the capital subscribed by him, such interest shall be payable only out of profits;
4. A partner, making, for the purposes of the business, any payment or advance beyond the amount of capital he has agreed to subscribe, is entitled to interest thereon at 6% per annum;
5. The firm shall indemnify a partner in respect of payments made, and liabilities incurred, by him-
 - a. In the ordinary and proper conduct of the business, and
 - b. In doing such act in an emergency, for the purpose of protecting the firm from loss, as would be done by a person of ordinary prudence, in his own case, under similar circumstances; and
6. A partner shall indemnify the firm or any loss caused to it by his willful neglect in the conduct of the business of the firm.

When the profits are not shared equally, the losses are, in the absence of the agreement, to be borne in the same proportion as the profits are shares, regardless, whether one partner has put up more capital than another.

Section 16 provides that:

- (1) if a partner derives any profit for himself-
 - From any transaction of the firm; or
 - From the use of the property; or
 - business connection of the firm; or
 - the firm name
 - he shall account for that profit and pay it to the firm.
- (2) If a partner carries on any business of the same nature as, and competing with, that of the firm, he shall account for and pay, to the firm, all profits made by him in that business.

3. (b):

Buyer's Remedies against Seller for Breach of Contract

A buyer also has certain remedies against the seller who commits a breach. These are:

1. Suit for Damages for Non-Delivery [Section 57]: When the seller wrongfully neglects or refuses to deliver the goods to the buyer, the buyer may sue the seller for damages for non-delivery. This is in addition to the buyer's right to recover the price, if already paid, in case of non-delivery.

2. Suit for price: Where the buyer has paid the price and the goods are not delivered to him, he can recover the amount paid.
3. Suit for specific performance [Section 58]: When the goods are specific or ascertained, a buyer may sue the seller for specific performance of the contract and compel him to deliver the same goods. The court orders for specific performance only when the goods are specific or ascertained and an order for damages would not be an adequate remedy. Specific performance is generally allowed where the goods are of special significance or value e.g. a rare painting, a unique piece of jewellery, etc.
4. Suit for Breach of Warranty [Section 59]: Where there is a breach of warranty by the seller, or where the buyer elects or is compelled to treat the breach of condition as breach of warranty; the buyer cannot reject the goods. The buyer may:
 - a. set up the breach of warranty in extinction or diminution of the price payable by him, or
 - b. sue the seller for damages for breach of warranty.
5. Repudiation of contract before the due date [Section 60]: Section 60 provides that where either party to a contract of sale repudiates the contract before the date of delivery, the other may either treat the contract as subsisting or wait till the date of delivery, or he may treat the contract as rescinded and sue for damages for the breach.
6. Suit for interest: The buyer may recover such interest or special damages, as may be recoverable by law. He may also recover the money paid where the consideration for the payment of it has failed. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the court may award interest, to the buyer, in a suit by him for the refund of the price in a case of a breach on the part of the seller, at such rate as it thinks fit on the amount of the price from the date on which the payment was made.

Introduction: -

Several factors play a role in the success of a company that is beyond the scope of financial statements alone. Organizational culture, management philosophy and ethics in business each have an impact on how well a business performs in the long term. No matter the size, industry or level of profitability of an organization, business ethics are one of the most important aspects of long-term success.

Ethics- Nature & relevance for business:

The management team sets the tone for how the entire company runs on a day-to-day basis. When the prevailing management philosophy is based on ethical practices and behavior, leaders within an organization can direct employees by example and guide them in making decisions that are not only beneficial to them as individuals, but also to the organization as a whole. Building on a foundation of ethical behavior helps create long lasting positive effects for a company, including the ability to attract and retain highly talented individuals and building and maintaining a positive reputation within the community. Running a business in an ethical manner from the top down builds a stronger bond between individuals on the management team, further creating stability within the company.

When management is leading an organization in an ethical manner, employees follow in those footsteps. Employees make better decisions in less time with business ethics as a guiding principle; this increases productivity and overall employee morale. When employees complete work in a way that is based on honesty and integrity, the whole organization benefits. Employees who work for a corporation that demands a high standard of business ethics in all facets of operations are more likely to perform their job duties at a higher level and are also more inclined to stay loyal to that organization.

The importance of business ethics reaches far beyond employee loyalty and morale or the strength of a management team bond. As with all business initiatives, the ethical operation of a company is directly related to profitability in both the short and long term. The reputation of a business from the surrounding community, other businesses and individual investors is paramount in determining whether a company is a worthwhile investment. If a company's reputation is less than perfect based on the perception that it does not operate ethically, investors are less inclined to buy stock or otherwise support its operations. With consistent ethical behavior comes increasingly positive public image, and there are few other considerations as important to potential investors and current shareholders. To retain a positive image, businesses must be committed to operating on an ethical foundation as it relates to treatment of employees, respect to the surrounding environment and fair market practices in terms of price and consumer treatment, business ethics is an applied ethics.

7. (b)

General Business Ethics

- Ethics of human resource management
- Ethics of sales and marketing
- Ethics of production
- Ethics of intellectual property, knowledge and skills

Business ethics deals with morality in the business. It is a system of moral principles and values applied to business activities. Therefore, business activities should be conducted according to ethics or moral standards.

But, now a days, due to various work pressure of achieving defined high targets, some executives are following different types of unethical practices.

Common unethical practices in the corporate world are as under;

- a) Corruption – financial/ non-financial
- b) Greed for profit/ turnover
- c) Accommodating a group, may be employee, vendors, customer etc.
- d) Leak of knowledge
- e) Leak of professionalism
- f) External pressure
- g) Ego and dominance of top management ignoring right things

8. (a)

Facts of the case:

Section 154 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, states below:

If a bailee makes any use of goods bailed, which is not according to the conditions of the bailment, he is liable to make compensation to the bailor for any damage arising to the goods from or during such use of them.

In the present case, Mr. X lent his car to Mr. Y strictly for his personal use. However, during the period of the bailment, Mr. Y permitted his wife, Mrs. Y, to drive the car. Unfortunately, while she was driving, the vehicle met with an accident, causing damage amounting to ₹45,000.

Analysis & Interpretation:

Although Mrs. Y may have acted responsibly and the accident was unforeseen, Mr. Y had no authority to allow any third party to operate the car. This unauthorized use clearly violates the terms of the bailment agreement. Therefore, Mr. X's assertion that Mr. Y breached the conditions of use is legally valid.

As the bailee, Mr. Y was responsible for ensuring that the vehicle was used only in accordance with the agreed terms. By allowing someone else to drive the car, he failed to uphold that obligation. The fact that the third-party driver was his wife does not exempt him from liability under Section 154, as the key issue is unauthorized use, not intent or conduct.

Judgement:

Accordingly, Mr. Y is liable to compensate Mr. X for the full amount of the damage, ₹45,000, caused during the unauthorized use of the vehicle. His defense citing his wife's responsible behaviour is irrelevant in light of the breach of the bailment terms.

8. (b):

Roles and Responsibilities of the Audit Committee under Section 177:

Every Audit Committee shall act in accordance with the terms of reference specified in writing by the Board which shall, inter alia, include, –

- i) The recommendation for appointment, remuneration and terms of appointment of auditors of the company;
- ii) Review and monitor the auditor's independence and performance, and effectiveness of audit process;
- iii) Examination of the financial statement and the auditors' report there on;
- iv) Approval or any subsequent modification of transactions of the company with related parties;

Provided that the Audit Committee may make omnibus approval for related party transactions proposed to be entered into by the company subject to such conditions as may be prescribed;

Provided further that in case of transaction, other than transactions referred to in section 188, and where Audit Committee does not approve the transaction, it shall make its recommendations to the Board;

Provided also that in case any transaction involving any amount not exceeding one crore rupees is entered into by a director or officer of the company without obtaining the approval of the Audit Committee and it is not ratified by the Audit Committee within three months from the date of the transaction, such transaction shall be voidable at the option of the Audit Committee and if the transaction is with the related party to any director or is authorised by any other director, the director concerned shall indemnify the company against any loss incurred by it;

Provided also that the provisions of this clause shall not apply to a transaction, other than a transaction referred to in section 188, between a holding company and its wholly owned subsidiary company.

- v) Scrutiny of inter-corporate loans and investments;
- vi) Valuation of undertakings or assets of the company, wherever it is necessary;
- vii) Evaluation of internal financial controls and risk management systems;
- viii) Monitoring the end use of funds raised through public offers and related matters.
